¹ Note the different spelling of the titles of each manuscript, although they all embody the same basic text in either Latin or English. These differences have been deliberately preserved, and should not be construed as careless editing. Note that the two older Latin texts do not have 'Liber Salomonis' in their titles, suggesting that this was added by the English scribe to the original Sepher Raziel title.

Foreword

Legendary Origins

The name of the Angel (or Archangel) Raziel means “secrets of God” and is therefore a most appropriate pseudepigraphical author for a book on magic. According to the Jewish Encyclopedia, Raziel’s mission is as the “transmitter of secrets.” Various spellings of his name include Raziel, Ratziel, Razial, Ratzial, Retziel, Reziel, and Rezial. The spelling of Sepher/Cephar, will also vary.

The legend of the ספר רזיאל the Sepher Raziel, or ‘Book of Raziel’, states that the book was originally inscribed on a sapphire stone.¹ A copy was given to Seraph, then Metatron, then Adam. It is said that the angels (specifically the Cherubim) were upset that such knowledge was given to Adam, and so they descended to earth to steal the book back from him. This is an interesting echo of the idea that both angels, and their fallen brethren the demons, are unhappy that books of magic, containing formulae that can constrain them, have been made available to man. To ensure that the book would not be found again, the angels tossed it deep into the ocean. However, according to Jewish tradition, God ordered the archangel Raphael (or Rahab, according to some sources) to retrieve it, who then gave it to Noah to protect him during the flood. Eventually, after a number of adventures, it was given to King Solomon by a Babylonian prince (who is mentioned in the present manuscript on folio 2v). So much for the legend.

Hebrew Sources – the various Raziel Traditions

Because of this legend, the angel Raziel became a popular reference, and has generated a number of different pseudepigraphical books or Raziel traditions, which may be quite independent of each other:²

- a) Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh,³ with sections drawn from Rabbi Eleazar of Worms (1160-1237) Sepher ha-Razim and Sepher ha-Shem.
- b) Sepher Raziel (divided into chapters according to the Seven Heavens).
- c) The 13th century rabbinical Sepher Raziel, with content from Rabbi Eleazar.
- d) Cephar Raziel (containing Seven Treatises) - the present volume.

Let us look at each of these separate Sepher Raziel books and traditions in turn:

³ First published in Hebrew in 1701, translated into English 2000.

a) Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh

The Hebrew Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh was published in 1701 in Amsterdam,¹ and later reprinted nearly 40 times, probably because of the popular belief that the presence of the book in a house protected it from fire. This book has been translated into English by Steve Savedow as Sepher Rezial Hemelach, 'The Book of the Angel Rezial.'² The present Raziel text and the one published by Steve Savedow are not closely related. The anonymous author of Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh acknowledges the fact that there are other Raziel books/traditions, although he claims (immodestly and probably incorrectly) to be their source:

"There are two [Raziel] books from other countries. I see mine is the original of all of them. They have all been copied from my book... Also included [in my Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh] is the smaller work of Eleazar [of Worms],³ son of Rabbi Judah who received the work of Merkabah [chariot] from the pious Rabbi Judah."⁴

i) Sepher ha-Malbush, the 'Book of the Vestment', gives the names of the seasons and of the Malachim (angels) ruling in every season, and every month, and every day. The names of the Heavens and Earth also change according to the season.⁵ This section also lists "every spirit and angel ministering over every sign of the zodiac, and the angels of the seven planets in every season, and days of the week."⁶ Book One page 7 of this Part has two paragraphs on the sacrifice of turtledoves, which are repeated in the present manuscript (37v-38r). Also pages 11-28 have a very similar structure to the present manuscript (44r-46v), but the names attributed are different.

ii) Sepher Raziel ha-Gadol, or 'Book of the Raziel the Great' is in 4 Parts and relates to Merkavah (chariot) mysticism. It draws a lot of its contents from the Sepher Yetzirah. Part 3 and 4 are concerned with the Kabbalah of Genesis, and the structure of the Universe. They have nothing in common with the present text.

iii) Sepher ha-Shem, or 'Book of the Holy Name' or Shem ha-Mephorash. This treats of 72 three letter divine names, but does not relate to the present Treatise on 'Semiforas', or to any other part of the present manuscript.

iv) Sepher ha-Razim, or 'Book of Mysteries' or 'Book of Magical Secrets.'

Part 1: It seems much more likely that this section was taken from Eleazar of Worms' Sepher ha-Razim, rather than the other way around, as claimed by the anonymous author.¹ Anyway, only a subset of Sepher ha-Razim is incorporated here into Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh, and a much more cohesive, complete and useful version of the Sepher ha-Razim is that edited by Morgan.²

Part 2: of Savedow's Sepher ha-Razim contains background Jewish cosmology.

Part 3: typically deals with the physiology and dimensions of god, drawing material from Shi'ur Qomah. Neither forms part of the present manuscript.

v) Sepher ha-Mazloth or 'Book of the Signs of the Zodiac' includes various charms, and the use of the 22-letter, and the 42-letter name of god. The illustrations which appear in this book, especially in this last section, do not appear in any of the other Sepher Raziels, but are often used as illustrations by writers on Jewish magic, like Joshua Trachtenberg, Gustav Davidson and David Goldstein. See Figure 5.

b) Sepher Raziel (divided according to the Seven Heavens)

The sections in this particular group of Sepher Raziel manuscripts are divided up into chapters by the seven Jewish Heavens. This tradition is preserved in Italian manuscripts such as Alnwick MS 585 and Alnwick MS 596.

c) The 13th century Rabbinical Sepher Raziel

Perhaps the best Hebrew version of the Rabbinical Sepher Raziel is found in Additional MS 15299, a 13th century manuscript, beautifully executed in very clear Hebrew on large parchment folios. This particular manuscript was owned by Prince Augustus Frederick, the Duke of Sussex (1773-1843) who was the son of King George III. The Duke was also one of the early Grand Masters of Freemasonry, President of the Royal Society, and supportive of the cause of the Jews in England.

After the Duke's death the manuscript was bought by the British Museum in 1844. The second half of that manuscript (ff.133-153) also contains a commentary explaining the magical (rather than philosophical) uses of the Sepher Yetzirah by Rabbi Eleazar of Worms, material later thought relevant to Golem making.

² Michael Morgan, Sepher ha-Razim: the Book of Mysteries, Chico California: Scholars Press, 1983.

Probably as a result of that inclusion, Rabbi Louis Ginzberg, in Legends of the Jews,¹ attributed the whole of Sepher Raziel to Rabbi Eleazar of Worms (1160-1237), otherwise known as Rabbi Eleazar of Germiza, or Rabbi Eleazar ben Judah ben Kalonymus of Worms. He maintained that Eleazar had preserved some of the wisdom of the Geonic period² in this book. This assertion was repeated by Joshua Trachtenberg.³ This attribution is however probably only partly true; as one book by Eleazar called Sodei Razya (סודי רזיא 'Secret of Secrets') became part of the Sepher Raziel ha-Gadol published in Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh in 1701. The Sepher ha-Shem ('Book of the Name') on the 22-letter Name of god is also attributed to him, and has had some input into the Sepher Raziel. This version of the Sepher Raziel was probably compiled in the thirteenth century. We have no indication that the Sepher Raziel which Ginzberg and Trachtenberg refer to is related to the present manuscript.

It remains for further research to identify to what extent Rabbi Eleazar was responsible for each of the different Raziel traditions.

d) Cephaz Raziel (containing Seven Treatises)

The present text is divided into seven Treatises. It is quite different in structure and content to the preceding three types of Sepher Raziel. It does however have an amount of Hebrew content, and even uses the Hebrew word for heavens, Samaim, as the title of one of its seven constituent Treatises. Repeated references to purity and chastity, and the description of the sacrifice of turtledoves, suggest Jewish roots. Having said that, the few examples of Hebrew writing in the present manuscript are execrable, and so it is certain that the English scribe did not know Hebrew. One Latin version from which the English version may have been translated, on the other hand, has quite competent Hebrew orthography. This suggests that the roots of the present manuscript were probably a Hebrew original, filtered through a Latin intermediary, to the present Middle English version. We will now just concentrate upon this last version of Sepher Raziel (in seven Treatises), which exists in at least seven manuscripts (see Bibliography).

The present manuscript of Sepher Raziel is in English. It has been translated from Latin, and is written in a sixteenth century hand, which is superficially like that of Edward Kelley. See Figure 1. Each subsection begins with an opening Latin tag line, which was designed to facilitate reference back to the Latin original.

Another very similar English copy of Sepher Raziel, Sloane MS 3846, which is precisely dated November 1564, gives us some additional clues.¹ See Figure 2. Because the manuscripts are very close in style and content, we have presumed to date the present manuscript to the same year, on the grounds that often several copies of the same grimoire were made at the same time, though these two manuscripts were not executed by the same scribe. Even if we are a few years out, this is still the oldest manuscript so far published in the Sourceworks of Ceremonial Magic series.

Sloane MS 3846 is bound up with a number of other extracts from writers like Cornelius Agrippa, a number of magical recipes, spells, workings with the skrying crystal, invocations, sigils, angelic calls, methods for cutting the magical wand, and other interesting items. One bound-in slip identifies the suffumigations (incenses) used for individual planetary angels:

“Mercury – Askariel – Mastic Venus – Uriel – Costus
Luna – Anael – Aloes Saturn – Galban[um]?
Jupiter – Crocus
Mars – Piper Nigrum [black pepper]
Sol – Red Sanders [red sandalwood]”

Another fascinating item in Elias Ashmole’s handwriting occurs on f.102v of Sloane MS 3846 where a blob of red wax has been impressed with a seal ring, which is then described in detail:

“A Ring made by Dr ~~Napier~~ Forman² in Silver. On the signet part were these Characters. On the outside verge of the Signet was engraved ARIEL & ANAEL.³ On the circumference of the Ring, was engraved these words on the outside DIE ET PHORA [Venus] IN [Taurus] 1598.⁴ This ring was given to me by Tho[mas] Napier Esq[ui]re son of Sir Rich[ard] Napier.”

Further on in the same volume is an ‘Invocation of Oberion’⁵ concerning Phisick [medicine]’ [f. 102v-106]. It is very usefully and clearly divided into the correct portio of a properly conducted evocation: Consecratio Dei, Invocatio, Constrictio, Ligatio, and Licentia. It is not often that this sequence is so clearly delineated.

The later half of Sloane MS 3846 contains material which is parallel to the contents of the present manuscript, Sloane MS 3826, which is catalogued as follows:

Liber Salomonis	fo. 139 [f.129] ¹
The Rule of the Book of Consecration, or the manner of working	fo. 168b [f.158]
Liber Lunae	fo.182 [f.172v]
Adellardus Bathoniensis ²	fo. 192 [f.181]

The items, The Rule of the Book of Consecration, and Liber Lunae also occur at the end of Sloane MS 3826, strengthening the argument that both manuscripts were probably derived from the same source, and are similarly dated.

Owners of Sloane MS 3846

It is not easy to determine the 16th century owners of Sloane MS 3826, but from the mid 17th century onwards it 'travelled' with Sloane MS 3846, from owner to owner, so it is enlightening to examine the owners of both manuscripts. One early attempt at beginning a transcription of Cephar Raziel is preserved in an Ashmole fragment dated 1564.³ Sloane MS 3846 states that it was also written in the same year by William Parry ⁴ of Clifford's Inn and is clearly dated 2nd November 1564. The note reads:

"The booke, entituled Cephar Raziel, contain'g seuen treatises, was written by William Parry of Clyffords Inne by Josuy[?], le barre [a barrister] in London borne at North of in the County of Flynt & at the charges of John Gwyne ⁵ of Llandlos [Llanidloes] in the County of Mountgomericke Esquire [Montgomeryshire] in the year of our Lord god a thousand five hundred three score & four et Anno Elizabetha dei gra[tia] Angeliæ &c. Reginæ sexton.

³ Bodleian Ashmole MS 1790 f.116-116v.

⁴ One of the more colourful Parrys of this period was the Welsh Dr William Parry, who after several attempts on the life of Queen Elizabeth I, who forgave him, was finally sent to the gallows in 1585. However, as this Parry signed himself "of Clifford's Inn" it is most likely that he was not the traitor, but instead a lawyer. This is no surprise as a number of senior lawyers were to be found amongst the angel magicians of the seventeenth century.

⁶ Folio 128. A John Gwyne was for a while mayor of Llanidloes, supporting the above interpolations. On 17th January 1598, John Dee's messenger (Edmond Arnold) went to Llandlos to deliver a letter, possibly to the same John Gwyne. This Gwyne might also be the author of a number of alchemic manuscripts in the Bodleian Library by one 'John Gwynne.'

Above this is an inscription indicating yet another early owner:

"Ego Scribener Eruditio[?]...Haec ex Lomporo[?] Scripsit, Westrum[?] 27 Julii 1570. Haec litera John Gioin astin[?] Magister mihi transcript ut pz."

And later on folio 182, in the Adellardus item, it is more clearly written:

"J Gioyn of Pormall. 1575. borded 1570 at Mr Stewards. Booke delivered to Howell ap Mathew 1^o Martii [March] 1568. my broet[her] in glostershire now...at one Mr W A Vaughan a lawyer..."

Here we have other people, possibly all lawyers, through whose hands the manuscript may have passed between 1570 and 1575: John Gioin of Pormall, Mr Stewards, Howell ap Mathew and Mr W A Vaughan.

Another undated owner of these, or other magical books, William Walmesbury, is identified on folio 126 of Sloane MS 3846.

"Mr Willia[m] Warmesbury Register of Worcester ¹ hath these booke[s] in vellum.

1. The characters & vertues of y^e Psalmes in 8^o [octavo].

The handwriting suggests a date circa 1600. The interesting thing about this owner is that, as Registrar of Worcester, he would have been well placed to know the subsequent owners of this manuscript, all of whom had links with Worcester.²

An interesting side-light on the importance of Sepher Raziel was thrown by the influential alchemist Andreas Libavius (1555-1616), who in 1615 speculated that one of the Sepher Raziels was the founding document for the Rosicrucian cosmology of angelic spheres.³ It is therefore likely that a copy (but probably not this copy) of one of the Sepher Raziels passed through his hands. Over a century later, the mystic Emanuel Swedenborg (1688-1772) was also reported to have been influenced by Sepher Raziel in his opinion about angels. But to return to the historical appearances of this manuscript.

² More detail will be found about the Worcester group of angel magicians in Skinner & Rankine, Practical Angel Magic of John Dee's Enochian Tables, London: Golden Hoard, 2004, pages 21-22, 43-47.

Around 1630, Sir Richard Napier (1607-1676) wrote in a letter to his uncle Richard Napier (1559-1634) that:¹

"I found in the Archives in our pub[lic] Library [the Bodleian], a Booke of Solomons called Cephar Raziel, which is in Latin as I finde, [called] Angelus Magnus Secreti Creatoris, & in the Hebrew Cephar Raziel, in which is contained 7 Treatises, the first is said [called] Clavis...² This booke is a little folio about three quire of paper.³ I hope in tyme to purchase [procure] a copy of it by my own hande, though it be worthier of a more honest pen, for I am persuaded that it is Liber est Magnae, virtutis, & magni sunti[?]. I doubt not to transcribe it in a short time, & to be so happy as to present you with my Copy; were it possible that I could get that booke to my owne study, I would copy it out in 2 weekes, yet as it is, I have made a faire way to goe into the Library privately where I please & use to sit from 6 of the clocke in the morning to 5 at night... I have made the Second Keeper of the Library my friend & servant, who promised me his key at all tymes to go in privately."⁴

Napier asked his uncle to "make me a paper booke of Royall [size] paper"⁵ so he could use it to transcribe Cephar Raziel. He signed his letter "Your most observant Sonn and thankful debtour [?], Richard Napier."⁶ It is likely that this copy made by Napier was eventually left to Elias Ashmole (1617-1692), who was to a large extent responsible for preserving the works of Dr John Dee.

Another owner, or at least the writer of a note bound in Sloane MS 3846, was Henry Swibers [?] of Crookham in 1672.

From then onwards we can trace the wanderings of both manuscripts in greater detail. Both Sloane MS 3826 and Sloane MS 3846 belonged to Baron Somers of Evesham (1651-1716) who was Chancellor of England. In fact the contents list of both manuscript volumes is in the hand of Lord Somers's library cataloguer. Lord Somers in turn passed both manuscripts to his brother-in-law Sir Joseph Jekyll (1663-1738), who was a prominent lawyer and Master of the Rolls (an antique title given to the second most senior judge in England). Both Somers and Jekyll were intensely interested in magic, and had a number of key manuscripts on practical angel magic.

On Sir Joseph Jekylls's death, his books and manuscripts were sold by the auctioneer Mr Cocks of Covent Garden, London (at St Paul's Coffee House).¹

On 26th February 1738 both manuscripts were sold to the same buyer, Sir Hans Sloane (1660-1753), who bought at least 21 manuscript volumes at this sale. Sloane's collection later became the basis of the manuscript collections of the British Museum, which was later separated from the old Russell Street premises of the British Museum, removed to St. Pancras, and re-named the British Library, which is where the manuscripts reside today.

Although the early owners of Sloane MS 3846, before Lord Somers, do not necessarily tell us anything about Sloane MS 3826, they do indicate who was familiar with, read, and may have practiced, the magical methods outlined in Sepher Raziel.

Latin Sources

The earliest Latin version appears to date from before 1259 for in that year Alfonso X (1221-1284) ordered a translation of Liber Razielis from Latin into Castilian. This Alfonsine Liber Razielis was also divided into seven books, like the present text, and may have been its earliest source.²

A separate Sepher Raziel was translated out of Hebrew into Latin for the Roman prelate Cardinal Egidio da Viterbo (1465-1532), who collected Kabbalistic manuscripts, with the help of the Jewish scholar and humanist Elias Levita (1469-1549).

Sloane MS 3847 (f. 161-188v) is a beautifully written Latin version of Sepher Raziel. It was closely associated with Sloane MS 3846, and 'travelled' with it from one owner to another for most of its life. It was also auctioned at Jekyll's sale, and had the very next lot number (373). See Figure 3. It could be partially the origin of Sloane MS 3846, and therefore is well placed to answer queries about illegible words in the English translation. It has a number of Latin margin tags which make it easier to follow, and its Hebrew is much better than that of the English copy, however it only encompasses the first three chapters.

This Latin version is actually entitled Librum Razielis or Cephar Raziel and is bound at the back of a fascinating collection of magical manuscripts. The manuscripts that it is bound with include several books that are actually referred to within Sepher Raziel itself, so it is well worthwhile listing them in detail:³

³ The descriptions listed on the contents page have been amplified by reference to the actual items themselves.

Another Latin version, Sloane MS 3853 (see Figure 4), has just a few pages related to 'Sephar Rasiel' (f. 46-49v). The initial letter of 'Sephar' could easily be read as a 'C' or an 'S', and this may well have contributed to the spelling of 'Cephar' in later manuscripts. These pages are followed by some very interesting circle diagrams, which probably did not form part of Sephar Rasiel. The rest of the manuscript, much of it in Latin, is devoted to extracts from The Sworn Book of Honorius and some of Roger Bacon's magical works.

John of Morigny's Liber Visionum is several times explicitly mentioned in the present text, and its techniques may contribute to some parts of Sepher Raziel or to the author's methods of discovering correspondences.⁷

Structure and Origins of the Manuscript

There are other clues as to the manuscript's origins. One of these is its division into 7 books, which is emphasised several times at the beginning of the manuscript. This structure includes separate books on astronomy/ astrology;

² The fact that a copy of the De Quatuor Annulus Solomonis ('Of the Four Rings of Solomon') is included within the same binding, helps to support the Solomonic nature of the present manuscript.

⁴ The Second Treatise on the four Ala in Sepher Raziel contains similar material.

plants and animals; perfumes; times and days; and angel lists, each organised as a separate book. This is more like the structure of the Byzantine Greek Magical Treatise of Solomon than later European grimoires, and therefore the present manuscript may owe some of its contents to Byzantine Greek, as well as Hebrew roots.

Another small clue is afforded by the number of incenses beginning with 'a' whose names have Spanish roots. This suggests that the earliest Latin version of this manuscript might have been the Latin copy of the Liber Razielis that was extant in the Spanish court of Alphonso X (1221-1284), but that remains to be investigated.

It seems likely that both Sloane MS 3826 and MS 3846 were translated or copied from an unknown intermediate Latin manuscript. If Sloane MS 3847 had been a complete Latin version, then that manuscript might have been the immediate source of both of these, especially as its stone and plant names are less garbled. Sloane MS 3853, an even older Latin version, is also incomplete.

Note that Appendix 1 has more complete identification of the various incenses and plants mentioned in the text than do the footnotes.

However the construction of a complete stemma requires a full survey of each of the Sepher Raziel traditions and an analysis of the connections between them.

The Study of Solomonic Magic in English

Don Karr

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to neatly circumscribe a canon of magic texts as being safely of the 'Solomonic cycle.' By arbitrary and rather unscientific means, one might do so by simply including those works which, by tradition or artifice, bear Solomon's name or derive from works which do. Even here, we find a number of classes of material:

1. Magical works from late antiquity through the early Middle Ages, such as The Testament of Solomon and Sepher Razim.¹
2. Byzantine Greek texts of the Magical Treatise of Solomon and the Hygromanteia.²
3. Medieval grimoires in Latin and other European languages, such as The Key of Solomon.

¹ For English translations of The Testament of Solomon, see F. C. Conybeare, "The Testament of Solomon," in Jewish Quarterly Review, no. XI, 1899, and at www.esotericarchives.com > CLASSICAL GRIMOIRES; C. C. McCown, The Testament of Solomon, Leipzig: 1922; Sayed Idries Shah, "The Catalogue of Demons" = CHAPTER 11 of The Secret Lore of Magic (Secaucus: Citadel Press, 1972); D. C. Duling, "Testament of Solomon," in The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha (= OTP), edited by J. H. Charlesworth (Garden City: Doubleday, 1983). Duling's introduction in OTP deals with Solomonic attribution and legend in the older material. He mentions M. Seligsohn's article, "Solomon — Apocryphal Works" (in The Jewish Encyclopedia, vol. 11, p. 447 — online at www.jewishencyclopedia.com/index.jsp) as listing forty-nine Solomonic "scientific and magical books" in Arabic and Hebrew literature, and C. C. McCown's added comment (Testament of Solomon, p. 100) that Seligsohn's list is by no means exhaustive.

For a critical summary of Testament of Solomon scholarship, refer to Todd E. Klutz, Rewriting the TESTAMENT OF SOLOMON: Tradition, Conflict and Identity in a Late Antique Pseudepigraphon (London — New York: T&T Clark, 2005) and idem, "The Archer and the Cross: Chorographic Astrology and Literary Design in the Testament of Solomon," in Magic in the Biblical World: From the Rod of Aaron to the Ring of Solomon, edited by Todd E. Klutz (London — New York: T&T Clark International, 2003). For a survey of the Testament's background and dissemination, find also Sarah Iles Johnson, "The Testament of Solomon from Late Antiquity to the Renaissance," in The Metamorphosis of Magic from Late Antiquity to the Early Modern Period, edited by Jan N. Bremmer and Jan R. Veenstra (Leuven: Peeters, 2002).

Sepher ha-Razim, a third- or fourth-century text, claims in its preface to have been "more precious and more honorable and more difficult" than any other books in the possession of Solomon. See Michael A. Morgan's translation, Sepher ha-Razim: The Book of the Mysteries (Chico: Society of Biblical Literature/Scholars Press, 1983).

² Hygromanteia is a Byzantine Greek magical text also referred to as Solomon's Epistle to Rehoboam. It does not mean divination by water, as has often been suggested by scholars.

Attribution to Solomon already complicates several biblical texts ¹ and apocrypha.² Solomon is the hero of many ancient tales in the East; still his legend figures into late traditions of the Freemasons. Rumours which suggest that the wise king left secret books of magic seem never to have died – nor have slumbered – since ancient times.³

In order to make short work of closing the category of Solomonic magical works, we shall follow E[liza] M[arian] Butler ⁴ and focus on the late grimoires. The limitations of her work, however, must be acknowledged: Butler depended primarily on published works of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, including familiar works in English (from Francis Barrett, Montague Summers, C. J. S. Thompson, Arthur E. Waite – even Aleister Crowley) and other modern languages (the collections of J. C. Horst and J. Scheible in particular).

¹ These are not the same Honorius, one being the supposed Pope, and the other Honorius of Thebes. In fact they deserve separate categories as they are quite different in structure and intent.

❖ Liber Salomonis [2]: “Dixit Salomon Gloria et laus et cu multo honore &c / Salomon said glory and praying wth much honor be to God of all Creatures, he that is singular w^{ch} made all things at one tyme.”

The Keys to the Gateway of Magic is volume 2 of the series SOURCEWORKS OF CEREMONIAL MAGIC, volume 1 being Practical Angel Magic of Dr John Dee's Enochian Tables : Tabularum Bonam Angelorum Invocationes, by Stephen Skinner and David Rankine (London: Golden Hoard Publishing, 2004); Volume 3, The Goetia of Dr Rudd: Angels and Demons... (Skinner and Rankine) — discussed below, § 1. b. Lemegeton; Volume 4, The Veritable Key of Solomon (Skinner and Rankine) — discussed below, § 1. a. The Key of Solomon; Volume 5, The Grimoire of St. Cyprian: Clavis Inferni, Latin translation by Dr Peter Forshaw (Skinner and Rankine, Singapore: Golden Hoard Press, 2009); Volume 6, Sepher Raziel, (Don Karr and Stephen Skinner, the present volume).

The first three volumes of this attractively prepared series feature the works and expansions of one Dr Rudd, “a scholar-magician of the early seventeenth century who knew Dr. John

While reference to the contents of some of these works is made, it is not the aim of this introduction to offer summaries or analyses. Instead, the reader is referred to sources in which these works are translated into or described in English. My initial advice to anyone interested in pursuing this material is to go to Twilight Grotto at www.esotericarchives.com where most of the items discussed below, along with a wealth of other texts, are responsibly and tastefully presented — and can be viewed for free. (If the omissions at the site frustrate the reader, for the cost of one typical printed grimoire, a CD can be ordered from Twilight Grotto containing “50+ complete books/30 complete grimoires” — a forgivably mild exaggeration.)

A SURVEY OF THE LITERATURE

Notice must be given here to Aaron Leitch’s Secrets of the Magical Grimoires: The Classical Texts of Magick Deciphered (Woodbury: Llewellyn Publications, 2005). Leitch, a practitioner himself, has made a valiant effort to offer a single-source epitome of the “classic grimoires” with descriptions, tables, and excerpts clearly and logically presented through 400+ oversized pages. The book is in two parts: (1) “history and scholarship,” and (2) “practical work,” including experiments and how-to instructions.

In Part One [Occulta Philosophia], CHAPTER ONE, Leitch provides an efficient if not particularly nuanced historical background. He then offers an account of the major grimoires, describing 22 texts, including the Solomonic texts discussed below, plus Picatrix, The Sacred Magic of Abramelin, Agrippa’s De Occulta Philosophia and the pseudo-Agrippan Fourth Book, Heptameron, John Dee’s diaries, Barrett’s Magus, etc. Unfortunately, the preamble to these descriptions is marred by some irksome errors. For example, on page 9, Leitch writes,

“The Ethiopian Book of Enoch, the Hebrew Book of Enoch, the Pirkei Heichaloht (sic), and even such canonical biblical texts such as Ezekiel and the Revelation of St. John are all centered upon — or connected to — the Merkavah tradition. The Merkavah’s use of ritual drugs, its focus on talismans and seals, the summoning forth of angelic gatekeepers, and the gaining of mystical visions are elements that run throughout the grimoiric spells.”

Dee.”The ‘Dr. Rudd’ mentioned was also the compiler of A Treatise on Angel Magic (MS Harley 6482), an edition of which was published by Adam McLean (Edinburgh: Magnum Opus Sourceworks [# 15], 1982, and subsequently reprinted; see the bibliography: ‘McLean’).

As an example of a work “centered upon...the Merkavah tradition,” the Ethiopian (more correctly, Ethiopic) Book of Enoch is an odd choice to set next to the Hebrew Book of Enoch and Pirkei Hekhalot. Yet, with “or connected to” interjected, Leitch allows enough slosh room for its inclusion as well as that of Revelation.

More serious is Leitch’s putting drugs and merkavah together, apparently through reading — but not thoroughly — James R. Davila’s accounts of shamanic techniques. In the article which Leitch cites (and in Davila’s book Descenders of the Chariot, Leiden: Brill, 2001), the use of drugs is indeed mentioned as a shamanic technique, and comparison is made between shamans (generic) and Merkavah mystics (specific). However, Davila states, “Nothing in the Hekhalot literature indicates that the descenders to the chariot made use of psychoactive drugs to induce their visionary experiences” (“The Hekhalot Literature and Shamanism’ at the web page Divine Mediator Figures in the Biblical World at www.st-andrews.ac.uk/~www_sd/mediators.html — the article Leitch cites). Leitch does go on to give a fairer account of Merkavah mysticism, again based on Davila, later in the book (CHAPTER TWO: “Shamanism, Tribal to Medieval,” pages 54-5), where there is no mention of drugs, and hekhalot is spelled more conventionally.

Leitch’s approach to the grimoires is best expressed in CHAPTER THREE, “The Art of Ecstasy: Way of the Prophet-Shaman,” which begins,

The altered mental state is the most essential and critical aspect of magickal practice.

A few pages before (page 71) Leitch states,

Some of the material in the grimoires may be, in fact, outdated. However, my focus is not upon the content or intent of the spells but on the foundational occult philosophy upon which the magick itself is based. It is my hope that this book will outline the processes by which this kind of magic works, and allow the practitioner to experiment with gaining conversation with various entities.

Part Two [Occulta Practique] mixes Leitch’s prose with tables and extracts from the grimoires on all the technical matters: times, tools, and talismans; purification and prayer; angels and spirits.

As a first or stand-alone book, Secrets... has much to recommend it. Leitch has reached beyond the old stand-bys (Waite, Mathers, original and later Golden Dawn material, E. M. Butler) and utilized some recent scholarship (James R. Davila, Claire Fanger, Richard Kieckhefer, Robert Mathiesen), though perhaps not enough (Leitch does not draw on the work of Michael D.

Bailey, Charles Burnett, Ioan Couliano, Valerie Flint, David Halperin, Deborah Harkness, Gösta Hedegård, Naomi Janowitz, Frank Klaassen, Christopher Lehrich, Rebecca Lesses, Marvin Meyer, or Robert Turner, to name a few who have dealt directly with the texts and topics in Secrets...; the “classic” works of Lynn Thorndike and Joshua Trachtenberg are also neglected. See the bibliography below: WORKS OF RELATED INTEREST). Nearly all of the texts and scholarly sources Leitch refers to are readily available (in English), thus, the book has little new to offer, save Leitch’s synthesis and organization, which sets the ‘grimoiric’ material out in the form of a unified system — which it certainly is not.

Despite all of the times I furrowed and bristled while poring over Leitch’s book, because of its range, readability, and spirit, I recommend Secrets of the Magickal Grimoires, especially to those who intend to do the stuff. For the practitioner, Secrets... could serve well as a hard-copy anchor to the mass of texts available on Internet sites such as Twilit Grotto at www.esotericarchives.com, Sacred Texts at www.sacred-texts.com, and Norton’s Imperium > ‘Classics of Magick’ at www.hermetic.com/browe-archive. Academics, however, would do better to go directly to Leitch’s sources — and well beyond.

OTHER NOTEWORTHY RECENT PUBLICATIONS:

- Readers should note Stephen Skinner’s expansion of Crowley’s Liber 777: The Complete Magician’s Tables (Singapore: Golden Hoard Press, 2006, and St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 2007). The subtitle elaborates: The most complete tabular set of Magic, Kabbalistic, Angelic, Astrologic, Alchemic, Demonic, Geomantic, Grimoire, Gematria, I Ching, Tarot, Pagan Pantheon, Plant, Perfume and Character Correspondence in more than 777 tables. (The Crowley editions circulating have less than 200 columns; Skinner’s volume contains more than 800 columns.) Table M, “Magic of the Grimoires — Angels, Demons and Spirits,” connects with the topic at hand. § M offers tables drawn from:

- The often cited but frustratingly scarce works on the Hebrew MS called Sepher Maphteah Shelomoh (ca. 1700) by Hermann Gollancz have been reprinted in a single volume by Teitan Press (York Beach: 2008):
- Maphteah Shelomo. Clavicula Salomonis: A Hebrew Manuscript newly discovered and now described (London: D. Nutt / Frankfurt a. M: J. Kauffmann, 1903)
 - Sepher Maphteah Shelomoh ('Book of the Key of Solomon') an exact facsimile of an original book of magic in Hebrew with illustrations now produced for the first time. (London – New York: Oxford University Press, 1914 – of which only 300 copies were printed)

The Teitan edition adds a seven-page foreword by Stephen Skinner, which states that "there is no doubt that this manuscript [i.e., Sepher Maphteah Shelomoh] is part of the Solomonic magical tradition," and "in a large measure derived from them, which is quite the reverse of the usual assumption" (page viii). In a section sub-headed CONFIRMATION OF THE LATINIZED CONTENTS, Skinner (following the lead of Claudia Rohrbacher-Sticker) presents "proof that this text [i.e., Sepher Maphteah Shelomoh] is a translation from a Latin/Italian original, by a Hebrew translator" (page xii).

Alas, the reprint is a limited edition of 358 copies.

1. a. THE KEY OF SOLOMON:

The best-circulated presentation of the KEY OF SOLOMON is S. L. MacGregor Mathers' Key of Solomon the King (London: Redway, 1888; reprinted New York, York Beach: Samuel Weiser Inc., 1974 and subsequently). Mathers compiled a text from several MSS found in the British Library Sloane, Harleian, Landsdowne, and King MS collections; he attempted to weave from these an ideal text.¹

The KEY is described in Butler's Ritual Magic, pp. 47-64, and in C. J. S. Thompson's Mysteries and Secrets of Magic, pp. 229-240 (London: J. Lane the Bodley Head, 1927; reprinted New York: Causeway Books, 1973).

Another fair presentation of the KEY appears in Idries Shah's Secret Lore of Magic (New York: Citadel Press, 1958; reprinted 1972; hereafter Secret Lore or simply 'Shah') pp. 9-60. Not quite so good is Arthur Edward Waite's treatment in The Book of Ceremonial Magic (London: Rider, 1911; reprinted New York: Bell Publishing, 1969; hereafter Ceremonial Magic or simply 'Waite') pp. 58-64 (Bell edition). (Ceremonial Magic is a revision of Waite's earlier Book of Black Magic and of Pacts, London: Redway, 1898; reprinted New York - York Beach: Samuel Weiser Inc., 1972, and subsequently.)

The most extensive treatment of the KEY to date is Volume IV of Stephen Skinner and David Rankine's SOURCEWORKS OF CEREMONIAL MAGIC, The Veritable Key of Solomon (London - Singapore: Golden Hoard Press / Woodbury: Llewellyn Publications, 2008), which presents three KEY OF SOLOMON texts translated from the French by Paul Harry Barron: KEY 1. The Keys of Rabbi Solomon (Wellcome MS 4670 [1796]), KEY 2. La Clavicule ou La Clef de Salomon (Wellcome MS 4669 Art. 1 [1796]), and KEY 3. Traité Universel des Clavicules de Salomon (Wellcome MS 4669 Art. 2),² these being "three different texts from those translated by S. L. MacGregor Mathers.” The texts are introduced by a 60-page survey of the history and various ‘text-groups’ of the KEY supplemented by several appendices listing KEY MSS.¹

A composite of material related to the KEY is assembled in Ebenezer Sibley’s (or Sibly) Clavis or Key to Unlock the Mysteries of Magic of Rabbi Solomon, translated from Hebrew into French and from French rendered into English with additions (ca. 1800). Two reproduction editions have recently been published: (1) Ebenezer Sibly, Solomon’s Clavis, or Key to Unlock the Mysteries of Magic (Leicestershire: Society of Esoteric Endeavour, 2008), which offers Sibly’s manuscript (c. 1800), English translations primarily from various French magical sources, unadorned, i.e., “no modern introduction,” with Sibly’s preface; (2) Ebenezer Sibley, The Clavis or Key to the Magic of Solomon...from a manuscript prepared by Frederick Hockley, with introduction, notes, and commentary by Joseph Peterson (Lake Worth: Ibis Press, 2009). Refer to Joscelyn Godwin, The Theosophical Enlightenment (Albany: State University of New York Press, 1994): on Sibly, pages 107ff, on Hockley, pages 170ff.

1. b. Lemegeton, or LESSER KEY OF SOLOMON:

The Lemegeton consists of five sections:

- i. Goetia
- ii. Theurgia-Goetia [parts I and II]
- iii. Pauline Art
- iv. Almadel
- v. Notary Art ²

The Goetia is the best circulated of the sections, having been published numerous times, the best-known version being the one transcribed by S. L. MacGregor Mathers in 1898, with an introduction entitled "Preliminary Definition of Magic." A few years later, Aleister Crowley published this edition 'enhanced' by his own introduction, preface, preliminary invocation, and other ornaments (Foyers: S[ociety for the] P[ropagation of] R[eligious] T[ruth] Ltd, 1904). In 1916, the pirating began with an edition bearing the name L. W. de Laurence and the title The Lesser Key of Solomon – Goetia: the Book of Evil Spirits (Chicago: de Laurence, Scott and Co.), which is the Mathers/Crowley work unacknowledged; this edition is listed as still in print (!) A larger version – in size, not in content – bearing Crowley's name was published in 1970¹ as The Book of the Goetia of Solomon the King; this is, for the most part, a dressed up version of the "SPRT/de Laurence" edition.

Goetia is described and quoted in Butler's Ritual Magic (pp. 65-80); it is presented in both Shah (pp. 179-211; 299-304) and Waite (pp. 64-66; 184-235). Waite's "list of the seventy-two spirits...along with their sigils" is reproduced in Christopher McIntosh's Devil's Bookshelf.² Shah also gives Almadel in Secret Lore (pp. 169-178).³ Waite includes the Pauline Art (pp. 66-72) and [The Art of] Almadel (pp. 72-77). McIntosh includes the conjuration of Samael from a MS of the Pauline Art "copied out by Frederick Hockley, the indefatigable nineteenth-century collector of occult documents" (The Devil's Bookshelf, pp. 190-1).

See Joseph H. Peterson's translation, Arbatel: Concerning the Magic of the Ancients [ORIGINAL SOURCEBOOK OF ANGEL MAGIC] (Lake Worth: Ibis Press, 2009) — also at Peterson's Twilight Grotto: www.esotericarchives.com > Classical Grimoires. Arbatel also appears in the collection titled The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, edited... by Stephen Skinner. London: Askini Publishers, 1978; rpt Berwick [ME]: Ibis Press, 2005.

appears as an appendix to Jan R. Veenstra's article "The Holy Almandal: Angels and the Intellectual Aims of Magic," in The Metamorphosis of Magic from Late Antiquity to the Early Modern Period, edited by Jan N. Bremmer and Jan R. Veenstra (Leuven: Peeters, 2002).¹

Some recent efforts have offered complete, or near-complete, editions of Lemegeton. All parts but the Notary Art appear in Kevin Wilby's Lemegetton [sic]: A Medieval Manual of Solomon's Magic [Sloane MS 3648] (Dyfed: Hermetic Research Series NUMBER 5, 1985). In his article, "The Lemegetton [sic] Revealed," (in The Hermetic Journal, Issue 29, ed. Adam McLean, 1985), Wilby says that the Notary Art "is fragmentary and nowhere near complete," referring to it as the "corrupted fifth part." Wilby is even harsher in his FOREWORD to The Lemegeton, referring to "the fifth and final book" as "the only blemish I found in this masterly work," deeming it "literary tripe."

A so-so photocopy (with some pages missing) of British Library Sloane MS 2731 (which is in English) and a remarkably poor typescript comprise Nelson and Anne White's Lemegeton: Clavicula Salomonis, The Complete Lesser Key of Solomon the King (Fremont: Technology Group, 1979; 2nd edition, once available at www.techgroupbooks.com — an unfortunately now-defunct site which proved that one picture is worth a thousand words).

The edition from the International Guild of Occult Sciences (hereafter I.G.O.S.), King Solomon's the Lemegeton: Lesser Key (or The Lemegeton: King Solomon's Lesser Key) (Palm Springs: I.G.O.S., 1997) contains the Whites' photocopy slightly enlarged with a transcription which is neat and readable. Neither the Whites' nor the I.G.O.S. version includes the Notary Art, save for a few "sample pages," stating that Notary Art is "quite obviously not a 'book,' but rather a collection of notes and explanations which should have been presented with the first book, The Goetia" (the Whites' edition, p. 57); and "a scattered and undeveloped jotting down...at best supplementary notations" (I.G.O.S. edition, p. 65).²

Robin E. Cousins (in Elizabethan Magic, edited by Robert Turner [Longmead: Element Books, 1989], p. 140) observes that the Notary Art

² In each of these two cases, the editor has confused the Notary Art with the 2 page Ars Nova.

is, in fact, omitted from British Library Sloane MS 2731, the MS used by the Nelsons and I.G.O.S. According to Cousins (Elizabethan Magic, p. 141), Wilby based his edition on a manuscript (British Library Sloane MS 3648) which contains the Notary Art, but — as noted above — he saw fit to exclude it from his “complete” edition.

Ars Notoria: The Notary Art of Solomon, translated into English in 1657 by Robert Turner of Holshott (not to be confused with Robert Turner, the contemporary author/editor, mentioned above) has been published in a collector’s edition (Seattle: Trident Press, 1987 and 1997) along with some support material: “An Astrological Catechisme” and “Solomon and the Ars Notoria” from Lynn Thorndike’s History of Magic and Experimental Science, and “Ars Notoria in Manuscript” by Adam McLean. A low-cost edition, titled variously Ars Notoria: The Magical Art of Solomon, Showing the Cabalistical Key of Magical Operations or The Magical Art of Solomon, being the Ars Notoria: A Grimoire [KABBALISTIC GRIMOIRE SERIES III], without the sundry additions, edited by Darcy Kuntz, was put out by Holmes Publishing Group [Edmonds] in 1998 and remains available in a more recent reprint edition.

While not really contradicting the Nelson/I.G.O.S. assessment, Benjamin Rowe offers an alternative and more positive take on the Lemegeton’s fifth book. In the introduction to his Ars Nova – Book Five of the Lemegeton (June 1999; on the Internet at Rowe’s site, Norton’s Imperium: Enochian Magick Papers & Links > “Classics of Magic,” at www.hermetic.com/browe-archive), Rowe says that in some manuscripts (such as the one from which he transcribed, British Library Sloane MS 2731 — the same as the Nelsons’ and I.G.O.S.), the fifth book is an addendum containing notes on Goetia. This book has been mistakenly called Ars Notoria instead of the correct name, Ars Nova. Rowe suggests quite convincingly that the last couple of pages of the manuscript are out of order, and, thus, Ars Nova consists of two leaves rather than one. These final pages of Lemegeton can be seen in the photocopies of the Nelson and I.G.O.S. editions. For a full transcription, see Rowe’s site.¹

¹ Ars Nova, even when it has been transcribed, has been read incorrectly as a continuous text rather than as two columns of text, with a small gap between. The only printed copy of it that is transcribed in the correct order appears in Skinner & Rankine, The Goetia of Dr Rudd, London: Golden Hoard, 2007, Appendix 9, pages 414-421.

Liber Salomonis

(Jacksonville: Metatron Books, 1999), which also omits the Notary Art. Henson says in his introduction, "Both the content and the context of Ars Notoria show no affinity for the listings of spirits that mark the bulk of the material contained in The Lesser Key of Solomon." This tidied-up (perhaps a bit too tidy), inexpensive edition presents "a careful collation of manuscripts from the Sloane collection in the British Library."

(The LESSER KEY collection with Ars Nova — not Ars Notoria — is included in The Embassy of Lucifer's Clavicula Solomonis — noted above in §1.a; Ars Nova is identical to Rowe's version, even including the footnote numbers in the text — without the footnotes.)

The Lesser Key of Solomon edited by Joseph H. Peterson (York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2001) includes a complete text — all five books — with other pertinent material, including a preface from one of the MS editions of the Lesser Key, addenda from two others, and Johann Weyer's Pseudomonarchia daemonum. "I have followed Sloane 3825 for this edition, except for Ars Notoria. For the latter, the manuscripts are clearly dependent on Robert Turner's translation. I have therefore used his 1657 printed edition as my primary source" (INTRODUCTION, p. xiii). Intelligently prepared, nicely printed, and reasonably priced: Peterson's is by far the best edition available.

Finally, there is The Goetia of Dr Rudd: The Angels & Demons of Liber Malorum Spirituum seu Goetia / Lemegeton Clavicula Salomonis / with a study of techniques of evocation in the context of the angel magic tradition of the seventeenth century / being a transcription of Dr Rudd's 'Liber Malorum Spirituum seu Goetia' from Harley MS 6483, with other pertinent extracts from manuscripts Harley MS 6482, Sloane MS 3824 and Wellcome MS 3203, by Stephen Skinner and David Rankine (London – Singapore: Golden Hoard Press, 2007). The question, "Why another edition of the Lemegeton?" is taken up in the introduction (I have condensed):

1. The manuscript contains much material which no other version does...
2. We wanted to show how the system of magic in the Lemegeton was developed and actually practiced by working magicians in the seventeenth century...
3. The seals in this manuscript are beautiful and more carefully drawn than in any other manuscript...
4. This version explains the preparation and protection of the magician, specifically what precise angel he should use to compel each individual demon, and the use of the Brass Vessel. These key practical details are not present in any other edition of the Goetia.

5. We wanted to trace where the Lemegeton material comes from and to demonstrate that its roots reach back at least to the thirteenth century, and the connections between angel magicians and those evoking in the grimoire tradition, which in the case of this manuscript proves to be identical. ...

The Goetia of Dr Rudd is Volume III of SOURCEWORKS OF CEREMONIAL MAGIC, by Skinner and Rankine contains Goetia, Theurgia Goetia, The Art Pauline, and The Art Almadel — but not Ars Notoria because “it is not a workable system as it appears in these manuscripts,” without the crucial notae illustrations.

Further, see Michael Camille’s “Visual Art in Two Manuscripts of the Ars Notoria,” in Conjuring Spirits: Texts and Traditions of Medieval Ritual Magic, edited by Claire Fanger (University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1998; hereafter Conjuring Spirits); “The Notary Art” (CHAPTER 4, § 1) in Frank Klaassen’s Religion, Science, and the Transformations of Magic: Manuscripts of Magic 1300-1600, Ph.D. dissertation: Toronto: University of Toronto, 1999 (pp. 109-129); and Klaassen’s § THE ARS NOTORIA within “English Manuscripts of Magic, 1300-1500: A Preliminary Survey,” in Conjuring Spirits..., (ed. Fanger), pp. 14-19.

2. a. Grimorium Verum:

Again we can turn to Waite (pp. 96-100, 159-183, and 236-240, with numerous other references) and Shah (pp. 64-68; 75-112).

An attractive edition was put out by Trident Press (Seattle: 1994): Grimorium Verum: Containing The Most Approved Keys Of Solomon Wherein The Most Hidden Secrets Both Natural & Supernatural Are Immediately Exhibited ... translated from the Hebrew by Plangiere, Jesuite Dominicaine, in ‘library’ cloth, and, in this rare case, paper. The I.G.O.S. version offers the text in both French and English (Palm Springs: 1996).

The best edition available is, not surprisingly, that of Joseph H. Peterson,¹ which offers not only an English translation but complete French and Italian texts. Peterson’s careful work accommodates academics and practitioners alike.

2. b. TRUE BLACK MAGIC:

There are conflicting descriptions of this text. Butler describes a MS containing 45 talismans with details of their workings and “all magical characters known unto this day” from a Hebrew original (Ritual Magic, p. 80). Waite (p. 100) refers to it as “simply an adapted version of the KEY... [and] like the Grimorium Verum, it is exceedingly confused, and is rendered almost unmeaning by the omission of the practical part.” Waite does, however, quote and paraphrase it frequently:

- p. 146 on abstinence
- pp. 147-148 on baths
- p. 149 on inks
- p. 154 on instruments
- p. 166 on pen and ink
- pp. 174-176 on parchment
- pp. 177-179 on cleaning
- pp. 300-302 for love
- pp. 306-307 for invisibility

2. c. THE GRAND GRIMOIRE:

THE GRAND GRIMOIRE, also called the Red Dragon, is described and quoted by Waite (pp. 100-103/pp. 241-264). Shah introduces it and from it offers an operation for conjuring Lucifuge (pp. 68-74). There is an artful limited edition (500 copies) from Trident/Ars Obscura (Seattle: 1996) translated by Gretchen Rudy from the 1612 Italian edition; this has been reprinted by Trident in a $100 “library edition” with an optional $25 slipcase (2006). I.G.O.S. has its typically pricey edition titled The Red Dragon – The Grand Grimoire (translated by Robert Blanchard, Palm Springs: 1995), which gives both the French and English. Lastly, there is an economy version of The Grand Grimoire edited by Darcy Kuntz [KABBALISTIC GRIMOIRE SERIES IV] (Edmonds: Holmes Publishing Groups, 2001).

3. The Grimoire & SWORN BOOK of Honorius:

Distinction should immediately be made between the SWORN BOOK OF HONORIUS and the later, derivative — and diabolical — Grimoire, also called the Constitution of Honorius. Unfortunately, these titles are often interchanged (as with the I.G.O.S. edition discussed below).

3a. The Grimoire of [Pope] Honorius is treated in the books we have already cited: Butler: pp. 89-97, Waite: pp. 103-110, and Shah: pp. 253-280.

The Grimoire of Pope Honorius "from a [German] manuscript from the Infernal Library of a Schwabian farmer," translated by Kineta Ch'ien, was published in a limited edition in 1999 by Trident Books (Seattle); both the English and German are included. The text is somewhat different from the one treated by Butler, Waite, and Shah, though introduced by The Constitution of Pope Honorius given in French and English, the English of which is identical to Shah, pp. 255-6 and quite similar to Waite pp. 107-9. Included in the Trident edition is support material, such as a "Bibliographic Prolegomenon," an "Examination of the Editions of the Grimoire," and yet another text, Coniurationes Demonum (in English).

3b. A translation of the SWORN BOOK, or Liber Sacer sive Liber Juratus, was done by Daniel Driscoll: The Sworn Book of Honorius the Magician (Gillette: Heptangle Books, 1977 & Berkeley Heights: Heptangle Books, 1983). Printed as a fancy collectable, this work is now difficult and expensive to obtain; alas, it is incomplete and considered somewhat inaccurate. I.G.O.S. published a hardbound typescript, variously titled Medieval Grimoire of Honorius, Grimoire of Honorius, and Handbook of Honorius the Magus (translated by Robert Blanchard, Palm Springs: 1993). Even though it is called "Grimoire," this work is in fact the iuratus or SWORN BOOK of Honorius mentioned by Lynn Thorndike in History of Magic and Experimental Science (New York: Macmillan Company, 1923-1958; reprinted Columbia University Press), volume II, chapter XLIX: "Solomon and the Ars Notoria."

There is the more definitive Liber Iuratus Honorii: A Critical Edition of the Latin Version of the Sworn Book of Honorius, by Gösta Hedegård [Acta Universitatis Stockholmiensis: Studia Latina Stockholmiensa] (Stockholm: Almquist & Wiksell International, 2002). The text is in Latin; the 46-page introduction, however, is in English.

See 'A Thirteenth-Century Ritual to Attain the Beatific Vision from the Sworn Book of Honorius of Thebes' by Robert Mathiesen, and 'The Devil's Contemplatives: The Liber iuratus, The Liber visionum and Christian Appropriation of Jewish Occultism' by Richard Kieckhefer — both in Conjuring Spirits. Refer also to Frank Klaassen's Ph.D. dissertation, RELIGION, SCIENCE, AND THE TRANSFORMATIONS OF MAGIC: MANUSCRIPTS OF MAGIC 1300-1600 (Toronto: University of Toronto, 1999), pages 129-135, and Klaassen's § THE LIBER SACER OR SWORN BOOK OF HONORIUS within "English Manuscripts of Magic, 1300-1500: A Preliminary Survey," in Conjuring Spirits..., (ed. Fanger), pp. 19-20.

4. Semiphoras & Shemhamphoras Salomonis Regis (hereafter S&S):

S&S is surrounded by a mish-mash derived from Agrippa, pseudo-Agrippa, Jewish magic (Shimmush Tehillim), folk magic, and fragments from the Faustian school in a collection titled The Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses (New York: Wehman Brothers, n.d. [1880]; and Carbondale: Egyptian Publishing Company, n.d.; Chicago: The de Laurence Company, 1919.)

In 1982, there appeared the profoundly disappointing New Revised Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses and the Magical Uses of Psalms, edited by Migene González-Wippler (Bronx: Original Publications). The text and especially the introduction are rife with errors.

In 2008, Joseph H. Peterson edited a nicely-printed edition (Lake Worth: Ibis Press) which offers serious treatment of this hybrid collection of translations: clear, correct texts and diagrams, with an informative foreword, notes, and nine supplemental appendices — by far the best edition.

The texts (with seals in Hebrew and magical script) of The Sixth Book of Moses and The Seventh Book of Moses are English translations from Johann Scheible's Das Sechste und Siebente buch Mosis (Stuttgart: 1849), which is volume six of Scheible's Bibliothek der zauber geheimnis – und offenbarungs-bucher.

The S&S texts also trace their origins back to German collections, namely volumes 3 and 4 of J. C. Horst's Zauberbibliothek (6 vols., Mainz: 1821-6); and volume 3 of Johann Scheible's Das Kloster (12 vols., Stuttgart and Leipzig: Theodor Thomas, 1846).¹

Interestingly, “The Seven Semiphoras of Adam” and “The Seven Semiphoras of Moses” within S&S closely match passages in the seventh book of Cephar Raziel: Liber Salomonis, discussed below. For S&S, see Wehman, Egyptian, and de Laurence — pp. 116-140; González-Wippler — pp. 125-164. Peterson, APPENDIX 3 — pp. 141-168.

5. Liber Salomonis, British Library Sloane MSS 3826, 3846, 3847 and 3853:

Liber Salomonis is not treated at length in any printed source, though it is described in Ceremonial Magic (pp. 20-21) and mentioned here and there by Shah and Butler. Thorndike mentions this MS only once in History of Magic (volume II, p. 281).

British Library Sloane MS 3826 is in English, except for (i) the opening lines of paragraphs in Liber Salomonis and Incipit Canon; (ii) the Orisons; (iii) the invocation, constriction, ligation, and license of Raphael; and (iv) Beleemus De imaginibus (BELEEMUS ON THE IMAGES [of the planets]). Folio pages 58^r-83^v have been identified as material from THE SWORN BOOK of Honorius (see Bibliography: "Printed notices of Sloane MS 3826").

Introduction to the Manuscript

Liber Salomonis comprises folio pages 2^r-57^r of British Library Sloane MS 3826; it contains seven treatises (as described in its own fol. 3^r):

1. Clavis "of astronomy and of the starres" (ff 5^v-11^v)
2. Ala "the vertues of some stones of herbes and of beasts" (ff 12^r-27^r)
3. Tractatus Thymiamatus of suffumigations and of allegations of them and divisions" (ff 27^r-34^r)
4. The "Treatise of tymes of the year of the day and of the night when anything ought to be done by this booke" (ff 34^r-46^r)
5. The "Treatise of Cleanesse of Abstinence" (ff 46^r-51^r)
6. "Samaim" which "nameth all the heavens and her angels and the operations or workings of them" (ff 51^v-53^v)
7. The "Booke of Vertues and miracles—the properties of the ark of magicke and of his figures and of the ordinance of same" (ff 53^v-57^v)

Liber Salomonis refers to itself as "Cephar Raziel" (ff 2^v, 3^r, 4^r, 12^r, 34^r), "Sepher Raziel" (fol. 2^r), "booke of Raziel" (ff 20^r, 46^r, 57^r), and "booke of Razeelus" (fol. 3^v). Solomon is indicated as the recipient and redactor, not the author of the book in the narrative which introduces the text (ff 2^v-3^v), though most instructions begin, "Salomon said." Others begin, "Hermes said" (ff 9^r, 11^r, 18^v, 24^r, 28^v, 30^r, 31^r, 32^r, 33^v), "Adam said" (fol. 16^r), "Nathaniel said" (fol. 47^r), "Moyses said" (ff 4^r, 4^v), and "Raziel said" (ff 6^r, 16^v, 22^r, 26^r, 28^v, 31^v, 34^v, 36^r, 37^r, 38^v). Narrative passages refer to Raziel as the source of the book (e.g., ff 34^r and 36^r).

The rest of Sloane MS 3826 consists of:

1. Incipit Canon: The rule of the book of consecration (ff 58^r-60^r)
2. Orisons (ff 60^r-65^r)
3. Magical directions (ff 65^r-83^v)
4. Liber Lunae (ff 84^r-97^v)
5. Raphael: The Invocation of Oberion Concerning Physick &c. (ff 98^r-99^r)
6. The Call of Bilgal, One of the 7 etc. (fol. 99^v)
7. An Experiment for a Fayry (fol. 100^r)
8. Beleemus De imaginibus (ff 100^v-101^r)

In various communications, I have expressed my opinion that Sloane MS 3826 was a sixteenth-century Christian product, though one which borrowed from Jewish, Arabic, and Græco-Roman scholastic and folk sources. In a note to me (January 28, 2007), Sophie Page offered an informed and most welcome emendation to my view in the form of an abridged segment from her article, 'Uplifting Souls and Speaking with Spirits: The Liber de essentia spirituum and the Liber Razielis,' in Claire Fanger (ed.), Invoking Angels: Mystical Technologies in the Middle Ages (forthcoming):

"The most explicit transmission of Jewish magical material into the Christian Latin tradition of magic was the translation of works associated with the name "Raziel," an angel present in Jewish angelology and Arabic astrological texts who was said to have revealed a book of secrets to Adam. Various esoteric and magical treatises attributed to Raziel and based on the practical use of divine and angelic names circulated among late medieval Jews. The earliest known reference in Latin is a citation by the Christian convert Petrus Alfonsus [or Alfonsi] (1062-1110) of a certain Secretum secretorum, which claimed to have been revealed to Seth, the son of Adam, by the angel Raziel. By the mid-thirteenth century, these magic texts were circulating more widely in Latin. In 1259, Alfonso [X, (1221-1284)] directed the translation of a work entitled Liber Razielis from Latin into Castilian by the cleric Juan d'Aspa. The Castilian version does not survive, but the Latin original put together by Alfonso survives in two complete and several partial copies, as well as various early modern abridged vernacular versions. The Alfonsine Liber Razielis is structured in the form of seven books said to have been brought together by Solomon. Nine related texts from the Solomonic and Hermetic magical traditions were added by Alfonso's scribes as appendices. Although the preface cites a single Hebrew original for the seven volumes, it is likely that the structure was partly a creation of Alfonso himself and his translators."

The following post-1500 manuscripts contain abridged vernacular copies of the Alfonsine Liber Razielis or the Liber Sameyn only (the sixth book). This is not an exhaustive list, and I have only personally examined those in the British Library: MS Yale, Beinecke Rare Books Library Osborn MS fa. 7 (late s. xvi, English); British Library MSS Sloane 3826 (s. xvii,¹ English), ff. 1-57, Sloane 3846 (s. xvi, English), ff. 127-55; MS Lyon 970 (s. xvii, xviii, French); MSS Alnwick Castle 596 (s. xviii, Italian, the Liber Sameyn), pp. 1-42 and 96 (Italian, Latin, English, the Liber Sameyn only); MS Lübeck, Bibliothek der Hansestadt, Math. 4^o 10 (s. xvi/xvii, German); MS Dresden N. 36 (s. xviii, German); Prague, National Museum Library MS XVII F25 (1595, Czech, trans. Ioannes Polenarius). MS British Library Add. 16,390 (s. xvii) has a Hebrew extract with a title in Italian. Where no folio references are given, the catalogue entry suggests that the Liber Razielis travels alone.

In her introduction to The Watkins Dictionary of Angels (London: Watkins Publishing, 2006), Julia Cresswell writes (page 9) of Sloane MS 3826,

"I would suggest that although the manuscript may be sixteenth century, some of the language is rather old-fashioned for that date, except perhaps for an old person writing in the early sixteenth century. I would guess that the text is a reworking of an earlier one, pushing the origin of the material back into the Middle Ages."

Liber Salomonis is in the present book literally transcribed, line-by-line, with no changes in spelling or wording. Spelling in the MS is quite inconsistent; e.g., within a few lines of each other, we find "wing," "winge," "wyng," and "wyngē." Using superscript and other features, I have imitated the look of the text as closely as typographically possible. Note that superscripted letters belong to the text and usually indicate contractions; superscripted numbers refer to footnotes. All Latin headings are in italics. Manuscript folio numbers are given in square brackets.

Following that, for ease of reading, Stephen Skinner has edited a modern English version of the same text.

In noie Dei potentis vibi et veri et aeterni &c

In the name of Almighty God living and very and everlasting and without all and which is said Adonay Saday Ehye Asereye I begin to write this booke which is said Sephar Raziel with all his appertenances in which be seven treatises complete or fulfilled that is vii bookes.

Dixit Salomon Gloria et laus et cu multo honore &c

Salomon said glory and praying with much honor be to God of all Creatures, he that is singular which made all things at one tyme. And he is one God very mighty he alone that is and that was and which evermore shall be, and which has never an end or any like him neither is he like to have. And he is singular without end, Lord alone without corruption, holy cleane meeke and great all things seeing and hearing and wise and in all things mighty. And I begin this booke to put an ynsample that whosoever that hath it blame it not till he have red and heard all or somewhat of it, and then prayse the God maker of all things.

These be the ix precepts Incipiunt praecepta
Heere beginneth the precepts

Non credas esse plures nisi unu~ singulare &c and explanation in this book^e to every man that readeth or studyeth in it, that he may know^e whereof he was and from whome he came. Knowe ye that after I Salomon had xxx yeeres within an half in the vth day of the month of Hebreys which was the vith ferial day, the sonne being in the signe of Leonis. In that day was sent to me from Babilony of some prince that was greater and more worshipfuller then all men of this tyme some booke that is said Cephar Raziel which cont vii bookes and vii treatises.

Nota tempus in quo Salomon fuit p^o adeptus istu libre et quomodo et a quo venit sibi

Knowe thou the tyme in which Salomon gott the booke and howe and of whom it came to him.

Iste liber est magnae virtutis et magnae secretiae This booke is of great vertue and of great privity, the name of the prince that sent it to me was Sameton and of the two wise men that brought it to me was said Kamazan and the other Zazont.

[3^r]

The name of this booke expound^{ed} in Latine is Angelus magnus Secreti Creatoris That is to say the great Angel of the secret creator And in Hebrew Cephar Raziel it is the book^e after Adam written in language of Caldey and afterward translated in Hebrew. And know each man that read^es it that in it all Semiforax that is to say the great name complete with all his names whole and even. and with his vertues and his sacraments And I found it in 7 bookes that is 7 treatises. And know ye that I found the first and the last full dark^e and the five middle more plain and although I found them dark^e I opened them as much as I could or might. And the 7 treatises of this book^e be these..

1. The first is said Clavis for that in it is determined of Astronomy and of the stares for without them we may do nothing.
2. The second is said Ala for that in it is determined of the vertues of some stones of herbes and of beasts
3. The third is said Tractatus Thymiamatu^s for that there is determined in it of suffumigations and of Allegations of them and divisions
4. The ivth is said the Treatise of tymes of the year of the day and of the night for that in it is determined when anything ought to be done by this book^e
5. The vth is said the Treatise of Cleanesse for that there is determined in it of Abstinence
6. The sixtth is said Samaim for in that treatise it nameth all the heavens and her angels and the operations or workings of them
7. The viith is the book^e of Vertues for that there is determined in it of vertues and miracles for there be told the properties of the ark of magicke and of his figures and of the ordinance of same.

And the I beganne to write all these treatises in a new^e volume for that one treatise without another serves not to the wholeness of the work^e Therfore I made an whole book^e to be made of the treatises. Therfore Salomon said to his writer Clarifaton that he could write it, which I know well the language of Caldý of Indy of Hebrew and of Syne and their right explanation. Methelis Salomon said that after Clarifaton had corrected it and had dressed it, it should be the better and ordained it in the best maner that he might. And Clarifaton said, which was the writer of Salomon, that this booke is full of great privity and that it was sent of full great honor And that it was sent to Salomon for most price and most love. And everiche treatise of these vii was written by themselves. But although it be so that Clarifaton said that it ought to be but one booke alone by itself for none of these saith he should suffice without another, wherefore he said it were necessary that they were all together Whereupon Salomon ordained that all the said 7 treatises were but one book^e as they ought to be and as they ought to be read and wrought.

And he ordayned it much better then the ph^{il}o^[soph]rs orday= ned, and also he taught how a man ought to do his work^e by it. And he put every treatise by itself and every chapter by itself and ordayned all till the end of the book^e. And he putt into this booke Semiforas that is the book^e of 17 vertues how it ought to be written and of which Ink^e, and of which parchment and with what pen and with what man, and in which time and what day and in what night and in what hour. After that Salomon expounded in the book^e of Razeelus and how it ought to be kept Cleanly and with great honor

Salomon said who so seeth and knoweth not is as he that is born^e blind^e and knoweth not colors and who that heareth and understandeth not is such as if he were a deaf^e man. And who so considereth and knoweth not the consideration is such as if it were of a dronkerd

[4^r]

And whom that speaketh and cannot expound the reason is as a dombe man. And who that readeth playne bookes and understandeth them not is as it were he dreameth. These proverbs Salomon said in this booke ffor as Salomon said in this booke is hit that Cephar Raziel the angel said to Adam which was the first man in this world and after it which Moyses said to other prophets in soothes and we troweth it so.

Dixit angelus Salomoni vt o^{mn}es tuæ operationes &c
The angel said to Salomon that all thy workings and petitions and willes be fulfilled, and it shall be made in all hitt that thou shalt covet that it be in thy might It behoveth that when thou hast this book^e of this or of Another example or exemplar that thou write it in Inst maner in virgin parchemt and that it be not filthy neither of a dead beast or in vealime (vitulino) or in parchmyn of sylke, or in samatyne,¹ or in cleane clothe or in parchmyn of a lamb or of a virgin kidde or of a virgin ffawne, and this is better than any other. And the Ink^e with which thou shalt write be it of cleane galles and let it be made with good white wyne & whole and with gum^e and vitriol and masticke & thyme and croco. And the third day when it hath taken residence and shall be clensed putt ¹ thou therein a little of Algoba and Almea,² and putt therein of good muske or muske more than of those three. And put thou therein Amber and Balsamu^s myrryam and lignus aloes and when the Inke shall be made, boyled with masticke and with thyme and with lingo aloes and with somewhat of Thymiamat and Mulculazarat and thou clense it well with a cleane^e thinne cloth^e, and the cloth be it threefold. And afterward putt therein musk^e and Ambram and Almenus & Algana and Balsami^s and Myrrha^s all well grounden & then shalt meddle all this with the Inke full well together And let the inke be so still for the space of 3 days well covered in a fayre place And know^e thou that with this ynke thou shalt write all the holy names of God and of his angels and of his saints, and all things in which his holy great name is ³ nempned and written. And all things that thou willest truly to be fulfilled with thy well pleasing or with thy service. And what ere thou putttest in this ynke, be it newe and bright and pure and good ⁴ And the penne that thou shalt write the holy names be it of a green^e reed^e gathered early ere the sunne ⁵ arise. And he that shall gather it be he clene & washen & in running water or in a quicke well and also let him be clothed with cleane clothes, and the moon^e being waxing with Caput Draconis or with Jove, for that they be true and very. And when thou shalt gather it, thou shalt behold of looke toward the East and thou shalt say thus Adonai et Saday jubate me ad complendu^s voluntates meas eo^s axundine ista. That is to say Help ye me to fulfill my willes with this reed^e. and when this is said thou shalt cutt one reede or twayne or as many as thou wilt with one stroke. And as Moyses said the knife be it well playne sharpe and whole as thoughe we should

³ Above "is nempned" is written "named."

cutt of an neck^e with it. And thou take the reed^e with thy cleane hands, and make thou of it a gobbets. And when thou wilt cutt the penne, cutt it ere the sunne arise or when it ariseth. With this penne and with this ynke thou shalt write all the names of God holy and severall. And as often as thou writest the name of the Creator be thou clean^e and ¹solleme & serened & in a clean^e place. And thou shalt first ere thou write by iii dayes be bathed in clean^e water, but rather thou shalt be clean^e by 9 days an house or clean^e place made very clean^e with beesoms and washen watered and suffumed And ordeyne so that when thou writeth, hold thou thy face toward the East & write thou from morning till midday till that thou eate. And after that thou hast eaten and dronken thou shalt not write in it any thing. And if thou wilt write Semiforax with his strengthes the number of the mone, be it even. And most in the day of the mone or of morning or of Jovis or dius. & be thou word of Saturne and of Sol upon all. And Salomon said If thou putteth into the ynke of the bloud of vowter or of a furtur or of a gander (wholly or all white) the ynke shall be much the better and the more vertue

Also I say that if there were of Sapher powdered Sma=ragdo, gagnisia & topasia the ynke shall be complete or fulfilled. And with this Inke and with this penne ought to be written all the names of Semiforas and know^e thou yt he that shall write this book^e ought to be clean^e & fasting bathed and suffumed with precious aromatickes, that is with spices well smelling. And it shall be great profit to thee and to him that maketh it or writeth it. And each man yt hath written this booke or hath holden it in his house, ev'more hold^e he God in his mynde and his holy Angels & hit for which he hath made it. & let him put in his mynde in which tyme of the 4 tymes of the day with his oughth or of the tymes of an hower And ev'more let him put in his mynde to his 4 tymes of an hower to which they ought to be as invenies in libro prophetar^{um}

Salomon said as though there were a castle full strong and his highenes ful great and high and en=hansed and well on each side with walles invironed and the gates in one place well strong and stable or fyrme and with keyes closed and locked. Therfore it behoveth it who that would open the gates of that close castle and holsomly would enter into it both without travel of gyfte and without bruising of his body It is necessary to have the same keyes and none other of this castle and of his gates & of his closings Thus I say this that it is for to knowe the starres and their names and their figures and their natures, and when they should be good and when they should be evill, And thus I say of the fixe and of the 7 erraticis neverthelesse Consider how evermore the nature of the Circle of the xii signes that is thee towards. And therfore it behoveth each man that hath this booke, that he holde it clenly and that he keep^e it with great reverence & with great hono^r. And who that hath it, and can reade it, let him not reade it, but if he were before full cleane of body and with great witte.

And I make every man to knowe or weel that he ought not to worke by this book^e in vayne, neither without wytte nor without lawe or reason. And this is when every man doth to the contrary, or when and Reptiles, or wood beasts should lett thee or do the harme. And knowe thou though^e thou have might and trust for to worke by this booke & although thou might have great trust in this, yet thou shalt not worke, but with great right or lawe or with much reason And understand thou of all the contrary, and if thou worchest otherwise by this booke then thou shouldest and much might let thee that is to say if thou worchest without reason, or if thou were uncleane or evill in thy self.

o Clavis istius libri est cognoscere et scire loca

The key to this booke is to knowe and will the places of the vii bodyes above and their natures and their sciences and the domes, and all their vertues after yt it appeared in the earth to me

o__o formata debet esse omnis figura cu^s ex vero

Eache figure ought to be formed with very or true en= sample therfore I put the figure of the key in this booke that no man true that without reason and profitt it be made. And I put in figure and key with the shafte to the similitude or likenes that there is one soleyne Lord one god which never had neither shall have any even or like to him In the Quadriture or in that, yt is fower cornered yt signified that there be 4 elements and no moe. And in this key is one triangle which signifyeth knowing might and will for whome these three no man may do any thing in the worlde neither attayne to any profit. And Salomon said that the shafte of this key is as Raziel said to Adam unite or one head, and the quadrate is as 4 vertues that be in herbes and words and beasts, and they be to the similitude of elemnts which openeth and doeth all. And the 7 wards be 7 Angels which have might in the 7 heavens, and in the 7 dayes of the weeke as furthermore I shall teache you.

And the triangle signifyeth man which is in body and soule and spirit, and these above said leadeth together all the worlde as it was compounded in highnes & lownes.

Pastqua~ hucusq diximus oportet nos dicere &c
After that we have said hitherto it behoveth us now to say for this booke that which is said of the key of the 7 brethren. And these 7 brethren have among themselves 12 realmes for to devide or to depart, and in each realme be 30 cities, and in every city be 60 castles and in every eiche castle 60 Caldee yt is to say feeldy or wilde townes. And this exemplar Salomon found and made distinction and said there is one father and he hath 7 sonnes and these 7 sonnes be germanyes ffor after that they be of the same father germayn. And the Elder is most heavy among all the other. And the middle in the middle more ordinate then all. And thither lightly be in the middle in fellowshiping hit evermore, so they twene of these be not much severed from hit. And the 7 brethren Salomon said be Sabaday Saturnus. Zedel Jupiter

[6^v]
Madyn Mars Hamyna Sol Noga Venus Cocab
Mercury Labana that is to say Luna Knowe thou the houses of the planetts. And Salomon putt names to the xii realmes of the of Germanyes and they be called signes and he beginneth to make distinction. And he gave to their fighter that is to say to Mars that he should rest, and that he should not fight in the realme of the signe of Arietis and of this vertue he is in the realme of the East, he gave him in the realme of the worlde the signe of Scorpionis that he should fight strongly and that he should never rest, and he is in the eight realme from the first. And afterward he gave to the fayre Noga that is to say Veneri twey realmes of which one hath the half seale of Tauri that is from the highnes of his head with his horns till to the navell. And their as the viith from the first that is Libra, and after while Venus is above that is in the Northe, and otherwhile beneath that is in the South. And so he hath inherited in twey parts And then he gave to the painter (which is the writer) that is Mer=curius twey realmes of which one hath twey men embraced that is clipping together himself, that other hath a fayre virgin winged and nevermore would be divided or departed from wemen for those Images be such and he displeaseth evermore to go much from the South into the Northe. And he gave to the Malix that is to say Lune for that he goeth evermore one realme And for that she will note stande much in her house & her signe is a fish that is said Cancer which hath many feete, and signifyeth be this that he will go much for that he is under other brethren, this suffer alone And he gave to the middle brother, which is the Lord of all other, and he commandeth to all and is more adorned for fay=rer arrayed, therefore he gave to him one realme full strong in heate and his signe is as the Lion, that sheweth him Lord upon all beasts, so is he stronger and of more Lordshippe upon all his brethren. And then remayned twey brethren of the par^{ty} of the South and theld or tooke twey realmes, one about another for this that he should never overcome in the signe of the realme well meridionall or south, and he is one beast with one forme in his front, and the signe of that other realme is a man that holdeth with many waters and this brother is said the old Sabaday. And then ta=keth that other brother for heritage on his right syde the realme with the signe of half a man and half a horse

Knowe you heere the natures of the Signes And Salomon said Aries is a sign fiery hot & dry, cholerick, and so is Leo and Sagittarius and they have might in the East.

Taurus is earthy, cold and dry, melancholious & so is Virgo and Capricornus and they have might in the South.

Gemini is airy, hot and moist & sanguine and so is Libra & Aquarius & they have might in the West.
And Cancer is watery feminine moist and flegmatic and so is Scorpio and Pisces & they have might in the North.

Iam diximus de naturis et signis et eor^um complexionib^{us}
Now we have said of natures and sign^s and of the complexions of them, so we meane to say of natures and of the complexions of germanyes and what they signifyeth.

The first higher that is said the old Sabaday is Saturnis the nature of which is cold and dry for that is much straight and melancholious and signifyeth father and wroth and discord in lands.

[7^v]

The second is said Zedek and he is temperate for that he is betweene the old Sabady and the hott Madyn and Zedek is hott and moyst and sanguine in savor sweete & it draweth to good ayer, and it signifyeth good and honor and vertue.

The third is the fighter Madyn and he is hott and dry evill and lover and bremer, ravisher & a lyer.

The fowrth is Hamyna Sol middle among other hott and mighty and worshipfull and all thither brethren shameth or dreadeth him and he is much soothfast and strong.

The fifth is the fayre Noga colde and moyst, glad flegmaticke fatt and fleshy and well seeming in all her members and chere, and he signifyeth good soughts and he is much glad among wemen.

The sixt is the writer and the forespeaker Cocab, this holdeth himself with all & serveth to all, and signifyeth writers and tydings and voyces after that he shall be with it yt which everich^e he holdeth him self, when he is with it

The viith brother is Labana & it is Malx and it is colde and moist and it signifyeth brethren and beareth each moneth and manndem^{en}ts of brethren to brethren after that it is severed from them.

Deinde loquamur de septem fr̃ibus quare dicuntur clavis &c And then speake we of the vii brethren why they be said the keyes of the world (and which this world may not excuse neither excuseth) and these were formed as 4 brethren which be said the 4 elements, and they have after signification witt and discretion & might complete and honesty and strength, and everiche may do in his hemisphere that is empire as an Emperor in his empyer, or as a prince in his Lordship. Also they have might over the 7 parts which we sayen clymates. And knowe thou that these be mighty upon all beasts heere formed.

And Salomon said prophets clippeth these brethren vii quicke spirits, and holy and wise men said that they were 7 lampes burning or 7 candlesticks of light & of life, and all prophets clipeth them 7 heavenly bodyes which be vii planets and of commonalty they be said 7 starres. And the 7 brethren be kept of 4 beasts full of eyen before and behinde which be the partyes of heaven East West north and South, and they have might in the 4 parts of the worlde and in 4 tymes and in 4 natures with her com=plexions and withal her parties and in all her 4 ele=ments and with these together is hed and meeved all things moveable by the Commandements of God that put them in their places.

Dixit Salomon sicut fuerunt semp status superius Salomon said As there were evermore states above without corruption so know^e thou that there is nowe and shall be evermore. And for this we understand the bodyes above cleane and good and made without corrup=tion. And that neather-bodyes uncleane evill treated and broken, and eache day they fayleth and bend corrupted And this corruption resteth not neither is made very of the which we understand that the neatherbodyes might not excuse the over bodyes. And all things which we seene beneath have roote and beginneth from things above ffor things above be with lyfe and without dolor and things beneath be the contrary, have death and dolor And things above have during without corruption and things beneath each day fayleth and be corrupted and minished. All prophets seene that if there lacked any one of the over bodyes that is of these that be much above ten thousand betwixt those that we see and those that we not see. Knowe thou that it were a great precipitation and destruction and confusion in lande and in sea and in the 4 elements if any of the bodyes above were broken or were evill treated And if there fayled one of the 7 brethren the earth shoulde come agayne to his first state, and all the elements were confused. And if any of them had corporally received corruption knowe thou that all things were destroyed that received soule or lyfe. And knowe thou that as the 4 elements be turned downeward so be they not turned without some reason of the 7 above And this sayeth the Phil^[ilosoph]er when the sonne is destroyed eache lyfe and eache soule is destroyed. And when the mone is destroyed the ligatures or buildings of the sea be destroyed. And knowe thou that Saturnus is earthly and holdeth all the earth in a ballance that is not moved. And Jupiter holdeth the ayer, and Mars the fyer, and Sol the day and men, And Venus holdeth the fayre parts of the worlde, and Mercurius reasons and Luna holdeth the hearts seas waters and their powers. And knowe^e thou that everiche (After that it were or shall be in this exaltation) ordeyned and bounden with the sonne y^ts reasons and words and speeches should be good betwixt men. And as often as Mercury were joined in Virgo in the same point with Sol direct and not retrograde, make we subtyll things and reasonable And as ofte as Sol were in Aries, so many yeeres unlike he giveth us. And as ofte as Saturnus were in Libra so many mutations he giveth in landes. And as ofte as Jupiter is ioyned with Saturne in an earthly signe so many divers mutations or changings he giveth. And he changeth lawes & seates and Lordshippes and thus understand thou in other complexions of planetts after the states of them and their beholdings that is said Aspectus.

Et dixit Hermes istam rationem super capita oia &

And Hermes said this reason upon the heads of beasts Saturnus hath the right eare, Venus the lefte and Sol the right eye and Luna the lefte. Mercurius the mouth. These 7 hooles have they in power above upon the head of a man. And Salomon said that a man is a measure which is said Palmus made with hande in which bene all the vertues of the worlde and of the 7 planetts and that is only the head of a man wherefore everiche man is likened to his starre and to his elements. And Salomon said when I founde a spirit above retrograde or combust or evill treated thus I say that his body was evill treated beneath in which it was like or he signified in it. And who that were so wise that he knowe his signe and his planet and his starre above and his signification he might do good and evill to himself & likewise so to other men. And as the nativities of beasts be denyed such wurchings you shall do with helpe of God.

Postqua diximus de 12 signis et planetis &
After that he said of the 12 figures & planetts & of radiis of them we say that eche planet that were in Ascendent and if there be another in the same Ascendent it is named coniunction, and how much the latitude or bredth shall be lesse so much the coniunction is said to be stronger and if there be more latitude the coniunction is the feebler. And so I say to thee in the middle of heaven. And if the poynte of the 12 houses which be in the stronger places of all houses I say the poynte of the first degree of the house, and eche starre that were lesse and hath upon himself another the like is said that it hath power and goeth upon another from starre to starre And thus each starre that diverseth from another by 60 degrees before and after It is said aspectus sextilis that is the sixt beholding And each planet that differeth 90 degrees before and behinde It is said in aspectu quarto that is in the fourth beholding. And each planet that diverseth or differeth by 120 degrees before and behinde It is said in aspectu tertio, that is in the third beholding. And each planet that differeth by 180 degrees is in opposition in that that it is said in the contrary place. These be the 7 beholdings and no moe duo tertii, duo quarti & duo sextile and unus opposites that is to say twayne in the third, twey in the fourth, and twey in the sixt and one contrary against another. The coniunction is complete then they be in one degree Double coniunction if twey good or temperate sheweth double good, as twey evill by the contrary sheweth much evill The sextilis beholding the ascendent avayleth one good if trino and twey trino avayleth in the beholding ascendent one good fortunate in the ascendent. And twey quarties in the beholding the ascendent avayleth one greevous or heavy (if there were evill starres) and twey opposita avayleth one infortunate in the ascendent or in the opposite. And twey quarti avayleth as much as a starre falling or combust or retrograde this is letted in the Ascendent one fortunate or twey in the Ascendent and another of sextile and another of trine beholding the ascendent sheweth much good hasty or highing Twey evill in the ascendent or one with another in opposito that is in the contrary or falling sheweth greevous or long impediment. And if they be falling and letted it shall be worse. One fortunate in the Ascendent beholding of twey trinis it sheweth much good and how much there were no witnesses upon the figure of which thou enquireth and searcheth or fo which thou worchest so much it shall be the better And if three planets be holden the Ascendent with good beholding and twey evill the good shall overcome the evill and so of the other One infortunate in the Ascendent beholding twey quartis sheweth much greefe. Caput draconis is much better than Cauda Eache planet in his head of the same degree it more Lordship in the figure for that it is twey in latitude to the way of the sonne and it profiteth in going toward the party of the north. Eache planet in the taylor of the dragon is minishing of his worke y^t goeth towards the south.

Luna coniunct or Joyned with Saturne and Mars in the Ascendent it constrayneth and threatneth divels Satunus maketh divels strength & great power Luna coniunct or Joyned with Jove and Venus in the ascendent it sheweth great dilection and great love in every good thing.

Luna joyned with Mars & Saturne in the ascendent it sheweth impediment except the planet were of good receiving.

Luna joyned with Sol in the one poynt sheweth great grace and if that they were good

Luna ioyned in falling and to mercury in the Ascendent it sheweth the contrary

Luna in the ascendent by her self signifyeth after the planet to the which she is Joyned

Luna with Caput draconis in the ascendent sheweth good

Luna with Cadua draconis or combust or ioyned with a starre letted or in evill sitting it sheweth much evill when caput draconis and Luna were with capite Saturni or that Luna or Saturnis were there and that their werke of celson made it signifyeth upon buildings of devills fowle and evill.

Each planet that is with dracon of another & both be ioyned together it sheweth a very soothe or try worke and more in the ascendent. And if caput draconis were of Jovis or Luna and these twey coniunct or Joyned in the ascendent it sheweth much good and in= ceasing of good and honor And if it were in Cauda not only when there were twey Cauda draconis that is of Luna and of other they be full evill when Luna were with them. When Caput draconis Luna were with Caput draconis Martis and Luna and Mars in the like poynt it sheweth strength and might. And if Cauda with Cauda and Luna with Mars together it is full greevous and evill after everiche is evill so is the place or beholding of one another.

Caput draconis and Luna in capite. Aries (Luna & Sol in Zamin) sheweth great might and great honor and by the contrary in Libra beneath with Cauda dra= conis. Caput draconis with capite veneris sheweth much love and cauda draconis the contrary Caput draconis that is to say mercury with caput draconis and Luna sheweth werke of reason and of voice and many sounds, and in Cauda Luna with Mercury & Saturne it sheweth us the beholding of many experiences.

Luna in capite sui draconis sheweth and if there

Were Jupiter or Venus it shall do the werke of Jovis or of Venus and it shall profit in all good worke as these be good. Luna if it be in Cauda draconis and Mars and Saturne with it or that they beholdeth it with evill be= holding it sheweth as evill as we have said of Saturne and Martis.

And we have said that Saturnis nourisheth devills and Mars draweth and thresheth and figureth them. And Saturnus gathereth together many divels Venus and Saturnus gathereth together devills and wyndes from beneath. A good starre in the ascendent and Luna Joyned with a good starre sheweth much good. And the beginning in all hit in which were d^eus quartae that is the Lord of the 4th house and if the 4th house is well beholden of good, all the one of the thing shall be good And when the Lord of the 4th house were evill and evill intreated it sheweth noy and evill. The signe of the Ascendent sheweth the body o The Lord of the Ascen= dent of the planet that is in the Ascendent or which behol= deth it sheweth his spirit and the Lord of the hower signifyeth his soule and his will, and this understand thou in other domes The body and soule and the spirit for these three knowe thou that they maketh the body of a man safe and whole.

Dixit Hermes Saturnus exaltatur in Libra &c

Hermes said Saturnus is enhanced in Libra, and Jupiter in Cancer, and Mars in Capricorne and Sol in Aries. And Venus in Pisces and Mercurius in Virgo and Luna in Tauro.

And knowe thou that Saturnus gladdeth or Joyeth in The xii house, and Mars in the vith and Sol in the ixth and Venus in the vth and Mercurius in the Ascen= dent that is the first house and Luna in the 3^d house And the Ascendent hath 12 vertues, and each planet that is in it upon eache place of the circle. The xth house hath xi vertues. The xith house hath 10 vertues. The viith nine, the 4th eight vertues the vth house hath 7 vertues, the ixth house hath 6.

[11^v]

The third 5. The second 4. The 8 three, the xiith two and the vi house hath one vertue. And evermore consider thou in all things, that thou shalt do upon the planets how it be in the xii houses & thou shalt profitt if thou choosest well. And Salomon said to eache man that worketh by this booke, It behoveth that he knowe all these things, that is reasons which heere I will not expound to thee, that is thou knowe in which tyme of the yeere thou were borne of the 4 tymes of the yeere. And in which moneth of the moneth of Luna And begin thou from the Lunation of the moneth of Mercury (where ever Luna prima were) And all Secrets and privity be it asked in Saturne with all deepenes, and honor and substance be it asked upon Jove. And all strifes and battaile and hasting be it asked upon Mars. And all cleannes & Lordship of sol. And all fayrenes and dilections or loves and fatnes be it asked of Venus. And all reasons & witts & subtiltyes of Mercury. And of these 7 thou shalt aske evermore counsel where thou findest them in their houses and signes And they shall shewe to thee so deeme thou upon them in all good and evill. Now we have fulfilled heere with the helpe of God The treatisy that is said Liber Clavis That is the booke of the Key.

Heere endeth the first booke and heere beginneth the second

Dixit Salomon sicut alae avium sunt membra &c

Salomon said as the wings of the fowles or byrds be members that leadeth the fowles to the place where they desire to be, so by the vertue of stones & of herbes and of beasts, that liveth in flying, in swimming in going and in creeping thou might attayne to that thou wilt if thou chooseth the nature of them.

The propertyes and vertues. And therefore we clipeth this booke Ala that is wings for without wings neither fowles neither fishes mought move themselves, and so as wings beareth bodyes to highnes upwards and to fun= daments downwards and to Longitude and latitude that is to length and bredth, so by the vertue of stones and of herbes with grace and with much might of Semiforas Knowe thou that thou might attayne that thou coveteth to do as to heale and to make sicke or to stande or to goe.

Salomon said as stones be cleaner cleerer and fayrer then golde and in vii vertues of this worlde as be in stones herbes wordes and beasts, so I say that in the beginning of this booke Cephar Raziel that was crowned with vii stones of great power he put them in this booke The first was Rubinus – i – Carbunclo the second Smaragdus, the third Saphirus the fourth Berillus, the fifth Topasius, the sixt fagun= cia, the viith Adamas and the vertues of these stones Raziel hath spoken. And he said that they were crowned of 7 angells which have might over the 7 heavens and of the 7 dayes of the weeke. And Raziel said knowe eache man that hath this booke that in this booke be the more vertues of this worlde And the first vertues of this booke that is said of 4 wings be the vertues of stones whereof knowe thou that by stones alone thou might do wonderfull things if thou hast well knownen as thou shouldest doe with all other Images and that thou keepe them clenely and reverently.

And Salomon said knowe thou that in the first ala or winge be 24 precious stones great and of great power to the similitude and signification that there be 24 howers in the day and night. And Salomon began & said I put and sett the first stone car= 1 bunculu Rubinus for that it is brighter and cleerer and fayrer and of more price above all other stones And I will say of his color and his power and his vertue, and of his seale and of his figure that might to be in it. And thus I shall say in all other stones, each stone signifyeth durability or lastingnes without end. The color of Rubinus is as the color of fyre sparkling and his power is that he shineth by night as a starre or as a flame of fyre sparkling. And the vertue of it is that it maketh good color of men that beareth it reverently, and it increaseth his goods of this worlde among other men, and the Image which thou oughtest to putt in it ought to be a draco that is a Dragon well fayre with dread.

2 The second stone is Topazins of which the color is citrine as of golde. His power is that if it be put in a caldron with fervent hott or boyling water it withholdeth the water that it may not boyle, which is for great power for making colde, and the vertue of it is that it maketh a man chaste that beareth it with him and it giveth benevolence or well willing of great Lords and his figure is a falcon.

3 The third stone is Smaragdini and this stone is greene and fayre upon all greenenes, and it is not heavy as others are and his power is to keepe the light and it healeth the face and it doth many wonderfull things. And his vertue is to increase riches, and who that beareth it in golde prophesyeth things to come. And the signe of it is Scarabeus that is a maner of flye.

4 And the iiijth stone is Faguncia the color of which is redde as the graynes of an apple. Of these sothely there be well coloured some and some a little and some in the middle maner. His power is that beareth it is not infect with alien infirmity, his vertue is that is that he giveth health and hono^r and keepeth the man that beareth it whole in wayes or in Journeys, and his figure is a Lyon well figured.

5 The vth stone is a crysopazine of which the colo^r is greene and when it hath similitude as though it had golden drops, and his power is to defend a man from the Podagrie, and his vertue is that it maketh to prophesy things to come (if it were in the hand cleane and chaste) and his figure is the image of an asse.

6 The sixt stone is Saphirus the color of which is full leady and fayre (as the color of the pure cleane heaven) His power is that he healeth all infirmityes that axeth in men of Inflammation and greivance of the eye. And it clenseth them much. And if in this stone be graven the head of a man with the beard it delivereth a man from prison and from all pressure and oppression and this stone accordeth to the great power of Lords & of kings If this stone be kept clenely reverently & chastly, & that it be good oriental with it a man might attayne great honor and the profit of it that he searcheth and coveteth And some man putteth therein the signe of a ram. Aries

7 The viith stone is Berillus the color of which is of the eye or of sea water, and some of them be round and some of five corners. The stone ought to be cleere within and cleane. And his power is to chaffe the hand closed of him that beareth it. And if it be sett in golde it giveth great frindshippe betwixt twey men, if thou touchest them with it. And his figure is Rana that is a ffrogge & it is of great power to make concord and love.

8 The viiith stone is Onyx this stone is full blacke and his power is to give him that beareth it many dreadfull dreames and dreads, and he that beholdeth himself in it hath power upon all divels in constraining them and in clipping and gathering them together in speculo tabilio conjuring as it behoveth and his figure is the head of a camell or twey heads betwixt two eares that be said Mirti

9 The ixth stone is said sardius the color of which is red and fayre, and his power is to make other stones fayrer his vertue is to give good color to him that beareth it. And it is putt in golde, and if there be graven in it Aquila that is an Eagle it giveth great hono^r

10 The xth stone is Crysolitus that is of golden color and sparkling as fier. His power is to gather together divels and windes and his vertue is to defend the place where it is from evill spirits and from dead men that they do not there any evill and that divels obey there. And his figure is Vultur that is a wontor

11 The xith stone is said Eliotopia. And it is a stone of great power of which the color is greene and fayre shining and cleere with drops like bloud well redde within this stone is said the stone of wisemen of prophets and of philosophers. And this is honoured for twey things for the color is like Smaragdo in greenenes and in rednes to rubine. The price of this stone overcometh the price of other and of his vertues and propertyes. The power of this stone is that if it be put in any broad vessell full of water to the sonne it resolveth the water into vapor And it maketh it to be rayسد upward till that into the forme of rayne it be converted downeward. His vertue is that who that beareth it in his mouth or in his hand closed he may not be seene of any man, with this stone a man may have power upon all divels, and make eache Incantation or Inchantment that he will. And in this stone ought to be graven Vespertino thus he sayth. But I trowe it be Vespertilio that is a Backe or a rermouse.

12 The xiith stone is Cristallus of which the color is of water congealed with colde. his power is that he putteth abstray of fyer from him. and his vertue is that he increaseth to nourishe much mylke and good. and thou may take in it what vertue thou wilt, after as the hower shall be in which thou shalt work^e. and after as the Image shall be which thou hast made (although they be many) and yet be seene easily. Knowe thou that it hath many vertues. and his figure is a gryffon that is a fowle and a beast that he hath 4 feete & 2 wings and he is a great beast.

13 The xiiith stone is Cornelia and it is likened to water in which is bloud as the loture or washing of bloud. And his power is to staunche bloud of the nostrells. And if there be graven in it a man well clothed holding a yard or a rodde in his hande, it giveth honor to him yt beareth it and redde. and there be some greene and cleere and they be better then the other. and there be some redde thicke and dropped. And his power is that who that beareth it is not [14^v] letted with venyme neither with serpent, neither with Attercope neither with scorpion. And it defendeth a man from fever if in it be graven Leo Aries or Sagittarius

15 The xvth stone is Iris and it is likened to cristall or to gelly, and it hath corners and if any man put it in a house to the beames of the sonne so that the beames passé through it or by it the color appeareth of the raynebowe. And for this cause it is said Iris that is the raynebowe. And this is the might for it hath vi corners, and the vertue of it is to keepe the place which it is with health & honesty, and there ought to be graven in it a man armed that beareth a bowe and an arrowe.

16 The xvith stone is Corallus and it groweth in rocks of the sea as Arbor inuersa that is as a tree over= turned, and it hath branches as a tree, more till two and three palames or palmes and no more. And when it is drawn up it is greene and tender, and then it is dried in the ayer and it is made redde & harde as another. And otherwhise it is founden white. And know thou that the redde be better. And where this stone were it keepeth the house and the vineyarde or the place from tempest pestilence and torment And it keepeth the place with health and it defendeth a man from malefets i maleficis and from evill inchantments. And his Image is a man like to him that holdeth a sword in his hande.

17 The xviith stone is presius or prassius and it is of greene color thicke and fayre. and it helpeth malefets an giveth to them grace to his ministry And Taurus ought to be graven in it, that is a Bull.

18 The xviiith stone is said Catel and it is of great power both in deedes and in vertues. the color of which is like to Berill, but for it is darker then it, although it have within full cleere and cleane beames and strakes And there be founde some of vi corners and other some of v. And his power is to inclepe devills and to speake with them. And his vertue is, if thou maketh in thee blanke of water and bringeth the roote of Apii and the stone hanged to the necke in the skynne of an Asse suffumed with masticke thure and croco and that thou inclepeth what dead man thou wilte that is knowen to thee and other knowe thou that anone he shall appeere to thee. And he shall be with thee in the same tyme And grave thou in it Lapwing and before Dragancia^m which is a middle herbe and it is said Colubrina.

19 The xixth stone is Celonites And it is greene as an herbe and his power is that it waxeth & decreaseth as the moone, and his power is also to make peace and concorde betwixt twey if in it were graven the signe of a swallowe.

20 The xxth stone is Calcedonius and it is white as betwixt cristall and berill or as gyfus thicke bright, his power is to overcome plees. His vertue is to holde a man whole in an alien land and his Image is a man that holdeth his right hand straight forth to heaven.

21 The xxith stone is Ceramius This stone is of divers colors after divers elements and divers londs otherwhiles white, and otherwhiles browne greene & redde And elsewhere it is likened to Iron and somewhere to copper and sulphur and it hath as it were rundlets paynted and little droppes and his power is to defend a place from thunders and lightnings, and his vertue is to defend from all enemyes. And write thou in it or one p^{te} or syde Raphael Michael & Gabriel and on the other side panuteseron micrason Saidalson and if thou beareth it with thee and hast it in thy power thou shalt overcome all thine enemyes and thine adversaries.

22 The xxiith stone is Metestus¹ and it hath the color of wyne upon it. a white cloth or of a rose or violet and this hath might to chase away feends and his vertue is to defend from dronkennes and his figure is Ursus that is a Beare.

23 The xxiii stone is Magentis or magnes and it is of great weight and like to ferro brumeto. His power is that he draweth dead Iron as nayles knives and swords and his vertue is that with it thou moght be in what house thou wolte, and do what thou wolt with men and with things of the house suffuming the house of it, and with this men made inchantments and grave thou in it a man armed when Luna were in Aries or Scorpio joyned with Mars, and sol beholding them with a trine aspect. And knowe thou that what maner of Images thou gravest in this stone such inchantments thou might attayne, and beare it with thee and thou shalt profit.

24 The xxiiiith stone is Adamas as it is middle color and the better hath somewhat of greenenes And his power is that with it other stones be graven. And therefore we have putt it out more strange & more openly and his power or vertue is to keepe the members of a man safe and whole And this stone is more, and is better set at price in inchantments & invocations of wyndes spirits and devills And with this thou maiest send whatever fantasy thou wilt, and his figure is of 5 corners and know^e each man who that will beare within a precious stone be he pure and cleane when he will do anything with them And eschewe he or keepe himself from uncleanenes and keepe he them reverently in a quiche or in a cleane place And Raziel said In the hower in the which thou wilt do of Semiforas beare the ii stones abovesaid and thou shalt profit.

Salomon said As the body of a fowle ne may not fly without wynges neither go where he cometh, so by science of one thing above we might not fulfill that we desire And for this we putteth the second keye in this book^e, and we sayne it the second for that it maketh the second opening, for as the world is closed with 4 elements so this book^e is closed with 4 sciences and 4 vertues. and now we have said of stones now say we of herbes. Knowe thou that in herbes are vertue of the most that may be. And some of naturals of this worlde beth that liveth of them as ther that have reason and some that flyeth, and some which swimeth and which goeth and which creepeth. And knowe thou that of trees and herbes some liveth much and some liveth midly and some liveth litle, and yt is the similitude of beasts And knowe thou also that among herbes there be some with which thou may do good or evill, as to heale & to make sicke, and so understand thou in these that shall be said furthermore hereafter And Adam said By a tree come wretchedness into the worlde, that is by the tree

[16^v]

I synned in it. And Raziel said an herbe shall be thy Lyfe. And Salomon said A tree shall be & shall waxe Or growe of which the leaves shall not fall and it shall Be medecine of men.

The second wyng is to the similitude of 24 howers and of 24 herbes

1 Prima herba est Acil vel almabum &c

The first herbe is Acil almalie and it is said corona regia and in Latin Rosmarinus This herbe hath a middle tree and good odor and litle leaves and his power is to chafe and comforte the brayne. And if an house be suffumed with it it chaseth away devills
the same doth Peonia

2 The second herbe is Artemisia and this is mother and first if other, but for that other is said Corona regis that is to say the crowne of a kynge we had putt it first of this they sayden all that in all things thou doest thou shalt putt of it And the leafe is middle greene over thone side and white on thother side And it waxeth or groweth midly. And with this thou shalt steepe windes ¹ and all spirits that thou wilt and thou shalt profit.

3 The iii herbe is Cannabis ² and it is long in shafte and clothes be made of it, the vertue of ye Joyce of it is anoynt thee with it and with the Joyce of artemisia and ordayne thee before a mirror of steele clepe thou spirits, and thou shalt see them, and thou shalt have might of bynding and losing devills and other things

4 The iiii herbe is said feniculus and it hath small

leaves and a long staffe and it is an holy herbe and worshipfull, and it is medecyne of the eyen, and it giveth good light and it chaseth away spirits and evill eyne in the place ¹ where it is, the roote of it chaseth away evill things and helpeth in sight.

5 The vth herbe is Cardamomm^{us} and it is hott and of good complexion and it is of middle highnes and it giveth gladnes to him that useth it and gathereth together spirits. Eate thou of this when thou sleepest or maketh invocation and if thou wilt make fume of it.

6 The vith herbe is Anisu^s and it is of chastity Joyne it to camphire, and thou shalt see that spirits shall dread thee, and it is a cleane herbe, and it maketh one to see secret things and privy, and the fume of this ascendeth much.

7 The viith herbe is Coriandru^s, and this withholdeth the spirit of a man much with tother, and it maketh a man also full of sleepe and this gathereth much together y^e spirits wherefore evermore they standeth with it, so that it is said that if with this and apis and insquiano thou make fumigacions compounded with much lazaia cicuta anon it gathereth together spirits, and therfore it is said herba spiritum.

8 The viiith herbe is said Petroselim^{um} which hath great might for to chase away the spirits of roches, and his vertue is to breake the stone in the bladder of him that useth it.

9 The ixth herbe is ypericon or hipericon and it is a middle herbe thirled the Joyce of it seemeth bloud, this is of great power for with the joyce of it, and with croco Arthemisia and with fume of radice valerianae if it be written upon what frindshippe thou wilte of a prince of spirits of the ayer and devills. Knowe thou that anon it shall be that thou covetest And so upon spirits and wyndes

10 The xth herbe is Apium. this is of great power upon

wyndes and devills and fantasyes and it is shawdded and towiched to shade with the cloud Alcisse for in it be wyndes and devills, and this alone maketh Albafortu~

¹ Above "in the place" is written "that is withouten." The final word, "withouten," is not clear and could be read differently.

Vazebelil i Mortagon and they be much contrary, for one is kepte with heavenly angels, and another is kepte with devills i. Apin^u And this beareth the stone of the reynes and a woman with childe use ~~shee~~ it ~~not for~~ it noyeth to the childe, and it gathereth together divells when suffumigacions is made with insqrmō and arthe= misia Apinm suffumed by 7 nights with fagax al= meit and gathered clenly and the roote of it putt and dried and then tempered with aqua lapides suffume thou thee by environ when thou wilt and thou shalt see fantasyes and devills of divers maners.

11 The xith is Coriandru^s of the second kynde which maketh one muche to sleepe. And if thou maketh suffumigacions of it and croco and insqrmō & apio papavere nigro grounden together evenly and tempered with succo ci= cutae and with msk, and then suffume thou the place where thou wilt hide treasure in when Luna is Joyned with Sol in angulo terra that is to say in the corner of the earth. And know thou that the like treasure shall never be found. And who that would take it away shall be made fooles. And if in the hower of de= position of the golde or silver or of the stones or Images thou suffumeth them with thure musk suco= lingo aloes cost evermore devils keepeth that place and evill wyndes. And knowe thou that it might never be dissolved or foredome agayne without sever or and Image made thereto by the poynt of starres.

12 The xiith herbe is Satureja and this is of great vertue and good odor and who that beareth it with him with auricula muris in the day of veneris it giveth him grace of goods and it taketh away from ther place wyndes and evill fantasyes.

13 The xiiith herbe is said sca¹ And this is middle in length and hath litle leaves This ought to be holden worshipfully in holy places and in churches, for it defendeth the places from evill things And with this prophets made dead men speake that were dead by many dayes or fewe. In place where as any evill he hath no might if he that beareth it stepeth them not

¹ Some speculation on this has led us to the reading "scammony," namely, the bindweed Convolvulus scammonia.

And it giveth them might upon which things he would and this herbe put upon the place where devills be closed, and it constraineth them and byndeth them least that they might have power to move them selves And Salomon said I founde in the booke of hermits that who that taketh water in the 4th hower of the night upon the tombe of a dead man with what spi= rits he would have speech withall caste he water upon the tombe with this herbe ysope And the water be it suffumed with costo succo musco and say surgo surgo surgo That is to say rise rise rise and come and speak to me, and do this by 3 nights and in the third night he shall come to thee and he shall speake with thee of what thing thou wilt.

14 The xiiiith herbe is psyllium which is of great vertue for it sheweth or maketh open in the ayer the other mought not to do it maketh to see spirits in the cloudes of the heavens and this with scicorda & garmone and the tree which swimeth which is said arbor Cancri and malie with rore madii and with the tree that sheweth by night, and it is said herba lucens that is herbe shining if thou makest with these an ointment with the eyne of a whelpe and with the fatnes of a harte thou mightest go suerly whether thou wolt in on hower

15 The xvth herbe Majorana, this keepeth an house by itself and defendeth from evill infirmities and Hermes said that gentiana and valerina and maiorana awayleth much upon great princes and upon great men.

16 The xvith herbe is Draguntia. This is of great power, and the highnes of the roote of it Joyned with the tong of Colubrij which is lett quicke, and the herbe be gathered when sol is in the first degree of Cancri and Luna beholdeth mercury or Joyned with him knowe thou that who that toucheth clansures or locke they shall be opened to him anone And Hermes said that it gathereth together wyndes & spirits If man dragora were with it and Capillus dezoara.

17 The xviith herbe is Nepita and if this with maio= rana and athanasia & trifolio and salvia hermita edera and artemisia with ysope being ioyned & ga= thered together cresente luna die Jovis That is to say in the wenyng of the mone in the day of Jovis in the morowe when the sonne waxeth from the first degree of Aries till into the first of Cancer and when thou shalt gather him be thou clene and washen worshipfull and stand thou towards the east knowe thou that the house and place is amended where these nyne herbes were wyned together And put them upon the gate of thy house and thou shalt profitt evermore And the 9 herbes ioyned be like to rubyne.

[19^r]

18 The xviiith herbe is Linum suffumigacions of the Seed of this with semine psyly – i – azartachona & radix Violae and apii maketh to see in the ayer things to come and to say many prophesies

19 The xixth herbe is Salvia this is of great vertue and the long leife of it is as ligna agni and sharpe this breaketh or defendeth evill shades & evill spirits from the place where it is, and it is good for an hole man to beare with his for it holdeth a man whole, but a sicke man holdeth it not with him.

20 The xxth herbe is Sauina, and some men say that it is a tree ^ of love ¹ and dilection who that can chese it And if this with somewhat of croco and lingua co= lubri be borne with him a ring of gold and somewhat of provincia surely goe thou before the king or before whomsoever thou wolt And most if thou put with it the stone that is said Topazius or if thou wilt beril= lum And if this ring were made when Luna is ioyned to Jove in trino from sol it were much the better And it is said annulus solis that the ring of the sonne, and it is of health against infirmityes, and it is of grace of vertue and of hono^r.

21 The xxith Nasturciu~ This holdeth the members whole, and if there were with it origan and pulegin~ and arzolla and be borne together with thee and thou eatest of them thou shalt be whole within and without And so if thou annoyntest thee with them and were suffumed with marrubio albo or reubarbaro and herba thuris it shall defend thee from many

22 The xxiith is an herbe that is said Canna ferula

This is full dreadfull and greevous and strong in worke. And if thou takest the Joyce of it and the Joice of cicuta and Jusquiami and sapsi barbata and san= dalu~ rubr~ papaver nigr~ with confection made fume thou what thou wolt and thou shalt see devills and things and strannge figures And if Apin were with this Knowe thou that from eache place suffumed devills should flye, and if thou wolt thou might de= stroy evill spirits. This suffumigacions is full evill and dreadful for the fume of it and the worke overcometh in malice and worcheth most evill and most strongly if Luna were with Saturne or in opposition with marte that is in opposition with Mars.

23 The xxiiith herbe is Calamintum and it is like= ned to mynte and it is of great vertue in good suffumigacions, and if there is with it menta and palma xpi i. pioma theis beholden taketh away evill spirits from a place And evermore it is against fantasyes.

24 The xxiiiith herbe is Cicoria. This is full good in all ^ exercisannce ¹ if it be ioyned with erigo & pentaphyllon and ypericon and vrtica & verbena and all be together and be borne at the necke and under the feete and be there the herbe of vii knots and of vii leaves. 1. Martagon and liliu~ domesticu^s and sylvestre that is tame and wylde and herba angelica who ever hath these under his feete or sytteth above and putteth the other herbes to the necke and hath vii rings of vii metals in the fi= gures Knowe ye that he shall have might in bynding and in losing and in enchanting and for to do good and evill in eache place that thou wolt making suffumigacions of these 9 things thure albo thymiama= te mastiche musco ligno aloes cassia cinamono and of them suffume thee with the things above said in envy= ron and say these names Raphael Gabriel Michael

Cherubin Seraphin arrielim pantaseron micraton san= daton complete mea~ petitione~ et mea~ voluntate~. That is to say fulfill ye my petition or asking and my will and they shall fulfill it to thee. These be the more names of the more 9 angels abovesaid And knowe thou them and keepe them, and some men said that they be the 9 orders of Angels.

Heere endeth the 24 reasons upon the vertues of herbes of the second wyng and these experiments were new writen on party in Raziel although Sa= lomon put two of these three of the sawes of hermes And the herbes be put in the booke of Raziel for that with them we may be excused and worke with herbs as with Semiforas with fasting and with words in good and in evill And let no man Joyne himself to Se= miforas till he knowe himself the first and in the second And thus we shall say all thing that shall be to us necessary with the helpe of God.

Dixit Salomon super ala tertia sicut corpus solis &c

Salomon said upon the third wyng as the body of the sonne is more appeering and mighty upon all other bodyes and brighter and fayrer and cleener So the vertues of sensible beasts which flyeth and sendeth out voices and sayeth And so beasts of the third wyng have power upon the twey first wyngs of stones and of herbes And he put therefore in the Raziel 24 beasts with their names and vertues and states. And the figures be 24 distincte or departed a twey. And I would putt upon eache Element 6 beasts everiche distinct from other and everiche of his kynde. And as the fyer is the high Lord and distinct from the 4 elements so the lese of them all is purer and Cle= ner among them. Therfore I beginne to say upon the beasts of fyer ffor as everiche of the 4 ele= ments hath his beast beneath so the fyer hath his above pure and cleane without corruption And this fyer that is above is not expounded of wax trees neither of oyle neither of other composition but it is simple And the things that liveth in it beth angels cleane and cleere and bright like to the beames of the sonne or of a starre, and like to the flame of fyer or of a sparke of fyer or to the colo^r of quickesilver or of pure golde. And this similitude is naturall in the beasts of the fyer And the figures of them bene seeme such as the lightening in similitude and in deed for as an Eomoest is a messenger to the creator so they be ready anon to good and evill and they seme like things & prophets that upon the 4 elements be heavens with their beasts of which we should say furthermore.

The second spirit is much cleane but darker then
The overer and it is likened to the wynde & his figure Is after that he would take after some of the 4

[21^r]

Elements to which he is Joyned. And he formeth himself in this maner either by water or by cloude or by moist= nes or by thicknes of some darkenes or he receiveth some body as fume of some kynde by falling on it either by voce or by shape of a beast elemented by these he taketh forme after that the nature above disposeth 3 The third beast of which wise men sayne is that evermore he fellowshippe a spirit And most the corpulent and thicke of the spirit And therfore his figure is found by night in places of dread and it is heard and seene and that ofte tyme and the color of it is like to tpari 1 after the nature of hower ere it is made, otherwise to the similitude of the body of which it went out of, wherfore some men seith otherwhiles the soules of bodyes in church hayes And of these soules said the wise Hermes and the prophet that the soule that goeth out & hath might is not neither was but a man or a woman And upon such maner of soules speaketh wisemen and clepeth them spirituall for goodness heavenly fro[~] symplenes.
4 The iiijth beast is the wynde eache day we heare that we seyne not although we other & hearen not. And the worke of the wynde be seene of the eyne after the part from which they cometh And he hath such nature that if he be orientall or meridionall that is East or south he is hott And if he is occidentall or septentrionall that is west or north he is colde
This we seene to have great power for it beareth cloudes and waters and tempests and gayles and it stirreth and troubleth the seas and breaketh tree, and this is said quicke ayer as the fyer above is said quicke fyer and simple. And therfore the elementes above said double or twey folde That is to say fixe & moveable, moveable it is because it dwelleth in the corners of the earth although it descendeth from above ffor the 7 above byndeth and loseth it for of them it descendeth and of them it was formed & this is a great figure in sea in Ayre and in land as it cometh temperate.

5 The vth beast or vision is a fantasy that is a shade to the similitude of divers colors or maners come pounded of divers together And this forme is made in desert place or in a corrupte ayre or otherwhile it descendeth from hills to the similitude or lightnes of knights, and they be said exercitus antiquus, that is an olde house And otherwise upon matters to similitude of fayre women and well clothed or in medes, and some say that they be face^s. And otherwhiles this befalleth in a man, for corruption or malice of complexions and of humo^{rs} that be in a man And they be said Demoniaci for that it ascendeth the head and falleth upon the eyne and such corruption maketh to see many fantasyes

6 The sixt beast is said Demon this descendeth in highnes to lownes ad he was formed of pure matter without corruption wherfore he fayleth not but shall evermore dure although he hath taken thicknes in darknes of the lownes of the earth. And he is pure in matter and strong in body And of this sayth the wise man that he knoweth all things that is, And by him Philosophers have answers and wise men all things of which they would knowe the soothernes and he dwelleth evermore in darknes and in obscurity and he is never severed from them

And of this sayth the prophet that he hath power of taking away forme and shapes of which he would in the earth after the will of the creato^r And he said a bright angell mighty and fayre as the forme of the sonne and of the mone and of the starres or of an angell or of a cloude or of a fowle or of a fyshe or of a man or of a beast or of a reptile that is a creeping beast or any other forme which he woulde And all these abovesaid without them knowe thou that they be impalpable or unhappy to be felt. That is that they neither may be taken with hand nor towiched with foote for they be spirits or wyndes And knowe thou that everiche of the abovesaid when it befalleth in the elements he taketh a body of them although the lyfe of them be of fyer And the dwelling of them in the fyre and their deads fury for they be fury. And Raziel said upon these vi that invocation of them and opening and constrayneth and bynding and losing and also to do good and evill by them All is made with cleanes and therefore who that would clepe them or have the service of them & with orison and fasting and fumigation and with praying of God must do as Heere= after thou shalt heare furthermore.

Beasts of the ayer of the third winge be cleped fowles for that they flyeth and they be of 4 mevings one is said running another flying and swiming and going and creeping

Now say we of flyeing and beginne we first of 1 Aquila that is an Egle for that is a fowle flying much in highnes and he hath Lordship upon all other fowles, and he is very and true in his deeds and in Lordship and in hono^r among all other fowles. The

Eagle hath such a nature that he taketh his sonnes or byrds when they be litle and ascendeth them into a place when the sonne is highe, and then he dresseth the face of them to the sonne. And if they beholdeth strongly the sonne he deemeth them to be his children and good and if they beholdeth not the sonne he deem= eth them not to be his children but thinketh them evill and letteth them fall and dye And one feather of him fretteth another fether, and he seith farre by one league or rule a litle beast, a great beast soothly he seith by 9 leagues or by a dayes Journey The eyne of him with the hart have great vertue and Grace to a kynge or to a lord of a lorde for that Giveth to him grace in ^{^ 1} realme.

2 The second fowle is Vultur that is a vouter this hath great vertue in all his members, the head of him helpeth against all dreames and against craftes of magicke and his feete helpeth against malefette And if an house be suffumed with 9 fethers of him it putteth out from it evill spirits The gall of it helpeth the eyne better then anything of y^e worlde The eyne of him putt in the skynne of a serpent, and The tong of him putt in a cloth of red sylke wrapped with them helpeth in clauses in which thou covetest to overcome and for to wynde the love of another Lord. The wings of him putt upon a bed defendeth a man sleeping from all evill wyndes greivances and evill spiritts neither may they lett in all the house, neither any other fantasyes have power or other things.

3 The third fowle is falco that is falcon of whome the Vertue is that of great Lords he is sett at much price they bene of the highnes of his right wyng overcometh plees both ravishing and in taking away alien things and the highnes of his lefte wyng taketh away evill fevers But we ought not to sley venative fowles neither hounds although they have many vertues in themselves. And knowe thou that how many members be in every beast fowle fishe or reptile so many vertues distincte hath every member by himself.

4 The iiith fowle is a Turtur simple and good neverthelesse if thou takest the male and the female together and burnest them together in a new pott with croco and vervinca and cichoria gathered together by them which thou wilt ioine together if thou castest the powder of these upon them knowe thou that anon they shall be ioined together, and it giveth great love to them that beareth the powder with them

5 The vth fowle is said Upupa that is a Lapwing having a crest of fethers in the head as a cocke & he hath many vertues this hath one bone in his wings and it gathereth together divels and spirits of the ayer the property of him is that whoever taketh the hart of him and wrappeth it in hony, and the assoone as he may swallowe it and drinke the mylke of a white cow of a red or of a blacke. Know thou that it maketh a man to say things to come. And he hath another vertue for who that cutteth the necke where the cocke croweth not neither may be hard neither the voice of an hound neither where wheate is sown and when he cutteth if his necke inclepe he devils, and then bear^e he with him the half deale of the bloud and of that other half deale anoynt he himself and evermore shall go with him one of the devills that is to witt he whome he can inclepe which shall say to him many things

6 The vith is said Ciconia that is an haysoucke who that fleyeth him in the day of Luna and taketh the bloud of the hart of him and anoynt himself with it And eateth the flesh with somine faeminli and with cardamoms and garyophillo And eare he eate it suffume he himself with good odors and with thure masticke and cinamom and other such. And know thou that he shall have grace of enchanting which he woll and of coniuring and constraining the spirits of the ayer and other spirits that goeth upon rivers and wells These vi fowles abovesaid bene exemplar upon all other And when thou wilt knowe the vertue of any fowle do thou after the precept of this booke.

Raziel upon the booke of visions of Angells upon the beginning of tymes in the 12 months as heere after thou shalt see furthermore

Dicamus de viscus mavis et alys &c

Say we of fishes of the sea and others upon vi of Them that is to witt of the more and the middle that I should shew the vertues of them.

1 The first fishe is Balena the fatnes of which made liquid and kepte by the space of vii yeeres & more for how much it is thelder so much it is the better it healeth a man from eache gowte and evill mynde if he anoynt himself with it. And if he annoynteth his head with the bloud of him it helpeth him much and yeeldeth him strong and more whole and it maketh him to see true visions. The sperma of him is said Ambra

 If they suffumeth tombs with this it gathereth together
 The spirits above downwards and each petition & axing
 It maketh to give answer. And Hermes said There is not suffumigacions for to inclepe spirits as Ambra & lignum aloes, costus, muscus' crucus and bloud of lapwing with thymyamati for these be meat and drinke & gladnes of spirits of the ayre, and these things gathers them to-gather strongly and full soone. And wise men sayne that the sperme and bloud and hart of a Balene be princi= palls for to command the wyndes & spirits

2 The second fish is said Dolphin And he is the king of the sea ffor as the eagle hath might among fowles and the Lion among beasts so in this maner hath the dolphin in the sea. And who that annoynteth with the bloud of the clothes of twey friends it maketh them enemyes or casteth the dry bloud upon them. And who that bea= reth the hart of him maketh him hardy

3 The third fishe is Cancer this hath vi feete take and brenne him in panno livido and with the powder frote thy teeth softly it healeth them and maketh them fayer, and cureth the canker in the mouth, if thou casteth it upon the fyer with somewhat of Stercoris humani combusti it gathereth together spirits.

4 The fourth is bright as an horne betwixt palemes and whitenes that is to say piscis candis or sepia
 This fish hath many propertyes and that knoweth well enchantments and prophets which made with this their enchantments and transfigurations so that when they would that a house should seem full of water or that a river should enter by the gate They tooke

this fish and with thymyamati and ligno aloes and roses they fumed an house and they cast therein of the water of the sea, and then it seemed that the house were filled with water And if they cast bloud therein then it seemed all bloud, and so if they cast snowe there= in it seemeth snowe. And when they would that the earth shoulde seeme to quake then they cast therein the earth of a plowe, and so the made there divers similitudes in all things according or after the thing which they put in the fumigacion. And knowe thou that it dweth so much and so long as the suffumigacions is or lasteth in the house. And with the gall of him also they made many enchantments, ffor that this beast is much unlike to other.

5 The vth fishe is Murena and he is lentiguus the vertue of it is that enchanter beareth the powder of him with them to make enchantments with.

6 The vith fishe is Rana viridis And if thou take it or touché it upon what woman thou wilt and nempnest the names of the Angells of the moneth in which thou werste borne as I thinke which be furthermore within in libro visionn^{is} thou might do both good and evill of what woman thou wilt, and know thou that of these fishes and of all other thou maist knowe the vertues of moneths and understand thou by like things in all other things.

Primie animal est leo ista bestia est valde fortis
The first beast is a Lyon This beast is full strong in The brest and in the cheeks And he is of strong beholding and looking so that when other beasts seeth him they be moved together with dread and the skynne of him is of full vertue that if it be putt with other skynnes it destroyeth them and maketh them bare. And who that taketh the biting toothe of him that is cleped dens caninus and putteth it in golde it is good to take away and to take alyen things and the same doth wolfes toothe. And if thou maketh a purse of the harte of a Lyon full of bloud musco & almea et ligno aloes thymyamati and it were gathered & put upon whome thou wylt and thou maketh it hott. Know thou that in that hower he shall love the much and shall doe thy bidding. And if thou inclepest with the bloud of a goate the prince of Divels he shall be ready anone to do thy commandement and so more kynge or he for whome thou doest, and the same I say for great women.

2 The second beast is Elephant that is an Oliphant and He is ful great, and when he is risen of hard he lyeth & when he falleth of hard re riseth, for that thereto he hath no knees disposed well, and the bone of the teeth of him is said Ebur that is Ivory. And if it be put in electna=ryes it comforteth the feebleness of the hart as much as margarita and more. And the bloud of him with the liver comforteth much fasting.

3 The third beast is Cerbus that is an hart which liveth long for that he remayneth as the moone or as an egle who that maketh fumigacions of the hornes it chaseth away serpents, by it self it chaseth away devills.

4 The ivth beast is Catus that is a catte and he seith better by the night then by the day, and who that taketh of him and of an Irchen and of a rearemouse and maketh of Alcofol & Alcofolizeth or noynteth his eyne he seith well by night and by day. And if thou putteth therein the eyne of an asse thou mightest see whether the spirits and devills of the ayer goen

5 The vth beast is Mustela that is a wesell, this bringeth forth her Issue at her moneth after the sayeng of the poets but not of philosophers, this helpeth much when he is brent, and the skynne of him is written for to cause love betwixt tweyne

6 The vith beast is Talpa that is a molewarpe and dwelleth under the earth and is likened to a mouse with this beast thou mayest make to come tempests pestilence, hailes and lightnings & cornflations and many evill things if thou putteth him bare or naked upon the earth dead and overturned, and with this beast thou mayest make discorde and concord with whome thou wylte, for he is a cursed beast, he healeth a man of the festure when he is burnt or powder and Cast in it.

And when thou wilt knowe the vertue of other beasts do as it is said in libro visionn^{is} upon which aske thou this of the Lord of the vision that is that it appears to thee that thou askest and covetest to knowe of beasts which thou wylte.

This beast seith not neyther hath eyne. And know thou that the vision of moneths is upon all things that thou askest or would knowe. And God shall be with thee if of right thou aske. And knowe thou that heere is fulfilled the third wyng And now begin we the fourth wing which is complete or fulfilled upon all the elements.

[De Quartus Ala]

Dixit Salomon sicut corpus vivu~ &c Salomon said as a quicke body mylde or great is not moved with their feete neither any fowle lesse then with two wings, neither the world is governed with lesse then with fowre elements may not neither might not be lesse then with 4 wyngs which be said to be 4 vertues wherefore Raziel said that who that shall be filled with this booke shall be as one of the prophets, he shall understand all vertues of things and powers of them and if he withholdeth and worcheth he shall be as an angel. And therefore he putt in this booke 22 elements of great vertue that is 22 letters or figures which the sonnes of Adam might not excuse.

1 The first is Aleph א That is A his letter is three cornered and it signifyeth the lyfe power and highnes and the principall or beginning in all things These putteth all things in their figures and in their principles.

2 The second is said Beth ב That is B and it is full good in things which we desire in Battaile and in playe & evermore sheweth goodness and profitt

3 The third is said Gimel ג that is G and it sheweth evill and grief and Impediment in things

4 The fourth is said Daleth ד that is D this sheweth turbation and death of some man & harme to him

5 The fifth is said He ה that is H and it sheweth price, honor and gladnes & it is full good in all things

6 The sixt is said Vau ו that is V and it sheweth death payne and travaile

7 The viith is said Zain ז that is Z at it sheweth pennyes and riches

8 The viiith is said Heth ח and it signifyeth Long lyfe and helthe.

[26^v]

9 The ixth is said Teth ט that is T and it signifyeth wrath woodnes and grief

10 The tenth is Iod י that is I and it signifyeth faith good lyfe and gladnes and all good beginning

11 The xith is said Caph כ hit sheweth very gladnesse and travaile without profitt

- 12 The xiith is said Lamed ל and it sheweth glad=nes and honor and profit
 13 The xiiith is said Mem מ That is M and it sheweth greif and otherwise dolor
 14 The xiiiith is said Nun נ that is N. It signifyeth restoring of a friend, and a visitation of him & profit 15 The xvth is said Samech ס 16 The xvith is said Ain ע It sheweth occasion or evill of a woman 17 The xviith is said Pe פ it sheweth health.
 18 The xviiith is said Phe פ¹ That is ff and it sheweth bloud is shed of good men and highe
 19 The xixth is said Zade צ It sheweth health
 20 The xxth is said Coph ק It sheweth hid lyfe
 21 The xxith is said Res ר That is R And it shew=eth a man that is fallen and is risen 22 The xxiith is said Thau ט That is T. It sheweth Greefe and diminution.

Now we have said upon the fowre wyngs upon the 22 letters that be upon the lawes of the table written And know thou that there be no moe but onely 22 letters Which be the roote of Semiforas for with them it is formed And is caused and is made and without them I may not be

And some men said that Ca~malie found them. But it is not sooth ffor the angell Raziel gave them written to Adam in this booke that is said liber ignis, and with them all the booke of Semiforas written. And knowe eache man that readeth this booke that the Creator said to Raziel to be the names of Semiforas wherfore if thou canst transpose these 22 letters or figures as it beseemeth thou shalt attayne the great name of thy Creator and with it thou might do what thou wilt evermore with Cleanesse and with the helpe of the Creator. Now we have fulfilled this booke of the wing like to the angels that is Pantaseron Mucraton Sandalon for everich of these hath 4 wings by commandement of the benigne angell which the Creator sent to me that this booke were better compounded and well ordeyned.

¹ Two forms of peh פ (peh and peh dagesh) are given, but no shin ש.

Liber Salomonis

Heere endeth the second booke & beginneth
the third book of Thymiamatibus

[Book 3]

The Angell said to Adam make thymiamata Thymiamata be confections of good odors with which thou shalt suffume (and thou shalt please to Creacion) and thou shalt attayne what thou wylt by this And they of which they be made be petition things which thou shalt fynde and of good odor and of good nature, and of cleane things. And when thou wilt do it be thou cleane of without all fylthe and then the angell rested in that hower And Adam remayned and did what he might And this Salomon expounded and said I marvaile why this is the booke of Moyses also ffor the Creato^r said to Moyses make thou Thymiamata and suffume thou in the hill when thou wilt speake with me wherfore Salomon said suffumigacions sacrifice & unction maketh to be opened the gates of the aire and of the fyre and of all other heavens. And by suffumigacions a man may see heavenly things and privatyes of the Creato^r And each man knowe that they thirleth

[27^v]

The earth water and lownesse And Salomon said
As there be 7 heavens, 7 starres & 7 dayes in the weeke of which everiche is distinct and is not likened to his even. So knowe each man that there be 7 suffumigacions which withholdeth with them the vertue of the 7 starres, and maketh glad the spirits of the ayre and the angels of heaven and Divels of angels of the worlde. And therfore for a man yeeldeth to them hit, that is theirs. Therfore they be pleased and well apaid for the words which thou sayest of sayest the names of them or of the Creato^r. And for this that thou doest when thou washest thee and for the gift that thou givest to them when thou suffumest, and these things yeeldeth them earthly and appearing to thee. And that spirituall & invisible that is, that neither evill men neither beasts mongst see thee if thou doest it strongly about thee and about whome thou doest it.
Thymiamata is made of many things, and these be Principally upon the vii dayes of the weeke And first say we of thymiamata of the Saturday for the starre of him is higher & the angell of him is mighty in y^e earth

[28^r]

1 The first Thymiamata is of the Saturday ought to be of good things and well smelling rootes as is costus and herba thuris. And that is thymiamata for good, and so I shall shewe all other as it beseemeth to good and Thymiamata to another I shall say in another place

2 Thymiamata of the Sondag is thus Mastick muscus and other such and all other good gumes and of good odor in all good and by the Contrary in all evill

3 Thymiamata of the Monday is foliu^s myrti and lauri and leaves of good odor and so understand thou in his contrary.

4 Thymiamata of the Tuesday is Sandalus rubeus niger and albus and all such trees and eche tree of Aloes & cypresse and so understand thou of each tree.

5 Thymiamata of Wednesday is made of all rindes as cinamon cassia lignea & cortices lauri & muris and so understand thou in the other

6 Thymiamata of Thursday is nux muscata gari= ophylli and citruli and the rinde of Aurangiar~ siccar~ & pulverizatar~ that is the rynde of Oranges dry and powdered & all other fruits of good odor

7 Thymiamata of the Friday is moas rosa viola & crocus and all other flowers of good odor and in the contrary to the contrary put yow all Thymiamata stinking
And knowe thou that each Thymiamata of good odor Gathereth together his spirits after that his nature & his color he & his strength is Thus I sayd for good good, for better better.

[28^v]

And Hermes said of Thymiatibus that Thymiamata of Luna is cinamonis & ligno aloes et mastix et crocus et costus, et macis et myrtus we putteth this that each of the pla= nets have a parte in it, and all this may be Luna good and well fortunate by good spices & sharpe although Salomon made distinction upon the daies and planette of the spices with the which a man ought to make thymiamata And he said that of Saturne is each good roote in good and evill in evill

And of Jovis all fruite, and of martis eche tree
And of solis eche gume and of veneris eche flower, and of mercury each rinde, and of Luna eache leafe, and thus understand thou of all other and eche odoriferous herbe is of veneris. And Raziel said to Adam that he should make good Thymiamata. And therfore said Hermes, understand That eache Thymiamata is made of all good things as of roote tree rinde leafe flower fruite & gumes and yet seeds be put in it as Baccae & Cardamomu~ and waxe, and put thou in it all good thing and precious, and sithen he said Thymiamata completu~ And there is some Thymiamata gracu~ or of greeke by which heather men were wont to suffume Idols with. And yet to this day Churches and Altars be suffumed with it, and it is said Thymaimata Jovis.
And in soothernes who that useth this Thymiamatibus must be cleane and chaste and of all good lyfe and will to the Creato^r and he shall profit.

[29^r]

Dixit Salomon super suffumigata Hermetis q¹ dur &c Salomon said upon the suffumigacions of Hermes which be said beneath and they be seven maners with which be 1 made sacrifices some be (and the first) which fastesth and giveth tei things to the Creato^r, and therfore they trust that they attayne to that that they desire And it is soothe 2 The second is that they washen & clenseth them selves and dwelleth cleane and therfore they trow to attayne their petition & axing & it is soothe 3 The iii^d is that they do almes of God and for the holy angels of him
4 The iiiiith is that they sleyeth and casteth the bloud in the fyer.
5 The fifth is that they sleyeth and burneth all
6 The sixt is that they prayeth much in howers ordeyned
7 tymes in the day, and 3 in the night

7 The viith is to make suffumigacion with good things and well smelling and everiche of these did this that he might attayne the sothenes of it that he asked and so he attained hit by the Commandement of the Creato^r.

And know thou that suffumigacion overcometh in all Sothely who that suffumeth best to the eye it proveth and with this the wisemen excuseth all other. And wit thou that who can well knowe the natures of suffumigacions he might easily nigh thilk spirits which he would enclepe according to the nature of suffumigacion And evermore consider thou the nature of the spirit and of the suffumigacion, and the spirits be constrained by the contrary and be comforted by like things And it is to wytt that as a wise leache in giving a medecine to a sicke man removeth the sickenes and inleadeth health. So suffumigacion if it be good remeveth the contrary from the place And with evill suffumigacion be remeved good spirits, evill and ill spirits also dreadeth for eache thing more loveth health then sicknesse. And therefore it is said that Sulphur remeveth both good spirits and evill, and this is approbation or profit way And there is another way for lignu~ aloes and none other, and Sulphur chaseth them away and this is very reason And then I say that Sulphur gathereth together his proper spirits and none other And they be full strong & penetrative and thicke and be not severed or departed so soone from a place But although a place were suffumed with Sulphur, and then were washen with water and suffumed with lignu~ aloes yet it draweth away the spirits of Sulphur or endureth or leadeth in his owne. And knowe thou also that the spirit of Azet that is quicksilver and the spirit of Thuris be contrary Although spirits both yet therewith all devills entereth and thirleth rather or sooner then the spirit of Thuris, wherfore everich hath full great might, yet and if thou wilte withdrawe the spirits suffume thou with thure and they shall go out And so understand thou of all other spirits good and evill.

And Salomon said that as a physicion putteth a man pure good oyntmente and cleane and they thirleth the body of a man and healeth so suffumigacions thirleth the 4 elemnts and maketh to see and knowe heavenly things which were evermore heavenly and which descendeth from heavens as be angells & spirits of the ayre and the soules of dead men and divels and windes of spelunke and of deepenes and fantasies of dèsert place And wherfore knowe thou that all spiritualls with right fumigacon shall obey to thee, and shall come to thee and they shall do thy co~mandement And Hermes said that all things that was or is present or shall be that the overnature Joyned with the neather by ordinance or tyme and hower maketh one body and understanding that he can understand and knowe thilke things whereof creatures have to live and themselves to governe. Therfore know thou that there be fumes that Chaseth away spirits and other some that steyeth them and constreyneth them to come, and other that quickeneth them and strengthneth them, and giveth them might, and so by the contrary there be some that destroyeth them and taketh away their might, and this is the probacion of this for the fume of an hare chaseth them away and this he said upon serpents and that chaseth them away which is fumus amnecae that is the fume of feces of oyle and that steyeth them is the spittle of a fasting man. And therefore he said suffumigacion sufficeth to us in all things beneath. And Raziel said knowe thou that as water washeth all uncleannesse and fire maketh liquid or melteth all mettalls & maketh cleane and fyneth. And as the aire is the lyfe of a man living, and the earth sustaineth or beareth eche body and nourisheth each plant, to understand thou that good thymiamata – i – suffumigacions is fulfilling in the worke to the Invocations of spirits and of other things and well proporcioned with the which Thymiamata is confect or medled, and were in eache hower convenient of according.

[30^r]

[30^v]

Dixit Salomon propter hoc pono hora^s et tempus &c Salomon sayeth ffor this I put the hower and the tyme in this worke for in all howers in which a man will speake to a kinge or to a prince he may not speake to them neither in eache hower which a sonne asketh of the father any thing he giveth to him. Therefore it is darke to thee to choose the tyme and the hower upon these that thou askest. This is therfore tempus quoddam that is some tyme of Jovis be it done in the day of Jovis and of Veneris in the day of Veneris and Martis. And of Saturne in the day of Saturne.
 And so of other that be done in Invocations of spirits and in all prayings of Angells. And the fumigacion of which is pure and cleane. Knowe thou that it is a spirituall thing and living and fellowshiping to heavenly things. And now said Veallia Knowe thou that no man ought to make suffumigacion of precious things but if it were before cleane, and with cleane waters well washen and annoynted with precious oyntments which he made cleanly and with precious things as cera alba, balsamo croco and musco abitatmeca algalia, almea Thure myrrha. Oleo olivary. And this oyntment be it well kept and well warded in a cleane

[31^r]

place of him after that also the clothings be cleane white newe and good, not broken neither blacke. And the suffume he himself worshipfully, and the maner of suffuming himself ought to be made in vii maners towards the East the North the West and the south, and towards the heaven above, and towards the earth beneath, and the viith tyme all about. And as ofte as thou doest this evermore dresse thy mynde unto God evermore, and pray that he fulfill thy will. And knowe thou that I founde in some olde booke that these were the more suffumigacions.
 Thus thymiamata gracu^m masticke, sandulus galbanu^s Muschalazerat myrrha and Ambra and these be collectors of spirits and placators of them. And Salomon said when thou wilt gather together the spirits of the ayre do thou in this maner. Clense thou thy self in the better maner that thou canst and go to a pitt where thou wilt knownen to thee and suffume it and encleape him by his owne proper name and lathe him or pray him and that by three nights, and if he answereth not to thee neither appeareth send thou him to a certaine place or to an house or to a quadrive that is a place where 4 wayes meeteth or to a yard or gardeine And suffume thou the pitt towards the vii parts and in the place where thou bathest also, as I have said And then knowe thou that he shall come, and he shall appeere to thee that thou shalt do this.

Et dixit Hermes quod spiritus qui apparent &c
And Hermes said that the spirits which appeareth

[31^v]

in this worlde be these. Some sothely be heavenly and the prophet clepeth them Angels, and they be bright and cleere as flame or a starre as we have said. Other be aire and of the aire and of many colors greene bright and other such & of many figures. And other be fiery and they be bright and red. And other be watery and they be white and as bright as tinne or Iron burnished or quickesilver Other be that neigheth to men & be like to a white cloude or to a white clothe And other be darke and dime and of divers formes which be said Divels which be said with the wynde, and they be in the deepenesse of the sea and of lownesse Spirits that bring with hailes & lightnings
And wisemen clepeth these huge spirits & strong Now we have said of the nature of spirits and putt to thy mynde and thou shalt attayne with the helpe of God.

Dixit Raziel sicut in aere puro claro &c

Raziell said as in the pure cleere and bright & cleane and peciable aire all things gladdeth a wyeth of it. So knowe thou that from fasting and cleannes and washing of water & prayers ¹ and orison of the Creator. And for naturall and cleane suffumigacion and very faith or trust thou might please them which we have said above. And Raziel said to Adam knowe thou that in all maner te life of Angells be holy & cleane And the

suffuming or suffumigacion is bread of which spirits

[32^r]

liveth And fasting and Cleannesse and Clarity sacrifice with orison be the house of holy altar soules and trust in the author of good. Wherefore each man that hath these abovesaid in himself he shall attaine or neigh and he shall have profit.

And Salomon said these be that befalleth in suffumigacions, anon shall come to us fume and then odor and of the fume a cloude ^ ¹ of the cloud an high cloude and wynde, and of the wynde ascendeth the cloude higher and of the Cloude an high winde ascendeth higher and is made a soule And of this the spirit is made higher and of the spirit and angell of heaven, and of angells light. And these be caused by cleane suffumigacion. And know thou that suffumigacions be of vii maners. Some sothely sharpe, and other penetrative or percing. Other sweete smelling other stinking, other simple, other meke other of greefe other sothely of peace, or everich of these or of these manners is after his odor savor nature and complexion. Wherefore Hermes said that as coldenes congealeth water which is colde, and as water of the sea is congealed with great, and as Azertacona congealeth the water of wells, and everiche of these congealeth the water one with coldenes another with hotnes another by arte another by nature, and the matter is made one body and one gobbet. And knowe thou that good suffumigacion gathereth together and constrayneth and maketh spirits to appeare in the aire, and secret or privy things And it maketh them to take a body with out eyne seeth.

And Salomon said that as the Adamant draweth

[32^v]

Iron to himself, so knowe thou that suffumigacion gathereth together and draweth the spirits of the ayre, and maketh them to come to the place where thou doest it and will gather them together. And the wiseman said suffumigacion is like to the roote of Arzolle ffor as it Joyneth together gobbette of flesh into one. So suffumigacions gathereth together spirits of heaven or heavenly which the 4 elements and they make that they taketh a body, and spirits taketh fulfilleth that be axed of them and that to likenes of a mirror to which if there be sett before what

made Cleanly and invocation in the hower after the spirits proporcionall. The spirits appeareth to us, and new operations and worchings with fulfilling upon the thing that thou asketh, and be thou never deceived in the knowledge of suffumigacions, and putt thou thy mynde in them lest they be transposed, and thou shalt fulfill as that were and after that thou doest as he said.

And Salomon said I will touché somewhat to thee of the nature of suffumigacions, who that useth it much it maketh to see in sleepe or in sothenes grene things and yellowe and divers colors melancholious fumigacion sheweth leady things Sanguine fumigacion sheweth red things, and otherwise it is shewing of purple color fflegmaticke fumigacion sheweth white things and fayre. And so understand thou after that the nature were and the appearing of spirits and of their colo^r and visions and the worke of them shall be after the sharpenes of it and the goodnes and the direction of fumigii that is fulfilling of the thing after that the Image were formed and the Orison of the thing nempned and the trust for all is in the intention of the man and in the hower in which it is done.

Now we have said how every of the planetts hath his fumigacions Now say we the fumigacions of the xii signes and of the xxxvi faces of them. Aries holdeth by himself Mirta^s. Taurus costum. Gemini

Nota scdm Hermetem de fumigiis

And Hermes said Aries Leo and Sagittarius withholdeth eche chollericke spice & bitter Taurus Virgo and Capricornus melancholious and stipticke Gemini Libra & Aquarius sanguine & sweet Cancer Scorpio & Pisces flegmaticke and of salt savor And this Salomon holdeth for the naturall for such spice we give & with them we suffume And which give to the dayes and to the howers. And the sunday the first hower is of Solis, and all of the day altogether we should give this masticke & muscum as we have said of planets in the beginning if this booke of Thymiamatu, and to understand thou of all other knowe thou the suffumigacions of tymes

In primo tempore lignu~ aloes thus et crocu~ &c

In the first tyme lignu~ aloes, thus & crocu~ In the second tyme Thymiamia. Costum mastice. In the third tyme Sandalus Cassia and mirtu~. In the fourth tyme muscu~ succu~ and lignu~ balsami. And as he gave to eche of the 4 tymes their spices or kyndes so he giveth to eche moneth one spice by order.

Dicamus nunc suffumigia 4 partiu~ mundi &c

Say we now suffumigacions of the 4 partes of the worlde and of the 4 elements. For all things that be in this worlde either be compounded of 4 elements or symples Suffumigacions of the 4 parties of this world be these upon the parties of the Algalia, almea and teriaca. Upon the party of the west & the ayre Balsamus, Camphora & olen olivraru~. Upon the North & the water Lignu~ aloes, mix muscata & Maris.

And Salomon said each man that would do any thing by this booke putt he his mynde to the chapter of thymiamatu~.
That he knowe the kindes or things & justly Can meddle them. And so knowe thou that thou might easily worke by it and without travayle thou might fulfilall thing that thou desyrest to see. Now we have fulfilled one Chapiter of fumigiis or fumigacions, and we will say furthermore yet upon which was or intencion with the help of God.

Heere beginneth the fourth booke that speaketh upon tymes of y^e yeare

In Dei noie py incipio scribere libris istu &c

[Book 4]

In the name of the meeke God I beginne to write this booke that is said or called Cephar Raziel which the Angell Raziel gave to Adam. And it shall speake upon the 4 tymes of the yeere & moneths & dayes with his night how we should nempe each thing and knowe each man. That this is said the booke of tymes, and the Angell gave it that is said might and great b¹ by the manndement of the Creator quicke God & in all things mighty. And for that Adam should knowe all things by which he would knowe in this worlde what it is what it was and what it should be in all things in the 12 moneths of the yeere and dayes & howers and that by order and similitude of Cleane fastings and of washings of sacrifice of suffumigacions made by 7 dayes or the first mone were, and ere the sonne should assende his taile the ascendent, and ere the sonne should ascend upon his starre Zedek Jovis and they should be nempned in this booke by monthe of holy angells that have might upon the 7 heavens formed of fyer and the beholding of them is of fyer and the life of him is fyer. And they seemed clothed with fyer And they be covered with fyer. And from the fyer the went out and in the fyer they dwelleth and they be of great fellowships mighty upon the xii moneths of the yeere by the precept of the Creato^r of it which said the world be it and all angels be, and were before it, and there be vii powers before the face of it, and to eache of them is given might and hath a day of the moneth and of the weeke. And of them some be standing in environ and some be sitting in chaires with great honor serving to the Creato^r, and they be evermore ready and bound to go out and to enter, to come and to go and to do all good and evill whatsoever is made and to enchant and to put downe and to cover prily things and to discover or make revelacion. And all this that we have said by the manndmt of God, and all the more angells and lesse, and the princes of them with their powers with their odors or with their fellowships they clipeth themselves everiche with their names and which be selly . i . heigh or sovereigne evermore they praise God the Creato^r which formed them. And also all the powers of all heavens in the moneth and in the day in which he formed them and they all speaking to himself together as men. And Raziel said that these angells wrote these names and this booke.

And he said that there be 7 angells mighty upon vii starres and these bene potestates or powers mighty upon vvi dayes of the weeke And they be keepers of them and of the xxiiii howers of the day and of the vii heavens and of the xii signes and of all other things that governeth the worlde. And Raziel said to Adam beholde knowe and withhold these vii powers or potestates which have power in the vii heavens and the vii starres. The names of which be these Sabaday that is Saturnus. Zedek that is Jupiter. Madim that is Mars. Hanina that is Sol. Noga that is Venus Cocab . i . Mercurius. Labana . i . Luna. The names of the vii heavens in which they be borne be these Samin raquia Siagum Mahum. Macon. Zebul. Arabeck upon Samyn goeth Luna. Upon Raquia goeth Mercurius and upon Arabeck Saturnus and so understand thou of other

The names of Angells that have power upon the vii starres and goeth upon the vii heavens and other while in their chaires be these Capziel. Satquel Samael. Raphael. Amael. Michael. Gabriel.
And the power of these is that Capziel is the power of Sabaday. Satquel of Zedek. And Samael of Madyn and Raphael of Hanina. Amael of Noga. Michael of Cocab. Gabriel of Lubona. And everiche of these sytteth in his heaven. And the meynees of them all about and there be divers colors as white blacke red yellow greene leady pardi viati medled overgilt and of the color of a pecocke fether and of many other colors
These be the Angels that have power upon the 12 moneths of the yeere. The names of the moneths be these Nisan yar zinantamus abelul Tisirin Marquesuam quislep tobez or thebeth Sabat adar pladar postm⁹ The names of potestates be these And they be 12 capitalls, that is one upon everiche moneth of Luna and the rather that is the other is Oriel Sasuyel Amariel. Noriel. Biraquel magna saciel. And everiche of these hath so many potestates helpers more or greater as there be sayes in the moneth or many other servants of them. And the aforesaid Angells a man may knowe all things that is to come in everiche yeere, and in everiche tyme and in everiche moneth and everiche day and everiche hower with the proper signes of them who that knoweth them well if he will knowe of many reynes or fewe or when they shallbe or if they shall be or no. and the day and hower when they shall fall. And a man may knowe by them which is his signe and his starre and he may knowe of his lyfe if it shall be of long tyme or of shorte in the worlde sand other things either for a sicke man or an whole, either for a man either from a woman. Or he may knowe a subtyll understanding or sharpe he may knowe what is to come and do with it what he will. And the dayes of the yeere or of Solis alone (in which may be done the worching of this booke) 365 and the 4th parte of one day in the week of dayes. the yeere of Luna be otherwise 360 dayes or four howers and 46 minutes after the yeere of Luna. And the fulfilling of tyme in this. In one tyme be 3 monethes, and when the tymes befower sothely till to 12. And knowe thou that Nisan that is the first moneth entereth in the first day of the first mone whereat were Luna prima of the moneth of Martii and so of other. and the first very tyme is from the first poynt into the which the sonne entereth into Arietem, till it enter the first poynt of Cancer. And The 2 from Cancer in Libran, And the third from Libra to Capricornu~. And the 4th from Capricorno into Arientes^s. And this is the better distinction of tymes And in the hower which Raziel gave the booke to Adam of tymes of moneths and names of things then was Adam comforted onely wherin thilk day fillen lightnings meved and thunders and Coruscations appeariden, and there was in that day great tempest in all the worlde both in the lande and in the ayre, and in the sea. And in the hower in which the Angell Raziell opened this booke and gave it to Adam. Then he gave to him might and strength & surety in all the words of this booke and myracles that be in it.

[35^v]

[36^r]

And when this booke fell before the face of Adam, then Adam dread full muche and quoke of great dread And fell downe unto the earth as though he had bene dead Then the Angell Raziell said to Adam Rise and be thou comforted for knowe thou that a very soothfast spirit hath descended in thee from the hight heavens which hath lightned thee and hath putt in this hower in thee knwing and might, and that thou shalt attaine that that thou shalt aske. And I say to thee that thou consider in this booke and beholde in it and by it thou shalt knowe and understand whatere was and that is

[36^v]

and that shall be after thee And in that hower in which this booke was given to Adam fier fell upon the brinke of the flood of paradise And the Angell ascended by the flame of the fier to the heavens And an Angell descended in similitude of a white cloude and spake with him plainely and came to him as a man well bright and cleere like to the cleerenes of a starre in his body and full of many other all about
And in ascending when he was severed evermore Adam was like to a lambe which formed well bright as the flame of fyre and cleere then the fyre of a fornace in which golde is purged And then Adam sawe this and found and knewe that of the Lord of all worlds which is a great king and mighty things.
This booke was sent for him. And then he considered and looked in it with holynes and Cleannesse. And then he beheld in it all things that he would know in this worlde. And this was the first word that Adam had with the Angell Raziell And therfore he considered in it and governed himself by it.
Salomon said upon the foresaid reason above after that the Angell Raziell said unto Adam that it behoveth to knowe the tymes and one hower before another and one tyme before another ffor who that

Sepher Raziel

soweth wheat in Ver it may not be gathered on the same Ver. And this is after the temperament of the party of the northe. And therefore it is necessary or needful to divide the yeere into 4 parts and a moneth into 4 partes and an hower into fowre partes

[37^r]

And if thou keepest these divisions and understandest thou shalt profitt in all that thou wilt, for this is sothe and all naturall things is made in the tyme and in the day and in the hower according as the higher or soveraigne Creato^r hath ordeyned. Raziel said of thou wilt knowe any thing of this worlde that is of other that be in the heaven or heavens which be fellowshipped with the first heavens. Or if thou wilt do any thing yt be fulfilled to thy will clense thou thy body by 7 daies that is washe thee and eat thou not a thing of cheste neither of raven, neither of evill party neither a thing uncleane neither that is fallen to death, neither a beast of 4 feete neither other. And eschewe thou thee from malice and falsenes, and thou shalt not drinke wyne neither shalt thou eat fishes or any thing which bloud goeth out. And ioyne thou thee not to a woman pollute neither menstruate neither enter thou into an house where is a dead man neither go thou beside the pitt of a dead man. neither by him that suffereth gonorrhea and eschewe thou and be thou ware of night lest thou fall into pollution and keepe thee from lechery and evill pride. And do thou that thou be evermore cleane and be thou in Orison or prayer, and keepe thy tong from saying evill and leasing and fast thou clenely And keepe thou thy body from doing evill and sinne And lighten thou the house with orison and prayse the angells and do thou almes to needy men and charity and be not thou ioyned to evill men neither to uncleane and clothe thou thee with cleane clothes the larger that thou mightest and evermore trust thou unto God and rise thou early and pray to the Creato^r that he dresse thee and washe thee and fulfill thy petition and thou shalt attayne to that thou askest with God

The first worke of this booke that is necessary or needful in all things that man will do. And when thou wilt knowe when it is good to do all thing which thou wilt do. Or thou wilt know when it is good to do what thing thou wilt of this worlde and thou canst not any thing thereof understand thou that thou account by 7 dayes before the first day of the moneth that is of the moneth of Luna. And in these 7 dayes ne be thou not pollute, neither eat thou a beast having bloud, neither drinke thou wyne, neither touch thou uncleane things, neither ly thou not with a woman and washe thou thee with cleane water running all the vii dayes ere the sonne Ascend And hold the abstinence which we have said and suffume thou thee when thou were bathed with this ligno aloes and ambra croco costo camphora and masticke And then take thou twey quicke turturs and whole without languor in themselves, or if thou wilt twey white culvers if thou might have none other. And cut of the necke fasting with a brazen red knife overgilt on everiche side cutting. And cut of the necke of that one turtur on that one side, and that other on that other, after that drawe out the intrailes but withholde the bloud in a newe glasen cup & cast it into the fyer.

And wash thou th'entrailes with cleane water. And then take iii weichte of musk and iii croco and thuris albi lucidi cinamoni and 10 keyes of gariophylli and lignu aloes as much And then take 12 grana piperis nigri and olde white wyne and sandalos and muscu and camphora and somewhat hony and wyne all these with wyne, and put all medled in the entrailes of the turturs and fill them or divide them into 7 parts or 7 members, and cast on member upon the coles of the fyer in the morrow ere the sunne arise and that is to understand the 11 hower of the night. And when thou burnest the members be thou covered with white cloth and standing thy feete discalciated that is unhosed and unshowed afterward the names of angells which be written that is serving to the moneth in which be written that is serving to the moneth in which thou doest for they be prayers to say the names of angells of that moneth 7 tymes.

And in the 7 dayes thou shalt gather together the ashen which thou hast made in thilk 7 dayes of the foresaid 7 members. And the house and the place in which thou shalt burne be it cleane. And when all this is done thou shalt dispose or ordeyne a solemne house cleane severed to thee. And thou shalt spring the aforesaid ashen upon the earth in the middle of the house and thou shalt sleep there so that thou shalt do this. And then when thou entereth the bed thou shalt nempne the names of the angells strong dreadfull mighty & high and then sleepe thou. And speake thou with man And then knowe thou that thou be well certaine and not dreadfull that there shall come to thee some man and he shall shew himself to thee in the vision of the night and the similitude or likenesse of him shall be of a worship-

The proper names of y^e planets in the 4 tymes
Ista sunt noia stellar~ qui sunt et vadunt &c These be the names of the seaven starres that be

[45^r]

and goeth in the 7 heavens everiche by himself Sabaday Zedek Madyn Hanina noga Cocab Labana And ewiche of these hath his owne proper name upon the fowre tymes of the yeere as we shall shewe in this chapter beneath. And Salomon said in explanation of this place. Wherefore everiche planet and eche thing beforesaid changeth his name in each tyme for his thing ffor heere standeth some tree and from thilk tree cometh to us fowre things. And of these fower things the first is when it burgeoneth the second is the flower. The third is the fruite the fourth is the seed when it is in it. Therefore the sonne is said in the first tyme hott and moist. In the second hott and dry In the third Colde & dry in the fourth Colde and moyst. These be the worchings of the sonne, and the propertyes of it upon all things for another reason the names of things abovesaid be changed in fower parts of the yeere, for ewiche tyme hath his nature and his Complexion by himself as we have said of water which is in the first tyme temperate and in the second heat and in the third rotton and in the fourth Congealed And so other things of the worlde ewiche by himself. The exam= ple whie Raziel put his name to eache thing. In everiche thing be the 4 lords that have might in eche thing and everiche in his tyme. And it is said that there be 4 elements whereof one is fyer that hath might in the first tyme and so other. Wherefore knowe thou that everiche thing changeth his name

[45^v]

As first we say a man a childe and then a yongling and then a middle man in the fourth tyme an old man. And so things changeth their names who will cleape them a leader and this is in a man And so understand thou of Mettaile and in all things that waxeth and liveth. And Salomon said and all other that it was more inst that eache thing should have 7 names then 4 for that all they might descend of 4 bodyes, and to them is given all the might Sothely they put 4 names to everiche thing that it were more easy to worche these 4 names be assigned upon the city of David my fathers and myne which had many names. Sothly the wiseman Isaac the wiseman said that the first name was Remusale, and then Jebusale Jeroboam Jerusalem. And these names this City received for 4 Lords that were in yt And everiche putt to his proper name And for this like things of this worlde receiveth 4 names in themselves or 7 or more after that God hath ordeyned. And therfore no man marvaile of these names of things in 4 tymes. In the higher heaven that is the first from the ou/¹ party and it is the 7 from the neather in it serveth Sabaday and his angell Capciel. In the first tyme Sabaday is said Cuerues. In the second Palicos. In the third Quirtipos in the fourth Panpotes. In the sixth serveth Zedek and his angel is Satquiel and the name Jovis In the first tyme it is amonor. In

Heere beginneth the fifth booke that treateth of Cleannesse

Dixit Salomon revelatu~ fuit nitri de isto libro &c Salomon said It was shewed to me of this booke of Raziell and many angells after that I had the booke and of these which nourished powers

[46^v]

and vertues and matter and strength of the potestates above, and that by the manndement and obedience of the Creato^r or maker of the worlde
And they said thus Salomon thou hast asked witt and wisdome and fairenes and might in will com= pleate and named full great for evermore upon earthes.

And knowe that all kings and lesse men shall come after thee and which should heere speake of thee should love thee and worshippe thee and should set price of thee and should prayse thee and keepe thou this booke, and worche thou with it with reverence and cleannesse. And Salomon said to the benigne angell Natanael which hath might in thaire and this evermore ~~was~~ was fellowshipped to Salomon which be thilke 7 bodyes which we seene above bright fayre cleane and cleere w^h ceaseth never to go neither the wayes of them be void and they fayleth never but evermore dureth going their wayes. And it that farryeth more in going his way fulfilleth it in 30 yeeres. And then they appeareth such as they were before and which went before thus they sawe. And thus it us said that they should be how long God would. And thus I say of an hundreth yeeres and a 1000 that they never be changed neither in meving but we have found them as the Prophets and other olde men founen. And the angell Natanael said to Salomon.
The 7 bright bodyes which thou seest above above be put beneath And they in going upwards holdeth in balance or in rule the 4 elemnts beneath And therefore the meving of them ceaseth not for such might the Creato^r gave to them. And knoweth thou that the matter of them is simple and pure without corruption and evermore durable. And the state of them is likenes to the Lord that formed although they obey to him in all things. And Natanael said furthermore to Salomon knowe thou that in the heavens of the 7 bright bodyes be angels without number mighty in all thing, and everiche of them hath his proper mighte and his strength and vertue. And they be unlike among themselves as men together or other beasts And everiche serveth of his office to the creator that formed them or made them. And Salomon said to Nathaniel which is the lyfe or the might or the service that these angells doth. And Nathaniel said the lyfe of them is of cleannesse of Orison and of trustines and the might of them is of suffumigii holocausti et sacrificii. And the service of the is when the Creator woll they go from place to place when any cleane man hath prayed to the Creator as it beseemeth And then they do good or evill as the creator will for in them is power science & will complete And Salomon said which be these 7 bright bodies and how be they named and of what thing serveth everiche And Nathaniel said that same that Raziel said to Adam, the higher of these that goeth slower is said Sabaday and all the realmes of his heaven be full of Ice snowe and haile and wrothe rancor and Coldenes And all the angells that bene there bene clothed with darkenes full darke. And the greatness of them be full high and full long and small and upon the earthes and upon divels and upon darkness and coldeness and drinesse. And this hath power upon wyndes of this nature And they have power of doing good and evill And the angell of it is Beel crowned upon all other. In the second heaven¹ standeth Zedek and all the realmes of him.

 I enquired and there answered unto mean old man of good mynde and understanding which was cleped zebraymayl
 And I said Adam had a maker and a m^r that is to say o^r Lord his maker and gabriell to m^r ffurthermore Hermes the discreet and most wise man and Moyses had a master and a friend that is to witt Cretu^s Also Aaron sothely had a friend of which therfore is made resistance that a wise man may not be without a m^r how arresteth it thou in thee that two may be wise without one m^r But that thou be wise these I knowe to be necessary to thee. A wise m^r and discrete long and continuall study many olde bookes of great wise men made oft and ofter over red profitt & amended glad and continuall health of thy body long lyfe without cares and travailes quiet. The Salomon said to the wise man Is not this possible to be done by a shorter way then that thou hast said above Zebaymayl answered king by a lighter & shorter way then this ne unknowe thou not to may be done To whom Salomon said How therfore to whome the wise man answered agayne saying Open thou privily and fully the arke of the Testant no man knowing or understanding in which all secrets or privities and olde wisdomes and words of great power and of vertue thou shalt fynde By which not only thou shalt knowe things passed but these also that be present and likewise these that be to come. The Salomon answered agayne saying for this that thou hast answered to me I give thanks to that high and blessed creato^r which reigneth after that it pleased to him all things with word alone he formed or made. And there is not any more noble or mightier then he without whome no vertue or power is which giveth wisdom to wise men, he is that is of all things the fyrste sith he is without beginning and of all things the last sith there is no end of him. This is of all thinges maker and none ymade of whome the raigne or raigning is and shall be and of whome all worke be good and of whome he will over all is free sith there is none that may againe say to him. Whereupon Salo= mon trowing or trusting to Zebaymayl made the arke of the testament to be brought before him. And he sought all the bookes of Moyses and of Aaron of Adam and of Noe and of their sonnes and of Hermes and of other prophetts, and of others which he might finde of the miracle of words and the vertues of them And he sought all the old Idolls of heathen men & Images of divers tongs having writings and all things graven which might be founde by all the parts of the worlds And he made them to be gathered togethers into his pallace, and he brought forth M^{rs} of everiche one of the 72 which should expound to him privy l^{res} or hid Y. C. M. Hebrew Caldý Syriacke greeke writing and that they should expound to him that which were hidde. And when the l^{res} were expounded he sawe the more party to accord with hit in vertues of words.

[48^v]

Rex ergo Salomon fecit arca nocte quadam ape= riri &c therfore King Salomon made the arke some might privily to be opened that in the arke with reasons afterward he should be learned. And Salomon said After that the soveraigne and Almighty Creato^r had infused that grace of his spirit in me
I opened the arke of the testament in which I found all things which long and studiously before I had sought Among which I found the booke which is cleped Raziel which the creato^r sent to Ada^m by the angell Raziel when upon the brinke of the flood of paradise weeping thilke creato^r he prayed and of him forgiveness of his sinnes he besought. And I found the booke which the creator gave to Moyses in the hill when he made him partner of his privities In which three bookes that is three Orisons I found.

[49^v]

The first the prophets clepeth Semiforas which the creato^r gave to Adam in Paradise
The second booke is which the creato^r gave to Adam in paradise in the hower of necessity or need
The third is which the creato^r gave to Moyses in the hill of Sinay after that he had ful= filled the fasting.

And Salomon said I found in the arke a pott full of manna, and the yard of Moyses which was changed into a serpent and efte from a serpent into a yard And the tables of the lawe and peeces of the first l^{res} which Moyses for the sinnes of the people in his wrothe he broke in the ground sothely of the arke I found some golden tables quadrate or fowre cornered In which were 15 precious stones twelve tribes or lynages of Israell by similitude likened And in everiche stone were written the holy highe names of the creato^r of the booke Semiforas out drawen And I found a boxe of marble having greene colo^r as Jaspis coloured

[50^r]

And in this boxe were 7 figures, and in each figure 7 great and virtuous names of the Crea^to^r to Moyses tolde and other 7 which the creato^r taught Adam in paradise.
And this is a secret or privy which much leaned and covered ought worshipfully to be kept. I found also about thextremities of arke 24 vertuous rings with names and figures of the creato^r writt in Semiforas with divers colo^{rs} written or figured And I myself Salomon had one of thilk rings having mynde to the same In which I knowe to have founden such vertue that when I said make it to rayne and it rayned And when I said eft as thou hast made it to rayne so make thilk rayne to cease agayne and it ceased. And beside Jerusalem the same realme aswell of tempests as of raines it did or made And Salomon said I found Semiforas with which Moyses made the plagues in Egypt, and with which he dried the red sea, and with which also he drewe out water out of the stone, and with which also he knewe all the cleannesse of his people, and with which also overcame princes and kings and mighty men, and with which whatever he would do he did and that which he would destroy he destroyed And with which fulfilled it at his owne will Capitulum explanationis hujus nois Semiforas &c

The chapter of explanation of this name semiforam
And it is that that all divells and wynds and men as well quicke as dead, and all spirits and all bodyes dreadeth. Wherefore sothely Semiforas is said or nempned the first secret or privy and of great old and much yleaned and hidde and of great vertue and power to gett what ever he would. Semiforas is a word which ought not to be shewed to all men, neither by hit (but with great necessity or anguish) ought any man to worche. And then with dread of the creato^r he ought cleanelly and meekely and devoutly to nempne it. Also Semiforas is roote and beginning and fundament of oryson, exemplar of good lyfe trust of mans body the oryson or prayer of a Just man thilk creator dreading. And Salomon said about Semiforas These be necessary with mekeness fasting, with oryson trust with clarity cleannesse, with patience meekenes and constancy of a man without which yow might worche nothing. And with the which whatever thou wilt thou shalt gett. When all vertues in worching by Semi= foras ought to be nethesle these 7 that is meke= ness trueth patience abstinence trust clarity mercy ought in him principally to be had or to abound.

[50^v]

Si ergo per Semiforas operari volumes oportet quod simus &c If therfore we will worche by Semiforas it behoveth that we be bright or cleane of body and in trust stedfast and from falsenesse and leasing fully departed. It behoveth also to dread the creator and the creatures of him among which we ought to dread most the sonne which giveth to us light and darkenes colde and hott which is cause of changing of tymes and of temperment of the aire and of herbes. We ought also to knowe the beholdings of the moone and the moneths which by hit 12 and s~, 13 by accounted as the said nyssan yar tina &c And we ought to knowe the waxing and decreasing of the mone when by it all creatures as the sea flouds and welles and all the neather bodyes waxing and decreasing taken bloud in the veynes and marrowe in the head and the bones. After that the mone taketh waxing & decreasing they be nourished in thilk Also the enfusiall or melting of metalls ne doubt thou not the vertue of the mone to worche. We ought also to knowe Sabaday .i. Sa= turne by whome hunger and dearth and all anguish in londs befallerh. We ought also to knowe & dread Zedek .i. Jove by whome honor and health and righte= ousnes and all good is had. We should also knowe and dread Madim .i. Martem of whome chollers & strifes and hate and battailes and leasing and all evils cometh.

We ought also to knowe and dread Hanina .i. solem by whome we have light and darkenes & cleerenes and by whome tymes as evill unto good into evill be transmuted or changed. We ought also to dreade and know Nogam .i. Venerem by whom^e we have meate and drinke and all necessities or things that be needful by whome peace and love and dilection among men is made fast and stable. We ought also to dread Cocab .i. Mercury for he is nigher to us then all except the mone by whome merchandise and venditions or sellings and all seculer things be exercised. Therfore behold y^{ow} those that be said and most the spirits abovesaid and thus thou shalt profitt And whatever thou shalt axe of the creator rightfully thou shalt have it.

[51^v]

Heere beginneth the Sixth book that treateth of the names of heavens

Dixit Salomon oñes coiter horas et malas &c

[Book 6]

Salomon said All men commonly good howers and evill, and good dayes and evill, good signes and evil to be they affirmeth And this with many reasons they Confirmeth And I my self Salomon have proved the dayes and howers of madim & Sabaday which I found full greevous for to worche. I have proved also the howers of zedek and Noga And I sawe what ever I would worche of them lightly
I wrought. The howers of Cocab and Labana otherwhile greevous otherwhile good I have proved to be And I sawe that in the day and in the hower co^oia nothing of my will I might fulfill. And know thou that the spirits abovesaid anentis divers men diversy be nempned ffor the first in Hebrew is Sabaday in Arabicke zoal, in greeke orgrue fenes in Latin Saturnus it is cleped or nempned And I say therfore that the first hower of the day of Sabaday is said Sabaday the second zedek the third Madyn the fourth Hanina the fifth Noga. the sixth Cocab the 7th Labana And the howers of the might ought to be nempned to them. And knowe thou that by the starres above said and dayes and howers whatever thou wilte thou shalt understande And thou shalt knowe the hidde and privy willes of men.

Cumg per Semiforas operari voluerat &c

[52^r]

When he would worche by Semiforas first or ever he beganne any thing it behoveth him to name the 7 names of Angells, for some angells be upon the seven heavens, and upon the 7 planets and upon the 7 dayes of the weeke and upon the 7 mettalls and upon the 7 colo^{rs} and upon the 7 words having power, the names of the which be these Raphael. gabriel. Samael. Michael.

vertues of them*

[Book 7]

Incipiunt srae et verba et noia Semiforas &c

Heere beginneth the l^cre and words and names of Semiforas which god the Creato^r gave to Adam in paradise. In which be fowre letters which to the 4 parties of the worlde and to the 4 elements and to the 4 complexions and to the 4 natures of the beasts they be likened such they be יהוה הוהי¹ And these be letters piteously and devoutly and meekely name thou that petition in all things be fulfilled. Salomon said ther be to be said that there are 7 semiforas. And the first is the

Semiforas of Adam in which be conteyned 4 chapters
The first is when Adam spake with the creator in paradise.
The second is when he spake with the angells
The third is when he spake with the divels. The 4th is when he spake with men and with fowles & fishes and beasts and reptiles and wilde beasts. The fifth when he spake with seeds and herbes and trees and all growing things. The 6 when he spake with wyndes and with the 4 elemts. The 7th when he spake with the sunne and the moone and the starres And by the 7 vertues of Semiforas whatever he would do he did, and what ever he would destroy he destroyed. And this Semiforu Adam had when the Creato^r enspired grace into him.

The first Semiforas

Primu~ Semiforas est quando creator Adam formavit &c

The first Semiforas is when the creator formed Adam and putting him in paradise nempned or named

יהוה הוהי² נגנג¹ that is to say

² Eight letters resembling those discussed in a previous note are written here, but crossed out.

yana. the natures and vertues of which above we have declared. If in great necessity or need thou namest this name meekely and devoutly before the creato^r grace and helpe ne doubt thou not to finde.

The Second Semiforas

Secundu~ Semiforas est quando Ada~ locutus fuit &c

The second Semiforas is when Adam spake with the Angell which brought to him these letters written the example of which is such אֲשֶׁר אֲדִידָה ² That is yeseraye. And the name thou shalt name when thou wilt speake with angells. And then thy question and thy worke without doubt shall fulfill

[54^v]

The third Semiforas

Tertiu Semiforas est qu locutus est cu daemonibus &c

The third Semiforas is when he spake with devils and with dead men and of them counsel he enquired, and they sufficiently to him answered And all this he did with these l^res of which this is the explanation Adona Sabaoth Adonay Cados Addona Annora And these l^res thou shalt name when thou wilt gather together wyndes or divels or serpents

The fourth Semiforas

Quartu~ Semiforas est qu aialia et sps &c

The fourth Semiforas is when he bound and loosed beasts and spirits and that with these 7 names Lagume Lamizirm Lanagzlayn Lagri Lanagala Lanatozin Layfyalasyn And when thou wilt bynde or loose beasts thou shalt name the names abovesaid

The fifth Semiforas

Quintu Semiforas est qu arbores et sementa &c

The fifth semiforas is when he said or names the 7 natures with which he bound seeds and trees And these they be Lihaham Lialgana Liafar Vialurab

² Again, here are eight letters with little or no likeness to the word they represent. Some do not even resemble Hebrew letters.

Lelara Lebaron Laasasilas. And when thou wilt bynde seeds or trees thou shalt name the names abovesaid And thou shalt bynde

The Sixt Semiforas

Sextu Semiforas est magnae virtutis &c The sixt Semiforas is of great vertue and power of which

Letafiryn Babaganaritin Letarimitin Letagelogin

[55^r]

Letafalazin these names thou shalt name when thou wilt that the elemts and wyndes fulfill thy will in all things

The Seventh Semiforas

Septinu Semiforas est magnu et virtuosu &c
The seventh Semiforas is great and vertuous for they be names of the Creato^r which thou oughtest to name in eache thing and in all thy workes inclepe. And they be these Eliaon yaena Adonay cados ebreel Eloy Ela Egiel ayom sath adon sulela Eloym deliom name in eache tyme that thou workest upon the 4 elements and whatever thou wylte do by them it shall be destroyed and fordone.

breaks, word order, and with its contractions expanded*

modern English text

edited by Stephen Skinner

Modern English Text

In the course of rendering the text into modern English, the spelling has been modernized, and the punctuation clarified. Paragraph breaks, and occasionally sentence breaks, have been silently introduced to clarify the meaning, and to help make the divisions of the manuscript more clear. In a number of cases the word order has been changed to match modern understanding, without loss of meaning. Contractions both in the Latin and the English have been expanded. The Latin has not been translated, because the scribe, in each case, has provided a translation or summary immediately after each Latin passage. Excess personal pronouns such as 'he' and 'you' used in Middle English¹ have been silently removed. For example 'know you' has been rendered simply as 'know' or eliminated altogether where its repetition becomes tedious. The verb 'to be' has also been adjusted to reflect modern usage. Redundant words have been silently dropped, so for example in a phrase like 'destroyed and fordene', the second word has been dropped as 'fordene' means 'destroyed.'

Where significant words have been inserted to clarify the meaning they are enclosed in square brackets. Simple connective words (like 'and', 'or', 'because', 'then', 'there', 'that'), definite/indefinite articles ('the', 'a'), or prepositions ('on', 'by', 'in', 'over', 'above'), have been added or deleted silently where necessary to improve the meaning. If there is any uncertainty as to the meaning, then the reader can simply refer to the original text transcription printed earlier in the present book.

Some words will appear to have been arbitrarily changed. This is because a number of words in English have completely changed in their underlying meaning since the time this manuscript was composed. You should not, for example, be surprised to find 'said' in the original changed to 'called' in the modern English version, or 'proved' changed to 'tested', or 'very' changed to 'true' or 'truth', or 'quick' changed to 'living', or 'clean' changed to 'pure', or 'cleanness' changed to 'purity', or 'price' changed to 'high esteem', or 'point' changed to 'degree', or 'star' changed to 'planet' where needed, or 'will' sometimes (as the context demands) changed to 'wish' and 'full' sometimes changed to 'very.' These changes reflect the original meaning and intention of the author, and can be confirmed by consulting any Middle English dictionary.

The original names of stones and herbs have been retained with the modern word, plus alternate Latin word, following in square brackets.

Liber Salomonis

[Praefatio - Preface]

In the name of Almighty God living, true and everlasting and outside of all [creation] and who is called ¹ Adonay, Saday, Ehye Asereye,² I begin to write this book which is called Sepher Raziel ³ with all his appurtenances, in which there are seven Treatises complete or fulfilled, that is in 7 books.

Dixit Solomon gloria et laus et cum multo honore &c.

Solomon spoke glory and praise, with much honour, to the God of all Creatures, he that is unique, who made all things at one time. And he is the one true God and mighty, he alone is, and was, and always shall be, who has no end, nor is there any [other] like him, neither is he like [any other]. And he is unique without end, Lord alone without corruption, holy, pure, meek and great, seeing and hearing all things, wise, and in all things mighty. And I begin this book to make an exemplar, [so] that whosoever has it, [must] not blame it till he has read and heard it all, or somewhat of it, and then [he will] praise God, maker of all things.

These are Nine Precepts [to be observed in this practice].

Incipiunt praecepta. Here begin the precepts:

*Non credas esse plures nisi unum [Deum solum &] singularum &c.*⁴

1. Do not believe [God] to be many, but one, unique, alone among all things, which has none like him, and love him with awe and honour, with all trust and with good will, a stable [intent], with might, and with a pure heart.
2. Do not live without law, and you shall be loved by God your Creator, and by folks [your family].
3. Nor do to another man, if you would not [have] the same [done to you].
4. Do not be a liar to the Lord, nor to your friend, but say such truth that is to your profit, and not to do harm.

¹ 'Said' is used in the original manuscript in many places where the sense is obviously 'called', and so it has been uniformly replaced with 'called' in these places.

² A more familiar transliteration of these Hebrew godnames would read: 'Adonai Shaddai Eheieh Asher Eheieh.'

³ It later refers to itself as Cephar Raziel.

⁴ The Latin catchlines have sometimes been supplemented from the Latin of Sloane MS 3847.

5. Do not love associating more with unwise men than with wise men. And always love [2^v] much wisdom and good sciences, and [put] all your will and life into them.

6. Do not speak before you have thought, and consider it in your heart before you do it.

7. Do not show your private parts to a woman, nor to a child, nor to a fool, nor to a drunken woman.

8. Do not test a medicine, nor its venom, on yourself, before you test it on another.¹

9. Do not blame a book before you prophesy,² nor [confirm] a man to be wise till you have tested [him].

And if you hold these Nine Precepts to you always, you shall profit more and more.

Postquam sensus et scire et posse voluntas vera [vestra] &c.

After that, understanding, knowledge, might and truth will overcome all things with good understanding and discretion. Therefore I will expound, or make open, his book which is of great power and of great virtue. I, Solomon, supply such knowledge, and such distinction and explanation, in this book [so] that every man that reads or studies it, may know whereof he was, and from whom he came.

[Introductio Libri – Introduction of the Book]

Know that after I, Solomon, had 30 years [of reign] plus a half [year], [until] the fifth day of the month of Hebrews, which was the sixth day of the Sun being in the sign of Leo. In that day there was sent to me from Babylon by some Prince, that was greater and more revered then all men of that time, a book called Cephar Raziel ³ which contained 7 books and 7 Treatises.

Nota tempus in quo Solomon fuit quo adeptus istum libre et quomodo et a quo venit sibi Know the time in which Solomon received the book, and how and by whom it came to him.

Iste liber est magnae virtutis et magnae secretiae

¹ This appears to be ethically the wrong way around.

² Prophesy here means have the magical powers of a prophet of old, not just being able to foretell the future.

³ Cephar Raziel is an alternate spelling for Sepher Raziel, the Book of Raziel. In Hebrew it is סֵפֶר רִיזְיֵאל. In the Latin of Sloane MS 3847 it is called 'Sephar Raziel.'

This book is of great virtue and [has] great secrets. The name of the prince that sent it to me was Sameton, and the two wise men that brought it to me were called Kamazan,¹ and the other Zazont.² [3r] The name of this book as expounded in Latin is Angelus Magnus Secreti Creatoris, that is to say the 'Great Angel of the Secret Creator,'³ and in Hebrew Cephar Raziel. It is the book of Adam written in the language of Caldey [Chaldaean] and afterwards translated into Hebrew. And each man that reads it knows that in it are all the Semiforas,⁴ that is to say the great name [of god] complete with all his names, whole and even, and with his virtues and his sacraments.

[The Seven Treatises]

And I found it in 7 books, that is in 7 Treatises. And know that I found the first and the last very dark,⁵ and the five middle [Treatises] more plain, and although I found them dark I opened [understood] them as much as I could or might.

And the 7 Treatises of this book are these:

1. The first [treatise] is called Clavis ['Key'] for in it is explained Astronomy and the stars [planets], for without them we may do nothing [magically].
2. The second is called Ala ['Wing'] for in it is explained the virtues of some stones, of herbs, and of beasts.⁶
3. The third is called Tractatus Thymiamatum ['Treatise of Incenses'] and in it is explained [the virtues] of suffumigations,⁷ their choice,⁸ and their divisions.
4. The fourth is called the Treatise of Times of the Year, [Temporum Anni], of the day, and of the night, in it is explained when anything ought to be done by this book.

³ Here we have yet another title for this manuscript: Great Angel of the Secret Creator.

⁴ It is not just the 72 letter name Shem ha-Mephorash. It is written Semhamforash/Semphorax in the Latin of Sloane MS 3847. The Semiforas are the formulae or lists of names given in the last Treatise of this book. In two places in the present manuscript, it is also written 'Semiforax.' 'Semiphoras' is also the name of related Solomonic manuscripts mentioned in the Introduction.

⁶ In the present text, the supposed explanation of why the second book is divided into four 'Wings' is very stretched, artificial and unconvincing, as if the scribe was seeking to justify something he himself found inexplicable.

⁷ We have refrained from modernising 'suffumigation' throughout as it is not easily replaceable by a single word like 'perfume' or 'cense', and 'fumigate' definitely doesn't give the right meaning. It means to use perfumed smoke or incense, with the objective of ritually cleansing a thing or place, or to attract or dispel spirits therefrom.

⁸ 'Allegationibus' in the Latin of Sloane MS 3847.

5. The fifth is called the Treatise of Purity [Tractatus Munditia] for in it is explained Abstinence.

6. The sixth is called Samaim ¹ [Heavens] for in that Treatise it names all the heavens and their angels, and their operations or workings.

7. The seventh is [called] the Book of Virtues [Liber Virtutum], for there is explained virtues and miracles, and there are told the properties of the Ark of Magic, and of its figures, and of its provisions.

And then I began to write all these Treatises in a new volume for [just] one Treatise without another serves not to [explain] the wholeness of the work. Therefore I made [3v] a whole book up of the Treatises. Therefore Salomon said to his writer Clarifaton,² that he could write it, which I know well the languages of Chaldaean, of Indy [Indian], of Hebrew and of Syrian,³ and their right explanation. Solomon secondly said that after Clarifaton had corrected it and had arranged it,⁴ it should be better, and he arranged it in the best manner that he might. And Clarifaton, who was Solomon's writer, said that this book is full of great secrets, and that it is worthy of very great honour. And that it was given to Solomon with high esteem and much love. And every Treatise of these 7 [treatises] was written by themselves. Clarifaton said that it ought to be but one book alone by itself, for none of these [Treatises], said he, would suffice without the others, therefore he said it is necessary that they are all [kept] together.

Whereupon Solomon ordained that all the said 7 Treatises were but one book, as they ought to be, and so they ought to be read and wrought. And he ordained it much better than the philosophers ordained, and he also taught how a man ought to do his work from it. And he put every Treatise by itself and every chapter by itself and arranged all till the end of the book. And he put into this book the Semiforas, that is the book of 17 virtues, how it ought to be written, with what ink, on what parchment, with what pen, with what man, in which season, on what day, in what night, and in what hour. After that Solomon expounded how the Book of Razeelus [Raziel] ought to be kept, purely and with great honour.

Solomon said, "who sees and knows not, is like he that is born blind and knows not colours, and whoever hears and understands not, is such as if he

⁴ 'Dressed' meaning 'dressed up', hence 'edited.' 'Diregibat' is the Latin of Sloane MS 3847, from 'dirigo' meaning 'to arrange in order.'

were a deaf man. And who considers and knows not the consideration is such [a person] as if he were a drunkard. [4r] And whoever speaks and cannot expound the reason, is as a dumb man. And whoever reads plain books and understands them not, is as if he were a dreamer."

[Qua charta debet Scribi...Quo Encausto...Quo Calamo]

[The Parchment, the Pen and the Ink]

These proverbs Solomon wrote in this book, for Solomon wrote in this book Cephar Raziel,¹ what the angel said to Adam (who was the first man in this world) and after that, what Moses said to other prophets, in truth, and we believe it to be so.

Dixit Angelus Salomoni ut omnibus tua operationes &c.

The angel said to Solomon that all your workings and petitions shall be fulfilled, and all that you covet shall be made [available], and be in [your] power. It is your duty that when you have this book, or another copy of it, that you write it [out] the first time on virgin parchment, and [see] that it [the parchment] is not filthy, neither [just the skin] of a dead beast, [but] on vealime (vitulino),² or on parchment of silk, or on satin,³ or on clean cloth, or on parchment of a lamb, or on a virgin kid,⁴ or on a virgin faun, and this [latter] is better than any other.

And the ink with which you write [should] be [made] of clean [oak] galls, and let it be made with good whole white wine, with gum,⁵ vitriol, mastic & thyme and crocus.⁶ And the third day when it has taken residence ⁷ and is cleansed, and strained, add therein a little of algoba and almea,⁸ and add

² Vellum, or prepared sheep skin. The reference is to the use of lime to clean the flesh off the skin in order to make it into parchment.

³ In Sloane MS 3826 this is 'Samatyne' (with 'sattin' written above it), but in Sloane MS 3846 it is just written as 'satin.' This suggests, but it is not in any way conclusive, that Sloane MS 3826 is possibly the older of the two versions.

⁴ Young virgin goat.

⁵ Usually gum tragacanth.

therein good musk, more than the [other] three [perfume ingredients]. And add therein ambergris, balsamic myrrh, and lignum aloes.

And when the ink is made, boil it with mastic, thyme, lignum aloes, and with somewhat of Thymiamata,¹ and Muculazarat,² and cleanse [filter] it well with a clean thin cloth, and [let] the cloth be [folded] threefold. And afterward put therein musk, ambram [ambergris], almenus & algana, balsam and myrrh, all well ground & then [4v] mix all this very well with the ink. And let the ink be still for the space of 3 days well covered, in a fair place. And know that with this ink you shall write all the holy names of God, his angels, and of his saints, and all things in which his holy great name is named and written. And all things that you want will truly be fulfilled, pleasing to your wishes, and serviceable to you. And whatever you put in this ink, [make sure] it is new and bright and pure, and [written with] a good pen.

And the pen that you shall write the holy names, [should] be a green reed, gathered early before the Sun arises.³ And he that shall gather it, [must] be clean & washed in running water, or in a living/flowing well, and also let him be clothed with clean clothes, and [let] the Moon be waxing, with Caput Draconis or with Jupiter, for then they will be true [usable]. And when you gather [the reed pen], you shall look toward the East, and you shall say thus "Adonay et Saday juvate me ad complendum voluntatem meam [ac voluntates meas cum] arundine ista." That is to say "[Adonai and Saday] help me to fulfill my wishes with this reed." And when this is said you shall cut one reed, or two, or as many as you wish, with one stroke.⁴ And as Moses said, the knife must be plain, sharp and whole, as if we should [need to] cut a neck with it. And take the reed with your clean hands, and make of it a gobbet [small piece]. And when you cut the pen, cut it before the Sun arises, or as it arises. With this pen and with this ink you shall write all the names of God, holy and several. And as often as you write the name of the Creator, be pure and solemn, alone, serene & in a pure place.⁵

² Not in the OED. 'Mukul' is a type of myrrh produced in Zufar. 'Muql' is a type of bdellium.

³ An (indistinct) marginal note: "it must be done in the new of the ☾ [Moon] while the ☾ [Moon] increases, when she applies [moves towards] Caput Draconis, or towards the ☿ [conjunction] with, or Δ [trine] with ♃ [Jupiter], for if so the [time] will be very good."

⁵ 'Cleanliness' or purity is mentioned frequently in this manuscript, even to the extent of having one of the seven Treatises wholly devoted to it. Although washing and wearing clean

And you shall first, before you write, for 3 days be bathed in clean water, but rather [it is better if] you are pure for nine days [in] a house or clean place, made very clean with besoms [brooms], [5¹] and washed, watered and censed. And arrange it so that when you write, you hold your face toward the East & write from morning till midday, after that you [may] eat. And after you have eaten and drunk you shall not write anything [more]. And if you wish to write Semiforas, [taking advantage of] its powers, then the number of the [days of the] Moon, should be even.¹ And mostly do it on the day of the Moon [Monday], or in the morning, or of Jupiter [Thursday] or Venus [Friday], & [begin writing in the hour] of Saturn, and of the Sun over all.²

And Solomon said, "If you add into the ink the blood of a vowler [vulture], or of a turtur [turtle dove], or of a gander (wholly or all white), the ink shall be much the better, and [have] more virtue. Also I say that if there were sapher [sapphire]³ powdered, smaragdo [emerald],⁴ gaynisia & topasia [topaz]⁵ in it, [then] the ink shall be complete or fulfilled."

And with this ink, and with this pen, ought to be written all the names of Semiforas, and know that he that shall write this book ought to be pure & fasting, bathed and censed with precious aromatics, that is with good smelling spices. And so it shall be of great profit to you, and to him that makes it or writes it. And each man that has written this book, or has held it in his house,⁶ [shall] always hold God in his mind, and his holy Angels & [the purposes] for which he has made it. And let him keep in his mind in which time (of the 4 times of the day), he ought to [work], or at what time of the hour. And always let him keep in his mind to his 4 times, in an [appropriate] hour to which they ought to be as Juvenies in Libro Prophetarum.

clothes forms part of the requirements, it is really meant in the sense of 'moral purity.' Contrary to the popular impression that magic involves depravity, the emphasis of all serious works on magic, and all serious practitioners, is on the purification and the purity of the operator, so that they are in a sufficiently morally strong position to deal with any 'spiritual creatures', be they angels, spirits or demons.

² The last phrase is not clear, but might suggest 'during daylight hours.'

³ Symbolic of the Virgin Mary.

⁴ Symbolic of Hermes Trismegistus.

⁵ Sometimes 'topas' was also used to indicate a chrysolite, peridot or yellow sapphire.

⁶ Mediaeval Jews considered the Sepher Raziel so potent that the mere possession of the book in the house was believed to help prevent fires, a serious concern in the ghettos of Mediaeval Europe. However we have no certainty that the Mediaeval Hebraic Sepher Raziel ha-Melakh is connected in any direct way with the present text.

[Liber Primus - The First Book]

Dixit Solomon sicut si esset Castrum &c.

Solomon said that [this method is] as though there is a strong castle great, high, enhanced and well [fortified] on each side with walls surrounded, and the gates in this place are strong and stable, or firm, and with keys closed and locked. Therefore it obliges [anyone] who would open the gates of that closed castle, and wholesomely enter into it, without work or gift [bribe], and without bruising his body [in battle], to have the same [5v] keys, and none other, of this castle, of its gates and of its closings.

Thus I say that it is [necessary] for [you] to know the stars [planets], their names, their figures, their natures, and when they should be good and when they should be evil. And this I say of [both] the fixed [stars] and of the 7 erratics [the planets]. Consider [also] how the nature of the Circle of the 12 [Zodiacal] Signs [effects them].

And therefore it is the duty of each man that has this book, to hold it purely, and keep it with great reverence & with great honour. And he who has it, and can read it, let him not read it before he [has a] very pure body, and [then he should read it] with great understanding. And I make every man know that he ought not to work with this book in vain [disrespectfully], neither without understanding, nor without law or reason. And when any man does to the contrary, [it] as [if] reptiles or wild beasts do him harm.

And know though you have power, and trust to work by this book, & although you might have great belief in this, you should not work, except with great right or law [on your side], or with many [good] reasons. And understand, if on the contrary, you work otherwise by this book than you should, [it] might greatly hinder you: that is to say if you work without [good] reasons, or if you are unclean or evil in yourself.

¹ The beginning of the first book, the Clavis, is not marked in the English manuscript, but as this section begins the discussion of astrological matters, and first mentions keys, it is likely that this was the beginning of the first of the seven Treatises or books, which is called Liber Clavis on its last page. The Latin of Sloane MS 3847 marks the beginning of this chapter on the next page where [Clavis Libri] is marked. But 12 lines later it re-headines the page with 'De Astronomia Liber Primus', so the Latin text's divisions are not quite as logical as they initially seem.

Clavis istius libri est cognoscere et scire loca

The key to this book is to know and examine the places of the 7 bodies above [the planets], and their natures and their sciences, and their Houses, and all their virtues, after [the manner] it appeared on the earth to me.

Formata debet esse omnis figura cum exemplo vero

Each figure ought to be formed with a true example, therefore I put the figure of the key in this book,¹ [in order] that no true man, without [good] reason, shall profit by it. And I put in the figure a key with a shaft, to [6^r] [symbolize] that there is one solemn Lord, one god, who never had, nor shall have, any even or like to him. In the quadrature [quarter part of the figure], there are four corners that signify that there are 4 Elements, and no more. And in this key is [also] one triangle, which signifies knowledge, might [power] and will, for [without] these three [things] no man may do anything in the world, nor attain to any profit.

[Et dixit Salomon quod hastilo huinum Clavis]

And Solomon said that the shaft of this key is as Raziel said to Adam, with the unity or one head; and the quadrate is as the 4 [types of] virtues that are [found] in [stones], herbs, words, and beasts, and they be in the likeness of [the 4] Elements which open and do everything. And in the 7 wards [zones] be 7 Angels which are mighty in the 7 Heavens, and in the 7 days of the week, as furthermore I shall teach you. And the triangle signifies man which is [divided] into body, soul and spirit: and these things abovesaid, lead to all the world, as it was compounded [generated] in highness & lowness.

Pastquam hucusque diximus oportet nos dicere &c.

After what we have said hitherto, it is the duty of us now to say, in this book, that which is said of the key of the 7 brethren [planets]. And these 7 brethren have to divide among themselves 12 realms [Signs], and in each realm are 30 cities [degrees], and in every city are 60 castles and in every castle there are 60 Caldee,² that is to say feeldy [fields?], or wild forones [towns?].³

And this example Solomon found, and made distinctions, and said, "there is a father and he has 7 sons [the planets], and these 7 sons are siblings, for they are [born] of the same father. And the eldest [Saturn] is the most heavy among all the others. And the middle [the Sun] is in the middle, and regulates then all. And there it is sited in the middle in relationship to them, so [that no planet] is separated from it [by more than] two [places]."¹

² 'Villa campostris' in the Latin of Sloane MS 3847. The meaning may be 'rooms'.

And the 7 brethren [planets], Solomon said, are Sabaday or Saturn; Zedek or Jupiter; [6^v] Madym or Mars; Hamyna ² or the Sun; Nogah or Venus; Cocab or Mercury; and Labana, that is to say the Moon.³ Know also the [favourable] Houses of these planets. And Solomon put names to the 12 realms, which are called Signs, [and names to] the siblings [the planets], and he begins to make distinctions [between them].

And he [Solomon] gave to the fighter, that is to say to Mars, [the instruction] that he should rest, and that he should not fight in the realm of the Sign of Aries, and of this virtue he is in the realm of the East, he also gave him in the realm of the world the sign of Scorpio, that [there] he should fight strongly, and that he should never rest, and he is in the eighth realm from the first [i.e. Scorpio].

And afterward he gave to the fair Nogah, that is to say Venus, two realms [Signs], of which one has the half figure of Taurus, which is from the highness of his head with his horns till the navel. And [counting] as the seventh from the first, that is Libra, and after Venus is above in the North, and otherwise beneath that in the South. And so she has inherited [dominion] in two parts.

And then he gave to the painter (which is the writer) that is Mercury, two realms, of which one has two men embracing [Gemini], that is clinging together, and that other has a fair virgin winged [Virgo], and nevermore will he be divided or departed from [that] women, for those images be such, and he dislikes always to go far from the South into the North.⁴

And he gave to the Malix,⁵ that is to say the Moon, for she is always moving, [just] one realm. And for that she will not stand [still] much in her house, and

² Hamyna or Hamina is used in Honorius' Liber Juratus to indicate the Sun. Hamina is used in the Latin version of Sepher Raziel Sloane MS 3847.

³ These names are simply the Hebrew names of the days of the week.

⁴ The path of the planet Mercury remains close to the ecliptic.

⁵ Malix = Matrix? Astrologers thought of the Moon as the womb or 'matrix' of life.

her Sign is a fish that is called Cancer, which has many feet, which signifies that she will travel much, for she alone is under the other brethren.¹

And he gave to the middle brother, which is the Lord of all [7^r] others [the Sun], and who commands all, and is more adorned and far fairer arrayed, therefore he gave to him [only] one realm very strong in heat, and his Sign is as the Lion [Leo], that signifies him as Lord over all beasts, so is he stronger and more Lordship [aristocratic] than all his brethren.

And there remained two brethren [planets] in the part of the South which [each] take two realms, one above another that he should never overcome in the Sign of the southerly realm. He is a beast with one form in his front [and one in the back, Capricorn], and the sign of that other realm is a man that holds many waters [Aquarius], and his brother [planet] is called the old Saturn.

And then take that other brother [Jupiter]. For heritage, on his right side the realm with the Sign of half a man and half a horse called Sagittarius, and on the left side [the Sign] of Pisces.

[The Nature of the 12 Zodiacal Signs]

Know the nature of the Signs. Solomon said that Aries is a sign fiery, hot & dry, choleric, and so is Leo and Sagittarius and they have strength in the East. Taurus is earthy, cold and dry, melancholic & so are Virgo and Capricorn, and they have strength in the South. Gemini is airy, hot and moist & sanguine and so is Libra & Aquarius, and they have strength in the West. And Cancer is watery, feminine, moist and phlegmatic, and so is Scorpio and Pisces, and they have strength in the North.

Iam diximus de naturis et signis et eorum complexionibus

Now we have explained about natures and Signs, and their complexions, so we now mean to explain about their natures, and of the complexions of the siblings [the planets] and what they signify.

[The Nature of the 7 Planets]

The first and highest [planet] is called the old Sabaday or Saturn, the nature of which is cold and dry, for that is [7^v] very straight and melancholic, and it signifies the father, wrath, and discord in the lands.

The second is called Zedek [Jupiter] and he is temperate for he is between the old Saturn and the hot Mars, and Jupiter is hot and moist and sanguine, in savour sweet, and it draws to good air, and it signifies good, honour and virtue.

¹ Below all the other planets in the Earth-centric model of the universe.

The third is the fighter Mars, and he is hot and dry, evil, a lover, fierce, a ravisher and a liar.

The fourth [planet] is Hamina or the Sun, middle among the others, hot and mighty and [worthy of] reverence, and all the other brethren are ashamed and regard him with awe, for he is very true and strong.

The fifth is the fair Nogah [Venus], cold and moist, glad, phlegmatic, [appearing] fat and fleshy, and well seeming in all her limbs and countenance, and she signifies good events, and she is very happy among women.

The sixth is the writer and forespeaker ¹ Cocab [Mercury], that holds himself with all & serves all, and he signifies writers, news, and voices, after which he shall be with that which everyone holds close.

The seventh brother is Labana [the Moon] and it is Malix, and she is cold and moist, and she signifies brethren and [marks out] each [lunar] month, and [conveys] the commandments of brethren to brethren, after she is parted from them.

Deinde loquamur de septem fribus quare dicuntur clavis &c.

And then we speak of the 7 brethren, why they are called the keys of the world (and this world may not be neglected), and these were formed from the 4 brethren which are called the 4 Elements, and they afterward have signification, understanding and discretion, complete power, honesty and strength, and every [one] may do in his hemisphere that [which is his] empire, as an Emperor in his empire, or as a prince [may do] in his Lordship. Also they have rulership over the 7 parts, which we call the climates. And [8^r] from these rule all beasts here formed.

And Solomon said that the prophets call these brethren the 7 living spirits, and holy and wise men said that they were 7 lamps burning, or 7 candlesticks of light & of life,² and all the prophets call them the 7 heavenly bodies which are the 7 planets, and commonly they are called the 7 planets. And the 7 brethren are kept of 4 beasts, full of eyes before and behind, which are the [four] parts of heaven: East, West, North and South. And they have rulership in the 4 parts of the world, and in 4 times, and in 4 natures, with its complexions and with all its parts, and in all its 4 Elements. And with these together is led, and moved, all things moveable by the Commandments of God, that put them in their places.

² Suggestive of the Jewish menorah or 7 branched candlestick, which used to be a symbol of Judaism, in the same way the Star of David is now.

Dixit Solomon sicut fuerunt sempus status superius.

Solomon said, "as there were always states above, without corruption, so there is now and shall be for ever more." And from this we understand that the bodies above are pure, good, and made without corruption. And that the lower bodies are unclean, evil, treated and broken, and each day they fail and are bound and corrupted. And this corruption rests not, neither is it made true of that which we understand, so that the lower bodies must not neglect the upper bodies. And all things which we see beneath have their roots and beginning from the things above: for things above are with life and without dolor, and things beneath be the contrary, and have death and dolor.

And things above are without corruption, and things beneath each day fail, are corrupted and diminished. All prophets have seen that if we lacked any one of the upper bodies (there be more than ten thousand [stars], between those that we see and those that we see not), there would be a great precipitation, destruction and confusion in land, and in sea, and in the 4 Elements [below], if [8v] any of the bodies above were broken or were evilly treated. And if any one of the 7 brethren failed, then the earth should come again to its first state, where all the Elements were confused. And if any of them [the upper bodies] had corporally received corruption, all things that receive a soul or life would be destroyed.

And know that as the 4 Elements are turned downward, so they are not turned without some reason [or motion] of the 7 [planets] above. And thus say the philosophers, that when the Sun is destroyed, so each life and each soul is destroyed. And when the Moon is destroyed the ligatures or bindings of the sea are destroyed. And know that Saturn is earthy and holds all the earth in a balance that is not moved. And Jupiter holds air [in balance], and Mars [holds] fire, and the Sun [holds] the day, and men. And Venus holds the fair parts of the world, and Mercury [holds] reason, and the Moon holds the hearts, seas, waters and their powers. And know that everyone (after it were, or shall be, in this exaltation) is regulated and bound to the Sun, [in order that] its reasons, words and speeches should be good between men.

And when Mercury is in conjunction in Virgo (in the same degree) with the Sun, [moving] direct and not retrograde, this makes things subtle and reasonable. And as often as the Sun is in Aries, so many years [of life] unlike he gives us.¹ And as often as Saturn is in Libra so many mutations he gives us in lands. And as often as Jupiter is in conjunction with Saturn in an earthly Sign, so he gives us many mutations or changes. And he changes laws & seats and Lordships (of the planets) and thus, in other complexions of the planets (after their state) their relationships are called Aspects. [9^r]

*Et dixit Hermes istam rationem supra capita [animalium] &c.*¹

And Hermes said this reason: on the heads of beasts Saturn [corresponds with] the right ear, Venus the left [ear], the Sun the right eye, and the Moon the left [eye]. Mercury [has] the mouth. These 7 apertures have power over the head of man. And Solomon said that man is the measure, which is [exemplified in his] palm, [part of his] hand, in which is [reflected] all the virtues of the world and of the 7 planets, and that is only the head of a man, wherefore every man is likened to his star and to his Elements.

And Solomon said, "when I found a spirit [planet] retrograde ² or combust ³ or evilly treated, thus I say that his body will be evilly treated beneath [on Earth], in whichever [part] it was like, or [whichever part of his body] is signified [by the afflicted planet]. And he who is so wise that he knows [his natal chart], his Sign, and his planet, and his star above, and his signification, so he is [able to] do good and evil to himself & likewise to other men. And as the nativities of beasts be denied such workings, you shall do this with the help of God."

Postquam diximus de 12 Signis et Planetis &c.

And after that he said of the 12 figures and planets and their radiis [rays],⁴ we say that each planet that is in Ascendant, and if there is another [planet] in the same Ascendant, this is named a 'conjunction', and by how much the

The two do not agree on all the attributions, but it is not clear which manuscript is the oldest.

² Retrograde is normally applied to a planet, not a spirit. It is said of a planet that appears to move backwards when viewed from the Earth.

³ Literally 'catches fire', said of a planet which comes too close to the Sun in the sky, thereby losing much of its virtue. This is usually defined as within 3 degrees of the Sun, but this term is sometimes extended as far as 8.5 degrees from the Sun. The only exception is the planet Mars which gains in strength by its proximity to the Sun.

⁴ In the sense that radiis is used by al-Kindi to remark on the effect of the rays of the planets.

latitude (or breadth) shall be reduced, by so much the conjunction is said to be stronger, and if there be more latitude [between the two planets] so the conjunction is the feebler. And so I say to you in the middle of heaven. And if the degrees of the 12 Houses which are in the stronger places of all the Houses, [that is] the first degree of the House, and each star that were less and has over himself another the like, is said that it has power and goes over another [9^v] from star to star.

[De Aspectibus]

[The Aspects]

And thus each planet that diverges from another by 60 degrees, before or after [the other planet], is in aspectus sextilis [Sextile aspect] that is the 'sixth aspect.' And each planet that differs 90 degrees, before or behind, is called in aspectu quarto [Square aspect], that is in the 'fourth aspect.' And each planet that diverges or differs by 120 degrees, before or behind, is called in aspectu tertio [Trine aspect], that is in the 'third aspect.' And each planet that differs by 180 degrees is in Opposition, in that it is in the contrary [opposite] place. These are the 7 aspects and no more duo tertii, duo quarti & duo sextile and unus opposites, that is to say [there are] two in the third, two in the fourth, and two in the sixth and one contrary against another.

The conjunction is 'complete' when [the planets] are within one degree [of each other]. Double conjunction [occurs] if two [planets are] good or temperate, [and this] signifies double good, but if two [planets are] evil, to the contrary, it signifies much evil. The sextilis [aspect] to the Ascendant, avails one good, if in trino [Trine aspect] and [if] two trino avail in the aspect the Ascendant, one good, [it is] fortunate in the Ascendant. And two quartiles [Square aspects] in the aspect to the Ascendant, avails one grievously or heavily (if they are evil planets) and two opposite avails one unfortunate [aspect] in the Ascendant or in the opposite [Opposition aspect].

And two quarti [Square aspects] avails as much as a star [planet] falling or [one that is] combust or retrograde, and this is hindered in the Ascendant [by] one fortunate [aspect], or two in the Ascendant and another of Sextile and another of Trine aspecting the Ascendant, signifies much good, and speedy travelling. Two evil [planets] in the Ascendant, or one with another in Opposition, that is in the contrary, or falling, signifies [10^r] a grievous [heavy] or long impediment. And if the [planets] are [in their] fall and hindered, it shall be worse. One fortunate in the Ascendant aspect of two trinis [Trine aspects] signifies much good, and how much there were no witnesses over the figure of which you enquire and search, or for which you work so much, it shall be the better. And if three planets aspect the Ascendant with good aspects, and two with evil [aspects], the good shall overcome the evil, and so [it is true] of the other [configurations]. One unfortunate [planet] in the Ascendant aspecting two quartis [Square aspects] signifies much grief.

Caput Draconis is much better than Cauda [Draconis].¹ Each planet in its head [Caput] of the same degree has more Lordship [influence] in [reading] the [astrological] figure, for if it is [within] two [degrees] in latitude away from the [path] of the Sun, it profits [more] in going toward the part of the North. Each planet in the tail of the dragon [Cauda Draconis] is diminishing in its work if it goes towards the South. The Moon in Conjunction or joined with Saturn, and Mars in the Ascendant, constrains and threatens devils.² Saturn makes devils of strength & great power.

The Moon in Conjunction, or joined with Jupiter and Venus in the Ascendant, signifies great delectation and great love of every good thing. The Moon joined with Mars & Saturn in the Ascendant signifies impediment, except where the planets are receiving good [influences]. The Moon joined with the Sun in the same degree signifies great grace, and that they are good. The Moon joined in its Fall to Mercury in the Ascendant signifies the contrary. The Moon in the Ascendant by herself signifies [whatever is the nature of] the planet to which she is joined. The Moon with Caput Draconis in the Ascendant signifies good. The Moon with Cauda Draconis, or combust, or joined with [10°] a hindered [badly aspected] planet, or in an evil sitting, signifies much evil when Caput Draconis and the Moon are with Capite Saturn,³ or the Moon or Saturn were there, and their work of celson signifies the building of devils foul and evil.

Each planet that is with the Dracon [Caput or Cauda] of another [planet] & with both in Conjunction, or joined together, signifies a truth or true work, and more so [if its] in the Ascendant. And if Caput Draconis were with Jupiter or the Moon, and these two conjunct, or joined in the Ascendant, it signifies much good and an increase of good and honour. And if it were in Cauda [Draconis] not only when there were two Cauda Draconis (that is of the Moon and of another [planet]) and they will be very evil when the Moon is [conjunct] with them. When Caput Draconis and the Moon are with Caput Draconis and Mars and the Moon, and Mars is in the same degree, it signifies strength and might. And if Cauda with Cauda, and the Moon with Mars, together it is very grievous [heavy] and evil, after everyone is evil, so is the place or aspecting of one to another.

² Possibly a useful astrological configuration for the timing of evocations.

Caput Draconis and the Moon in Capite Aries (the Moon & the Sun in Zamin) signifies great might and great honour, and to the contrary, if it is in Libra beneath with Cauda Draconis. Caput Draconis with Capite Venus signifies much love, and Cauda Draconis [signifies] the contrary. Caput Draconis, that is to say Mercury with Caput Draconis and the Moon, signifies a work of reason, and of voice, and many sounds, and in Cauda the Moon with Mercury & Saturn, it signifies the observing of many experiences.

The Moon in Capite sui Draconis signifies [good], and if there were Jupiter or Venus [in conjunction], it shall do the work of Jupiter or of Venus, and it shall profit in all good work as these be good [aspects]. The Moon, if it is in Cauda Draconis, and Mars [11r] and Saturn with it, or that they are aspected to it with an evil aspecting, it signifies evil, as we have said of Saturn and Mars. And we have said that Saturn nourishes devils, and Mars draws and threshes and figures them.¹ And Saturn gathers together many devils. Venus and Saturn together gather devils and winds from beneath.²

A good planet in the Ascendant, and the Moon joined [in Conjunction] with a good planet, signifies much good. And the beginning in all in which were deus quartae, that is with the Lord of the fourth House; and if the fourth House is well aspected and good, every one of the things shall be good. And when the Lord of the fourth House is evil, and evil entreated, it signifies annoyance and evil. The Sign of the Ascendant signifies the body of the Lord of the Ascendant of the planet that is in the Ascendant; and that which aspects it signifies his spirit; and the Lord of the hour signifies his soul and his will; and this you must understand in [all] other domes [Houses]. The body, soul and the spirit, these three make up the body of a man, safe and whole.

[The Houses]

Dixit [Salomon et] Hermes, Saturnus exaltatur in Libra &c.

Hermes said, "Saturn is enhanced in Libra, and Jupiter in Cancer, and Mars in Capricorn, and the Sun in Aries. And Venus [is enhanced] in Pisces, and Mercury in Virgo, and the Moon in Taurus. And Saturn gladdens or is happy in the twelfth House, and Mars in the sixth, and the Sun in the ninth, and

² There is an interesting association of demons with evil winds from the Underworld, possibly derived from the word 'spiritus', which is the Latin for 'air' or 'breath'.

Venus in the fifth, and Mercury in the Ascendant (the first House), and the Moon in the third House."

The Ascendant has 12 virtues, and each planet that is in it rules each place of the circle [horoscope]. The tenth [11^v] House has 11 virtues. The 11th House has 10 virtues. The seventh [House] has nine [virtues], the fourth [House] has eight virtues, the fifth House has 7 virtues, the ninth House has 6 [virtues]. The third [House] has 5 [virtues]. The second [House] has 4 [virtues]. The eighth [House] has three [virtues], the 12th [House] has two [virtues], and the sixth House has one virtue.

And for always consider in all things, what you should do with the planets, how they are in the 12 Houses, and you shall profit if you choose [the best astrological configuration of planets in Houses]. And Solomon said, "to each man that works by this book, it is well that he know all these things, for reasons which here I will not expound to you, that is you [should] know in which time of the year you were born, [which] of the 4 times [seasons]¹ of the year. And [born] in which month of the Moon."²

And begin [counting the months] from the Luration of the month of Mercury (wherever the Moon prima is). And [about] all Secrets and private matters ask Saturn with all seriousness; and [about] honour and substance ask Jupiter. And for all [matters] of strife and battle and speed, ask Mars. And for all [matters] of purity & Lordship ask the Sun. And for all [matters] of fairness and delectation, or loves and fatness, ask Venus. And for all reasons, understandings & subtleties [ask] Mercury.

And of these 7 [planets] you shall always ask counsel from [the nature of the positions] where you find them in their Houses and Signs. And they shall show you, so consider them in all good and evil [configurations]. Now we have finished here, with the help of God, the Treatise that is called Liber Clavis, which is the 'Book of the Key.'

¹ Throughout the manuscript, 'times' has been changed to 'seasons', where that is its actual meaning.

² This is the lunar month of the year (as in the Jewish calendar) beginning circa March, rather than the standard Western solar calendar month, beginning in January.

[Liber Secundus - The Second Book]

[Ala, the Virtues of some Stones, Herbs, Beasts and Words]

Solomon said, "as the wings of the fowls or birds are the limbs that lead the birds to the place where they desire to be, so by the virtues of stones & of herbs and of beasts, that live in flying, in swimming, in going [upon the face of the earth], and in creeping, you might attain to that which you desire if you choose their [correct] nature."

The properties and virtues. And therefore we call this book Ala, that is 'Wings', for without wings neither birds nor fishes might move themselves, and so as wings bear bodies to highness upwards and to the foundations downwards, and to longitude and latitude, that is to length and breadth, so by the virtue of stones and of herbs, with grace, and with the great power of Semiforas [they will carry us].¹ Know that [through them] you might attain that which you covet, such as to heal and to make sick, or to stand, or to go.

Solomon said, "stones are purer, clearer and fairer than gold, and in the 7 virtues of this world which are in stones, herbs, words and beasts, so as I said in the beginning of this book Cephar Raziel, that it is crowned with 7 stones of great power, that he put in this book."

The first [stone] is Rubinus Carbunclo [red carbuncle], the second Smaragdus [emerald], the third Saphirus [sapphire], the fourth Berillus [beryl], the fifth Topasius [topaz], the sixth Faguncia [hyacinth], the seventh Adamas [diamond], and [about] the virtues of [all of] these stones Raziel has spoken. And he said that they are crowned by 7 angels, which have power over the 7 heavens, and over the 7 days of the week. And Raziel said, "each man that has this book, has in this book all the virtues of this world." And the first virtue of this book, called the Four Wings, is the [12^v] virtue of stones, wherefore know that by stones alone you may do wonderful things, if you know well (as you should do) all the other [magical] Images [to be engraved upon them], and you keep [store] them purely and reverently.

De Prima Ala – the First Wing

[Stones]

Et dixit Solomon scias quod in prima Ala sunt &c.

And Solomon said that in the first Ala, or 'Wing', there are 24 precious stones of great power, corresponding to and signifying the 24 hours of the day and night.

[1.] And Solomon began & said, "I chose for the first stone Carbunculu[m] Rubinus [red carbuncle] because it is brighter, and clearer, and fairer, and [held in] high esteem above all other stones. And I will describe its ¹ colour, its power, its virtue, and of its seal, and of its figure that might be [engraved] in it. And thus I shall explain for all other stones, each stone signifying durability, or [long] lastingness without end." The colour of Rubinus is as the colour of a sparkling fire, and its power is that it shines by night, as a star or as a flame of sparkling fire. And the virtue of it is that it makes good colour for men that bear [wear] it reverently, and it increases his goods of this world among other men, and the Image which you ought to put in it ought to be a draco, which is a Dragon well [engraved] with reverence.

2. The second stone is Topazins [Topazius/Thopasius – ancient topaz],² of which the colour is citrine, as of gold. Its power is that if it is put in a cauldron with fervent, hot, or boiling water, it holds the water so that it may not boil,³ which is [because of its] great power for making cold, and its [other] virtue is that it makes a man chaste that carries it with him, and it gives benevolence (or willingness) of great Lords, and its figure is a falcon. [13^r]

3. The third stone is Smaragdu[m] [Smaragdum – emerald] and this stone is green and fair above all greenness, and it is not heavy as the others are, and its power is to keep the light, and it heals the face, and it does many wonderful things. And its virtue is to increase riches, and whoever wears it [mounted] in gold prophesies things to come. And the sign [image] of it is a Scarabeus [beetle] that is a manner of filth.⁴

4. And the fourth stone is Faguncia [Hiacynthum – hyacinth], the colour of which is red, as the grains [pips?] of an apple. Of these [stones] there are [some] well coloured ones, and some of a lesser [colour], and some in the

¹ The text refers, in each case, to the stone as 'he' or 'his.' We have changed this to 'it' and 'its.'

² For clarification, the Latin term in each case is taken from the (sometimes faulty) Latin of Sloane MS 3847 without correction, and placed in square brackets.

³ The stone that causes water not to boil is hephaestites, which is what Albertus Magnus called topasion. This is not the modern topaz, nor the stone mentioned by Pliny.

⁴ The scarabeus, or dung beetle, was the insect associated with the ancient Egyptian god Kephra.

middle. Its power is that bearers of it will not be infected with an alien illness, its virtue is that it gives health and honour, and keeps the man that wears it whole in ways and in journeys, and its figure is a Lion well figured.

5. The fifth stone is a Crysopazine [Chrisopazium - chrysoprase], of which the colour is green, and it is as though it had golden drops [in it], and its power is to protect a man from the podagrie,¹ and its virtue is that it makes [its wearer] prophesy things to come (if it is [held] in a hand that is pure and chaste), and its figure is the Image of an ass.

6. The sixth stone is Saphirus [Saphyrus - sapphire], the colour of which [ranges between] very leady [grey] and fair (as the colour of a pure heaven). Its power is that it heals all infirmities that affect men [especially] the inflammation and illness of the eye. And it cleans them much. And if in this stone be engraved the head of a man with a beard, it will deliver a man from prison, and from all pressure and oppression, and this stone accords with the great power of Lords and of kings. If this stone be kept purely, reverently & chastely, & if it be a good [quality] oriental [sapphire], a man might [with it] attain to great honour and to the profit that he searches [for] and covets. And some men put therein the sign of a ram, Aries. [13^v]

7. The seventh stone is Berillus [Berillus/Beryllus - beryl], the colour of which is of a [blue] eye, or of sea water, and some of them are round, and some have five corners. The stone ought to be clear within, and pure. And its power is to warm the closed hand of him that bears it. And if it be set in gold it gives great friendship between two men, if you touch them with it. And its figure is Rana, that is a [genus of] frog, and it has great power to make concord and love.

8. The eighth stone is Onyx [Onix/Onyx], this stone is very black and its power is to give him that bears it many dreadful dreams and dread, and he that sees himself in it has power over all devils, in constraining them and in calling [them], and gathering them together in speculo tabilio,² conjuring as it requires, and its figure is the head of a camel, or two heads between two ears, that are called Mirti.

9. The ninth stone is called sardius [Sardus/Sardius - carnelian], the colour of which is red and fair, and its power is to make other stones fairer, its virtue is to give good colour to him that bears it. And if it is set in gold, and if there is engraved in it Aquila, the Eagle, it gives great honour.

10. The tenth stone is Crysolitus [Chrisolitium - chrysolite, 'Greek topaz'], that is of golden colour and sparkling as fire. Its power is to gather together devils and winds, and its virtue is to protect the place where it is [kept] from evil spirits, and from dead men, so they do not do there any evil, and [to ensure] that devils obey [the wearer]. And its figure is a vulture, which is a vowler.

² Used in evocation, so that the spirits evoked can be seen in a skrying speculum or crystal.

11. The 11th stone is called Eliotropia [Elitropia – heliotrope/marygold]. And it is a stone of great power, of which the colour is green, fair, shining and clear with drops like blood, red within. This stone is called the stone of wise men, of prophets [14^r] and of philosophers. And this is honored for two things: for the colour is like Smaragdo [emerald] in greenness, and in redness [like] to ruby. The high esteem of this stone's virtues and properties overcomes the esteem of other [stones]. The power of this stone is that if it be put in any broad vessel full of water, [open] to the Sun, it dissolves that water into vapor. And it makes [the vapour] to be raised upward, till in the form of rain it is converted [to cloud and falls] downwards. Its virtue [works] for him who bears it in his mouth, or in his closed hand, so that it may not be seen by any man. With this stone a man may have power over all devils; and make any incantation or enchantment that he wishes. And in this stone ought to be engraved a Vespertino, thus he says. But I believe [the image should instead] be a Vespertilio, that is a bat or a dormouse.¹

12. The 12th stone is Crystal [Christallus - crystal], of which the colour is of water congealed with cold [i.e. ice]. Its power is that it withdraws fire from [the body]. And its virtue is that it increases or nourishes [man with] much good milk. And you may create in it whatever virtue you wish, [according to] the [planetary] hour in which you work. And afterwards the [effects will correspond to] the Image that you have made (although they are many) and that are seen easily.² Know that it has many virtues, and its figure is a griffin, which is [both] a fowl and a beast, with 4 feet and 2 wings, and it is a great beast.

13. The 13th stone is Cornelia [Cornelina - carnelian], and it is likened to water in which blood [is mixed], as a lotion,³ or washing of blood. And its power is to staunch the blood of the nostrils. And if there is engraved in it a man well clothed, holding a staff or a rod in his hand, it will give honour to him that bears it.

14. The 14th stone is Jaspis [Jaspis - jasper], is thick, dark, green and red. And there are some green and clear [varieties], and they are better than the others, and there are some [varieties which are] red, thick and dropped [marked with spots]. And its power is that whoever bears it is not [14^v] hurt by venom, neither from a serpent, nor a spider,¹ nor a scorpion. And it protects a man from fever, if it is engraved [with the Sign of] Leo, Aries or Sagittarius.

³ The old meaning of 'lotion' was the water in which something has been washed, rather than a cream.

15. The 15th stone is Iris [Yris/Iris], and its [appearance] is likened to crystal or to jelly, and it has corners; and if any man put it in a house [open] to the beams of the Sun, so the beams pass through it, and by it the colours appear of the rainbow. And for this reason it is called Iris, which is the [goddess of the] rainbow. And this is its strength, for it has 6 corners, and the virtue of it is to keep the place where it is [kept], with health & honesty, and there ought to be engraved in it a man armed, that bears a bow and an arrow.

16. The 16th stone is Coral [Corallus], and it grows on rocks of the sea, as arbor inverse, that is as a tree overturned, and it has branches as a tree does, [some] more than two or three palms [in width] and no more. And when it is drawn up [from the sea] it is green and tender, and after it is dried in the air, it is made red & hard as another [stone]. And otherwise it is found white. And know that the red is the better [variety]. And where this stone is, it preserves the house and the vineyard, or the place, from tempest, pestilence and torment. And it keeps the place healthy, and it protects a man from evil doers and evil deeds, and from evil enchantments. And its Image is a man holding a sword in his hand.

17. The 17th stone is Presius or Prassius [Prasius], and it is a green colour, thick and fair, and it helps [against] evil deeds, and gives them grace to their ministry. And Taurus [15^r] ought to be engraved in it, that is [the image of] a Bull.

18. The 18th stone is called Catel [Catel],² and it is of great power both in deeds and in virtues, the colour of which is like Beryl, but it is darker than that, although it has within it very clear and pure beams and streaks. And some [varieties] are found with 6 corners and others with 5. And its power is to call in devils, and to speak with them. And its virtue is that, if you make in you blank of water [?], and bring the root of apii,³ and the stone is hung on the neck with the skin of an ass, censed with mastic, thure [frankincense] and crocus, and you call [invoke] whatever dead man you wish ([one] that is known to you), he shall soon appear to you. And he shall be with you at the same time [immediately]. And engrave in it [the image of] a Lapwing and

² 'Catel' is Middle English for chattel, property or wealth.

³ Apium or parsley/celeriac.

19. The 19th stone is Celonites [Colonites]. And it is green as a herb, and its power is that it waxes & decreases as the Moon does, and its power is also to make peace and concord between two, if in it is engraved the sign of a swallow.

20. The 20th stone is Calcedonius [Calcidonium - chalcedony], and it is white [in colour] between crystal and beryl, or as *gifu*s thick and bright, its power is to overcome pleas.² Its virtue is to preserve a man whole [healthy] in an alien land, and its Image is a man that holds his right hand straight out to heaven.

21. The 21st stone is Ceramius [Ceramius]. This stone is of many colours after many elements and many lands, otherwise it is white, or brown, green & red. And elsewhere it is likened to iron, and somewhere to copper and sulphur, and it has, as it were, discs [15^v] painted and little drops, and its power is to protect a place from thunder and lightning, and its virtue is to protect [the wearer] from all enemies. And write in it, or one part or side, 'Raphael Michael & Gabriel', and on the other side 'Panuteseron, Micrason, Saidalson', and if you bear it with you, and have it in your power, you shall overcome all your enemies and adversaries.

22. The 22nd stone is Metestus [Amestitum - amethyst], and it has the colour of wine, a white cloth, or of a rose or violet, and this has strength to chase away fiends, and its virtue is to protect [you] from drunkenness; and its figure is Ursus, that is a bear.

23. The 23rd stone is Magentis or magnes [Magnes - magnetite], and it is of great weight and like to ferro brumeto [magnetic iron?]. Its power is that it draws [out] dead iron, [such] as nails, knives and swords, and its virtue is that, with it, you may be in whatever house you wish, and do whatever you wish with men, and with the things of the house, censing the house with it, and with these men make enchantments. Engrave on it a man armed, when the Moon is in Aries, or Scorpio is conjunct with Mars, and the Sun aspected to them with a trine aspect. Whatever manner of Images you engrave on this stone, such enchantments you may achieve, carry it with you, and you shall profit.

24. The 24th stone is Adamas [Adamas - diamond], as it is of middling colour, and the better [varieties] have somewhat of greenness. And its power is that, with it, other stones can be engraved. And therefore we have put it out [explained it] more strangely & more openly, and its power or virtue is to keep the limbs of a man safe and whole. And this stone is more [beneficial], and is [16^r] more highly esteemed for enchantments & invocations of winds, spirits and devils. And with this you may send whatever fantasy you wish [to another person], and its figure has 5 corners, and each man who bears it within a precious stone, [must] be pure when he does anything with it. And avoid or keep yourself from uncleanness, and keep them [the stones] reverently in a quiche, or in a pure place. And Raziel said, "in the hour in which you [invoke] Semiforas carry the two stones abovesaid, and you shall profit."

[De Secundus Ala – the Second Wing]

[De Herbis - Herbs]

Dixit Solomon sicut avis corpus volare non potest &c.

Solomon said, "as the body of a fowl will not fly without wings, nor go where it comes, so [without] the science of the one thing [outlined] above we might not fulfill that which we desire. And for this [to work] we supply the second key in this book, and we say the second book makes the second opening, for the world is closed [sealed] with 4 Elements, so this book is closed with 4 sciences and 4 virtues."

As we have explained stones, now we will explain herbs. Know that in herbs are the most virtues. And some of the natural [things] of this world are those that live and have reason, and some that fly, and some which swim, and [some] which go [upon the earth], and [some] which creep.

And know that of trees and herbs some live much [flourish], and some live mildly, and some live little, and that is the same as for the beasts. And know also that among herbs there are some with which you may do good or evil, so as to heal & to make sick, and so understand what shall be said furthermore hereafter. And Adam said, "that by a tree came wretchedness into the world, that is, by the tree [16^v] I sinned."¹ And Raziel said, "a herb shall be your Life." And Solomon said, "[there is] a tree that shall wax (or grow) of which the leaves shall not fall, and it shall be a medicine for [all] men." The second 'Wing' [section] is about the correspondences of the 24 hours and the 24 herbs.

1. Prima herba est Acil almalie &c. The first herb is Acil or Almabum and it is called Corona Regia, and in Latin Rosmarinus [Rosmarina - rosemary]. This herb has a middle [sized] trunk and good odour and little leaves, and its power is to warm and comfort the brain. And if a house is censed with it, it chases away devils, the same as does Peony.

2. The second herb is Artemisia [Arthemisia], and this is mother and first [among all] other [herbs], but for it is called Corona Regis, that is to say the crown of a king.² We [would] have put it first [in this list], because in all things you do, you should use it. And the leaf is mid-green over one side, and white on the other side. And it grows mildly [slowly]. And with this you shall stop winds, and [invoke] all the spirits that you wish, and you shall profit.

3. The third herb is Cannabis [Cannabis - hemp] and it is long in the stem, and clothes are made of it. The virtue of the juice, is to anoint yourself with it (and with the juice of Artemisia) and set yourself before a mirror of steel and call spirits, and you shall see them, and you shall have the ability to bind and loose [set free] devils, and other things.¹

4. The fourth herb is called Feniculus [Feniculus - fennel], and it has small leaves and a long staff, and it is a holy herb and reverential, and it is medicine for the eyes, and it [17^r] gives good light, and it chases away spirits and the evil eye from the place where it is, and the root of it chases away evil things and helps in sight.

5. The fifth herb is Cardamommus [Cardomonium - cardamom], and it is hot and of good complexion, and it is of middle highness, and it gives happiness to him that uses it, and it gathers together spirits. Eat this when you call [spirits] or make an invocation, and if you wish, make smoke of it.²

6. The sixth herb is Anisus [Anisum - aniseed], and it has [the quality] of chastity. Join it to camphor, and you shall see that spirits shall dread you, and it is a pure herb, and it makes one to see secret and private things, and the smoke of it ascends much.

7. The seventh herb is Coriandrus [Coriandrum - coriander], and this holds the spirit of a man much with the other, and it makes a man also full asleep, and this gathers together many spirits, wherefore always they stand with it. So it is said that, if with this, apis [honey?] and jusquianus,³ you make fumigations, compounded with much lazaia cicuta,⁴ soon it will gather together spirits, and therefore it is called the 'herba spirituum' [herb of spirits].

8. The eighth herb is called Petroselinum [Perroselinum - parsley] which has a great power to chase away the spirits of roches [roaches?], and its virtue is to break [up] the stone in the bladder of any that use it.⁵

9. The ninth herb is Ipericon or Hipericon [Hipericon - hypericon], and it is a middle [height] herb, [which when] pierced the juice of it seems [like] blood. This [herb] is of great power, for with the juice of it (and with crocus, artemisia, and with the smoke of radicis valerianae [root of valerian]), it [can be used] to write upon [a talisman] what friendship you wish of a Prince of the spirits of air, and [other] devils, and soon it shall be that [you will get that which] you covet. And so [likewise] over [other] spirits and winds.

² Burn it on hot coals.

10. The tenth herb is Apium [Apium – celeriac, parsley]. This has great power over [17v] winds and devils and fantasies [phantoms], and it is [both] the shadow and the exhalation of the cloud Alcisse.¹ For in it are winds and devils, and this alone [calls the spirits] Albafortum, Vazebelil and Mortagon, and they [these spirits] are very contrary, for one is kept [lives] with the heavenly angels, and another is kept [lives] with the devils in Apium.

And this [herb] cures the kidney-stone, but a woman [pregnant] with child [should not] use it as it annoys [irritates] the child, and it gathers together devils when suffumigations are made [of it, together] with insqrmo [jusquianus]² and artemisia. Apium is censed for 7 nights with fagax almeit gathered purely, and the root of it kept and dried, and then tempered with aqua lapides [water stones?]: cense [your surroundings] when you wish, and you shall see fantasies and devils of many types.

11. The 11th is Coriandrus [Coriandrum – coriander] of the second kind, which makes one sleep. And if you make suffumigations of it, with crocus and insqrmo [jusquianus],² apia and papavere nigro [black poppy], ground together evenly, and tempered with succo, *cicutae*³ and with musk, and then cense the place where you hide treasure, when the Moon is in conjunction with the Sun in angulo terra [earth angle], that is to say in the corners of the earth, [it will protect the place]. And know that such a [hidden] treasure shall never be found [by other people]. And anyone who would take it away shall be made fools [of]. And if in the hour of depositing the gold or silver, or the [precious] stones, or images, you suffume [them] with thure [frankincense], musk,⁴ succo [succory], lignum aloes, and costus,⁵ then always devils [shall] keep that place [safe from robbers] and evil winds. It [the protection] will never be dissolved or destroyed again, without separation, or [without using] an image made [for that purpose] at the [precise] degree of the planets.⁶

² Hyoscamus niger or black henbane.

³ 'Cicuta' is water hemlock or cowbane. Succo is succory. This is a very psychotropic mixture.

For more detail about these techniques see David Rankine [ed.] The Book of Treasure Spirits: a grimoire of magical conjurations to reveal treasure... by invoking spirits, fallen angels, demons and fairies, Avalonia, Hay, 2009.

12. The 12th herb is Satureia [savory], and this is of great virtue and good odour, and whoever bears it with him, [18^r] with auricula muris [mouse-ear hawkweed], in the day of Venus [Friday], will get grace of goods, and it takes away from that place [all evil] winds and evil fantasies.

13. The 13th herb is called sca [Centaurea – century herb].¹ And this is middle in length and has little leaves. This ought to be held reverently in holy places and in churches, for it protects these places from evil things. And with this [herb] prophets made dead men speak, that had been dead by many days or few.

In places where there is any evil, it has no power if he that bears [this herb] calls them not. And it gives him rule over whatever things they wish, and [if you] put this herb upon the place where devils are confined, it constrains them and binds them, least that they might have power to move themselves.

And Solomon said, “I found in the Book of Hermitis ² that whoever takes water in the fourth hour of the night [and puts it] upon the tomb of a dead man, with whatever spirits he wishes to speak, he should cast the water upon the tomb with this herb hyssop.” And the water is censed with costo, succo, musco [costus, succum, musk], and [he should] say “surgo, surgo, surgo.” That is to say “rise, rise, rise and come and speak to me”, and do this for three nights, and in the third night he [the spirit] shall come to you, and he shall speak with you of whatever things you wish [to know].

14. The 14th herb is psyllium [Serpillum – fleabane/wild thyme], which is of great virtue for it signifies or makes open in the air what the other powers do not. It makes [you able to] see spirits in the clouds of the heavens, [especially if put] with scicorda,³ garmone and the ‘tree which swims’ (which is called arbor cancri and malie), with rore madii, and with the tree that signifies [shines] by night, and is called herba lucens, that is a shining herb. [18^v] If you make with these an ointment with the eye of a whelp and with the fat of a hart [deer], you may go surely wherever you wish [and be able to see] at any hour.

15. The 15th herb Majorana [Majorana – marjoram], keeps a house and protects [it] from evil infirmities, and Hermes said that gentiana [gentian], valerina [valerian] and maiorana [marjoram] have power over great princes, and over great men.

³ In Sloane MS 3846 scicorda is ‘cicorea’ or chicory. The rest of the ingredients in this sentence are more difficult to identify.

16. The 16th herb is Dragantia [Dragantia].¹ This is of great power, and the highness of the root of it, [especially if] joined with the tongue of a colubri [snake] which is left alive. And [if] the herbs are gathered when the Sun is in the first degree of Cancer, and the Moon aspects Mercury, or is in Conjunction with him [Mercury], then whosoever touches [it to] closures or locks, they shall soon be opened for him.

And Hermes said that it gathers together winds & spirits, [especially] if mandragora [mandrake] is [mixed] with it and capillus [hair of] dezoara.

17. The 17th herb is Nepita [Nepta], and if this [is put] with maiorana [marjoram] and athanasia, trifolio, salvia [sage], peruca, edera and artemisia with ysope [hyssop],² being joined & gathered together, [during] the crescent Moon, on the day of Jupiter [Thursday], that is to say in the waning of the Moon, in the day of Jupiter, and in the following day, when the Sun waxes from the first degree of Aries till the first [degree] of Cancer, [then it is most effective]. And when you shall gather it, be pure and washed, reverential, and stand [facing] towards the East, know that the house and place is improved where these nine herbs are twined together. And put them upon the gate of your house, and you shall profit always. And the nine herbs joined are like to rubies. [19^r]

18. The 18th herb is Linum [Lumen], suffumigations of the seed of this with semine psyilly, azartachona, radix violae and apii [parsley/celeriac] makes [you] see in the air things to come, and [able] to make many prophesies.

19. The 19th herb is Salvia [Salvia – sage].³ This is of great virtue and the long leaf of it is as ligna agni and sharp. This breaks or protects evil shades & evil spirits from the place where it is [kept], and it is good for a man to bear it with him, for it keeps a man whole, but a sick man [should] not hold it.

20. The 20th herb is Sauina [Samna], and some men say that it is a tree of love and affection, whoever can choose it. And if this [is mixed] with somewhat of crocus and lingua colubri [snake tongue], and set in a ring of gold, with somewhat of provinca [periwinkle] [you may] surely go before a king, or before whomsoever you wish [and convince them]. And [it is] most [potent] if you put with it the stone that is called Topazius [topaz], or if you wish beryllium [beryl]. And if this ring is made when the Moon is in Conjunction with Jupiter in a trine [aspect] to the Sun, it would be much better. And [this herb] is called annulus solis, which is the 'ring of the Sun', and it is [good] for health against infirmities, and it is [good] for grace, virtue, and for honour.

21. The 21st [herb is] Nasturtium [Nasturtium – nasturtium]. This keeps the limbs whole, and if there are with it origan,¹ pulegium,² and arzolla,³ which are carried together by you, and you eat them, you shall be whole within and without. And so if you anoint yourself with them and are censed with marrubio albo [white horehound] or reubarbaro [rhubarb] and herba thuris [boswellia], it shall protect you from many infirmities.

22. The 22nd is an herb that is called Cannaferula [Cana ferula].⁴ [19^v] This is a very dreadful, grievous [heavy] and strong [herb] in work. And if you take the juice of it, and the juice of cicuta [water hemlock], jusquianus [hyoscamus niger or henbane], sapss barbata [?], sandalum rubrum [red sandalwood], papavero nigrum [black poppy], and with this confection make smoke, [you may obtain] whatever you wish, and you shall see devils and things, and strange figures. And if Apinum is [mixed] with this, know that from each place so censed devils should flee, and if you wish you may destroy evil spirits [with it]. This suffumigation is very evil and dreadful, for the smoke of it overcomes maliciously, and [it] works most evilly and most strongly if the Moon is [in Conjunction] with Saturn, or in Opposition with Mars.

23. The 23rd herb is Calamintum [Calonietum – calamint/pennyroyal],² and it is likened to mint, and it is of great virtue in good suffumigations, and if there is [mixed] with it menta [mint], palma ppi [?] and pioma [?], observe that it takes away evil spirits from a place. And always it is [useful] against fantasies [phantoms].

24. The 24th herb is Cicoria [Cichorea – chicory]. This is very good in all exorcisms ⁵ [especially] if it is joined with eringo [eryngium], pentaphylon [Cinquefoil/snake grass], hypericon, urtica [stinging nettle] and verbena, and all together worn around the neck, and under the feet, and [they] are then [called] the herb of 7 knots and of 7 leaves.

Martagon and lilium domesticus [domestic lily] and sylvestre (both tame and wild), and the herb angelica: whoever has these under his feet or sits above [them] and puts the other herbs on his neck, and has 7 rings of 7 metals on his fingers, knows that he shall have power in [20^r] binding and in losing [spirits], and in enchanting, and to do good and evil in each place that he wishes, [by] making suffumigations of these 9 things: thure albo [white frankincense], thymiamata, mastiche [mastic], musco [musk], lignum aloes [aloes wood], cassia, cinnamon, and with them suffume with the things abovesaid in the surrounding area, and say these names: "Raphael, Gabriel, Michael, Cherubim, Seraphim, Arelim, Pantaseron, Micraton, Sandaton, complete meaum petitionem et meam voluntatem." That is to say, "fulfill my petition and my wish," and they shall fulfill it for you. These are the names of the nine angels abovesaid. And know them and keep them, and some men say that they are the 9 orders of Angels.¹

Here ends the 24 reasons concerning the virtues of herbs of the second 'Wing', and these experiments were newly written in [Sepher] Raziel, although Solomon put in two of these, [and] three of [them were] the sayings of Hermes.

And the herbs are put in the Book of Raziel so that with them we may be absolved, and work with herbs, as with Semiforas, with fasting and with words for good and for evil [purposes]. And let no man join himself to Semiforas till he knows himself first, and second. And thus we shall explain all things that shall be necessary, with the help of God.

¹ In fact Raphael, Gabriel, and Michael are archangels, but Cherubim, Seraphim, and Arelim are orders of angels. Pantaseron has been found as far afield as a Norwegian runic Christian lead tablet from the thirteenth or fourteenth century, but is probably from a Greek Christian source. Micraton is an angel of Saturn. 'Sandaton' is likely to be Sandalphon. See also "Panthaseron, Mucraton, and Sandalon" at folio 27r.

De Tertia Ala – [the Third Wing]

[Beasts, Birds and Fish]

Dixit Solomon super alam tertiam sicut corpus solis &c.

Solomon said about the third 'Wing' [section]: "as the body of the Sun is more visible and rules all other [heavenly] bodies, and is brighter, fairer and purer, so the virtues of sensible beasts which fly and send out [20^v] voices [are above other beasts]." And so beasts of the third 'Wing' have power over the [other] two 'Wings' on stones and herbs. And he [Solomon] therefore put in the [Sepher] Raziel, 24 beasts with [details of] their names, virtues and states. And the figures are 24 distinct or departed [divided] in two. And I put over each Element 6 beasts, everyone distinct from the other, and everyone of its [own] kind. And as fire is the high Lord, and distinct from the [other] 4 Elements, so the least of them all is purest among them.

[Spirit 'Beasts' of the Elements]

[1.] Therefore I begin to speak [first] of the beasts [i.e. spirits] of fire, for as every one of the 4 Elements has its beast beneath [on Earth], so fire has its [beast] above, pure and without corruption. And the fire that is above, is without corruption. And this fire is not expounded [made] of wax, trees, nor of oil, nor of [any] other composition, but it is simple. And the things that live in it are the angels, pure, clear and bright, like to the beams of the Sun or of a star, and like to the flame of fire, or a spark of fire, or the colour of quicksilver, or of pure gold. And this likeness is natural in the beasts of fire. And their figures seem like the lightening in likeness and in deed, for as an *Evrizon*¹ is a messenger of the Creator, so they are ready to do [both] good and evil, and they seem like things & prophets that [rule] over the 4 Elements, are heavens with their beasts, of which we shall say furthermore.

[2.] The second spirit is pure, but darker than the other, and it is likened to the wind, & its figure takes after some of the 4 [21^r] Elements to which it is joined. And it forms itself in this manner either by water, by cloud, by moistness, by thickness, or by some darkness, or it receives some body from smoke of some kind, by falling on it either by voire [?] or by the shape of an 'elemented' beast, and from these it takes form, after the nature above stated.

3. The third beast of which wise men tell is [one] that always associates with a spirit, and mostly the corpulent and thick [part] of that spirit. And therefore its figure is found by night in places of dread, and it is heard and seen, and that often time, and the colour of it is like to a spirit [?], after the nature of the hour before [when] it was made, otherwise [it is] in the likeness [shape] of the body from which it went out of, therefore some men see the souls of bodies in churchyards. And of these souls, said the wise Hermes, and the prophet, the soul that goes out and has power is not, nor was, but a man or a woman. And over such manner of souls speak wise men, and [they] call them 'spiritual' for [their] goodness, [and] 'heavenly' from [their] simpleness.

4. The fourth beast is the wind: each day we hear but we see not, although we and others hear it not. And the work of the wind is seen by the eye, after the direction from which it comes. And it has such nature that if it is oriental [East] or meridional [South] it is hot. And if he is occidental [West] or septentrional [North] it is cold. This [wind] we see has great power, for it bears clouds and waters, and tempests and gales, and it stirs and troubles the seas and breaks trees, and so this is called 'living air', as the fire above is called living fire, and simple. And therefore the Elements above are of double or twofold [nature], that is to say fixed and [21^v] moveable: moveable it is because it dwells in the corners of the earth, although it descends from above, for the 7 [planets] above bind and lose it, for from them it descends, and from them it was formed, & this is a great figure in the sea, in air, and in land, and it comes temperately.

5. The fifth beast, or vision, is a fantasy [phantom], which is a shade like many colours or manners, it comes compounded of many [colours] together. And this form is made in desert places, or in corrupt air, or otherwise it descends from the hills, in the likeness of knights, and they are called exercitus antiquus, which is an 'old army.' And otherwise [they come] in the likeness of fair women and well clothed, or in medes [?], and some say that they are [just] faces. And otherwise it befalls a man by corruption, or malice of complexion, of the humors that are in a man. And they [these beasts] are called Demoniaci for they ascend to the head and fall upon the eye, and by such corruption [of our senses] make [us] to see many fantasies [phantoms].

6. The sixth beast is called a Demon, and it descends from highness to lowness, and it was formed of pure matter without corruption wherefore it fails [dies] not, but shall always endure, although it has taken thickness in the darkness of the lowness of the earth. And it is pure in matter and strong in body. And of this [beast] says the wise man, it knows all things that are, and by him Philosophers have [been given] answers, and wise men [also have answers to] all things [about] which they wish to know the truth, and it dwells always in darkness and in obscurity, and it is never separated from them. [22^r] And of this says the prophet, that it has the power of taking [any] form and shape, of which it wishes in the earth, after the will of the Creator.

And he tells of a bright angel, mighty and fair as the form of the Sun, and of the Moon, and of the stars [planets], or of an angel, a cloud, a fowl, a fish, a man, a beast, a reptile (that is a creeping beast), or [he may take] any other form which he wishes. And all these abovesaid [beasts] are impalpable and unhappy to be touched. That is that they neither may be taken with hand nor touched with the foot, for they are spirits or winds. And know that everyone of the abovesaid, when it falls into the Elements, it takes a body from them, although their life is of fire. And their dwelling is in fire, and their deeds fury, for they are fury.

And Raziel explained about these 6 [beasts], their invocation, opening, constraining, binding and losing [them] to do good and evil with them. All is made with pureness, and therefore whoever would call them, or have their service, [must] with orison and fasting, and censing, and with the praising of God, must do as hereafter you shall hear furthermore.

[Birds]

Animalia aeris tertiae alae vocantur aves &c.

Beasts of the air of the third 'Wing' are called birds for they fly, and they have four movements: one is called running, another flying, and swimming, and going [upon the earth], and creeping. Now we will tell of flying [animals] and begin with the first [bird].

1. Aquila that is an Eagle [Aquila], for that is a fowl flying high, and he has rulership over all other birds, and it is true in its deeds, and in rulership and in honour among all other birds. The [22v] Eagle has such a nature that he takes his sons, birds, when they are little and ascends into a place when the Sun is high, and then he arranges their faces to the Sun. And if they observe strongly the Sun, he deems them to be his children and good, and if they do not observe the Sun, he deems them not his children but thinks them evil, and lets them fall and die. And one of his feathers interlaces another feather; and he can see far: at one league (or rule) [he can see even] a little beast, but a great beast truly he can see at 9 leagues, or at a day's journey [distant]. His eye with his heart has great virtue, and [gives] grace [fit] for a king, or a lord, as that [his heart] gives to him grace in his [own] realm.

2. The second fowl is a Vulture [Vultur], which is a vouter, this has great virtue in all his limbs, his head helps against all dreams and against magic craft, and his feet help against evil deeds. And if a house is censed with 9 of his feathers it drives out from it evil spirits. His gall helps the eye better than anything in the world. His eye put in the skin of a serpent, and his tongue wrapped in a cloth of red silk with them, helps in clauses, which you wish to overcome, [so as] to win the love of another Lord.¹ His wings put upon a bed protect a sleeping man from all evil winds, grievances, and evil spirits, nor may they enter into the house, nor may any other fantasies have power [there].

3. The third fowl is falco, which is a Falcon, of whom the virtue is that of great lords, he is given much high esteem. [23^r] They [the virtues] are of the highness of his right wing [which] overcomes [legal] pleas, both ravishing and in taking away alien things, and the highness of his left wing [which] takes away evil fevers. But we ought not to slay game birds, nor hounds, as they have many virtues in themselves. And know how many limbs are in every beast, fowl, fish or reptile, as so many distinct virtues has every limb.

4. The fourth fowl is a Turtur [turtledove] simple and good. Nevertheless if you take the male and the female together and burn them in a new pot with crocus, vervinca [vervain?], cichoria [chicory] gathered together or joined together: if you cast the powder of these upon them [the lovers?] soon they shall be joined together, and it attracts great love to them that bear the powder with them.

5. The fifth fowl is called Upupa, that is a Lapwing, having a crest of feathers on its head like a cock, and it has many virtues. This [bird] has one bone in its wings, and [the bone] gathers together devils and spirits of air. The property of it is that whoever takes its heart and wraps it in honey, and as soon as he swallows it and drinks the milk of a white cow, of a red, or of a black [cow], it makes a man to [prophecy] things to come. And it has another virtue, [for anyone] who cuts its neck when the cock crows [at sunrise], neither may be heard, not the voice of a hound, nor where wheat is sown. And when he cuts its neck he [can] call in devils, and then he [should] carry with him half the blood, and of that other half anoint himself, and [so] always shall go with [23^v] him one of the devils that he called, and it shall tell to him many things.

6. The sixth [bird] is called Ciconia [stork], that is a haysoucke [a hedge-sparrow]² that flees on the day of the Moon [Monday] and takes the blood of the hart [deer] and anoints himself with it. And [you should] eat the flesh with somine faeminli and with cardamoms and garyophillo [cloves], and when [you] eat it [you should] suffume yourself with good odours, and with thure [frankincense], mastic, cinnamon, and other such. [If you do this then you] shall have the grace of enchanting whatever [you] wish, and of conjuring and constraining the spirits of air, and other spirits that go over rivers and wells.

² It is hard to see how this bird can be both a stork and a hedge-sparrow.

These 6 birds abovesaid are exemplary over all others. And when you wish to know the virtue of any fowl, [find them] after the precepts of this book Raziel from the Book of Visions of Angels, from the beginning of times, in the 12 months, as hereafter you shall see furthermore.

[Fish]

Dicamus de piscibus maris et alys &c.

The explanation of fish of the sea and others, more than 6 of them, [some] that are more [potent], and [some that are in] the middle, so I will show you their virtues.

1. The first fish is Balena [whale] the fat of which [if it is] made [into] a liquid and kept for the space of 7 years & more (for how much it is aged, so [by this] much it is better) heals a man from gout, and [from an] evil mind, if he anoint himself with it. And if he anoints his head with its blood, it helps him greatly and makes him strong and more whole, and it makes [24^r] him to see true visions. Its sperm is called ambra [ambergris]. If they cense tombs with this, it gathers together [the spirits]. The spirits above [are moved] downwards, and for each petition & asking, it makes them give an answer.

And Hermes said, "there is no [better] suffumigation to call in spirits than ambra [ambergris], lignum aloes [aloes wood], costus, muscus [musk], crocus, and the blood of a lapwing with thymiamata, for these are meat, drink and happiness for the spirits of air, and these things gather them together strongly and rapidly." And wise men say that the sperm, blood and heart of a Balene [whale] are excellent for commanding the winds & spirits.

2. The second fish is called a Dolphin. And he is the king of the sea, for as the eagle has might among birds, and the Lion among beasts, so in this manner has the dolphin in the sea. And whoever anoints with their blood, the clothes of two friends, [so] it makes them enemies, or [if he] casts the dry blood upon them. And whoever bears its heart [with him] makes himself hardy.

3. The third fish is Cancer [the crab] which has 6 feet. Take and burn [cook] him in a panno livido [bruising pan?], and with the powder rub [polish] your teeth softly so that it heals them, and makes them fair [whitens them], and cures the canker in the mouth. And if you cast it upon the fire with somewhat of stercoris humani combusti [human dung], it gathers together spirits.

4. The fourth [fish] is a bright horn [cornu lucidi] between paleness and whiteness [in colour], that is to say piscis candis or sepia. This fish has many properties and well knows enchantments; and prophets made with this [fish] their enchantments and transfigurations. So that when they wanted that a house should seem to be full of water, or that a river should [seem to] enter by the gate, they took [24^v] this fish, and with thymiamata and lignum aloes, and roses, they censed the house, and [then] they cast therein sea water, and then it seemed that the house was filled with water. And if they cast blood therein [instead of sea water] then it seemed all [filled with] blood; and so if they cast snow therein it seemed [full] of snow. And when they wished that the earth should seem to quake, then they cast therein the earth from a plough, and so they made there many likenesses of all things, according to the thing which they put in the incense. And know that [this effect] dwells as much and as long as the suffumigations last in the house. And with the gall of this fish they also made many enchantments, for this beast is unlike any other.

5. The fifth fish is a Murena [eel] and he is lentiguus [spotted]. The virtue of it is that enchanter's bear the powder of the fish with them to make enchantments.

6. The sixth fish is Rana viridis [green frog]. And if you take it or touch it upon whatever woman you wish, and name the names of the Angels of the month in which you were born, which are furthermore [listed] within Libro Visionnis,¹ you may do both good and evil with any woman you wish. And know that of these fish, and of all others, you must know the virtues of the months, and understand similarly in all other things.

[Beasts]

Primum Animal est leo ista bestia est valde fortis

[1.] The first beast is a Lion. This beast is very strong in the breast and in the cheeks [buttocks]. And he is of strong countenance, [25^r] and looking so that when other beasts see him they are all moved with dread, and his skin is of great virtue, [such] that if they be put with other skins, they destroys them and make them bare. And whoever takes [the lion's] biting tooth that is called dens caninus [canine tooth] and mounts it in gold, it is good to take away and to take alien things, and the same goes for the wolf's tooth. And if you make a purse of the heart of a Lion, full of blood, musco [musk], almea and lignum aloes, thymiamata, and it is gathered & put upon whom you wish, and you make it hot, know that in that hour he shall much love you, and shall do your bidding.

And if you call [spirits] with the blood of a goat, the prince of devils shall be ready soon to do your commandment, and so [even] more the king [of devils], or he from whom you do [it], and the same I say for great women.

2. The second beast is the Elephant, that is an Oliphant, and he is very great, and when he has risen hard he lays, & when he falls hard he rises, because he has no well disposed knees, and the bone of his teeth is called Ebur, that is Ivory. And if it [ivory] is put in electuaries, it comforts the feebleness of the heart as much as margarita and more.¹ And his blood with his liver comforts much fasting.

3. The third beast is Cerbus [Cervus – stag], that is a hart, which lives long, for he remains as the Moon, or as an eagle, [and he] who makes fumigations of the horns, chases away serpents, and by itself it chases away devils.

4. The fourth beast is Catus, that is a cat, and he sees better by the night than by the day, and whoever takes from him, and from a hedgehog, and from a dormouse, and makes an Alcosol and Alcosolizat,² or anoints his eye, so he sees well by night and by day. And if you put [25^v] therein the eye of an ass, you may see where the spirits and devils of the air go.

5. The fifth beast is Mustela, that is a weasel, which brings forth her issue at her month, after the sayings of the poets, but not of the philosophers, this helps much when he is brent [burnt], and his skin is said to cause love between the two.

6. The sixth beast is the Talpa, that is a mole, and it dwells under the earth and is likened to a mouse. With this beast you may make to come tempests, pestilence, hail and lightning & cornflations [conflagrations?], and [he will cause] many evil things if you put him bare or naked upon the earth, dead and overturned, and with this beast you may make discord and concord between whoever you wish, for he is a cursed beast, he heals a man of the fisture ³ when it is burnt, or powdered, and cast in it.

And when you wish to know the virtues of other beasts, do as it is instructed in Libro Visionnis,⁴ and ask this [question] of the Lord of the vision that appears to you,⁵ what you ask and want to know, for [the qualities of] beasts which you wish [to know]. This beast [the mole] sees not, nor has an eye. And know that the vision of moneths [?] is over all things that you ask or wish to know. And God shall be with you, if [it is] for a right [cause that] you ask.

And know that here is fulfilled the third 'Wing.' And now we begin the fourth 'Wing' which is complete or fulfilled about all the Elements.

[De Quartus Ala – the Fourth Wing]

[De Verbis – Words]

Dixit Solomon sicut corpus vivum &c.

Solomon said, “as a living body moderate or great [in size] is [26^r] not moved with[out] its feet, neither is any fowl [moved with] less than two wings, nor is the world governed with less than four elements, [so this book] may not have less than 4 ‘Wings’, which are said to be 4 virtues.” Therefore Raziel said that whoever shall be filled with this book shall be as [great as] one of the prophets, he shall understand all the virtues of things and their powers, and if he possess it and work on it, he shall be as an angel. And therefore he [Raziel] put in this book 22 elements of great virtue, that is the 22 [Hebrew] letters (or figures), which the sons of Adam may not neglect.

1. The first [letter] is Aleph א that is A. This letter is three cornered and it signifies life, power and highness, and the principal or beginning of all things. This puts all things in their figures and in their principles.
2. The second is called Beth ב that is B, and it is very good in things which we desire in battle, and in play, and it always signifies goodness and profit.
3. The third is called Gimel ג that is G, and it signifies evil and grief and impediment in things.
4. The fourth is called Daleth ד that is D. This signifies the perturbation and death of some man and harm to him.
5. The fifth is called He ה that is H, and it signifies high esteem, honour and gladness & it is very good in all things.
6. The sixth is called Vau ו that is V, and it signifies death, pain and work.
7. The seventh is called Zain ז that is Z, and it signifies money and riches.
8. The eighth is called Heth ח [that is Ch], and it signifies long life and health.
- [26^v] 9. The ninth is called Teth ט that is T, and it signifies wrath, anger and grief.
10. The tenth is Iod י that is I, and it signifies faith, good life, and gladness, and all good beginnings.
11. The 11th is called Caph כ [that is K], and it signifies true gladness, and work without profit.
12. The 12th is called Lamed ל [that is L], and it signifies gladness, honour and profit.

13. The 13th is called Mem מ that is M, and it signifies grief, and otherwise dolor.

14. The 14th is called Nun נ that is N. It signifies the restoration of a friend, and a visitation by him, and profit.

15. The 15th is called Samech ס [that is S].

16. The 16th is called Ain ע [that is O]. It signifies the [menstrual?] occasion, or the evil of a woman.

17. The 17th is called Pe פ¹ [that is P]. It signifies health.

18. The 18th [17th] is called Phe פ² that is ff, and it signifies that blood is shed of good men and high [men].

19. The 19th [18th] is [called] Zade צ [that is Tz]. It signifies health.

20. The 20th [19th] is called Coph ק [that is Q]. It signifies hidden life.

21. The 21st [20th] is called Res[h] ר that is R+. And it signifies a man that has fallen and is risen.

[The 21st is called Shin ש that is Sh.]

22. The 22nd is called Thau ת that is T. It signifies grief and diminution.

Now we have explained about the four 'Wings', and about the 22 letters [with which] the Table of the Laws was written.³ And know that there are no more [Hebrew letters], but only the 22 letters, which are the root of Semiforas, for with them it is formed. And [it] is caused and is made [with them], but without them it may not be [made].⁴

[27r] And some men said that Cammalie found them. But it is not true, for the angel Raziel gave them, written, to Adam in the book that is called Liber Ignis,⁵ and with them all the book of Semiforas was written. And each man that reads this book, knows that the Creator said to Raziel [that these letters are] to be [used in writing] the names of Semiforas, wherefore if you transpose these 22 letters (or figures) as it seems [best], you shall attain the great name of your Creator, and with it you might do what you wish, always with pureness and with the help of the Creator.¹

Now we have fulfilled this book of the 'Wing' like to the angels that are Panthaseron, Mucraton, and Sandalon,² for every one of these has 4 wings by commandment of the benign angel which the Creator sent to me, [in order] that this book is better arranged and well arranged.

Here ends the Second Book & [here] begins the Third Book of Thymiamata.

[Liber Tertius – The Third Book]

[Tractatus Thymiamatus of Suffumigations]

Dixit angelus Adae fac Thymiamata &c.

The angel said to Adam, “make thymiamata.¹ Thymiamata are confections of good odours with which you shall suffume (and you shall please the Creator) and you shall attain what you wish by this [action]. And those [things] of which they are made are petition things,² which you shall find and [which are] of good odour and of good nature, and pure things. And when you do it, be clean of all outward filth,” and then the angel rested in that hour. And Adam remained and did what he might. And this Solomon expounded and said, “I marvel why this is the book [27v] of Moses also, for the Creator said to Moses ‘make Thymiamata, and suffume it in the hill when you wish to speak with me.’”³ Wherefore Solomon said “suffumigations, sacrifice and unction make to open the gates of air, and of fire, and of all the other heavens.”

And by suffumigations a man may see heavenly things and the privities [secrets] of the Creator. And each man [must] know that they pierce the earth, water, and lowness. And Solomon said that as there are 7 heavens, 7 planets, and 7 days in the week, of which every one is distinct, so know that there are 7 suffumigations which hold within them the virtue of the 7 planets, and make glad the spirits of air, the angels of heaven, and the devils (or angels of the world). And therefore if a man yields it to them, that is theirs.

Therefore they [the angels and devils] are pleased and glad of the words when you say their names, or that of the Creator. And for this, which you do when you wash often, and for the gift that you give to them when you suffume, these things yield them earthly and [make them able to] appear to you. And spiritual & invisible that is, [so] that neither evil men, nor the beasts amongst [you], see if you do it strongly about you, and about whom you do it. Thymiamata is made of many things, and these are principally [based] upon the 7 days of the week. And the first thymiamata is of Saturday, for his planet [Saturn] is the highest & his angel is mighty on the earth. [28r]⁴

¹ As defined in the next sentence, mixtures of perfumes or incenses to be burned on hot coals to produce smoke to purify things. These perfumes are also designed to attract spirits. It literally means ‘incense’, from the Greek θυμιαματων, thymiamaton. See Appendix 1 for incense nomenclature.

² Things that will help your petition or prayer.

³ A reference to Mt. Sinai, or simply to the ‘high places’ of worship.

⁴ Saturday is the first day of the week for Jews.

1. The first thymiamata of Saturday [Saturn] ought to be [made] of good things and well smelling roots, as is costus and the herb thuris. And that is thymiamata for good, and so I shall show all others for good [purposes]; and then thymiamata for another [bad purpose] I shall explain in another place.
2. Thymiamata of Sunday is thus [oil of frankincense], mastic, muscus [musk], and other such, and all other good gums, of good odour [are useful] in all good [operations], but to the contrary [bad odours are useful] in all evil [operations].
3. Thymiamata of Monday is folius myrti [myrtle] and lauri [laurel] and [other] leaves of good odour, and so understand [the opposite is true] for its contrary.
4. Thymiamata of Tuesday is sandalus, rubeus, niger and albus,¹ and all such trees, and each tree [wood] of aloes & cypress, and so understand [the benefit] of each tree.
5. Thymiamata of Wednesday is made of rinds, [such] as cinnamon, cassia lignea [cassia wood] & cortices, lauri [laurel] & muris [hawkweed?], and so understand for the other [purposes].
6. Thymiamata of Thursday is nux muscata [nutmeg], gariophylli [cloves] and citruli [citrus] and the rind of aurangiarum [oranges], siccarum & pulverizatarum, which is [in other words], the rind of oranges dry and powdered, and all other fruits of good odour.
7. Thymiamata of Friday is the flowers of rose, viola & crocus and all other flowers of good odour; and for the contrary [purposes], to the contrary use all stinking thymiamata.

And know that each thymiamata of good odour gathers together spirits after its [good] nature, its colour & its strength. Thus I said for good [use] good, for better [use] better. [28^v]

And Hermes said of thymiamata that:

Thymiamata of the Moon is cinnamon, lignum aloes, mastic, crocus, costus, macis [mace], myrtus [myrtle], and we make this such that each of the planets has a share in it, and all this may be by the Moon good and fortunate, by good spices & sharp, although Salomon made distinction between the days and planets of the spices, with which a man ought to make thymiamata. And he [Hermes] said that of Saturn, each good root [is used] in good, and evil

[root is used] in evil [magic]. And of Jupiter all fruit, and of Mars each tree. And of the Sun each gum, and of Venus each flower, and of Mercury each rind, and of the Moon each leaf, and thus understand of all the others, and each odoriferous herb is of Venus.

And Raziel said to Adam that he should make good thymiamata. And therefore said Hermes, "understand that each thymiamata is made of all good things, as of root, tree, rind, leaf, flower, fruit and gums, and that seeds are [also] put in it, as are baccaae [berries], cardamom, and wax, and put in all good things and precious," and afterwards he called this 'Thymiamata Completum.'

And there is some 'Greek Thymiamata' by which heathen men were used to suffume Idols. To this day [Christian] Churches and Altars are [still] censed with it, and it is called 'Thymiamata of Jupiter.' And in truth, he who uses this thymiamata must be pure and chaste, and of a good life, and [with good] will towards the Creator, and so he shall profit. [29^r]

Method of Using the Thymiamata

Dixit Solomon super suffumigata Hermetis quae dure &c.

Solomon said about the suffumigations of Hermes below, that there are seven manners [of using them] which are:

1. [The first is to] make sacrifices (of the first [born]), with fasts, and give things to the Creator, and therefore they [who do this] believe that they attain to that which they desire. And it is true.
2. The second is that they wash & purify themselves and dwell purely, and therefore they think to attain their petitions and asking, and it is true.
3. The third is that they do alms for God, and for his holy angels.
4. The fourth is that they slew [sacrifices] and cast the blood in the fire.
5. The fifth is that they slew [sacrifices] and burn all [of the sacrifice].¹
6. The sixth is that they pray much at specific hours, 7 times in the day, and 3 [times] in the night.
7. The seventh is to make suffumigation with good things, and good smelling [incenses], and every one of those that did this might attain the truth of whatever he asked, and so he attained it by the Commandment of the Creator.

And know that suffumigation overcomes all [other methods].¹ Truly, whoever suffumeth best, to the eye it proves, with this the wise men dismiss all other [methods]. And understanding that he who can know the nature of suffumigations, might easily [come] near such spirits, which he wishes to call, according to the nature of the suffumigation. And always consider the nature of the spirit and [the nature] of the suffumigation, as the spirits are constrained by the contrary [thing] and are comforted by [29v] similar things. And this is like a wise doctor in giving a medicine to a sick man, which removes the sickness and leads to health.

So suffumigation, if it is good, removes the contrary [evil spirits] from the place. And with evil suffumigation are removed good spirits, evil and ill spirits also dread that, for each thing loves health more than sickness. And therefore it is said that sulphur removes both good spirits and evil, and this is proven in a profitable way. And there is another way for lignum aloes and none other, and sulphur chases them away and this is the true reason. And then I say that sulphur gathers together its [own] proper spirits, and none other. And they are very strong & penetrative and thick, and are not departed soon [banished easily] from a place. But although a place is censed with sulphur, and then is washed with water, and [then] censed with lignum aloes, it draws away the spirits of sulphur, or endures or leads in its own [spirits].

The spirit of Azet [Azoth], that is quicksilver [mercury], and the spirit of thuris, are contrary [to each other], although spirits, yet all devils enter and pierce [quicksilver?] rather or sooner than the spirit of thuris, wherefore every one has very great strength. But if you wish to withdraw the spirits, suffume with thure [frankincense], and they shall go out. And so understand of all other spirits, [both] good and evil.

And Solomon said, that as a physician applies to a man pure good ointment and pure, and [30r] it pierces the body of a man and heals [it], so suffumigations pierce the 4 Elements, and makes [one] to see and know heavenly things which were always heavenly, and which descend from heaven, as do angels & spirits of air, and the souls of dead men, and devils, and the winds of spelunke [caves], and of the deepness and fantasies [phantoms] of desert places. And all spiritual [creatures], with the right fumigation, shall obey you, and shall come to you, and they shall do your commandment. And Hermes said that all things that were, or are present, or shall be, that the above nature [is] joined with the lower [nature] by ordinance, for time and hour makes one body, and understanding that he can understand and know such things, how creatures have to live and govern themselves.

Therefore know that there are fumes that chase away spirits, and other sorts that strengthen them, and constrain them to come, and others that enliven them and strengthen them, and give them might, and so to the contrary there are some [fumes] that destroy them and take away their might, and this is the proof of it: for the smoke of a hare chases them away, and this he said about serpents, and fumus amnecae chases them away, that is the smoke of dregs of oil, and what constrains them is the spittle of a fasting man.¹

And therefore he said suffumigation suffice for us in all things beneath [on Earth]. And Raziel said that water washes [away] all uncleanness, and [likewise] fire makes liquid, or melts, all metals & makes them pure and fine. And as the air is the life of a living man, [30v] and the earth sustains or bears each body and nourishes each plant, understand that good thymiamata or suffumigation is fulfilling in the work of the invocation of spirits; and of other things [ensure that] the thymiamata is well proportioned [when it] is confected or melded, in each hour convenient [to its manufacture] according [to its planetary qualities].

Solomon said, "I [should] put [fix] the hour and the time for this work, for in all [auspicious] hours in which a man wishes to speak to a king, or to a prince, he may not [be able to] speak to them; nor in every hour in which a son asks of the father for any thing, does he give [it] to him." Therefore it is dark [unclear] to you to choose the [correct] time and the hour for these [things] that you ask.

This is therefore the tempus quondam [relevant measure of time], is some time of Jupiter, be it done in the day of Jupiter, and of Venus in the day of Venus, and Mars. And of [the hour of] Saturn in the day of Saturn: and so for other [planets] that [must] be done in the invocation of spirits, and in all praising of [praying to] angels. And the fumigation [must be] pure. Know that it is a spiritual thing, living and being associated with heavenly things, and now called Veallia. Know that no man ought to make suffumigation of precious things unless he is pure, and with pure waters well washed, and anointed with precious ointments, which he made purely and with precious things [such] as cera alba [white wax], balsamo [balsam], croco [crocus] and musco

And this ointment [must] be well kept and well protected in a pure [31^r] place, after that also [see] that your clothing is pure, white, new and good, not broken nor black [stained]. And cense yourself reverently, and the manner of suffuming yourself ought to be made in the 7 directions: towards the East, the North, the West and the South, and towards the heaven above, and towards the earth beneath, and the seventh time all about. And as often as you do this, address your mind unto God, and pray that he fulfills your desires.

I found in some old book that these were the best suffumigations. Thus Thymiamata Graecum, mastic, sandulus [sandalwood], galbanum, Muschalazerat,² myrrh, and ambra [ambergris], and these are collectors of spirits and their placators. And Solomon said that when you wish to gather together the spirits of air do it in this manner. Cleanse yourself in the best manner that you can, and go to a pitt ³ known to you and suffume it, and call him [the angel or spirit] by his own proper name and call him or pray [to] him, and that [repeat] on three nights, and if he answers not, nor appears, take him to a certain place, or to a house, or to a quadrive [crossroads] that is a place where 4 ways meet, or to a yard, or garden. And suffume the pitt [enclosure?] towards the 7 directions, and in the place where you bathe also, as I have said. And then know that he shall come, and he shall appear to you if you do this.

Et dixit Hermes quod spiritus qui apparent &c.

And Hermes said that the spirits which appear [31^v] in this world are these. Some truly are heavenly and the prophet calls them angels, and they are bright and clear as flame or a star as we have said. Others are of air and of many colours green, bright, and other such and of many figures. And others are fiery and they are bright and red. And others are watery, and they are white and as bright as tin or burnished iron, or quicksilver. Others that are neighed [denied] to men are like to a white cloud, or to white clothes. And others are dark and dim and of many forms, which are called Devils, which are called with the wind, and there are [others] in the deepness of the sea and of the lowness [underworld], spirits that bring with [them] hail & lightning. And wise men call these huge spirits & strong. Now we have explained the nature of spirits,

² In the Latin of Sloane MS 3847 it is 'Muschullaroth.' However this could be Malabathron or Malabatrū (Indian Bay leaves) which was the Classical Graeco-Egyptian incense of Jupiter.

³ This could refer to an enclosure or arena, a pond, an underground chamber, or even a grave.

and [so] put your mind to it, and you shall attain with the help of God.

Dixit Raziel sicut in aere puro claro &c.

Raziel said, as in the pure, clear, bright, pure and peaceable air, all things gladden a joy [?] of it. So know that [success comes from] from fasting, purity, washing with water, prayers, and orisons to the Creator. And from natural and pure suffumigation, and true faith, or belief, which may please them [the angels] which we have mentioned above. And Raziel said to Adam, know that in all manners the life of angels is holy & pure. And the suffuming or suffumigation is the bread on which these spirits [32r] live. And fasting and pureness and chastity, sacrifice with orisons, are the house of holy altar, and trust in the author of [all] good. Wherefore each man that has these abovesaid [qualities], he shall attain, and he shall have profit.

And Solomon said, "this is what happens in suffumigations: soon shall come to us smoke, and then odour, and of the smoke a cloud, and of the cloud a high cloud and wind, and on the wind the cloud ascends higher, and of the cloud a high wind ascends higher, and is made a soul. And of this the spirit is made higher, and of the spirit an angel of heaven, and of this angels [of] light." And these [things] are caused by pure suffumigation. And know that suffumigations are of 7 manners. Some truly sharp, and others penetrative or piercing. Others sweet smelling, others stinking, others simple, others meek, others of grief, others truly of peace, every one of these, or of these manners, is after [the nature of] his odour, savor, nature and complexion.

Wherefore Hermes said that as coldness congeals water [into ice] which is cold, and as the water of the sea is congealed with great [cold], and as Azertacona congeals the water of wells, and everyone of these congeals the water; one with coldness, another with hotness, another by art, another by nature, and the matter is made [into] one body and one gobbet [piece]. And know that good suffumigation gathers together and constrains and makes spirits to appear in the air, and [reveal] secret or privy things. And it makes them to take a body, without eye seen.

And Solomon said that as the Adamant draws [32v] iron to itself, so suffumigation gathers together and draws the spirits of air, and makes them to come to the place where you do [the experiment], and [it] will gather them together. And the wise man said suffumigation is like the root of arzolle [Lady's thistle], as it joins together gobbets of flesh into one. So suffumigations gather together the spirits of heaven, which [then] the 4 Elements make them take a body, and spirits take [and] fulfill what is asked of them, and that [spirit may be drawn] into a likeness in a mirror, which if [you] are there sat in front of it, whatever figure you wish appears within the fumigation, made purely, with invocation in the hour after the spirits proportional.¹ The spirits appear to us, and new operations and workings with fulfillment of the thing that you ask, and don't be deceived in the knowledge of suffumigations, and apply your mind to them lest they be transposed [confused], and you shall fulfill [your wishes], after you do it as he [Solomon] said.

And Solomon said, "I will touch somewhat on the nature of suffumigations, whoever uses it much makes to see [visions] in sleep, or in reality, green things, and yellow, and many colours. Melancholic fumigation signifies grey things; sanguine fumigation signifies red things, and otherwise it is shown of a purple colour; phlegmatic fumigation signifies white things and fair. And so [you can] understand what their nature is [from] the appearance of the spirits, [33r] and of their colour and visible [appearance]." And their work shall be the sharpness of it, and the goodness, and the direction of fumigii [censing] that is fulfilling the thing, after the Image was formed, and the orison of the thing [spirit] named, and the trust for all is in the intention of the man, and in the hour in which it is done. Now we have said how every one of the planets has his fumigations. Now we will state the fumigations of the 12 Signs and of their 36 Faces.²

[The Perfumes of the Zodiac]

Aries	holds by himself mirtal [myrtle].
Taurus	costum [costus].
Gemini	masticem [mastic].
Cancer	musthalazeratis.
Leo	thus [olibanum].
Virgo	classen [oil of sandalwood].
Libra	galbanum.
Scorpio	opopanaces [oppoanax].
Sagittarius	lignum aloes [oud].
Capricorn	assafoetida.
Aquarius	euphorbium.
Pisces	thymiamata [thyme]. ³

² The 12 Zodiacal Signs are divided into 36 Faces, like the 36 Decans. The first list above lists the suffumigation of the first Face as if it was the suffumigation of the whole Sign.

³ Note that although 'thymiamata' refers to blended incense, 'thymiamata' means the herb thyme.

The first Face of Aries holds mirtal.¹ The second stamonea. The third piper nigrum. The first of Taurus [holds] costum. The second cardamom. The third cassia. The first of Gemini masticem. The second cinamomus. The third cipressum. The first of Cancer mastum [camphor]. The second succum. The third anisum. The first of Leo thus. The second lignum balsami. The third nucem muscata. The first of Virgo sandalos [sandal]. The second crocum. The third masticem. The first of Libra galbanum. The second bofor. The third mirtum [mortum]. [The first of Scorpio oppoconax.]²

The first of Sagittarius lignum aloes. The second folia lauri. The third gariofilum. The first of Capricorn assa[foetida]. The second colofoniam, the third piper longum. The first of Aquarius euphorbium, the second reubarbarum, the third stamonea.³ The first of Pisces thymiama. The second crocum. The third sandalum album.⁴ [33v] Nota sedum Hermetem de fumigiis.

And Hermes said, "Aries, Leo and Sagittarius hold each choleric [suffumigations, and are] spicy & bitter; Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn [have] melancholic [suffumigations] and are styptic [astringent]; Gemini, Libra & Aquarius [have] sanguine and are sweet; Cancer, Scorpio & Pisces [have] phlegmatic and are of a salty savor."

And this Solomon holds for the nature of such spices we give, and with them we suffume. And which [suffumigations are] given to the days, and to the hours? For Sunday, the first hour is of the Sun, and all of the day all together: we should give this [day] mastic and muscum [musk] as we have said of planets in the beginning of this 'Book of Thymiamata', and to understand of all others, know the season of suffumigations.

In primo tempore lignum aloes thus et crocum &c.

In the first season [use] lignum aloes, thus [olibanum] & crocum [crocus].⁵

¹ The first third of the Sign Aries. See Appendix 1 for translation of the names of the incenses.

² The second and third Face are not given.

³ The last two rhubarb and stamonea are often reversed.

In the second season thymiama, costum, mastice.

In the third season sandalus, cassia, and mirtum [myrtle].

In the fourth season, muscum, succum and lignum balsami.

And as he gave to each of the 4 seasons their spices, or kinds, so he gave to each month one spice [each] in order.

Dicamus nunc suffumigia 4 partium mundi &c.

We now tell of the suffumigations of the 4 parts of the world and of the 4 Elements. For all things that are in this world are either compounded of the 4 Elements, or simple [substances].

Suffumigations of the 4 parts of this world [and of the 4 Elements] are these:

About the parts of the [34r] East, and fire, serve ambra [ambergris], muscus [musk] & alba cera (that is white wax).

About the parts of the South, and earth, algalia [civet], almea and teriaca.

About the parts of the West, and air, balsamus, camphor & oleo olivrarum.

About the [parts of the] North, and water, lignum aloes, nux muscata [nutmeg] & maris [the sea?].

And Solomon said, "each man that wishes to do any [magical] things [using] this book [should] study the chapter on thymiamata, [so] that he knows the kinds of things & can justly mix them." And so you might easily work by it, for without work you might [not] fulfill all things that you desire to see. Now we have fulfilled our Chapter on fumigiis, or fumigations, and we will say furthermore about that which was our intention, with the help of God.

[The Fourth Book]

[Treatise of Times of the Day and of the Night]¹

Here begins the Fourth Book that speaks about the times of the year

In Dei nomine pii incipio scribere libris istu &c.

In the name of the meek God I begin to write this book that is called Cephar Raziel which the Angel Raziel gave to Adam. And it shall speak about the 4 seasons of the year, & months & days, [each] with his night, [and] how we should name each thing, and know each man. This is called the Book of Times, and the Angel that gave it is called mighty and great by the commandment of the Creator, the living God, [who is] in all things mighty.

And [this Book was given in order] that Adam should know all things in this world, what it is, what it was, and what it should be, in all things in the 12 months of the year, and [all the names of the] days & hours, and that by order and likeness, by pure fasting, and by washings, by sacrifice, by suffumigations made on the 7 days [of the week], [especially] on the [34^v] first [day of the] Moon, and before the Sun should ascend his tail, the Ascendant, and before the Sun should ascend over the planet Zedek, or Jupiter, they should be named in this book by the mouth of the holy angels, that have rulership over the 7 heavens formed of fire, and their observing is of fire, and their life is fire.

And they seemed clothed with fire. And they are covered with fire. And from fire they went out, and in fire they dwell, and they are of great friendship [help], ruling the 12 months of the year by the precepts of the Creator who called the world into being, and all the angels [into being], and existed before it, and there are 7 powers before the face of it, and to each of them is given a rulership, and [each] has a day of the month, and of the week [given to him]. And of them, some are standing around, and some are sitting in chairs honourably serving the Creator, and they are always ready and bound to go out, and to enter, to come and to go, and to do all good and evil whatsoever, and to enchant and to put down and to [un]cover secret things and to find [out] or make revelation.²

And all this that we have said, by the commandment of God, and [by the commandment of] all the greater angels and lesser, and their princes with their powers, with their odours, or with their associations, they call themselves, every one, by their names which are selly [marvelous], [blessed], high and sovereign always, and they praise God the Creator which formed them. And also all the powers, of all the heavens, in the month, and in the day in which he formed them, and they are all speaking together as men. And Raziel said that these angels wrote those names and this book. [35^r] And he said that there are 7 angels ruling over the 7 planets, and these be potestates or powers,¹ ruling over the 7 days of the week. And they are the keepers [of the days of the week], and of the 24 hours of the day, and of the 7 heavens, and of the 12 Signs [of the Zodiac], and of all other things that govern the world.

[The Planets in the 7 Heavens]

And Raziel said to Adam, "behold, know and hold [understand] these 7 powers or potestates, which have power in the 7 heavens, and [over] the 7 planets."

The names of [the planets] are these: Sabaday that is Saturn, Zedek that is Jupiter, Madim that is Mars, Hanina that is the Sun,² Nogah that is Venus, Cocab [Kokab] that is Mercury, and Labana [Levanah] that is the Moon.

The names of the 7 Heavens in which they are born are these: Samin, Raquia, Siagum, Mahum, Macon, Zebul, Arabeck.³ Over Samyn goes the Moon. Over Raquia goes Mercury and over Arabeck [goes] Saturn, and so understand the others. The names of Angels that have power over the 7 planets, and rule over the 7 heavens, and others while in their chairs are these: Capziel, Satquel, Samael, Raphael, Amael, Michael, Gabriel. And the power of these is that Capziel is the power of Sabaday; Satquel of Zedek; Samael of Madim; Raphael of Hanina; Amael of Nogah; Michael of Cocab; Gabriel of Labana. And every one of these sits in his [own] heaven. And with their meynees [retainers/descendants?] all about, and they are of many colours as white, black, red, yellow, green, leady [grey], pardi viati, mixed, gilt [golden], and of the colour of a peacock's feather, and of many other colours.

[The 12 Hebrew Months]

These are the Angels that have power over the 12 months of the year. The names of the months [35^v] are these: Nisan, Yar, Zivan, Tamus, Ab, Elul, Tisirin, Marquesuam, Quislep, Tobez or Thebeth, Sabat, Adar, postadar postmodo.¹ The names of the potestates [Powers] are these. And they are the 12 capitals, that is, one over every [lunar] month of the Moon, rather that is the [first 7 months only:] Oriel, Sasuyel, Amariel, Noriel, Biraquel, Magnia, Saciell. And every one of these has so many potestates, helpers, more or greater as there are days in the month, or many other servants.

² The name for the Sun is sometimes spelled Hamina and sometimes Hanina in the manuscript.

And [using] the aforesaid angels, a man may know all things that are to come in every year, and in every season, and in every month, and every day, and every hour, with the proper signs. Whoever knows them well, he will know [the destiny of kings and queens, their] many reigns or few, or when they shall be, or if they shall be or not, and the day and hour when they shall fall [from grace].

And a man may know by them which is his Sign and his planet, and he may know of his [own] life, if it shall be long or short in the world, and other things, either for a sick man or a whole [man], either for a man or for a woman. Or he may know a subtle understanding, or sharp [understanding], he may know what is to come, and do with it [that knowledge] what he wishes. And the days of the year, or of the Sun, alone [are] 365 and the quarter part of one day (in the week of days). The year of the Moon is otherwise 360 days and four hours and 46 minutes, [calculated] after the year of the Moon.² And the fulfilling of seasons in this: if one season is 3 months, and then the [four] seasons [36^r] truly [add] to 12 [months].

And know that Nisan, which is the first month, begins on the first day of the first Moon (the Moon prima) of the [calendar] month of March, and so [it is] for the other [Hebrew months]. The first season is truly [calculated] from the first degree in which the Sun enters into Aries, till it enters the first degree of Cancer. And the second [season is] from Cancer to Libra. And the third [season] from Libra to Capricorn. And the fourth [season] from Capricorn unto Aries. And this is a better distinction of seasons [than the Western Gregorian calendar]. And in the hour which Raziel gave the Book to Adam, [with details] of seasons, of months and the names of things, then was Adam comforted [because] in the same day lightning struck, and thunders and coruscations appeared, and there was in that day a great tempest in all the world, both on the land, and in the air, and in the sea. And [this happened] in the hour in which the Angel Raziel opened this book and gave it to Adam.

² This presumes a year of 12 lunar months calculated as 30.02 days each month.

Then he [Raziel] gave to him [Adam] might, strength & surety in all the words of this book, and the miracles that are in it. And when this book fell [open] before the face of Adam, Adam regarded it with very much awe, and quaked in great dread. And [he] fell down onto the earth as though he had been dead. Then the Angel Raziel said to Adam, "rise and be comforted for know that a steadfast spirit has descended in you from the high heavens which has lightened you, and has been put in this hour in you, the knowledge and power that you shall attain [anything] that you shall ask."

And I say to you, that you [should] consider this book and observe it, and by it you shall know and understand whatever was, and is, [36v] and that shall be after you. And in that hour in which this book was given to Adam, fire fell upon the banks of the rivers of paradise. And the Angel ascended by that flame of fire to the heavens. And an Angel descended in likeness of a white cloud and spoke with him plainly, and came to him as a man, very bright and clear, like to the clearness of a star in his body, and full of many other [stars] all about. And in ascending when he was separated [from his body], always Adam was like a lamb which grew very bright, as the flame of fire, and clear as the fire of a furnace in which gold is purged.

And then Adam saw this, and found [this], and knew the Lord of all worlds who is a great king, and mighty [in all] things. This book was sent for him. And then he considered and looked in it with holiness and purity. And then he beheld in it all things that he would [want to] know in this world. And this was the first word that Adam had with the Angel Raziel. And therefore he considered it, and governed himself by it.

Solomon said, "for the aforesaid reason that the Angel Raziel said unto Adam that it is well to know the seasons, of [the difference of] one hour to another, and of one season to another", for whoever sows wheat in Spring [knows that] it may not be gathered in the same Spring, [but only in the appropriate season, Autumn]. And these [seasons] are after the temperament of the parts of the North[ern hemisphere]. And therefore it is necessary or needful to divide the year into 4 parts [seasons] and the month into 4 parts [weeks] and an hour into four parts. [37r] And if you keep these divisions and understand them you shall profit in all that you wish, for this is true, and all natural things are made in the season, and in the day, and in the hour, according to how the high sovereign Creator has ordered [it]."

Raziel said [using this Book], "you will know anything of this world, that is of the other [worlds], or that is in the heavens which are associated with the first Heavens. Or if you [wish to] do any thing that fulfills your wish, cleanse your body for 7 days, that is, wash, and eat not a thing of the chest [coffin], nor of the raven, nor of evil parts, nor a thing unclean, nor that [which] has fallen to its death, nor a beast with 4 [cloven] feet, nor other. And avoid malice and falseness, and you shall not drink wine, nor shall you eat fish, or any thing from which blood goes out. And do not join [sexually] to a polluted woman, nor a menstruating [woman], nor enter into a house where there is a dead man, nor go beside the grave of a dead man, nor go near him that has suffered gonorrhea, and avoid and be aware of night lest you fall into pollution, and keep from lechery and evil pride. And see that you are always pure, and are in Orison or prayer, and keep your tongue from saying evil [things] and lying, and fast purely."

And keep your body from doing evil and sin. And lighten the house with orisons, and praise the angels, and do alms to needy men, and do charity, and do not join with evil men, nor with unclean [men], and clothe yourself with clean clothes, a larger [size] than you might [normally use], and always believe in God, and [37v] rise early, and pray to the Creator that he dress you and wash you, and fulfill your petition [prayers], and [so] you shall attain to that which you ask of God.

[The First Work and Sacrifice]

Nota hanc partem bene. Note well this part.

Primum opus istius libri que est necessarium &c.

The first work of this book is necessary, or needful, in all things that man does. And then you want to know when it is good to do all the things which you do. Or you will know when it is good to do whatever thing you wish of this world, and you cannot do anything thereof [unless you] understand that you [must] count by 7 days, before [beginning with] the first day of the month that is of the Moon. And in these 7 days you [must not] be polluted, nor eat a beast having blood, nor drink wine, nor touch unclean things, nor lay with a woman, and wash yourself with clean running water each of the 7 days, before the Sun ascends. And hold [understand] the abstinence which we have said, and cense yourself, when you are bathed, with this: lignum aloes and ambra [ambergris], crocus, costo [costus], camphor and mastic.

And then take two living turtledoves, whole without languor in themselves, or if you wish two white doves, if you might have none other.¹ And cut off the neck, fasting, with a brazen red knife over gilt [with] on both sides a cutting [edge]. And cut the neck of one turtledove on one side, and the other

[turtledove] on the other [side], after that draw out the entrails, but save the blood in a new glass cup & cast it into the fire. [38^r].¹

And wash the entrails with clean water. And then take 3 weight of musk, and 3 crocus, thuris albi lucidi [bright white frankincense], cinnamon and 10 keys [weight] of gariophylli [cloves] and lignum aloes the same [amount]. And then take 12 grana piperis nigri [grains of black pepper], old white wine, sandalos [sandalwood], muscu [musk], camphor, and somewhat [of] honey, and [mix] all these with wine, and put it all melded in the entrails of the turtledoves and fill them or divide them into 7 parts or 7 'limbs', and cast one 'limb' upon the coals of fire in the morrow [the following day] before the Sun arise, and that is the 11th hour of the night.²

And when you burn the 'limbs' be covered with white cloth and standing [with] your feet bare, that is unhosed [without stockings] and without shoes, and afterward [write] the names of angels which are written that serve the month, that is serving the month in which you do it, for there are prayers and doers [?] there, and know that each day you have to say the names of the angels of that month 7 times. And in the 7 days you shall gather together the ashes which you have made in the same 7 days of the aforesaid 7 'limbs.' And the house and the place in which you shall burn it [should] be clean. And when all this is done, you shall arrange a solemn house, clean [pure] and separated [from other houses] for yourself. And you shall sprinkle the aforesaid ashes upon the earth, in the middle of the house, and you shall sleep there, so that you shall do this.

And then when you enter the bed, you shall name the names of the angels strong, dreadful, mighty & high, and then sleep. And speak with the man [that comes]. And then you may be very certain, and not dreading, that there shall come to you some man, and he shall show himself to you in a vision of the night, and [38^v] his likeness shall be of a holy man. Then be strong and dread [him] not, and he shall not leave you, [and know] that it is [not] a vision or a dream, but [he comes] in a true manner. And ask what you wish, and without doubt he shall give it to you.

Dixit angelus Raziel volo tibi dicere hoc complemento &c.

The angel Raziel said, "I will say to you that this fulfilling of the working, is by the power, virtue and strength of this book in which are written the powers of the months, of days, and of the year, and they have power in every month, and in each day, for always. For each man who governs himself by them, with purity, they have helped in all his deeds, and in all his things. And they make him to know all his wiles, and they helped him to fulfill all that he ever asked, with great power, strength and wisdom.”

[The Angels of the 12 Hebrew Months]

The names of the Angels of the first month.¹ These are the names of the Angels which are mighty, and more mighty in the first month, which is called Nysan [Nisan]:² Oriel, Malaquiran, Acia, Yaziel, Paltifus, Yesmactria, Yariel, Araton, Robica, Sephatia. The names of Angels of the second month. [39r] These are the mightier Angels of the second month which is Yar [Iyar] in [the] language of Hebrew: Safuel, Saton, Cartemat, Aryel, Palthia, Bargar, Galms, Nocpis, Aaron, Manit, Aadon, Qwenael, Quemon, Abragin, Yehoc, Adnibia, Parciot, Marinoc, Galus, Gabmion, Resegar, Affry, Absamon, Sarsaf, Alxim, Carbiol, Regnia, Achlas, Nadib, Absafyabitan, Pliset. And you shall name the names of the aforesaid Angels of this month Yar in each thing which you shall name it in, and they should help you, and they shall make you to know all your wishes.

The names of the Angels of the third month. These are the names of the Angels which are the keepers of the third month that is called Zyvan [Sivan] of which the first is Amariel, Tatgiel, Casmuch, Nuscifa, Almux, Naamab, Mamiazicaras, Samysarach, Naasien, Andas, Paltamus, Abris, Borhai, Salor, Hac, Yayac, Dalia, Azigor, Mabsuf, Abnisor, Zenam, Dersam, Cefania, Maccafor, Naboon, Adiel, Maasiel, Szarhyr, Cartalion, Adi, Ysar. And you shall name these names that are called, in all things that you do, and you shall profit.

The names of the Angels of the fourth month. These are the names of the Angels of the fourth month that is called Thamuth [Tammuz]: Moriel, Safida, Asaf, Mazica, Sarsac, Adnyam, Nagrow, Galuf, Galgall, Danroc, Saracus, Remafidda, Luliaraf, Nediter / Delgna, Maadon, Saamyel, Amrael, Lezaidi, Elisafan, Paschania, Maday. And you shall name these names abovesaid in all that you do, and you shall profit.

² The modern transliteration of the names of each Hebrew lunar month is printed in bold in square brackets.

The names of the Angels of the fifth month. [The Angels of the 7 Days of the Week]

Scias quod postquam diximus de mensibus &c.

Know that we have told of the months, now we will tell of the names of the days of the week, with their angels, very strong and ruling over every day, and each in his [own] day. [41^r]

² March was considered the beginning of the year by both Hebrews and Romans (until the introduction of January and February) and Europeans (until Elizabethan times). Other cultures also saw the beginning of Spring as the beginning of the year, and the Chinese still take February 4th/5th as the beginning of the solar year (with March being seen as the middle of Spring).

In the first season Naufor, in the second Alparon, in the third Machniel, in the fourth Thaumy.

These are the names [of the main angels] in the 4 parts of the world:

In the part of the East these have might or power: Gabriel, Raphael, Uriel.¹

In the part of the North these: Adriel, Yamiel, Zabdiel.

In the part of the West these: Adtriel, Samael, Joel.

And in the part of the South these: Corabiel, Sariel, Michael.

And name them above all things that you do in the 4 parts of the world and you shall profit.

The Proper Names of the Planets in the 4 Seasons

Ista sunt nomina stellarum qui sunt et vadunt &c.

These are the names of the seven planets that [45^r] fly in the 7 Heavens, ¹ Normally listed as three of the four main Archangels. The fourth, Michael, is attributed to the South.

Sabaday, Zedek, Madyn, Hanina, Nogah, Cocab, Labana. And which of these has its own proper name ruling over the four seasons of the year we shall show in this chapter following.

And Solomon said in explanation of this place, that every planet, and each thing before mentioned, changes its name in each season, [just as] from the same tree comes to us four things [according to the season]. Of these four things the first is when it burgeons, the second is the flower. The third is the fruit, and the fourth is the seed. Therefore the Sun is called in the first season hot and moist. In the second [season] hot and dry. In the third cold & dry, and in the fourth cold and moist. These are the workings of the Sun, and these properties [are conferred] over all things, which is another reason the names of things abovesaid are changed in the four parts of the year, for [each] time has its [own] nature and its [own] complexion, as we have said of water which is in the first season temperate, and in the second hot, and in the third rotten, and in the fourth congealed [as ice]. And so other things of the world. This example [shows] why Raziel put these [four] names to each thing. In every thing are the 4 lords that have power over each thing, and every one in his season. And it is said that there are 4 Elements, whereof one is fire that has might in the first season, and so on.

Wherefore know that every thing changes its name. [45v] As first we say a man is a child, and then a youngling, and then a middle [aged] man, and in the fourth season an old man. And so [all] things change their names, who will call them a leader, and this is [the same way] in [the life of] a man. And so understand [the same] of metal and of all things that grow and live.

And Solomon said, and all others [agreed], that it was more inst[ructive] if each thing should have 7 names [rather] than 4, for all things might descend from 4 bodies, and to them is given all the might. Truly they put 4 names to every thing, and [so] it was more easy to work, [just as] 4 names were assigned over the city of David, my fathers and mine, which had many names. Truly Isaac the wise man said that the first name [of that city] was Remusale, and then Jebusale, Jeroboam, Jerusalem. And these are the names this City received from the 4 Lords that were in it. And everyone gave it his proper name. And these things of this world receive 4 names in themselves, or 7 or more after God has ordered it. And therefore [let] no man marvel at the [changing] names of things in the 4 seasons.

In the highest Heaven, that is the first [heaven] from the outer part, and it is [also] the seventh [heaven] from the lowest, it serves Sabaday [Saturn] and his angel is Capciel. In the first season Sabaday is called Cuerues. In the second Palicos. In the third Quirtipos, in the fourth Panpotes.

In the sixth [Heaven] serves Zedek and his angel is Satquiel and his is name Jupiter. In the first season it is Amonor. In the [46^r] second Sahibor. In the third Sayin. In the fourth Eanynyel.

In the fifth Heaven serves Madim and his angel is Balquiel. And the name of Mars in the first season is called Aaryn. In the second Daron. In the third Bearon. In the fourth Pantefos.

In the fourth Heaven serves Hamina [the Sun] and his angel is Dandaniel. In the first season the name of the Sun is called Halyom, in the second Adocham, in the third Cantopos. In the fourth Pantasus.

In the third Heaven serves Nogah and his angel is Adzdiel. In the first season the name of Venus is called Aporodicy. In the second Calizo, in the third Niniptz. In the fourth Pontos.

In the second Heaven serves Cocab and his angel is Satquiel. In the first season Mercury is called Armis. In the second Angocus. In the third Tholos. In the fourth Ancholos.

In the first Heaven serves Labana and his angel is Anael. In the first [season] the Moon is called Salmi in the second Sarico. In the third Naspilij. In the fourth Afriqnym. And know that you shall name the names in their four seasons, and you shall profit when you shall know anything of them.

[Here ends the Fourth Book & here begins the Fifth Book]

[The Fifth Book]

[Treatise of Purity and of Abstinence]

Here begins the fifth book that treats of purity

Dixit Solomon revelatum fuit nitri de isto libro &c.

Solomon said, "this book of Raziel was shown to me, and to many angels thereafter, that I had the book, and of those which nourished powers, [46^v] virtues, matters and strength of the potestates [Powers] above, and that [was done] by the commandment of, and in obedience to, the Creator or maker of the world." And they said that Solomon asked for understanding, and wisdom, and fairness, and strength in will, all complete, and [so he was] named great for always over the earth. And know that all kings, and lesser men, who shall come after you, should speak of you, should love you, and worship you, and should set you in high esteem, and should praise and keep this book, and work with it with reverence and purity.

And Solomon said to the benign angel Natanael, which has power in the air, and which was always associated with Solomon, which are the same 7 bodies [planets] which we see above, bright, fair, pure, and clear, which cease never to go [in their orbit], nor are their ways void, nor did they ever fail, but always endure going on their way. And [the planet whose orbit] is farthest [out, Saturn] fulfilled [its orbit] in 30 years.¹ And then they [the planets] appear [in the same position in the sky] as they were before. And thus it is said that their [orbit] should be however long God [desired]. And thus I say: "in a hundred years, and [even] in a 1000 [years], that they never will be changed [in their course], but we have found them [in the same place] as the Prophets and other men of old found them." And the angel Natanael said this to Solomon.

The 7 bright bodies [the planets] which you see above [47^r] are put [active] beneath. And in going upwards they hold in balance, or in rulership, the 4 Elements beneath. And therefore their movment ceases not, for such power the Creator gave to them. And know that their matter is simple and pure, without corruption and always durable. And their state is like to the Lord that formed [them], and they obey him in all things. And Natanael said furthermore to Solomon, "know that in the heavens of the 7 bright bodies [planets] there are angels without number, mighty in all things, and every one of them has his proper power, his strength and his virtue. And they are as unlike [each other], among themselves, as men [are unlike each other], or as other beasts are. And everyone serves his office for the Creator that formed him, or made them."

And Solomon said to Nathaniel, "what is the life, or the service, that these angels do?" And Nathaniel said, "their life is [one] of purity, of orison [prayers], and of trust, and their might is of suffumigations holocausti et sacrificii.¹ And their service is when the Creator wills them to go from place to place, [in response to] any pure man who has prayed to the Creator, as it seems. And then they do good, or evil, as the Creator wills them, for in them is power, science & will complete." And Solomon said, "which are these 7 bright bodies [planets], and how are they named, and of what [purpose] does every one serve?"

And Nathaniel said the same that Raziel said to Adam, the higher of these that goes slower is called Sabaday [Saturn] and all the realms of his heaven are [47v] full of ice, snow and hail, and wroth, rancour and coldness. And all the angels that have been there are clothed with darkness, very dark. And their greatness is very high and very long, and [they have power] over the earth, over devils, over darkness, and [over] coldness and dryness. And they have power over winds of this nature. And they have power of doing good and evil. And the angel of it is Beel, crowned over all others.

In the second heaven stands Zedek [Jupiter] and all his realms.

Dixit Solomon rex filius regis David &c.

Solomon the king, called the son of David, that was king of Jerusalem of Jury [Jewry], and Damaske [Damascus], of Egypt, Lord of Babylon,² prince of science, covetous of purity, searcher of privities [secrets], keeper of good true men, avoider of lying, [keeper] of poor men, of virtues, desire over virtues, speedy with words, busily thinking, most subtle in mind, and in searching. I have enquired, and know, that in words of power [lie] virtue and effect, and of all humours whole and healthy, there may be sufficient fulfilling.

² The text gives a much wider geographical remit and rulership to Solomon than he ever had.

And he said, "I see that the most famous are wise men and prophets, [made famous] by words and books which they have left as their testimony. And I see that the sons of Adam, and of Hermes, and of Noah, and their sons, and many other prophets, have left books at their death by which they clarify their fame and [so] amongst men [48^r] [their] glory should remain."

"And I see that my father, King David, compounded or made some book in which are contained all the orisons [prayers] which he knew and found, which truly Latin men (that is Romances)¹ call the Psalter which truly is prayers alone, but of the holy names of the Creator, it is names that head the Orisons.² In the same book, King David wrote all things that ever he knew, of patriarchs, and of old wise men, to the praise of the Creator. And I, King Solomon, truly have long studied holy words with [their] virtues, and the miracles I found to be therein fulfilled, with each thing working, and I saw and found this in the books in which I studied long. And know that Adam, Hermes, Noah and Moses, and many other most wise men, had great secrets and virtues in their books."

Cum ergo veteres et antiquos Sapientes &c.

When therefore I understood the old wise men to have made books, how or with what understanding, or with what art, that I might know the sciences of all the aforesaid, I enquired, and there answered unto me an old man of good mind and understanding who was called Zebraymayl. And I said, "Adam had a maker and a master, that is to say the Lord his maker, and Gabriel [his] master furthermore. Hermes, that discreet and most wise man, and Moses, had a master and a friend, which was Cretus. Also Aaron truly had a friend which therefore assisted him. That a wise man may not be without a master, however attested by you, that two may be wise without one master: but [for] you to be wise, these [things] I know to be [48^v] necessary to you: a wise master, and discrete, long and continual study of many old books of great wise men, often read, profited by & amended, happy and continual health of your body, long life without cares and travails, and quiet."

² "It is names that head the Orisons" means it is the names (of god and the angels) that make the prayers effective. The Psalter is a volume containing the Book of Psalms. Some of the Psalms were composed by David, Solomon's father, and some by Solomon, and so it is no surprise that a number of Psalms have been used for magical purposes. For a listing of these see Table J7 in Stephen Skinner, Complete Magician's Tables, Singapore: Golden Hoard and St Paul: Llewellyn, 2006. For the use of Psalms in magic see David Rankine & Harry Barron, The Book of Gold: a 17th Century Magical Grimoire...using the Biblical Psalms of King David, London: Avalonia, 2010.

Then Solomon said to the wise man "Is not this possible to be done by a shorter way than that you have said above?" Zebraymayl answered the king "a lighter and shorter way than this is unknown, nor may it be done." To whom Solomon said, "How therefore," to which the wise man answered again saying "Open privately and fully the Ark of the Testament, no man knows or understands all its secrets, and old wisdoms, and the words of great power and virtue that you shall find [therein]. By which not only shall you know things passed, but also these that are present, and likewise those that are to come." Solomon answered again saying, "for this that you have answered to me I give thanks to that high and blessed Creator, who reigns as it pleases him, all things, with words alone, he formed or made."

And there is not any more noble or mightier then he, without whom there is no virtue or power, who gives wisdom to wise men, he is of all things the first time, he is without beginning, and of all things the last time, there is no end. He is of all things [49^r] the maker, and nothing was made [without him], of whom the reign or reigning is, and shall be, and of whom all work is good, and of whom his will is over all, is truly free, and there is none that may gainsay him. Whereupon Solomon, trusting to Zebraymayl, had the Ark of the Testament brought before him. And he sought all the books of Moses, of Aaron, of Adam, and of Noah, and of their sons, and of Hermes, and of other prophets, and of others in which he might find the miracle of words and their virtues.

And he sought all the old idols of heathen men & images of many tongues, having writings, and all things engraved which are found in all the parts of the world. And he caused them to be gathered together into his palace, and he brought forth Masters of every one of the 72 [letters of the Name], who could expound to him privately the letters, or hidden Y. C. M. in Hebrew, Chaldean, Syriac, and Greek writing, that they should expound to him that which was hidden. And when the letters were expounded, he saw that the most part accorded with it, in [regard to] the virtues of words.

Therefore King Solomon caused the Ark to be opened privately, [hoping to find] in the Ark, with [good] reason, afterwards what [he desired] to learn. And Solomon said "After the sovereign and Almighty Creator had infused that grace of his spirit in me, I opened the Ark of the Testament, in which I found all [49^v] things which I had sought long and studiously before. Among which I found the book which is called Raziel, which the Creator sent to

And I found the book which the Creator gave to Moses in the hill of Sinai, when he made him partner to his privities [secrets]. In which three books, three orisons [prayers or invocations] I found. The first [book] the prophets call Semiforas, which the Creator gave to Adam in Paradise. The second book is that which the Creator gave to Adam in paradise in the hour of his necessity or need. The third [book] is that which the Creator gave to Moses in the hill of Sinai, after he had fulfilled the fasting. And Solomon said "I found in the Ark a pot full of manna, and the staff of Moses which was changed into a serpent, and afterwards from a serpent into a staff. And the Tables of the Law, and pieces of the first letters, which Moses for the sins of the people (in his wroth) broke upon the ground. Truly in the Ark I found some golden tables, quadrate or four-cornered, in which were [set] 15 [12?] precious stones, likened to the twelve tribes or lineages of Israel. And in every stone was written the high holy names of the Creator of the book Semiforas."¹

And I found a box of marble having a green colour as Jasper. [50r] And in this box were 7 figures, and in each figure [were] 7 great and virtuous names of the Creator as told to Moses, and the [other] 7 [names] which the Creator taught Adam in paradise. And this is a secret of secrets which is very learned, and ought to be kept reverently covered. I found also in the extremities of the Ark, 24 virtuous rings with names and figures of the Creator written in Semiforas, with many colours written or figured. And I, Solomon, had one of the same rings, having a mind to the same, in which I have found such virtue that when I said make it to rain, it rained. And when I said again, as you have made it to rain, so make the same rain to cease again, and it ceased. And beside Jerusalem, the same realm as well, of tempests and rains it made.

And Solomon said "I found Semiforas with which Moses made the plagues in Egypt, and with which he dried the Red Sea, and with which also he drew water out of the stone, and with which also he knew all the purity of his people, and with which he also overcame princes and kings and mighty men, and with which whatever he wished to do, he did, and that which he would destroy, he destroyed. And with these [rings] he fulfilled his own wishes."

¹ See Hebrews ix, 4 for the details of what was inside the Ark of the Covenant: "the golden pot having the manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant." Although I Kings, viii, 9 states that "there was nothing in the Ark save the two tablets of stone, which Moses put there at [Mount] Horeb."

Capitulum explanationis hujus nomina Semiforas &c.

The chapter of explanation of this name Semiforas. And it is that all devils and winds, and men living as well as dead, and all spirits, and all bodies, regard it with awe it. Wherefore truly Semiforas is called the first secret of secrets, and [it is] great, old, much [desired], hidden, of great virtue and of power to get whatever he wanted. Semiforas is a word [50^v] which ought not to be shown to all men, neither by it ought any man to work (except with great necessity or anguish). And then in awe of the Creator, he ought to purely, meekly and devoutly name it. Also Semiforas is the root and beginning, fundamental to orison, an exemplar of good life, the trust of man's body, the orison or prayer of a just man, the same dread Creator.

And Solomon said about Semiforas, "These are necessary with meekness, fasting, with orison [prayer], belief, clarity, purity, patience, meekness and constancy of a man, without which you might work nothing. And with [these qualities] you shall get whatever you wish. The virtues [necessary] in working by Semiforas ought nevertheless to be these seven: that is meekness, truth, patience, abstinence, belief, charity, and mercy, which ought in him principally to be had, or to abound.

Si ergo per Semiforas operari volumus oportet quod simus &c.

If therefore we wish to work by Semiforas, it is well that we are bright or pure of body, and in trust steadfast, and from falseness and lying fully departed. It is well also to [regard] the Creator and his creatures [with awe], amongst which we ought to most hold the Sun in awe, which gives to us light, and darkness, cold and hot, which is the cause of the changing of the seasons, and of the temperament of the air, and of herbs. We ought also to know the aspects of the Moon, and the months by which its 12 [lunar months] and [sometimes] 13 [months] are counted, which are called Nyssan, Yar, Tina, &c.¹

And we ought to know the waxing [51^r] and decreasing of the Moon, when it [causes] all creatures of the sea, floods, and wells, and all the nether bodies to wax and decrease, take blood in their veins, and marrow in their head and their bones. After the Moon waxes & decreases, they are nourished in the same [way]. Also [there is] no doubt that the virtue of the Moon works [in] the infusing, or melting, of metals.

We ought also to know Sabaday or Saturn by whom hunger and dearth and all anguish befall lands. We ought also to know and regard with awe Zedek or Jupiter, by whom honour, and health and righteousness, and all good is had. We should also know and regard with awe Madim or Mars of whom choler & strife, and hate and battles, and lying, and all evils come. We ought also to know and regard with awe Hamina or the Sun, by whom we have light, and darkness & clearness, and by whom [through the changing] seasons, evil into good, [and good] into evil is transmuted or changed.

We ought also to regard with awe and know Nogah or Venus, by whom we have meat and drink, and all necessities, or things that are needful, by whom peace and love and affection among men is made fast and stable. We ought also to regard with awe Cocab or Mercury, for he is closer to us than all [planets] except the Moon, by whom merchandise and vending or selling, and all secular things, are exercised. Therefore observe those that are said and the spirits abovesaid, and thus you shall profit. And whatever you shall ask of the Creator rightfully, you shall have it.

[The Sixth Book]

[Samaim which Names all the Heavens and their Angels]¹

[51^v] Here begins the Sixth book that treats of the names of the Heavens

Dixit Solomon omnes coiter horas et malas &c.

Solomon said "All men commonly affirm [the existence of] good hours and evil, and good days and evil, and good signs and evil. And this with many reasons they confirmed. And I, Solomon, have tested the days and hours of Madim [Mars] & Sabaday [Saturn] which I found very grievous [bad] for work. I have tested also the hours of Zedek [Jupiter] and Nogah [Venus]. And I saw that whenever I would work with them lightly I wrought [successfully]. The hours of Cocab [Mercury] and Labana [Moon], I have tested [and found] some grievous [bad], and others good. And I saw proved that in that day, and in the hour, nothing of my wishes might I fulfill."

And know that the spirits abovesaid [in the opinion of] many men are named for the first [planet] in Hebrew which is Sabaday, in Arabic zoal, in Greek orgrue fenes [?], in Latin it is called Saturn. And I say therefore that the first hour of the day of Sabaday is [also] called Sabaday, the second [hour] Zedek, the third Madim, the fourth Hanina, and the fifth Nogah. The sixth Cocab, the seventh Labana. And the hours of the night ought to [be similarly] named by you. And know that by the planets abovesaid, and the days and hours, whatever you wish [to do] you shall understand. And you shall know the hidden and secret wiles of men.

Cumque per Semiforas operari voluerat &c. [52^r]

When he wants to work by Semiforas first, or whenever he begins any thing, it is well to name the 7 names of Angels, for these angels are rulers over the seven Heavens, rulers over the 7 planets, rulers over the 7 days of the week, rulers over the 7 metals, rulers over the 7 colours, and rulers over the 7 words having power, the names of the which are these: Raphael, Gabriel, Samael, Michael, Saquiel, Anael, Capciel.

And these are arranged so that we ought to name and to call them during the 7 days, early [in the morning] in this manner:

Nota orationem o angeli supradicti sitis meae quominis quam volo quaerere auditores et misri in oibus adintores &c.

That is to say, Oh angels abovesaid are the hearers of my question which I will enquire, and for me in all things, are my helpers. These truly, which we ought to name, rule over the 7 Heavens, and rule over the 7 planets are these: Capciel, Saquiel, Samael, Raphael, Anael, Michael, Gabriel. And in all things in calling these angels you shall profit. There are 7 Heavens that is: Samaym [Shamayim], Raaqu [Raquia], Saaquin [Shechaqim], Maon [Ma'on], Mahon [Makon], Zebul, and Araboth.¹ And there are 4 parts of the world, that is East, West, North and South, with Angels in every Heaven, and we say in what part [each] serves.

These are the Angels of the First Heaven:²

In primo caelo qui vocatur Samaym in quatuor protibus &c.

In the first Heaven which is called Samaym [Shamayim], in the four parts of Heaven, serve these. From the part of the North: Alael, Hiaeyel, Urallim, Veallum, Baniel, Basy, Unascaiel. From the part of the [52v] South these are: Duraniel, Darbiel, Darquiel, Hanin, Anael, Nahymel, Alscini, Soquiel, Zamel, Hubayel, Bactanael, Carpariel. From the part of the East are these: Gabriel, Gabrael, Odrael, Modiel, Raamyel, Janael. From the part of the West are these: Abson, Soquiel.

Angels of the Second Heaven:

In secundo caelo quod vocatur Roaquya a part Septentrionis &c.

In the second Heaven that is called Roaquya [Raquia] from the part of the North serve these angels: Tyel, Jarael, Yanael, Nenael, Neneel, Quian, Uetamuel. From the part of the South are these: Mylba, Nelia, Balyer, Calloyel, Cyoly, Batriel. From the part of the East are these: Maachin, another [source] has Carmiel, Carcoyel, Betabaat. From the part of the West is Anulus, Yesararye, in which is written the names of Macareton and in many ways explained. [There seems to be some missing angels here].

² Compare the following list of angels of the seven Heavens with the list in Peter de Abano's Heptameron. These are listed in Table M10 of Skinner (2006).

Angels of the Third Heaven:

In tertio caelo quod vocatur Saaquin a part Septentrionis &c.

In the third Heaven that is called Saaquin [Schechaqim] from the part of the North serve these: Poniel, Penael, Penat, Raphael, Carmiel, Doranel. From the part of the South are these: Parna, Sadiel, Lyenyel, Vastamel, Sanael, Samyel. From the part of the East are these: Satquiel, Quadissa, Taramel, Taryestorat, Amael, Hufrbria, another [source] has here the last Hifaliel. [The angels of the West are missing].

Angels of the Fourth Heaven:

In quarto caelo quod dicitur Maon serviunt isti a part Septentrionis &c.

In the fourth Heaven that is called Maon [Ma'on] these serve from the part of the North: [53^r] Rahumiel, Haynynael, Bacyel, Serapiel, Matiel, Serael. In the part of the South are these: Saoriel, Mahamel, Gadiel, Hosael, Vaanyel, Verascyer. In the part of the East are these: Capiel, Braliel, Braaliel, Raguel, Gael, Daemael, Calcas, Atragon. In the part of the West are these: Lacana, Astagna, Nobquin, Sonatas, Yael, Yas, Yael, Lael, Yyel.

Angels of the Fifth Heaven:

In quinto caelo isti sunt quod dicitur Mahon.

In the [fifth Heaven, Makon, from] the part of the North serve these Hayel, Hanyel, Veal, Quiel, Margabiel, Saeprel, Mamyel. In the part of the East are these: Lanifiel, another [source] has Barquiel, Zaquiel, Sanficiel, Zoaziel, Aciel, Farbiel, Uranacha. [The part of the South is missing]. In the part of the West are these: Anhael, Pabliel, Uslael, Bortaz, Suncacer, Zupa, Faly, Paly.

Angels of the Sixth Heaven:¹

In sexto caelo quod vocatur cebul dices a part Septentrionalis &c.

In the sixth Heaven that is called Cebul [Zebul] you shall say from the North part "Est Deus fortis et potens sine fine," that is to say "God is mighty and strong without end." From the part of the South you shall say "Deus sanctus patiens et misericors," that is to say "God holy patient and merciful." From the part of the East you shall say "Deus magne excelse et honorate per saecula," that is to say "great god high and worshipped by the world." From the part of the West you shall say "Deus sapiens clare et juste."

¹ There are no angels listed for the two highest Heavens, as these are occupied by god, not the angels, hence the prayers to be said are listed here instead. Peter de Abano follows the same pattern, even if his angel names do not fully agree with Sepher Raziel.

Liber Salomonis

Deus tuam clementiam et sititatem exoro qua quaestionem meam et opus meum et laborem meum hodie [53^v] complete et integre verficere digneris qui vivis et regnas Deus per o. s. s. Amen," that is to say "God wise clear and righteous. God your meekness and your holiness I beseech, that question and my work do daily fulfill and hallow, you vouchsafe to fulfill that [which] lives and reigns, God by all world of worlds, so mote it be. Amen."

Angels of the Seventh Heaven:

In septimo caelo est Semiforas scriptum in libro vitae &c.

In the seventh Heaven [Araboth] the Semiforas is written in the Book of Life. In the name of the meek and merciful god of Israel, and of paradise, and of heaven, and of earth, and of the seas, and of hills, and of creatures.

[Here ends the Sixth Book & here begins the Seventh Book]

[The Seventh Book]

[Book of Virtues and Miracles]

Here begins the Seventh Book that treats of names and of their virtues

Incipiunt sraem et verba et nomina Semiforas &c.

Here begins the words and names of Semiforas, which god the Creator gave to Adam in paradise. In which are four letters [IHVH] which [correspond] to the 4 parts of the world, to the 4 Elements, to the 4 complexions, and to the 4 natures of the beasts, they are likened such they are יהוה הוה.¹ And these are letters piteously, devoutly, and meekly named [so] that petitions [prayers] for all things [may be] fulfilled. Solomon said there are 7 Semiforas.

And the first is the [54r] Semiforas of Adam, in which are contained 4 chapters. The first is when Adam spoke with the Creator in paradise. The second is when he spoke with the angels. The third is when he spoke with the devils. The fourth is when he spoke with men, with fowls & fish, beasts, reptiles and wild beasts. The fifth is when he spoke with seeds, herbs, trees, and all growing things. The sixth is when he spoke with the winds, and with the 4 Elements. The seventh is when he spoke with the Sun and the Moon, and the planets. And by the 7 virtues of Semiforas whatever he wished to do, he did, and whatever he wished to destroy, he destroyed. And this Semiforas Adam had when the Creator inspired grace into him.

[The Seven Semiforas]

The First Semiforas

Primum Semiforas est quando Creator Adam formavit &c.

The first Semiforas is when the Creator formed Adam, and putting him in paradise named יהוה הוה גגגג,² that is to say Yana, the natures and virtues of which above we have declared. If in great necessity, or need, name this name meekly and devoutly, before the Creator, and doubt not that you will find grace and help.

¹ The Hebrew is very badly written, but this is very likely to be IHVH, Tetragrammaton, the name of god plus its mirror image.

² The first block of IHVH and its mirror image HVHI is crossed out. It is followed by גגגג, GGGG, which adds numerically to $4 \times 3 = 12$. This might have been Eleazar's famous רררר. None of these reads as yana, unless you mistake the ך [Vav] for a ן [Nun] and transliterate יהוה YHVH as יהנה YHNH, or yanah, which is what has probably happened here.

The Second Semiforas

Secundum Semiforas est quando Adam locutus fuit &c.

The second Semiforas is when Adam spoke with the Angel which brought to him these letters, a written example of which is such אֲשֶׁר אֲדִיָּה, that is yesseraye.¹ And this name you shall name when you speak with angels. And then your question and your [54v] work shall, without doubt, be fulfilled.

The Third Semiforas

Tertium Semiforas est quando locutus est cum daemonibus &c.

The third Semiforas is when he spoke with devils, and with dead men, and of them [asked] counsel, and they sufficiently answered [him]. And all this he did with these names of which this is the explanation: Adona[i], Sabaoth, Adonay, Cados [Kadosh], Addona, Annora. And these names you shall name when you wish to gather together winds or devils or serpents.

The Fourth Semiforas

Quartum Semiforas est quando animalia et spiritus &c.

The fourth Semiforas is when he bound and loosed beasts and spirits with these 7 names: Lagume, Lamizirm, Lanagzlayn, Lagri, Lanagala, Lanatozin, Laifyalasyn. And when you wish to bind or loose beasts you shall name the names abovesaid.

The Fifth Semiforas

Quintum Semiforas est quando arbores et sementa &c.

The fifth Semiforas is when he called or named the 7 natures with which he bound seeds and trees. And these are: Lihaham, Lialgana, Liafar, Vialurab, Lelara, Lebaron, Laasasilas. And when you wish to bind seeds, or trees, you shall name the names abovesaid. And you shall bind [them with these names].

The Sixth Semiforas

Sextum Semiforas est magnae virtutis &c.

The sixth Semiforas is of great virtue and power, of which these are the names: Letamynyn, Letaglogen, Letafiryn, Babaganaritin, Letarimitin, Letagelogin, [55r] Letafalazin, these names you shall name when you want the elements and winds to fulfill your wishes in all things.

¹ The Hebrew is totally corrupt, and virtually unrecognizable. It was probably meant to be אֲשֶׁר אֲדִיָּה AShR AHIH, 'Asher Eheieh.'

The Seventh Semiforas

Septinum Semiforas est magnum et virtuosum &c.

The seventh Semiforas is great and virtuous, for they are names of the Creator which you ought to name [when doing] each thing, and in all your works call. And they are these: Eliaon, Yaena, Adonay, Cados, Ebreel, Eloy, Ela, Egiel, Ayom, Sath, Adon, Sulela, Eloyim, Deliom, Yacy, Elim, Delis, Yacy, Zazael, Pabiel, Man, Myel, Enola, Dylatan, Saday, Alina, Papym, another [source gives] Saena, Alym, Catinal, Uza, Yarast, Calpi, Calsas, Safna, Nycam, Saday, Aglataon, Sya, Emanuel, Joth, Lalaph, Om, Via, Than, Domyrael, Nimel, Lalialens, Alla, Phenox, Agsata, Tiel, Piel, Patriceion, Chepheron, Baryon, Yael. And these you should name in each season that you work, ruling over the 4 Elements, and whenever you wish to do [destruction] by them, it shall be destroyed.

[The Semiforas of Moses]

Here begins the Semiforas of Moses

Incipit Semiforas qui dominus dedit Moisi et &c.

Here begins Semiforas that our Lord gave to Moses, and it is divided into 7 Chapters, of which the first [chapter] is when Moses ascended the hill [Mt Sinai] and spoke with the flames that surrounded the bush, and the bush seemed to burn, but nevertheless it burned not. The second [chapter] is when he spoke with the Creator on the hill. The third was when he divided the Red Sea and passed through it. [55v] The fourth was when his staff was changed into a serpent and the serpent devoured another [serpent]. The fifth is the name that was written on the forehead of Aaron. The sixth is when he made the brazen adder and the Calf in brass, and smote the Egyptians with the plagues. The seventh is when he rained manna in the desert, and drew out water from the stone, and let out the children of Israel from captivity.

Cap[itulum] Primum [First Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae dixit Moises quando est &c.

These are the names that Moses [heard] when he ascended the hill and spoke with the flames: Maya, Afi, Zye, Yaremye, Une, Bace, Sare, Binoe, Maa, Yasame, Roy, Lyly, Leoy, Yle, Yre, Cyloy, Zalye, Lee, Or, See, Loace, Cadelay, Ule, Meha, Ramechi, Ry, Hy, Fossa, Tu, Mimi, Sehie, Nice, Yelo, Habe, Uele, Hele, Ede, Quego, Ramaye, Habe. And when you name these names devoutly, know your work will without doubt be fulfilled.

Capitulum Secundum [Second Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae dixit Creator &c.

These are the names which the Creator said to Moses when he ascended the hill and spoke with him: Abgincam, Loaraceram, Naodicras, Pecaccecas, Acaptena, Yeger, Podayg, Saccosicum. These are the names with which the temple of Bozale was founded. These are the names of the prophets, and the Angels with which the 4 parts of the world were sealed, with which you may do many miracles. And beware lest you name them, but be chaste and pure, from three days [56^r] fasting, and whatever you wish to do by them, you shall do.

Capitulum Tertium [Third Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae Moses dixit &c.

These are the names that Moses said when he divided the Red Sea: Ena, Elaye, Sayec, Helame, Maace, Lehahu, Lehahu, Alielie, Qore, Azaye, Boene, Hyeha, Ysale, Mabeha, Arayha, Arameloena, Qleye, Lieneno, Feyane, Ye, Ye, Malece, Habona, Nechee, Hicers. And when you want to have grace from any man, these names you shall name devoutly and meekly, and you shall have it.

Capitulum Quartum [Fourth Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae dixit Moses &c.

These are the names that Moses said when his rod staff was changed into a serpent, of the enchanter and the Prophets: Micraton, Piston, Yeymor, Higaron, Ygniron, Tenigaron, Mycon, Mycondasnos, Castas, Laceas, Astas, Yecon, Cuia, Tablinst, Tabla, Nac, Yacuf. And these aforesaid names you shall name when you wish to fulfill your request.

Capitulum Quintum [Fifth Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae scripta erant in populus Aron &c.

These are the names that were written by the people of Aaron when he spoke with the Creator: Saday, Haleynos, Loez, Elacy, Citonij, Hazyhaya, Yeynimeysey, Accidasbaruc, Huadonenu, Eya, Hyebu, Ueu, Uaha, Oyaha, Eye, Ha, Hia, Zalia, Haliha, Eyey, Yaia, El, Ebehel, Ua, Ua. Keep well these names abovesaid for they are holy and virtuous, and these you shall name, so you may get what you ask of the Creator. [56^v]

Capitulum Sextum [Sixth Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae scripta erant in virga Moysi &c.

These are the names that were written on the staff of Moses when he made the brazen serpent and destroyed the golden calf, when all that drunk in the well had a beard [were men]: Yana, Yane, Sia, Abibhu, Uanoia, Accenol, Tiogas, Yena, Eloym, Ya, Uehu, Yane, Hayya, Uehu, Ahiacmed. And these names contain in themselves many virtues, for with them you shall destroy evil and all enchantments. And presume not to name them in the 7 works.

Capitulum Septimum [Seventh Chapter]

Haec sunt nomina quae Moses dixit qua pluit &c.

These are the names that Moses said when manna rained in the desert, and he drew out water from the rock, and led out from captivity the children of Israel: Saday, Samora, Ebon, Pheneton, Eloy, Eneiobceel, Messias, Jahe, Yana or Eolyen. When you wish to do any marvels, or if you were in any anguish, these names you shall name.

And in all things you shall feel their help and the virtue. And when you have done this, rehearse these words by which the names aforesaid are explained:

"Deus vive verax, magne, fortis, poleus, prio, sancte, munde, omni, bonifate, plene, benedicte dominus benedictum nomen sum tua, completer nostram compleas questione tu factor fac nos ad fine urim operis provenire tu largitor nobis integrum complementum urim operis elargire tu sancta et misericors nobis misereres nomen tuam Yeseraye, sit per secula benedictum. Amen."

That is to say, "living true God, great, [57^r] strong, mighty, meek, holy, pure, full of all goodness, blessed Lord be your name, fulfill our requests, you make us to come to the end of our work. You holy and merciful, have mercy on us. Your name, Yeseraye, be it blessed by the worlds, Amen."

In the name of the sovereign almighty Creator I begin the explanation of his name Yeseraye, that is to say God without beginning and without end. Angilae is the name of a prophet and properly written on a golden plate by living men. And whoever bears it, and however long he has it with him, so he shall not dread sudden death.

Here ends the Book of Raziel of the Seven Treatises.

Sepher Raziel in 7 Treatises.

Translated by Joannes Polenarius, a courtier in the court of Rudolph II. This manuscript may have a Dr John Dee connection, as the translation was made just after the time Dee was in touch with Rudolph II's court.

Bibliotheca Vaticana MS Reg. Latin 1300

13th Century? Latin.

Liber Secretorum de Raziel

Queen Christina of Sweden's Latin Sepher Raziel manuscript, given to her in 1650 from the collection of Rabbi Menasseh ben Israel (1604-1657), via Michel Le Blon. This manuscript possibly dates from the 13th Century, as it is dedicated to Alfonso the Wise of Castile (d. 1284) who caused a translation to be made from a Latin Sepher Raziel (probably this manuscript) into Castilian. This manuscript probably belongs in this first category, with other Sepher Raziels divided into 7 Treatises, and may be the root of the other Latin manuscripts.

b) Manuscripts of Sepher Raziel arranged according to the Seven Heavens

These may be a fuller expansion of Liber Samaim, Treatise 6 of the present text, and are similar in structure to Sepher Razim.

Alnwick MS 596

Davies' broad summary of magic books through history in the first few chapters is maybe useful, but it is awfully rapid. Grimoires gets most interesting — and original — in its chapters on more recent times: 'Grimoires USA,' 'Pulp Magic,' and 'Lovecraft, Satan, and Shadows' rather than on the classic pre-1700 grimoires.

Wicked Pack is a well-written and well-researched treatment of how Tarot came to be positioned at the core of the Western occult, focusing on its assumption by the French occultists J.-B. Alliette (= Etteilla), Eliphas Levi, Gerard Encausse (= Papus), and, important in the present context, Paul Christian.

In the first section of her book, Izmirlieva analyzes The Divine Names of (pseudo-) Dionysius the Areopagite (1st century); in the second section, she studies the (Slavonic) amulet known as The 72 Names of the Lord (13th century). Izmirlieva “demonstrate[s], over a large body of textual traces, that The 72 Names of the Lord has its roots in the Gnostic Kabbalah and originates from a Kabbalo-Christian exchange that most probably took place in Provence in the twelfth century” (page 12).

Though this over-sized set of twenty-four books is a part-work (a collectable publication that sells one volume per week), one has to be impressed with the names which appear on the contributors' list and the editorial advisory board: Mircea Eliade, R.J. Zwi Werblowsky, R. C. Zaehner, to name a few. Topics include ABERDEEN WITCHES, ABRACADABRA, AGRIPPA, ALPHABET, FRANCIS BARRETT, BLACK MAGIC AND WITCHCRAFT, BLACK MASS, MAGIC AND MYSTICISM, CORRESPONDENCES, JOHN DEE, DIVINATION, EUROPEAN WITCH PERSECUTIONS, EXORCISM, FAUST, FINDING OF WITCHES, FRENCH WITCHCRAFT, GERMAN WITCHCRAFT, GRIMOIRE, ITALIAN WITCHCRAFT, LOVE MAGIC, MAGIC, MAGIC PAPYRI, MAGIC SQUARES, MODERN WITCHCRAFT, NORTH BERWICK WITCHES, OLD AGE AND WITCHCRAFT, PENTAGRAM, PICATRIX, RITUAL, RITUAL MAGIC, ROOTS OF RITUAL MAGIC, SACRED MAGIC OF ABRA-MELIN, SALEM WITCHES, SATANISM, SOMERSET WITCHES, THEURGY, THOMAS WEIR, WHITE MAGIC, AND WITCHCRAFT.

This edition of the Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses corrects a number of deficiencies in past editions of these grimoires. In it Peterson has provided a number of variant readings, plus excerpts from related grimoires. Of particular interest is his Appendix A8 which has a 9 page excerpt from Liber Sefer Razelis [the sixth and seventh Treatises from Sloane MS 3846].

An appendix to this book (pp. 280-286) gives a list of Sefer Raziel texts in manuscript compiled by Adam McLean. The first MS listed is British Library Sloane MS 3826, which is the present book, discussed in the introduction above as Liber Salomonis. McLean's list is posted on the Internet at the Alchemy Web Site: 'Sepher Raziel Manuscripts,' www.levity.com/alchemy/raziel.html.

Sepher Reziel Hamelach (= Sefer Raziel) is primarily a production of Jewish folk magic. It is discussed by Joshua Trachtenberg in Jewish Magic and Superstition (New York: Behrman's Jewish Book House, 1939; subsequently reprinted), a rare academic treatment of Jewish magic, considered something of a classic, though in sore need of updating. Savedow's work seems to attempt two things: (1) to provide a reliable English edition of the text, and (2) to provide practicing magicians with yet another grimoire.

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

P R E F A C E .

THE first edition of this volume has been commended and criticised by the public. It was admitted to be a valuable compendium of the curiosities of literature generally, and especially of that pertaining to magic, but that it was at the same time calculated to foster superstition, and thereby promote evil—a repetition of the charge made against the honorable Homer, the publisher of a magical library.

In our enlightened age, the unprejudiced will observe in the publication of such a work, only what the author claims, namely, a contribution in reference to the aforesaid literature and culture of no trifling merit; but in regard to the believer also, the issue of a cheap edition will be more serviceable than the formerly expensive productions on sorcery, which were only circulated in abstract forms and sold at extortionate rates. What other practical value the above named edition may possess is not the question. Let us not, therefore, underrate this branch of popular literature; the authors wrote in accordance with a system which was, or at least, seemed clear to them, and illustrious persons, in all ages and climes have not considered the labor requisite to fathom the mysteries of magic as labor expended in vain, and although they condemned the form, they could not deny the possibility or even fact that gifted men, of inherent worth, could accomplish such wonderful things.

In regard to the present edition it can only be said, that the so-called Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses, which have for several centuries attracted the popular faith, is reality in accordance with an old manuscript (the most legible among many), and given word for word, divested only of orthographical errors which the best interest of literature demand—with unerring fidelity. The publisher guarantees that not one syllable has been added.

Sixth Book of Moses.

MOSES' MAGICAL SPIRIT-ART.

Translated from the Ancient Hebrew.

MÁGIA ALBA ET NIGRA UNIVER- SALIS SEU NECROMANTIA;

That is, that which embraces the whole of the White and Black Art, (Black Magic,) or the Necromancy of all Ministering Angels and Spirits; how to cite and desire the IX. Chori of the good angels and spirits, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, and Moon.

The most serviceable angels are the following :

SALATHEEL, MICHAEL, RAPHAEL, URIEL,

together with the Necromancy of the black magic of the best Ministering Spirits in the Chymia et Alchymia of Moses and Aaron.

That which was hidden from David, the father of Solomon, by the High Priest

Instruction.

These two Books were revealed by God, the Almighty, to his faithful servant Moses, on Mount Sinai, intervale lucis, and in this manner they also came into the hands of Aaron, Caleb, Joshua, and finally to David and his son Solomon and their high priest Sadock. Therefore, they are Bibliis arcanum arcanorum, which means, Mystery of all Mysteries.

The Conversation of God.

Adonai, Sother, Emanuel, Elic, Tetragramaton, Ayscher, Jehova, Zebaoth, the Lord of Hosts, of Heaven and Earth; that which appertains to the Sixth and Seventh Book of Moses, as follows :

Adonai, E El, Zeboath, Jebaouha, Jehovah, E El. Chad, Tetragramaton Chaddai, Channaniah. al Elyon, Chaye, Ayscher, Adoyah Zawah, Tetragramaton, Awiel, Adoyah, Chay, Yechal, Kanus, Emmet, thus spake the Lord of Hosts to me Moses.

Eheye, Ayscher, Jehel, Yazliah, Elion. Sum qui sum ab eterno in eternum, thou my servant Moses, open thou thine ears, hear the voice of thy God. Through me Jehovah, Aglai, the God of heaven and earth, thy race shall be multiplied and shall shine as the stars of heaven. In addition to this I will also give thee might, power and wisdom, to rule over the spirits of heaven and hell.

Over the ministering angels and spirits of the fourth element as well as of the seven planets. Hear also the voice of thy God wherewith I give thee the seven seals and twelve tables. Schem, Schel, Hamforach, that the angels and spirits may always yield obedient service to thee, when thou callest upon them and citest them by these seven seals and twelve tables of my omnipotence; and hereunto thou shalt also have herewith a knowledge of the highest mysteries.

Therefore, thou, my faithful friend, dear Moses, take thou the power and high might of thy God.

Aclon, Ysheya, Channanyah, Yeschayah, E El, Elijon, Rachmiel, Ariel, Eheye, Ayscher, Eheye, Elyon. Through my Seals and Tables.

PART I.

THE MAGIC OF THE ISRAELITES.

THE complete and reliable history of the human and divine—the divine revelations, and the influence of godly or pious men are found in the Scriptural monuments of the old Hebrews in the Holy Scriptures.

The Bible is justly styled the Holy Scripture, because it contains the knowledge of the saints, while at the same time, it unites and harmonizes word and deed, doctrine and action. It points out the true relation of man to the Omnipotent—it affords the most direct reference to the great truths of the spiritual and intellectual; it treats of the origin of the universe and its laws, through which all things have to be brought to light—of the anterior and posterior history of mankind—of his future destiny and how to attain it; of the living and visible agents which God employs in the great work of redemption, and, finally, of the most exalted of all beings—of the world's Saviour, who was an universal expression in his own person, and who exhibited all divine power and action in one person, while all his forerunners were endowed only with single powers and perfections; who revealed to fallen man the highest and purest ends of his life and the means of his purification and restoration.

We find among oriental nations every grade of Magic—the steps necessary to solve the mysteries of somnambulism and second-sight, and the infinitely multiplied operations by which unusual occurrences are produced; in like manner we also find these things among the Israelites, but differing totally in character. In the former instance, it was the individual and his presence; in the latter, it was not the individual upon which magic depended, but upon mankind in general, and upon the great future. There, the light of man was made to shine by skillful actions, produced by the lowest arts; here, shone a pure, unclouded, quiet life, vitalized by the warm breath of the Almighty, a light shining into the future, and upon this light depended all life and action. To the Israelite seer not only the fate of single individuals stand revealed, but the fate of nations, yea, of mankind, which in the end must be reconciled to God by the unfolding of magical art, as often happened under the old dispensation, by instinctive somnambulist influences. If we examine the history of the old covenant we shall find that this remarkable people stood solitary and alone like a pillar of fire amid heathen darkness.

Although we find, among other nations, worthy men, who seek after the divine light, surrounded by darkness and uncertainty, here are men of God, bearing the impress of true faith, who give undoubted evidence of higher powers by visible acts and signs which everywhere separate life from death, and truth from error, and while the ancient remnants of other nations show only theory without application, here we find a connected chain of acts and events—in fact, a divine and life-like drama. Of all these things the various books of the Holy Scriptures speak with confidence, so that the history of no other people, interwoven with fables, can be compared with them. According to this, the Bible contains the light which illuminates every dark phase in life ; it is the ground-work of all human actions, the guiding-star of the earthly to the eternal—of the intellectual to the divine, the aim and end of all knowledge. It is the first of three great lights, guiding and governing our faith, and bears no relation to the other two great lights of the angle which shall make these actions lawful, or the circle which sensualizes the fixed limits of the condition of mankind. The Bible is also more instructive and richer in reference to our subject than all other books taken together. We will, therefore, cite a few principal points, as well of the phenomena as of the mode of action and theory relating to magnetism, and then call attention especially to the healing of the sick according to scriptural teachings. We will give an account of the dreams, a great many of which are recorded in the Bible.

The visions of the ancients, according to the testimony of Moses, were nearly always dreams. Numbers, 12, 6 : "And he said : Hear now my words : If there be a prophet among you, I, the Lord, will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream." Job, 33, 15 : "In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed ; then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction." 1 Kings, 3, 5 : "In Gibeon the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream by night : and God said, Ask what I shall give thee. And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee ; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, etc., give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad : for who is able to judge this thy so great a people ?" Genesis, 20, 3 : "But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman thou hast taken ; for she is a man's wife ; and God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart ; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me." Genesis, 31, 23 : "And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad." The dreams of Joseph concerning his brethren are also remarkable. Genesis, 37, 5 : "And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it to his brethren : and they hated him yet the more : and he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream, which I have dreamed : For behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright: and behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf. And his brethren said to him, Shall thou indeed reign over us? or what thou indeed have dominion over us?" And he had still another dream, and he told it to his brethren and said: Behold, I have dreamed a dream more: and behold, the sun and the moon and the stars made obeisance to me. And his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee on the earth?"

Sacred history proves that after Joseph was sold by his brethren to the Egyptian traders, that he actually became their king in the court of Pharaoh. The power of Joseph to interpret dreams is further shown by the interpretation of the dreams of the butler and baker while in prison, Genesis, 1, 40; so, also, of the dreams of King Pharaoh, of the seven fat and lean kine which came out of the water, and of the seven rank and good ears of corn and the seven thin and blasted ears, Genesis, 41, 1. In the New Testament many dreams are mentioned through which God designed to speak to his followers. In this manner Joseph, the husband of Mary, was told by an angel (Matthew 1, 20), that she should conceive of the Holy Ghost and bear a son, who would become the Saviour of the world; and then again, that he should take the child and flee into Egypt to escape the murderous intent of Herod; and after the death of Herod, that he should again return to Nazareth (Matthew, 2, 13-19). In like manner, the three wise men of the East were warned in a dream, that they should not return to Herod, but depart to their own country another way. The Apostles frequently had visions in the night, for example, Paul was commanded to go to Macedonia (Acts 10, 9). And in the same book of the New Testament (18, 9), we read: "Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision; Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace." Many similar passages might be quoted, e.g., 23, 11; 27, 23, etc., etc.

Herein lies the great first cause. God is an uncreated being—heaven and earth are the first things created; the antithesis: that which was made of God. In reference to a second antithesis, Moses speaks of light and darkness: "And darkness was upon the face of the earth, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light." Here, too, the question is about light as a creation, which, however, had for its opposite darkness; therefore did the old Egyptians regard darkness as the beginning of all things. Even according to the writings of Moses, this was the Egyptian doctrine, for he says, "Darkness was upon the face of the deep." But as the Egyptian doctrine in its first inception may be regarded as good authority, their error originated in this, that they accepted the darkness before the light; as also a like error of the Persians, inasmuch that they accepted the light before the darkness as being created, the one before the other. The light stands besides darkness as its natural opposite, created and present, as Moses plainly says: "And God divided the light from the darkness; and God called the light day, and the darkness he called night." The Bible also points out another antithesis in the first germs and figures of the earth, namely, water and spirit—the water as matter as the germ of the figurative, and the spirit, the Elohim, as the fruitful, active principle. "And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." One-sided views led the early philosophers into numerous errors. In this manner Thales brought everything out of the water and overlooked the spiritual active whole, in all of which he was imitated by subsequent champions of Materialism. The other one-sided view is, to hold every thing as spiritual and regard matter only as an extra abstraction (caput mortuum), which was the case from the earliest period of time among Spiritualists and the advocates of Spiritualism. Moses, therefore, shows his superiority over all the disciples of Egyptian temple-wisdom, as well as of the more modern sects; inasmuch that he was enlightened by divine wisdom, and represented this subject, not in a partial manner, but in its true bearing and significance; he ascribed to matter its true worth and placed the spiritual beside it. Moreover, Moses has given the narrative of the creation in beautiful and captivating language, as for example, in regard to the waters—the difference between the wet and the dry, and how the dry land came forth from the water; how the grass and herbs, which bore seeds, and fruitful trees grew upon the earth; how the mighty deep was filled with living and moving animals, and the birds that fly in the firmament of heaven; how the earth finally brought forth living animals, each after its own kind, and last of all, how God made man "in his own image," to whom he gave "dominion over the fishes of the sea, over the fowls of the air, over the cattle, and over every creeping thing that creeps upon the earth."

The Mesiaic Eden was the habitation of the originally purely created beings, within whose boundaries grew the tree of knowledge of good and evil. The figure of the serpent shows the nature of the fall of man. We spoke, in another part of this work, of the original purity and wisdom of godly men. Here is the place to record additional Bible principles. To this end we avail ourselves of a mystical, interesting manuscript from which we extract what follows: (MAGICKON; or, the Secret System of an Association of Unknown Philosophers, etc., v. 27-31. Frankfort and Leipzig, 1784. A rare Book, whose Teachings, in many respects, agree with the Indian Brahmin Doctrine).

In view of his divine origin, as an unconditional emanation from God, Adam was not only the noblest being, which, as an expression of divine power, had the preference of all others, for he never owed his existence to a mother; he was a heavenly Adam, brought into being by God himself and was not born into the world in the ordinary manner. He also enjoyed, in consequence of his nature, every prerogative of a pure spirit, surrounded by an invulnerable veil. But this was not the sensual body of the present time, which is only an evidence of his degradation—a coarse mantle—by which he sought to protect himself against the raging elements. His garments were holy, simple, indestructible, and of an indissoluble character. To this condition of perfect glory, in which he enjoyed the purest happiness, he was destined in order to reveal the power of the Almighty, and to rule the visible and invisible. Being in possession of all the prerogatives and insignia of a king, he could also use every means to fulfil his high destiny. As the champion of unity, he was secure from the attacks of all inward and outward enemies, because the veil by which he was covered (the germs of which are still within us), rendered him invulnerable. One advantage that the original pure man possessed was, that no natural poison, nor all the powers of the elements could harm him. Christ promised invulnerability to his apostles and all his followers, through the regeneration of man. In this condition man also bears a fiery, double-edged, all-penetrating sword, a living word, which combines in itself all power, and through which "everything is possible to him." Of this sword Moses says, Genesis 3—24: "So he drove out the man, and he placed at the east end of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the tree of life." In Revelations 1—16, we read: "And out of his mouth went a two-edged sword," etc. By this sword we are to understand the living word, which was originally inherent in man, and which can only be restored to him by his return to a pure state, and by being cleansed from the blot of sensualism. It is the word of which we read in Hebrews 4—12: "For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit."

Most extraordinary is the powerful, all-conquering Honover (word of power), of Zoroaster, which fully corresponds with the foregoing, by which Ormuzd overcame Ahriman and all evil. "In this condition of kingly honor and power," we read further, "man, as the most life-like image of his father, (whose vice-regent he was on earth), could have enjoyed the purest happiness had he properly guarded his Eden, but he committed a breach of trust. Instead of ruling over the things of sense and striving for a higher spiritual state, to which he was ordained, he imbibed the unhappy idea of exchanging the great cardinal points of light with truth, that is, he confounded light with truth, and in this confusion he lost both and robbed himself. Because he lost sight of the boundary of the kingdom over which he was placed as a watchman, and confined himself to only a portion of it, namely, the sensual, the glitter of which blinded him so greatly as to make him forget all else; because he flattered himself that he could find the light in another place than the first great fountain, he fastened his voluptuous eye on a false existence, became enamored of sensualism and became sensual himself. Through this adultery he sank into darkness and confusion, the result of which was, that he was transplanted from the light of day into the night of innumerable small twinkling stars, and now he experienced a sensual nakedness of which he was ashamed. The abuse of the knowledge of the connection between the spiritual and the bodily, according to which man endeavors to make the spiritual sensual and the sensual spiritual, is true adultery, of whom, he who is moved by the female sex is simply a consequence and an imitator. Through sin man lost not only his original habitation, and became an exile into the religious state of the fathers and mothers, having to go in the way of the flesh, but he also lost the fiery sword, and with it everything else that had made him all-seeing and unconquerable. His holy garments now became as the skin of animals, and this mortal, perishable covering afforded him no protection against the elements. With the wasted half of his body, the spiritual also added to the confusion, and discordant sounds were heard in the dark places of his spiritual domain.

Although man had sunk deep in sin, the hope of a full restoration was given to him on condition of a perfect reconciliation. Without such reconciliation, however, he sinks deeper and deeper, and his return becomes still more precarious. In order to be reconciled he must become self-abased, and resist the false allurements which only serve to steep him in the mire of the elements, and he must seek, by prayer, to obtain the more exalted blessings of benevolent influences, without which he cannot draw a pure breath. In this reconciliation he must gradually overcome everything, and put away everything from him that will cloud his inner nature and separate him from the great source of his being; because he can never enjoy peace within himself and with nature around him until he has thus overcome everything opposed to his own nature, and gained the victory over all his enemies. But this can only be done when he returns the same road upon which he had wandered away. He must wean himself by degrees from the sensual by a heroic life, and like a weary, footsore wanderer, who has many steep mountains to scale, continue to mount upwards, until he reaches the goal, which is lost in the clouds. Overcoming one obstacle after another, he must dispel the dark vapors that intervene between himself and the true sun, so that in the end the pure rays of light may reach him without interruption. The following is a genuine scriptural doctrine according to the Indian creed, differing, however, in character :

“The Almighty has provided means to aid man in the work of reconciliation. God has appointed higher agents to lead him back to Him from the error of his ways. But he can only be fully restored through the Saviour of the world, who finished and perfected all that these agents had accomplished only in part at different times. Through Him all power became animated and exalted; through Him he approaches the first and only true light, a knowledge of all things, and especially, a knowledge of himself. If the man is willing to accept this offered help, he will surely arrive at the desired goal, and he will be so firmly established in faith, that no future doubts can ever cause him to waver. If he elevates his will, so as to bring it in unison with the divine will, he may spiritualize his being already in this world, so that the higher spiritual kingdom may become visible to his eyes, and feel God nearer to him than he ever thought it possible; that all things may become possible to him, because he adds all powers to his own, and in this union and harmony, with a fullness of a higher vitality, the divine agents, Moses,

Elias, yea, even Christ himself, may become visible to him, when, living amid thought, he requires books no longer. In short, man can attain to such a degree of perfection, even in this life, that death will have nothing more to do than to disrobe him of his coarse covering in order to reveal his spiritual temple, because he then lives and moves within the eternal. Only when he arrives at the end of this vale of darkness, will he receive, at each stage of his journey, more extended life, greater inward power, purer air, and a wider range of vision. His spiritual being will taste nobler fruits, and at the end of his race nothing can separate him from the exalted harmonies of those spheres, of which mortal sense can draw but a faint picture. Without distinction of sex, he will begin to live the life of angels, and will possess all their powers, of which he had but a faint sign here; he will then again enjoy the incense of the eternal temple, the source of all power, from which he was exiled, and Christ will be his great High Priest (Hebrews 7, 17, 24, 25). Man will not only enjoy his own gifts, but he will have a part in the gifts of the elect, who constitute the council of the wise; that holy sovereign will be more exalted there than he could be here; there will be no rising or setting of the light of the stars; no changes of day and night, and no multiplicity of languages; every being will in that moment be enabled to read the name of that holy book, out of which flows life for every creature (Hebrews 12, 22, 23). And here, too, the views of Zoroaster are in accord with the foregoing, for he also speaks of a heavenly meeting, and the participation of every follower of Ormuzd in the sacrifices and prayers of all, etc.

In placing this prominent treatise so plainly before the reader I felt no hesitation, because it was so clear and true, and because it seemed so proper for this work here, and to show why only pure and truly Christian men can perform great wonders and see visions of which the worldly-minded have not even a conception. I will now relate a few instances of magnetic appearances and occurrences, many of which are recorded in the Bible.

The first and most striking one we find in connection with Adam. Moses writes (Genesis 2, 21) as follows: "And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept." And now, the question arises, What kind of a sleep was this? The answer is, it was a deep sleep. It was either the sleep of death, or a state of lethargy, or a trance (raptus divinus), or, was it merely an ordinary sleep? The first appears improbable, and had this been the case, we know, that in the release of the body from its earthly bonds, and shortly before death, the clearest instances of second sight have occurred; but the question is not of a mortal illness, but of a deep sleep. If it was a trance, then that inward second-sight may be regarded the more probable. The seventy-two translators of the Bible actually regard this sleep as a trance, and Tertullian says, in direct reference to it, "The power of the prophecies of the Holy Ghost fell upon him." (Accidit super illum spiritus sancti vis operatrix prophetiae.)

he was commanded to leave his fatherland and move towards Haran in Canaan. Abraham had many visions, or was the conversation of the Lord with him, recorded in the Bible really only than a figurative expression of intuition? Through these visions or conversations, as you will, he was taught that he would be greatly blessed, and that he should be the father of a great nation, etc. As he came into the sacred grove of Moria, the Lord again appeared unto Abraham and said: "This land will I give unto thy seed."

The innocent life of the shepherds, and their frequent abode in sacred groves, very naturally brought such intuition to the very highest point of perfection, and this was especially the case, when their minds were occupied with God and godly things. And this is particularly shown in the history of the shepherd-life of the pious Israelites, not only by the ancient fathers, but subsequently, in the time of the kings and judges. Isaac and Jacob had visions similar to those of Abraham. We notice especially the vision of Jacob while journeying into Mesopotamia, in which he saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven. It is written (Genesis 28, 10): "And Jacob went out from Beersheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set: and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and behold, a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord, etc. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, etc. And in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And Jacob awoke out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." How truly was Jacob's dream fulfilled! The promised land became the possession of the Jews; through his seed, namely, through Christ the Saviour, who is the heavenly ladder upon which the angels of God ascended and descended, all the nations of the earth have been or will be blessed.

We find another remarkable instance of the magnetic influence in changing the nature and complexion of living objects, in the history of Jacob. It is as follows: Jacob agreed with Laban that he would still guard his sheep, provided, that Laban would give him as a reward for his service, all spotted lambs and goats that should in the future be added to his flocks. Laban consented to this proposal, and Jacob became immensely rich. It is worth the trouble to insert the passage relating to this transaction, as an application of the mysterious doctrine of magnetism.

When Jacob would no longer watch over the sheep and desired to go away with his wives and children, Laban said unto him, Genesis 29, 27-43: "I pray thee, if I have found favor in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake. And he said Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it. And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee and how thy cattle was with me. For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now increased unto a multitude : and the Lord hath blessed thee since my coming : and now, when shall I provide for mine own house also? And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me anything : if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock : I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats : and of such shall be my hire. So shall my righteousness answer for me in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face : every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me. And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word. And he removed that day the he-goats that were ring-streaked and speckled, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hands of his sons. And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob : and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks. And Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chestnut-tree : and pilled white streaks in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods. And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink. And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-streaked, speckled, and spotted. And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-streaked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban ; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle. And it came to pass whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods. But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in ; so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's. And the man increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses."

This proves clearly that the sheep and the goats could be made to bring forth their young changed in color and appearance corresponding with the pilled rods which were placed before them by Jacob as they drank from the water. In these days, the theory that the features of the offspring of a human mother can be affected by an object upon which the mother gazes, is pronounced absurd ; and yet this theory, in the very nature of things, is as fully established as the fact that the mental qualities of many children differ totally from those of their parents. The fact that the sheep and the goats, upon seeing the objects which Jacob so skillfully placed before them, brought forth their young differing in appearance from themselves, has a very deep significance. Either Jacob knew what the result of this stratagem would be from experience, or it was revealed to him in a dream, for we read, Genesis 31, 10 : "And it came to pass at the time the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and behold, the rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-streaked, speckled, and grizzled." With the water which they drank, and in which at the same time they saw their own reflection, they transmitted the image of the speckled rods to their young.

We have not the space here to enter into a more extended argument to prove the truth of this phenomenon, but the fact that the female progenitor, both human and animal, is capable at the period of gestation to transmit to her offspring the image and likeness of surrounding objects, has a surer foundation than is commonly believed to be possible. The great army of Materialists, who represent the spirit of the scriptures and of life as an ordinary earthly matter, so as to make it appear that nothing is hidden in the sanctuary that they cannot comprehend by their intellect, will never be converted, and those who rely upon the benign influences of a higher light in the temple, which will exist beyond the life of this world, will never need conversion.

Moses himself, the great man of God, had many remarkable visions. These visions consisted in part of dreams and partly in ecstasies, and for this reason was he educated in all the mysteries of the Egyptians and in all their magical arts, in which he excelled all others. On account of his extraordinary piety and wisdom he was made the savior of his people from the thralldom of Pharaoh. His visions were of a diversified character. His ability to lead and govern the people was the direct result of a deep intuition. If we regard this ability as mere inward sight, then we must admit that it was a purely magical gift; if as the result of direct command of the voice of God (for according to the scriptures God often spoke personally with Moses), we find in it a confirmation of the truth, that a pious mind, open to divine influences, can also perform divine acts.

The first important vision of Moses occurred at Mount Horeb, while he was yet engaged in watching over the flocks of Jethro, his father-in-law (Exodus 3, 2): "And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a burning bush: and Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the burning bush, and said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."

Moses, the prophetic seer, acquainted with the weakness of his brethren, full of religious zeal, and gifted with a glowing phantasia, came to the lodge of his father-in-law in Midian, where he had time and opportunity, as a shepherd, to store his mind with religious contemplations, so that in a state of ecstatic second-sight, he could review the ways and means by which he might become the leader and shepherd of his people. The centrum of his mind was open to the higher influences of God, who appeared unto him as a light in the burning bush which was not consumed, and with whom, with veiled countenance, he conversed familiarly. We find in Moses the emotions of an inward psychological struggle with hopes and fears, with extreme weakness and supernatural strength of will; of submission, reverence and obedience; of confidence, and finally of an enthusiasm, that, regarding all earthly obstacles as nought, he overcame all things. While he was thus equipped with god-like powers, he subdued the elements of nature and compelled them to testify to the greatness and glory of God by the marvellous wonders which he performed. In such ecstasies Moses could tarry long on the mountains and separate himself from the people on the journey in the wilderness, and would yet be venerated as a man of wonders. The visions of Moses embraced the present and the future. He not only delivered the commands of God from the mountain, but he also foresaw the offerings that were brought to the golden calf; he foresaw that he could prepare the children of Israel for the pure worship of God, and guard them against error and idolatry only by isolating them in the wilderness from the heathen nations around them. In addition to the above indications we need only call attention to the special visions of Moses, his gifts, his ability to transfer the power of divination to others, and class them among magnetic occurrences; we may omit the different kinds of sacrifices, the consecration and blessing with water, oil and blood, and laying on of hands, etc., as well as the stringent prohibitions against taking any part in sorcery, false divination, conjuring and inquiring of the dead.

Among a few instances, resembling magnetism, we mention particularly the rod with which Moses performed his wonders before Pharaoh, and the stretching out of his hands by which he divided the waters of the sea (Exodus 14, 16): "But lift thou up thy rod and stretch out thy hand over the sea, and divide it; and as Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, the waters were divided. And when the Egyptians pursued them, Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it, and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea, so there remained not so much as one of them." The stretching out of the hand of Moses and the wonders he performed with his rod are of great significance. With his rod he smote the rock in Rephidim, and the water gushed forth to quench the thirst of the murmuring people (Exodus 17, 5): "And the Lord said unto Moses, go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river take in thy hand and go; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall water come out of it, that the people may drink." And when Amalek came and fought against Israel, Moses said unto Joshua (Exodus 17, 9-11): "Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek; to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in my hand. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed."

The gift of prophecy seems also to have been given to the pious elders of Israel through their intercourse with Moses, for it is written (Numbers 11, 23-29): "And the Lord said unto Moses, Is the Lord's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not. And Moses went out and told the people the words of the Lord, and gathered together the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them around about the tabernacle. And the Lord came down in a cloud, and spake unto him and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders : and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied, and did not cease. But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad : and the spirit rested upon them : and they were of them that were written, but went not out into the tabernacle : and they prophesied in the camp. And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them. And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake ? would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them !

The various conditions of clairvoyance are clearly described by Moses. Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses because of the Ethiopian whom he had married, and they said (Numbers 12, 2-8) : " Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses ? Hath he not also spoken by us ? And the Lord heard it. And the Lord came down in a pillar of the cloud and called Aaron and Miriam : and they both came forth, And he said, Hear now my words : If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision and will speak unto him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all my house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently and not in dark speeches, and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold." And so it was also among the Israelites and other nations, and is now in our magnetic appearances and revelations by visions, and especially in dreams and dark words and figures, which is frequently the case in the lower condition of somnolency ; but in the highest grades of clairvoyance, when the mind is pure as in the case of Moses, it is to behold in the true form.

The personal conversations of God with Moses, and his power of beholding the Almighty in his true similitude are figurative expressions, and must not be taken in a literal sense. For the Lord speaks through revelation and by means of the light, and not by word of mouth, neither can God be seen by mortal eyes, for He says in another place, " No man can behold me and live." This language is the expression or impression of the divine word, and a light from the very purest source ; it is the spiritual gift and revelation of the Deity to man, which must be taken according to the various grades of intelligence of beings, as in nature, according to the kind of light produced by different actions, whether the effect be produced upon near or distant, thick or thin, hard or soft objects, etc.

This language was understood by prophets and consecrated men in all ages, and these could not communicate the light they had received in any other language than those which were spoken in their day, although, that which came over them was much more simple, comprehensive and spiritual than any spoken communication could have been. The language of God is the influence of a higher light through which the spirit which he pervades becomes electrified. God acts as a centrum only on the centrum of things, that is, on the inner or spiritual, and the outward manifestations follow ex post. It is not less significant that the bite of the fiery serpents was healed by gazing upon the brazen serpent. "And the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way, and spake against God and against Moses. And the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died. Therefore the people came to Moses and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the Lord and against thee: pray unto the Lord that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people. And the Lord said unto Moses, make thee a fiery serpent and set it upon a pole; and it shall come to pass that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live." (Numbers 21, 4-9.)

The visions and prophecies of Balaam, son of Beor, to whom Balak sent Messengers, that he might curse Israel, are also of a remarkable character. (Numbers 22, 23-24): "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord, my God, to do less or more." So spake Balaam to Balak, who tried to bribe him to do evil.

In Numbers 24, 4, 15, 16, 17, 19, we have an account of the visions of the heathen seer, in which was announced the advent of Christ: "And the spirit of the Lord came upon him and he took up hisparable and said: And the man whose eyes are open hath said: He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the visions of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open, I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh; there shall come a Star out of Jacob and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion." The history of Balaam proves that the power to perform wonders was not possessed by holy seers alone. Balak, king of the Moabites, being afraid of the Israelites, desired to form a league with the Midianites. But since neither the Moabites nor the Midianites felt like engaging in hostilities with the Israelites, they resorted to magic, and since they had no magician among themselves, they sent for Balaam, who was celebrated for his powers of charming and divining. The messengers came to Balaam with costly presents in their hands (for he took money for his services as soothsayer), and demanded that he should curse this strange people. Balaam invited them to tarry over night; in the morning he arose and made known to the messengers that God neither permitted him to curse the Israelites, nor allowed him to accompany them to their country, for "that people was favored of God." Balak thinking he had not offered enough, sent more costly presents by the hands of his nobles, in order to induce Balaam to visit him and curse Israel. Balaam, a mixture of faith and fickleness, of truth and avarice, of true prophecy and magic, said to the servants of Balak: "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do less or more." And yet, after he had spoken with the Lord during the night, he arose in the morning, saddled his ass, and prepared to go with the Moabite princes, and afterwards told the enemies of Israel how they could lead them into idolatry.

Here follows the history of Balaam's perfect somnambulism. Being a visionary, he was divided within himself, because he tried to serve God and Mammon. His conscience unbraided him, "And God's anger was kindled against him because he went: and the angel of the Lord stood in his way for an adversary against him." Now he changed his inward perception from the angel and transferred it to the ass, which now also beheld the angel standing in the way, and therefore began a rational conversation with its rider. The ass, with characteristic obduracy, preferred the fields to the uneven paths in the vineyards, and when force was employed to turn her in the way, she thrust herself again the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall, for which he smote her with his staff; and since there was no path to turn aside either to the right or to the left, the ass fell down under Balaam, and he smote her again. Finally the ass spoke to Balaam and pointed out to him his unreasonable conduct, and when he came unto himself he again saw the angel instead of the ass; but his conscience smote him; he confessed his sin and promised to go back again. But the angel permitted him to proceed upon condition that he should speak only what the Lord had commanded him to say, which condition he fulfilled in spite of every temptation that Balak could offer; and he went not at other times to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.' Instead of cursing the Israelites he blessed them, and afterwards actually prophesied concerning the Star of Jacob. (Numbers 24.)

This spurious prophet had no truly divine inspirations, but he prophesied in the same manner as do our mesmeric clairvoyants. For, first, he always went into retirement, when he was about to prophesy, to avoid outward disturbance, which no true prophet ever did. Second, His inward perceptions were opened by closing his outward senses. "So sayeth the hearer of the word, whose eyes will be opened when he bows down." It is evident that the angel with the drawn sword was a vision, and the fact that the ass speaking did not appear strange to him, proves clearly that he could not have been awake. According to the Arabic, Balaam was called "the man with the closed eye," and this induces Tholuck to compare his condition to a state of magnetic ecstasy. Third, Balaam was so incapable of distinguishing between the real object and the apparent subject, that the ass, gifted with speech, made no impression upon him, so that, after he had regained his senses, he saw the angel standing before him and bowed himself before him. Fourth, Balaam made use of certain external means to throw himself into an ecstatic state, which true prophets never did. He was led from place to place in order to obtain visions, differing in their nature, so as to make them conform with the pleasure of Balak. He even employed magic, for it is written: "And when Balaam saw that it pleased the Lord to bless Israel, he went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness." Fifth, finally, Balaam's ecstasies were unstable and uncertain, and his figures and expressions were symbolical, for we read, for example: "He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion." This false prophet then returned to his dwelling, but appears again later in the camp of the Midianites, where he finally perished by the sword at the hands of those whom Moses sent out to fight.

In the days of the judges and kings, dreams and prophetic visions signified the same thing. In 1 Samuel, 28, 6, we read: "In olden times in Israel, when men inquired of the Lord, they said: Come let us go to the seer, for they were called seers who are now called prophets."

In Numbers 27, 18-21, when Moses asked the Lord to give him a worthy follower, it is written: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Take Joshua, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him, etc., and thou shalt put some of thine honor upon him, etc. And he shall stand before Eleazer the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord," etc. I have already quoted passages from the Bible to show that dreams and prophetic visions were regarded as the same thing; and indeed, so important were dreams, that a dreamer was placed in the same category with a prophet. "And when Saul saw the host of the Philistines, he was afraid, and his heart greatly trembled. And when Saul inquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets. (1 Samuel, 28, 6.) We read in Deuteronomy 13, 1-4: "If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or wonder, and the sign or wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying Let us go, after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them: Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." From this we learn that persons who were not prophets, and who were not of a pure heart, also had prophetic visions.

It would be tedious as well as superfluous to recite all the visions of the prophets. In the meantime we will not pass over the most remarkable in silence. In 1 Samuel, 16, we find the history of Saul, who, after the spirit of God had departed from him, became gloomy and ill, and whose condition could only be ameliorated by the sweet sounds of music. "But the spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him. And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee. Let our lord now command thy servants, which are before thee, to seek out a man, who is a cunning player on the harp: and it shall come to pass when the evil spirit of God is upon thee, that he shall play with his hand, and thou shalt be well: and Saul sent to Jesse, saying, Let David, I pray thee, stand before me, etc. And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took a harp, and played with his hand: so Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him." When Saul saw the Philistine host his heart failed him, and he inquired of the Lord, but the Lord answered him not, "neither by dreams, nor by Urim nor by prophets. If there arise among you prophets, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth a sign, etc. Saul was a seeker after signs and wonders, for he at one time inquired of Samuel about his missing asses; at another time he inquired of the witch of Endor, and at other times he depended upon deceptive dreams. The witch said to Saul: "Wherefore dost thou ask of me, seeing that the Lord is departed from thee, and thy kingdom is gone out of thy hand."

In the books of Samiel, who was a clairvoyant in his youth, we find many prophetic visions recorded. The most remarkable of these visions were those of Samuel and David. Even Saul attempted to prophesy until the spirit of the Lord departed from him. The history of the aged king David, who could no more obtain warmth of body, even though he was covered with clothing, we have already related. A young virgin was procured, who slept in the king's arms and cherished him, and so he obtained heat. (1 Kings, 1, 1.)

Among all the prophets of the old dispensation there was none more exalted than Elias, whose very name was a synonyme for a higher grade of being. We find in him an example of great significance in magnetic transactions. He imparted the most important doctrines of life, and he gave life to such as had apparently died, a history of which is here inserted verbatim: "And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick, and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him. And she said unto Elias, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son? And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed. And he cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord, my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son? And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elias; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived. And Elias took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him to his mother." (1 Kings 17, 17-24.)

Of a similar kind a still more remarkable instance of the striking and powerful magnetic influence is given in the history of the Shunammite's son who was restored to life by the prophet Elisha (2 Kings, 4, 18-37). "And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father, to the reapers. And he said unto his father, My head, my head! And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother. And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died. And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door and went out. And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again. And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither new moon, or Sabbath. And she said It shall be forward; slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee. So she went, and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder that Shunamite: Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well. And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught him by the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her: and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me. Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me? Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take thy staff in thy hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff upon the face of the child. And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her. And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice nor hearing. Wherefore, he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked. And when Elisha had come into the house, behold the child was dead, and laid upon his bed. He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes. And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunamite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, take up thy son."

What may we learn from this? First, that one must be a man of God as Elisha was. Second, Elisha must have been well acquainted with the transferring of this power by means of a conductor, or he would not have sent his servant before him with the staff, by simply laying the same upon the face of the dead child, and thereby restore him to life. Third, the command that he gave unto his servant, to salute no one by the way, has a deep significance. He was to give his undivided attention to the business of raising the dead unto life, and not to be led away by any other consideration or occasion whatever. A proof that it is highly necessary and important that a magnetic physician should be free from all diversions in order to concentrate all his energies upon the one object,—the patient. Fourth, the very management in this case, is incomparable. Fifth, it is a proof that perseverance and continuance is a chief requisite in a magnetic operation: you cannot fell a tree with one stroke, so Elisha, after the first effort, arose and walked to and fro in the house, and only upon the second effort did the dead lad begin to breathe. By the conduct of Elisha (and Saul), we may learn, that the inner sense may also be developed by music, as for instance, when Elisha was called upon to said: "But now, bring me a minstrel." And as the minstrel played the hand of the Lord came upon him, and he prophesied. (2 Kings, 8, 15.) That they knew the method of healing by laying on of hands, and that they practiced it, is proven in the passage (2 Kings, 5, 11.) Naaman, the Syrian captain, expected Elisha to move his hand over the leprous part, and thus put away his leprosy.

We often read that the remains of saints worked marvelous wonders and healed the sick long after their decease. This was the case with Elisha, for we read (2 Kings, 13, 20): "And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year. And it came to pass as they were burying a man, that behold they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man was let down, and touched the bones of Elisha, he revived and stood upon his feet." If it might probably appear, that in the earliest ages men were chiefly given to prophecy and inner perceptions, in our day and among us the female more frequently possesses these gifts: still, there are numerous instances of prophetic women recorded in the Bible also, as, for example, the woman of Endor, who possessed the spirit of divination and to whom Saul went to inquire of. Huldah, the Prophetess, (2 Kings, 22, 14), and Deborah, the wife of Lapidoth, etc.

Let us once more take a retrospective glance upon the people of Israel, according to the history of the Old Testament, and upon the ancient days of the Orientals, and compare the magic among them to that of later years, and we shall find many and essential differences. In the first place, I have remarked before, how that the people of Israel stood single and alone before all the heathen nations, and how the magic among them assumed an essential and diversified form. For although the Jews remained so long in Egypt, they brought very little Egyptian magic with them on their return; that is, of the genuine theurgical magic art, which is the result of natural powers and of human inventions. These magical ecstasies and wonder workings were more of the nature of divine inspiration, while the black art, practiced by natural means, which was to produce supernatural effects, was met with severe punishment as an unholy work of sorcery and witchcraft. We find quite the contrary in heathendom, since here the true knowledge of the divine was either lacking altogether, or it was adulterated by traditions and darkened by mysteries. As for instance, in Egypt Athor, according to the Theogony of Hesiod, the darkness of night was worshipped as the great unknown, through profound silence; but to the Israelites the light appeared in the unity of God, whom they worshipped with loud hymns. In the entire old world of Heathendom the power of the principle of nature governed, and brought down the spiritual vibration to the level of the terrestrial or earthly. The true magic of the divine was hid from that erring people, being covered with a veil through which but few glimpses of light penetrated. The light shone in the darkness, but the darkness comprehended it not. Hamberger says: "Heathendom was capable only to take up single rays, as it were, in an oblique direction, but the elect of God, as the posterity of Shem, in whom mankind was to be exhibited as such, and to whom all the rest of mankind, as the mere common people (Gojim) were retained, they could rejoice not only in a circuitous, but in a central influence on the part of the Lord. "Thou art a holy people unto the Lord, says God. (Dent. 7. 6.) The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people to Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth."

Israel was appointed thereto, not so much to conceive and grasp the outward glory of God, the ideal world, but much more His inner being, to be led deeper and deeper into the sanctuary of divine personality. This, however, cannot be done at once; and if Israel is not the only pardoned and favored, but if through him all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, this could only be accomplished gradually, and by degrees. Madam Schlegel says: "A longing or love is the root and beginning of every higher and divine knowledge. Perseverance in searching, in faith, and in the contest of life, only prefigure the middle of the way; the termination must always remain something that is hoped for. The necessary epoch for preparation to this gradual process may not be overturned nor set aside by the noblest strivings of man. The character and the history itself of the Hebrew nations are greatly misunderstood, for the very reason, that these things are not duly observed. The whole existence of this people was built only upon hope, and the highest centre of their inner life was placed at a great distance in the future. Upon this also rests the chief difference in the method of the holy deliverance of the Hebrews, as is exhibited by other old Asiatic nations. In the old records of these nations their glance in the proper historic parts is directed more toward the glorious past, with a regretful feeling in consequence of that which man has since lost. Out of all the fulness of these touching, holy remembrances, and out of the oldest joint proverbs. Moses, in his most direct and fixed revelations for the Hebrew children according to the wisest law of economy, brought out but very little, and only what seemed the most indispensable and necessary for his people and the object of God with the same. And as all the writings of the first law-giver, who for this sole object led and brought out his favorite people from Egyptian servitude in a spiritual sense and according to the whole mode of thought, until up to the time of the prophet king and singer of psalms to the last voice of warning and promise that died away in the wilderness—the outward contents and the inward understanding are, according to prophetic writings: so may the people themselves be called a prophetic people in the highest sense of the word, and is such really, taken historically, in the whole course of the world and in their wonderful destinies they were and are such.

Molitor says further:—"The leading of the Israelites furnishes the most apparent proof of the divine nature of religion. Among all nations there are oracles, and in all important affairs and transactions inquiry is made of them, and nothing is undertaken in life unless the favorable judgment of the gods is first obtained. Meantime these oracles do not appear to be positive leaders of the people. They simply reply to inquiries made. Not in a single heathen religion, there, fore, do we observe a really positive, sensitive and divine guidance. But man stands here, solely in his own power. The case is entirely different with the people of Israel, who are nothing, and have nothing of themselves, but whose whole existence and guidance is singly the work of Divinity. Where is there a nation to be found that had such an ethical guidance? Where do you find a people who have made humility and obedience and a childlike surrender to God, their first and chief duty, and accepted chastisement as a token of love, and were brought to their destination through adversity and humiliation? True, there are guidances and trials also in Heathendom, but they are trials only in the vigorous subduing of evil, and the courageous bearing of great burdens. Nowhere, therefore, do we find merit or praise for baseness or lowness. When, for instance, it was said of Moses: "He was an humble man," it was a compliment which was never bestowed upon a heathen hero." (Kabbalah, Part 3, page 116.)

The Hebrew prophets and the heathen seers present an essential difference. Even if the ground-work of natural magical visions appear here as elsewhere; if imagination and sympathy—if the outer influences of nature often produced like effects, and if the Israelites had learned and brought with them many and various Egyptian secrets, as for instance, Samuel's School of Prophets in the Old Testament gives ample proof, as also the holy inspired dance, the prophetic signing, etc., had in it something contagious, insomuch that prophetic students were seized and overcome, as was also Saul, who fell in with them and prophesied, so that the proverb, "How came Saul among the Prophets?" still shows something very curious and surprising; yet, in view of the motive and effect, great differences are found, so that they well deserve to be held to view in this place. They are as follows:

1. The Magician, the Indian Brahmin, the mystical Priest, etc., brings himself into an ecstatic condition, and into supposed union with God, by self-elected methods; Moses and the true prophets of Israel receive an unexpected call to serve Him.

2. The Magician elevates himself by his own innate strength to a higher state and condition than the world by whom he is surrounded; he isolates himself intentionally and his isolation becomes imperative, and through it follow the various castes and grades in life, as, for example, the Indian and Egyptian castes, which produces a special influence upon the diversified conditions of earthly life and intellect; Moses and the prophets are more casual, and in the passive dread of deep solitude, they suddenly hear the call and follow in humility, with veiled countenances. The liberation of his people is not effected by a strong will, and he claims no preference; he does not separate the different castes, but he separates the organic unity of the people from heathen blindness, which he dedicates to God; he is himself the expounder of the faith of God's overruling providence; of the hope in future punishment; of the love of God, and of order and justice among men.

3. Contempt of the world and pride in his own worthiness and knowledge characterize the magical seer. A wise use of life, obedience in serving God and a constant recollection of his sinful weakness, incites the prophet to implore divine help, to pray for a knowledge of the truth, to fulfill not his own, but a higher will. To the Brahmin, for example, the earth is a hell, a place of torment; to the prophet it is a school, through which, in the performance of duty, the peace of true happiness may be found.

4. The magician is a lawgiver, the prophets are obedient disciples, who preach and explain the revelations of God.

5. There we have the means of falling into a state of ecstasy, self-denial and unnatural mortification of the body. Here the world is adapted to the most judicious enjoyment of life. The prophet does not require extraordinary means to fall into a state of ecstasy; he utters the immediate word of God without preparation and without mortifying the body, presents it, and lives among his kind.

6. The index of prophecy itself, in the highest ecstasies of the magicians, is a kind of light lustre; when they are steeped therein, the world with its signatures, and perhaps too, the inner condition of the spirit may become plainly visible, like unto the clairvoyants of our day; but their lips are sealed in this ecstatic state of happiness and in the dazzling lustre of a pathological self-illumination. Therefore, the numerous antagonistic figures of truth and deception, of sensational emotions and phantasmagoria in broken and jarring forms, of convulsions and contortions of the body and the soul, which we find among our mesmeric subjects. Their visions are, like those of certain somnambulists, not reliable, and cannot, in their proper surroundings, be understood without a previous explanation. With the prophets, the visions according to form, are the illumination of a mildly divine light, reflected from the mirror of a pure mind, which retains a perfect personality, and causes a feeling of dependence on God and the outer world. The index of their visions relates to the general concerns of life in respect to religion and citizenship; the prophet speaks and his words are true doctrines, uttered clearly for the benefit of all men and ages, and comprehended by all. He seeks happiness yet finds it not in penance, but in his calling, in spreading abroad the word of God, not in secret contemplations, but by imparting it to his fellow-beings through active co-operation. The true prophet, therefore, is not lost in inward contemplations, neither does he forget himself in the world, but he continues in living relation with God and his neighbor, in word and in deed. Finally,

7. Since the motives and proceedings differ essentially among inspired races, so their aims and results also differ. The Indian magician mourns on account of the gradual lowering of the spiritual from its original lustre, following the rapidly succeeding eras of the world into perishing nature and into the kingdom of death, and deprecates the misery connected therewith, namely, discontent, the confusion and laceration of the spirit, all of which we may find among the different heathen nations. On the other hand, how greatly has universal brotherhood and companionship increased, step by step, through the agency of the true prophet, and how has the spiritual been glorified!

The spirit that waved over the Jewish religion in the west spread its peaceful influences farther and wider, and while in the former instance everything is lost in weakness and darkness, in the latter mountains are removed by active faith, and trees are planted by mutual help and counsel, whose fruit will only ripen for enjoyment in another world; toward which we should turn our faces and our exertions.

The aim of the magician's life is to secure a pleasurable inward contemplation; the true prophet lives by faith and not by sight.

Historians and philosophers of modern times have declared that the ecstatic visions of the prophets of Israel and those of the apostles were identical with magnetic appearances. In order to form a clearer judgment of the circumstances given above, we will add the following:

True prophets receive an extraordinary call from God, and are urged by the Holy Spirit to proclaim the will and counsel of God. They are called seers, men of God, servants and messengers of the Lord, angels and watchmen. The marks of the true prophets of the Old Testament were: 1st. That their prophecies agreed with the doctrines of Moses and the patriarchs (Deuteronomy 13, 1.) 2d. Their prophecies were fulfilled (Deuteronomy 18, 21; Jeremiah, 28, 9). 3d. That they performed miracles, but only when a special covenant was made, or when a special reformation was to be undertaken. 4th. That they agreed with other prophets (Isaiah 8, 2; Jeremiah 26, 18). 5th. That they led a blameless life (Jeremiah 27, 4; Micah 2, 11). That they exhibited a holy zeal in the work of God (Jeremiah 26, 13); and 6th, That they possessed great elocutionary powers (Jeremiah 23, 28-29). Their office consisted in this, 1st, That they instructed the people, when the priests, whose duty it was, became indifferent. 2d. That they restored the slack and decayed worship of God (2 Kings, 17, 18; Ezekiel 3, 17). 3d. That they foretold future events, and to this end asked counsel of God (1 Kings, 14, 2-3; Ezekiel 22, 5-8). 4th. That they prayed for the people and in this manner averted impending judgments (Genesis 20, 7; 2 Kings, 19, 2); and 5th, That they composed the will of God (1 Chronicles, 29, 9).

The same may be said of the apostles and the preachers of the living word. They were called ministers because Christ had himself chosen them and sent them to the ends of the earth to proclaim the atonement and gather His elect. They did not force themselves into his service, but Christ called them in a direct manner, and taught them personally to proclaim the advent of the Messiah, and with these credentials, to perform wonders through the divine word. This new doctrine originated expressly from the prophets of the old covenant: repent and believe in the gospel of the atonement, and prove thereby that ye love God above all things and your neighbor as yourselves. Their lives proved that they were true followers in the footsteps of their Lord and Master, in word and deed, in works and in suffering.

If we select these characters by which to form our judgment, it will not be difficult to distinguish between magnetic sight and prophetic inspiration, not to regard the former too highly, and not to underrate the latter. For if their superficial appearance at first sight seems the same, their difference will soon become apparent when we examine them in a threefold point of view, namely, of cause, content or form and intention.

According to the cause, the palpable difference consists in this, that magical and magnetic second-sight is mainly the work of man, which grows out of a diseased physical soil, no matter whether it is developed by the arts of the physician or whether it is unfolded by chance. An abnormal condition of health always precedes it, and the somnolent state of the outward senses is the first condition of it. If in one person this mesmeric disposition is greater than in another, then the physiological foundation is in his own body, and if occasional circumstances promote second-sight in others, then such causes belong to the kingdom of nature, which binds the clairvoyant in strong bonds and which remains his determinate state even should he reach the highest degree.

Prophetic inspiration is not a procreation of nature or of man but it is an emanation of the Holy Spirit and a divine decree. The divine call comes unexpectedly, and the physical condition has no connection with it whatever. The physical powers can never become the determinate powers, but they remain dependent upon the spirit, which makes it a means to spiritual aims. A mesmeric life with changed functions of the senses and a physical crisis does not take place here.

Secondly, according to form, magnetic second-sight depends directly upon the health and on the life of the seer, or rather, it predominates in the relative modes of earthly life. The clairvoyant directs his attention at will to self-selected objects, at least in a majority of instances, or he interprets his own visions, conducts his own affairs or those immediately surrounding him, or he suffers himself to be outwardly determined without active and persistent independence, and without activity for the common good. Purely human nature, affectation and inclination are never wanting in the magic circle of the seer, and the operation of his will and his faith produces no supernatural or permanent effect, either upon himself or upon others.

The true prophet, according to form, has no diversity of visions, but an unchanging index of scriptural work—the annunciation of Him, who is the Beginning and the End, and by whom all things were created. A prophet is not only a seer, but he is the organ of the divine will. Instruction in the true knowledge of God, and spreading abroad his kingdom, which is truth and love, is his only and constant occupation, therefore he fights against error and wickedness, in order to overcome the world. That which is worldly or changeable—bigotry or sensuality, health, riches and honor in the world, and dominion over his fellow-men, is not his affair. He does not preach a present, but a future state of happiness, genuine peace in God, and the hope of eternal life in His presence, not from personal impulse or selfishness, or from human considerations, but as a willing instrument of perpetual enlightenment, inspired by God himself—a worthy example in work and walk; as an obedient servant and a mediator between God and man, between time and eternity, between heaven and earth. Through prayer, and in word and deed, the prophet continues in a living relation with God and his fellow-beings.

True prophets do not isolate themselves: neither do they sink into the absorbing depths of their own visions, feelings and relations. Their prophecies do not refer to personalities, but to the fate of nations and the world, therefore, are they able in their works to exhibit supernatural powers, strengthened by the omnipotent power of their faith and will, and this power they exercise over their own bodies as well as over the bodies of others and over all nature in its wide and temporal boundaries. The sudden conversions and changes of opinion, the instantaneous healing of severe and lingering diseases, the warnings against threatening dangers, and help for the needy from a distance, giving consolation and strength in trouble and suffering, etc., are proofs of their divine powers.

As we have already stated, the aim of the true prophets was, the revelation of the divine word to man; the spread of the kingdom of God on earth; the ennobling and well-being of the human race. Impelled by the spirit of God, upon whose assistance they relied, their efforts were directed to nothing less than to spread the light of truth and to infuse courage into their fellow-beings, to fight against evil; to awaken mutual attention and assistance, and to extend peace and happiness among men. Self-aggrandizement and the personal advantage of these organs of the Deity were not thought of. The foundation of all their works was faith in the power of God, and they fulfilled the whole sum of the commandments through love, the noblest of all virtues, "but the fruit of the spirit is love" (Galatians 5, 22); "And God gives wisdom to them that love Him," (Ecclesiastions 1, 10); "And His banner over me was love." (Song of Solomon, 2, 4.)

To these obvious variations the children of Israel bear special witness. 1st. That the causes of inward visions were actually objective, and that there is something outside of human intelligence that governs and controls the world of man, and that too, independently of the inner centrum of the mind, while the peripheral sense of day and nature are either inactive, or while they are in a very subordinate condition. 2d. That there is a still more exalted spiritual region which takes a positive hold upon the reason and offers revelations which are not of a natural order, and which cannot exist in these lower regions, and which are not merely phantasies, illusions or hallucinations of an abnormal condition of the brain. "The hand of the Lord was upon them." 3d. The ignoring, or rather, the denial of sophistical rationalism, especially by the Israelites, is also represented superficially, just as the pantheistical philosophy of nature is, which distils everything into a common mass, and which represents the prophets and the saints only as somnambulist sects, upon a somewhat higher plane than is ascribed to them in the partial Tellurian dark ages. 4th. Notwithstanding that this class of visions has an outward resemblance to the magical and magnetic, as well according to the anthropological expression as to the symbolical representations, as we have already seen, and it should remind us of magnetic relations, inasmuch as prophetic revelation agrees with the purest forms of second-sight, and whereas dream-visions and fortune-telling originate from circumstances and conditions, so we may find many preparations and arrangements in the old covenant, the same as we have learned to know them among the rest of the magicians of the Orient. We often find among the prophets also, that they secluded themselves in solitary places, and that they fasted and gave themselves up to quiet contemplations. They, like the clairvoyants, speak of an inward higher light, of a light that enlightens them, and they admit this higher illumination to be the spirit of the Eternal, whose hand came upon them and transfigured them, and they walked, as the Psalmist says, in the light of His countenance, "For in Thy light, we shall see light; the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness. Thou art the living fountain and in thy light we see the light." (36, 10, 18, 29.)

The prophets describe the divine higher light as an instantaneous view, presented very frequently in the most familiar symbols, of which the vision of Daniel, by the side of the great river Hiddekel, is one of the most remarkable, and which will serve as an illustration (Daniel 10, 2-21): "In those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz: His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: Yet I heard the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground. And behold, a hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands. And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words. And when he had spoken such words unto me, I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb. And behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength, for how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me. Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me, and said, O man greatly beloved, Fear not; peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong.

And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak ; for thou hast strengthened me. Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I came unto thee ? but I will show thee that which is noted in the scripture of truth, etc." The following passage from Passavant will serve as an illustration of this vision :

"Such a condition, and so penetrating an illumination of the spirit can find its agreement only in the original relation of the creature to the Creator. The created spirit does not generally exist for itself, nor by itself, but only in reference to absolute being. The more perfect the creature, the more inward and free is the communion between the creature and the Creator—the more is man a free agent and a co-worker with God. That which holds good in human nature and in all spiritual power in perception and accomplishment, holds good also especially in the region, in which the human spirit, free from earthly nature and of the bonds of time and place, is more active. As we have, therefore, assumed, that the highest magical operation is, where the human spirit becomes the divine organ, so we are justified in assuming, that the highest magical knowledge must be a divinely illuminated power of second-sight, a spiritual beholding, which is moved and led by the divine spirit. So far now, as we must regard the most inward communion of the creature with the Creator as the final destiny of created spirits, so may we regard the holy power of prophecy as an anticipation of a higher and more perfect condition, in which man knows as he is known (1 Corinthians, 13, 9), where his spiritual freedom shall have attained a knowledge in which he can no longer be circumscribed by earthly laws. But since man must elevate himself to that which is good as well as receive good, so this law of the free and created spirit will repeat itself, because man can raise himself, in different degrees to a higher order in this world, and become enlightened in the same degree. If taken in this connection, the power of the divine seer is not to be regarded separately from other spiritual powers by which he can overcome anything foreign to his nature, but rather as a fixed form, a normal and regenerated soul-power. The spirit of man, the image of God, may become the mirror in which the divine type is reflected just in proportion to the purity of this image." (Passavant's Magnetic Life. Second edition, p. 167.)

Further it will only be necessary to remark, in a general way, that God has made use only of the nobleness of the spirit of Israel for the education and redemption of the human family, and that this people, which had become attached to heathen idolatry, and were disobedient and refractory, could only be brought slowly to their true destiny in the severe school of adversity and by heavy chastisements. The way from Ur in Chaldaea to Canaan, which was taken by the patriarch Abraham, how far it stretched through its lengths and breadths across to Egypt, and from thence through the wilderness to the promised land of which they were to take possession ! Yea, the children of Israel were compelled to wander hither and thither in the wilderness during a period of forty years on account of their vascillation between the service of God and heathen idolatry ; were sent in captivity to Babylon ; the holy city had to be destroyed, and finally, they were compelled to endure the very fullness of woe and persecution, and all because of their vacillating between the service of the true God and of heathen idolatry. If Israel then is, as it is represented, the favored people of God, then it can be nothing less than the pearl of perfection, and consequently the mirror of perverseness, which always strives after outward forms and ceremonies, and seeks happiness in nature and the dissipations of the present, a happiness which cannot be found on earth. The divine word of revelation alone can disclose the happiness of the peace and blessedness of Paradise, and in order to become partakers thereof, the spirit of man must become inured to two great qualifications, namely, natural obedience to the law and a more than natural hope of reaching his final destiny beyond the life of earth. In order to teach the children of Israel humble obedience to the laws, they were exposed to the severest trials and subjected to the meanest slavery.

To this people and to no other, the commandments were communicated in thunder tones by divinely appointed leaders, in order that it might heed with the inner depths of the mind and not merely superficially with the outward senses. Sacrifices and feasts were not to serve as temporal occasions of rejoicing, but they were to serve as a typical covering through which might be seen the true light of the coming Messiah, as the flower-bud turns toward the approaching light of the sun. The Mercy-seat, the Cherubim, the Holy of Holies, the Pillar of Fire, and Solomon's Temple, are all symbolical manifestations originating in magical visions and point to the coming of Christ. That the entire Mosaic regulation was symbolical and hieroglyphical is admitted by every expert, and the following words express this fact clearly: "and look that thou make them after their pattern, which was showed thee in the mount." Moses, the man of God, therefore, constitutes in the history of the children of Israel the second period of the beginning of religious development. The forms and ceremonies of the law were only now strictly enforced in order to impress men with the importance of the revealed word. But how long a period intervened between the wanderings and sufferings of the Israelites, the wonders by which they were surrounded, the death of the first-born in Egypt, the lightnings which flashed from the heights of Mount Sinai, and the time of King David, with whom commenced the third period. "He was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to," (1 Samuel, 16, 12,) and he, the shepherd of his father's sheep was chosen by the Lord to be king over His people. His obedience towards God; and his unwavering faith not only caused it to be said of him, "that he was a man after God's own heart," but as the root of Judah, born in Bethlehem, he also became the type of Christ. He was both king and prophet, and had to bear many troubles and trials. As a servant of God he sought to lead the children of Israel to God at Jerusalem, the mountain of peace, where finally, the mild, illuminating light of the divine Prince of Peace appeared to the world out of the dark, transitory night, on the cross.

"Now I say, that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from the servant, though he be Lord of all; but is under tutors and governors until the time appointed by the father. Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world." (Gal. 4, 1-3.)

"But when the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." (Galatians, 4, 4-5.)

The coming of Christ on earth was not an accidental occurrence as other natural events were. His coming was a revelation ordained by God from the foundation of the world. I have already shown in my anthropological views, that Christ, if he actually was the Son of God, would necessarily have to appear at a fixed time and place, and that his appearance would constitute the beginning of the second period of human power, and that this event would take place on the western coast of Asia.

THE NEW COVENANT.

Having brought forward many of the most extraordinary events of the old covenant which have reference to magic and magnetism, it seems important in more than one sense, also to speak of the new covenant, in order to extract from it that which concerns us so directly, because in the new covenant the magical healing of diseases was effected in so many instances without visible means, as well by Christ himself as by the apostles, from which it would appear that all these miracles and healings were the result of nothing else than magic or magnetism. There are a few extremes here which have been maintained by both the advocates and opponents of these miracles, which we will notice more particularly in this place. In concluding this section we will glance at the existence and signification of Christianity in a general sense, as well as the relation which it bears to magic.

The men of God under the old covenant, who performed such great wonders, and accomplished such wonderful works, were always rather more on the side of humanity than that of the divine, that is, they always evinced only single powers and perfections. The universal expression of full perfection became an absolute reality only through Christ. He it was who first unbarred the new door—severed the chains of slavery, and pointed out the true image of perfection and wisdom in all their fullness to man. Christ again restored to humanity the assurance of immortality. He elevated the spiritual being to a temple of holy fire, and made it a living altar and incense to an eternal peace.

"Since the first man Adam," we read in the Magikon, "is the first fountain of evil, so none of his posterity could be the Saviour, because weakness could not rule over strength; to be a Saviour it required a being that was more than man. Since God alone is superior to man, this agent, or Saviour, could be nothing less than the essential idea of divine powers. In order to awaken a consciousness in the soul of man of what God really was, he had to bear the Divine character in himself. Even the various judgments of men regarding, Christ, show conclusively that all power, all gifts and perfections were united in him."

There are beings for whom the Redeemer has already come, others for whom he comes now, and still others for whom he is yet to come. Since his advent all things have become simplified, and he will simplify himself more and more until everything earthly will vanish. A great sabbath of universal love and peace, as it was in the creation, will signalize the end. He entered the Holy of Holies as the true High Priest, and restored to the elect, through his spirit, not only the lost words of the old book, but gave them a new one, richer in content for the healing of all evil, and for making them invulnerable. In addition he gave to them the holy incense of prayer, and showed them, that without it they would be unable, except through Him alone, to obtain every principle of life. He performed on earth what is found above. He was constantly active, as the highest embodiment of wisdom, in spiritual and temporal acts of charity, and united both in one. But this could only be when He himself was joined in this unity on earth in which he was joined from all eternity. In the end he crowned his work by conferring a spirit which created a knowledge and vitality that were never experienced before. He chose an object of sense as a channel through which to communicate the highest powers of life. Even man may transfer his weak powers on any object: how much more must the mysteries (baptism by water, the communion through bread and wine), instituted by Himself, have possessed a power which man could never possess. The action of the Holy Communion is at the same time corporeal, spiritual and divine, and all things therein contained must become spirit and life, because He himself, who instituted it, was the spirit and the life.

Each true Christian is a living expression of this doctrine and an image of its author. He possesses fervor enough to absorb everything that is diseased and dissolute, and his life is a daily offering in humility and holy fear before God, for the mysteries of God are only revealed to those who fear Him. The true Christian relies upon the commandments of the author of his name. Only such a man can enter into the counsel of peace. If the highest human wisdom continues to be a tottering and perishable structure, a single ray of the sun of the world will make him purer and wiser than all the wise of this earth. Since there are mysteries in every religion, so there are certain things of indescribable power and of the highest weight in Christianity which cannot be explained. So long as these were known only to the true possessors as a sanctuary, Christianity was at rest. But after the great of earth began to set their feet within this sanctuary and desired to see with unprepared eyes; so soon as it was converted into a political machine, divisions and uncertainties ensued. Upon this came the High Priests who separated themselves farther and farther from original purity, and in this way a misshapen mixture of a true monstrosity resulted. Sophists, who flourished like weeds, multiplied these evils by their subtleties, separating that which was united, and covering with darkness and death what was formerly light and life. If even a few traces of purity, zeal and power could be seen here and there; they could accomplish nothing, because the horrors of desolation had already become too general and were preferred by too many. These corruptions were the cause, in later times, that the structure of Christianity was sapped in its very foundations. Only one step from Deism to utter ruin. Out of Deism grew a still worse brood of materialists, who declared that all connection of humanity with higher powers to be idle imagination, and who did not even believe in their own existence. It was very seldom that the generations of the earliest times sinned through great enterprises; those of later periods, on the contrary, sinned through nullity. But there is a truth whose sanctity cannot be shaken, and which will remain firm as long as the world exists.

But if man, through his reconciliation and return to God, and through a true Christian life, receives the powers which the Saviour promised to his followers, namely, "To expel serpents, to heal the sick, and to cast out devils," and this to the same extent that he did himself, (John 14, 12,) and if such a Christian man can in deed and in truth perform greater wonders than one who lives in a state of sin (and we find this to be the case not only with the apostles, but with all godly men of every age), then we must accord to man what is human. I have already spoken of the Christian method of healing, and inasmuch as I refer back to it in this place, the fact will not admit of a doubt, that the healing by Christas well as by the apostles really had reference to magic and magnetism. They never obtained the means to heal diseases from the apothecary, neither did they possess any secret remedies or magical essences; they possessed an inherent power to heal diseases, and by words they cast out devils, restored the dead to life, healed, through prayer and the laying on of hands, the lame and paralytic, and caused the blind to see and the dumb to speak. To prove this, not however to represent them solely as magnetic cures, but to examine them as humanly divine wonders, I will mention a few cures performed by Christ and his apostles as they stand recorded by the Evangelists and in the Acts of the Apostles:—

"When he was come down from the mountain great multitudes followed him. And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed." (Matt. 8, 1-3)

"And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him to heal his servant. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only and my servant shall be healed. When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed: Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour." (Matthew 8, 5-13.)

"And when Jesus had come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose and ministered unto him." (Matt. 8, 14, 15.)

"When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick." (Matt. 8, 16; Mark 1, 32.)

"And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy : Son, be of good cheer ; thy sins be forgiven thee." (Matt. 9, 2 ; Mark 2, 3.)

"And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment : For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort ; thy faith has made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour." (Matt. 9, 20-22.)

"And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, he said unto them, Give place ; for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn. But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose."

"And when Jesus departed from thence, two blind men followed him, etc. And when he was come into the house, the blind men came unto him : And Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this ? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened." (Matt. 9, 27-30.)

The man with the withered hand he healed through the words : "Stretch forth thine hand : and it was restored whole like the other." (Matt. 12, 10-13.)

"And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased ; and besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment : and as many as touched were made perfectly whole." (Matt. 14, 35-36.)

The daughter of the woman of Canaan, who was grievously vexed with a devil was restored through the faith of the woman. (Matthew, 15, 22-28.)

"And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet ; and he healed them." (Matthew 15, 30 ; Luke, 7, 22.)

The lunatic who oftentimes fell into the fire and into the water could not be healed by the disciples. But when Jesus rebuked the devil he departed out of him and the child was cured from that very hour. Jesus said unto his disciples : "Because of your unbelief, ye could not cure him. For verily I say unto you, if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place ; and it shall remove ; Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by fasting and prayer." (Matt. 17, 14-21.)

Two blind men on the road to Jericho cried unto the Son of David for help : "Then touched he their eyes, saying : according to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened." (Matt. 9, 27-36.)

He healed the lame and the blind in the temple at Jerusalem, who came to him to be healed. (Matt. 21, 14.)

He healed the man in the synagogue who had a spirit of an unclean devil, whom he rebuked, saying, "Hold thy peace, and come out of him." (Luke 4, 33.)

"Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him ; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them." (Luke 4, 40.)

"Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city (Nain), behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. And he came and touched the bier. And he said : Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother." (Luke 7, 12-16.)

Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, the wife of Chuza and many others possessed of evil spirits were healed and freed. (Luke 8, 2, 3.)

The man possessed of a legion of devils which were driven into a herd of swine. (Luke 8, 27-33.)

"And behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in nowise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her, and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God." (Luke 13, 11-13.)

He healed the king's son at Capernaum who was at the point of death, through the faith of the lad's father. (John 4, 47.)

The man who had an infirmity thirty and eight years, whom no one would carry into the pool at the sheep market, whose waters when troubled by the angel healed all diseases, he cured by the words : "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." (John 5, 2-8.)

The man that was born blind he healed with ground clay and spittle. "He spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam. He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing." (John 9, 1-7.)

St. Mark relates a still more remarkable cure effected by Christ on a blind man : "And he cometh to Bethsaida, and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him. And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town ; and when he had spit on his eyes and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught ? And he looked up and said, I see men as trees, walking. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up ; and he was restored and saw every man clearly." (Mark 8, 22-25.)

He raised Lazarus from the dead through a fervent prayer to the Father. "Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already. It was a cave and a stone lay upon it. Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him Lord, by this time he stinketh ; for he hath been dead four days. Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God ? Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth ? And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes ; and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him and let him go." (John, 11, 17, 33-44.)

These are incidental healings performed by our Saviour and recorded by the Evangelists. There are other legendary narratives of wonders performed by Christ which are not recorded by the Evangelists, of which I will mention only one. It may be found in the History of Jesus, by Eusebius (chap. 12, p. 16), from which Bushing extracted his "Weekly Intelligence for Inquiries into History, Magic and Learning of the Middle Ages" (vol. 2, p. 64, Dec., 1817. Breslau)." It is also printed in Kosegarden's Legends. As an extraordinary instance of the vocation and power of Christ and his divine mission and love to man will not prove uninteresting to the friends of Christianity, we will give the contents of several letters written by Abgarus, King of Edessa, who lived cotemporary with Jesus.

The extraordinary mission of Christ and the fame of the wonders which he wrought were noised abroad to the most distant lands, especially his divine power to heal all kinds of diseases. These rumors also attracted the attention of Abgarus, who was the victim of a severe sickness. On this account he wrote the following letter to Jesus:

"Abgarus, King of Edessa, to Jesus, the compassionate Saviour, who appeared in the flesh, in the neighborhood of Jerusalem, All Hail!

"I have heard of Thy exalted virtues and of the wonderful cures performed by Thee without the use of medicines or herbs. The report sayeth, that Thou causest the blind to see, the lame to walk, and thou cleanseest the leprous. Thou castest out unclean spirits, and those that are plagued with grievous diseases Thou healest, and Thou bringest the dead back to life. As I heard these reports concerning Thee, I formed two opinions: either that Thou art God, descended from the heights of Heaven, or that Thou art the Son of God, from whom all these wonderful works proceed. Therefore I write this unto Thee, fervently praying that Thou wouldst undertake the trouble to heal me from the heavy sickness by which I am punished. I am told that the Jews threaten Thee with great evil, and resist Thee in anger. It is true, I have but a small city, but it is well appointed and fortified and celebrated, so that it will afford us everything needful."

Thus wrote Abgarus to Christ. Enlightened by divine light, this short letter contains what is of true worth, being full of power and virtue. The following answer was sent by Jesus to Abgarus the King, by the hands of Annanias, who was selected as a messenger:

"Abgarus! Blessed art thou, who hast not seen, yet believed on me. It is written that those which see me believe not on me, that those who see me not may believe on me and be saved. As thou writest to me, I must of necessity fulfill those things for which I was sent into the world; after I have accomplished all these things I shall again be taken up to him who sent me. As soon as I shall have ascended, I will send to you one of my disciples, who will heal you of your painful disease, so that your life and the lives of yours may be preserved."

After the ascension of Christ into heaven, Judas, who was also called Thaddæus, one of the seventy disciples, was sent to Abgarus, who tarried over night on his journey at the house of Tobias, the son of Tobit. Abgarus heard that the disciple whom Jesus had promised to send to him, had arrived, for Tobias had told Abgarus that he had entertained a mighty man of Jerusalem, who healed many diseases in the name of Jesus. "Bring him in to me," said Abgarus. Tobias went immediately to Thaddæus and said: "Abgarus the king sends me to you, and desires that I should lead you to him, in order that you may remove the disease by which he is tormented." "Let us go," answered Thaddeus, "For of his account was I sent here." On the morning of the next day, Tobias took Thaddeus with him and they went to Abgarus. Upon his arrival the lords of the castle stood ready to defend Abgarus, but when the disciple entered, Abgarus observed a bright light in his countenance. As Abgarus saw this he humbly worshipped Thaddeus. The astonishment of all present was most complete, for they could not see the strange appearance which Abgarus saw. "Thou art indeed the disciple of Jesus, the Son of God, who promised me in his letter when he said: "I will send you one of my disciples, who will heal your infirmity, and give you your life and the lives of those belonging to you!" Hereupon Thaddeus replied: "I have been sent to you because of your trust in Jesus who sent me." And further: "If the faith you have in him increases more and more, then the desire of your heart will be fulfilled according to your faith." Abgarus answered: "I have faith in Him to this extent, that if the Roman power did not hinder me, I would annihilate the Jews who crucified Him, with my hosts." Thaddeus said, "The Lord our God, Jesus Christ, fulfilled the will of his Father, and when his will was accomplished, he was taken up to his Father." Then said Abgarus, "I believe in Him and in his Father." Thaddeus answered: "Therefore I lay my hands upon thee, in the name of Jesus," and as he did so, Abgarus was made whole from that very hour.

To this belongs the tradition which relates to the sending of the picture of Christ to Abgarus. According to some authors, principally the Damascenes, Abgarus sent a painter to Jerusalem to paint a likeness of Jesus; but the painter was not able to finish a portrait of him because of the splendor of his countenance. Then the Lord stamped his likeness on his mantel through divine power, and in this manner satisfied the desire of Abgarus. According to others, Jesus impressed his features on a linen kerchief and sent it to Abgarus. Be this matter of finishing and sending of this picture as it may, the Damascenes show through later circumstances that such a picture was at Edessa at some time or other, otherwise we should be compelled to reckon the narrative describing the siege of the city of Abgarus by the Persian king Kosroes as among discoveries that cannot be authenticated. According to this legend the walls of Edessa, built of the wood of the olive tree, were surrounded by Kosroes with a funeral-pile of poplar wood, in order to burn them. The then reigning king of Edessa, who is not named, had recourse to the linen shroud upon which were impressed the features of Christ and which was sent to Abgarus. Hereupon (divina vi) a terrible whirlwind arose which blew the flames away from the city, igniting the funeral-pile of poplar wood, by which all in its immediate vicinity were consumed.

That the promises respecting Christ, namely, that he would heal the sick, were fulfilled, is proven by the additional wonders which were wrought by the apostles, who healed diseases in the same manner that their Master did:—

"And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple, who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms. And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something from them. Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and anklebones received strength, and he, leaping up, stood and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping, and praising God. (Acts 3, 2-8.)

"And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women, inasmuch as they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one." (Acts 5, 14-16.)

The history of Simon, the sorcerer, who, on account of his knavery could not perform these wonders, and who attempted to buy the gift to work these wonders from the apostles with money, is especially remarkable. This wonderful story is also applicable to the Simons of our day. "But there was a certain man called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery (magic), who was converted under the preaching of Philip and was baptized. And the apostles gave unto the new converts the Holy Spirit. Then they laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whosoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity." (Acts 8, 9-23.) See also the history of Eneas, who had kept his bed for eight years and was sick of the palsy. (Acts 9, 33-34; 36-41.)

Of the same kind are also the wonderful works of Paul, who challenges our wonder on account of his strength of spirit and his power in all things. "And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked; the same heard Paul speak, who steadfastly beholding him and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked (Acts 14, 8-10.)

"And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them." (Acts 19, 11-12.)

The young man named Eutychus, who fell from the third story and was taken up dead, was restored by Paul in the following manner: "And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves, for his life is in him. When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day so he departed. And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted." (Acts 20, 8-12.) "And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a flux: to whom Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him and healed him. So when this was done, others also, who had diseases in the island, came, and were healed." (Acts 28, 8-9.)

Having already spoken about the import of Christian healing and given more or less of a historical character. I will submit the matter to each reader to form his own conclusions to their special peculiarities, in order that he may select that which is most instructive. One thing must not be omitted, in conclusion, and that is, we must first become Christians before we can perform cures by Christian methods. Very few are really Christians who call themselves such; they are only Christians in name and appearance.

The art of healing, according to scriptural principles, deserves special mention in this place, in more than one respect, not only because something truly magical takes place therein, but because scriptural healing is often regarded as the only true one. The principles of this art of healing have been fully established according to certain declarations and doctrines of the Bible. (See Leviticus 26, 14; Deuteronomy 28, 15-22, etc.; Exodus 14, 26; also, Ecclesiastius 38, 9; Psalms 107, 17-20.)

In this manner, therefore, there exists a higher medical science than the ordinary one, and other pious persons than physicians can heal diseases. "The believing physician," says Marcarius, "is like unto God, but the medical body belongs to the heathen and to the unbeliever." But according to the wise saying of Sirach, the physician is entitled to honor, for he says: "Honor a physician with the honor due unto him for the use ye may have of him, for the Lord hath created him, and he shall receive honor of the king. The skill of the physician shall lift up his head, and in the sight of great men he shall be in admiration." But he too believes that the physician is made only for the sinner: "He that sinneth before his Maker, let him fall into the hands of the physician." (Sirach 38, 15.)

In the New Testament also diseases generally are ascribed to sin. Jesus said to the paralytic when he healed him: "Thy sins are forgiven thee," and he was made whole. And when he healed the man at the pool of Bethesda, who had an infirmity thirty-eight years, when he met him afterwards in the temple, he said to him: "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a greater evil befall thee." (John 5, 14.) The apostles too, and all the saints, insisted upon first curing the patient morally, for a true restoration of the diseased body and spirit can only be effected by a return to God. It is truly remarkable that the wise men of the East, Zoroaster, and all the advocates of the doctrines of emission (system of emanation), the Kabbalists, as well as all later Theosophists, all of whom possesses extraordinary power to heal diseases, defended this doctrine. By some of these, diseases are charged directly to sin, while others attribute them to evil spirits, with whom man becomes associated through sin. That evil spirits are the cause of diseases, destroying and vitiating the healthy sap of the system, no one with less spiritual views than the Theosophists, possessed will deny; these are the true hands which Satan has bound. (Luke 13, 16.)

The originally pure doctrine of Christianity, however, was prepared in early times by the advocates of the system of emanations, which was much more destructive through misrepresentations by model Christians than was intended. Saturninus, Basilides and Karpokrates stood at the head of those according to whose theory everything proceeded from the Aeon (heavenly powers.) Christ himself was to them an Aeon of the first rank, who, by a rigid restraint from sensualism subdued demons (evil spirits), and he who lives as Christ did can subdue them likewise. "Out of Aeon, the chief outlet," says Basilides, "heaven was brought into existence." According to Valentinus, one of the most celebrated teachers of that day, the Aeon were divided into classes, even into male and female classes. Thus, the chief female Aeon was the Holy Spirit. By laying on of consecrated hands the subject was made the recipient of this Aeon and was sent out to heal demoniac diseases. Notwithstanding that this digression created a variety of ideas, differing from the original doctrine, the effort to heal diseases according to scriptural principles continued for a great length of time a ruling struggle for moral improvement and perfection. If a being is in earnest to live in unconditional obedience towards God, and becomes converted to God through living, active faith, then God becomes his physician, and he no longer requires the services of an earthly doctor. As soon as the soul is in a perfectly healthy condition, it is stated, so soon will this health be communicated to the body, or rather, the sufferings of the body can not be regarded as disease—these sufferings can not affect the soul which has been elevated to heaven. But if a man is not capable of such a self-cure, then let him turn to the physician, for "God created him, and he hath given men skill, that he might be honored in his marvellous works." (Sirach 28, 6.) The particular manner in which the physician is to heal according to scriptural principles, is apparent in the foregoing. He must in the first place, become a truly Christian physician, that is, a physician priest. He is able to help the sick only through his own health, especially the health of his own soul, and then only when he himself is pure. He must heal the inner man (the soul), for without rest in the soul (inward peace) there can be no real cure of the body; it is therefore indispensable that a true physician must also be a true priest.

The question, whether a scriptural physician is above the necessity of using medicines, or whether he may at times avail himself of their use in healing diseases, can also be easily answered scripturally, and it stands in the same relations as does the question whether a magnetic physician requires any medicines? Generally he must possess the power as a scriptural, and more especially as a Christian physician to heal diseases through prayer and the Divine word, and without medicines; and only in certain cases and when he himself does not possess this power in a sufficient measure, can he avail himself of the use of medicines. They are not made in vain. "For medicine comes from the Most High." "The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth, and he is wise that will not abhor them. With such doth he heal men and taketh away their pains." (Sirach 38, 4, 7.) Medicines are good, but they are seldom sufficient. "Go up into Gilead and take balm," says Jeremiah, "in vain shalt thou use many medicines, for thou shalt not be cured." (Jeremiah 46, 11.) There are in the meantime also examples in the Bible where, in rare instances, recourse was had to physical remedies. Moses, by casting wood into the waters of Marah, made them sweet. (Exodus 15, 25.) His cure for leprosy by washing, purifying, etc., was truly remarkable. Elias threw salt into the bitter spring, and it became wholesome ever afterwards. He also cast meal into the pot, wherein was death, and the vegetables became harmless. Isaiah laid figs on the glands of King Hezekiah and healed him. Tobias cured his blind father with fishgall, a cure that was shown him by an angel. And even Jesus anointed the eyes of the blind man with spittle and clay, and told him to wash in the pool of Siloam, etc. As for the rest, according to the Bible, only outward remedies were used in healing, and these of the simplest and most unadvised kinds. Internal remedies were not used. The means of cure consisted in spiritual purification, in conversion from sin, in prayer to the Father of Life—the physician of the believer. So we read in James 5, 13-16: "Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms. Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him. Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much. In St. Mark, 6, 12, we read: "And they went out and preached that all men should repent. And they cast out devils and anointed with oil many that were sick and healed them.

But the scriptural physician does not always heal, and the disease is not always an evil. If temporal enjoyment and earthly felicity were the destiny and end of man, for which the great majority are striving, then should we be justified in regarding sickness as a great misfortune and a heavy punishment, which many will not admit of having deserved. But this planet is not a place of undisturbed peace—not the abode of beings who shall rejoice in a final happiness. Light and shade, day and night, rest and activity, love and hate, peace and war, joy and sorrow, fortune and misfortune, health and sickness, life and death, are the constant changes of this world, and they are not due to accident, but are arranged with caution by a higher hand, to serve as a touchstone, that we may through affliction and suffering, by overcoming evil and purifying ourselves from sensualism, prepare for a better existence. The main object is the health of the soul and the spirit; the health of the body is a secondary matter. If the soul is in a state of health the body will become healthy as a consequence. "His flesh shall be fresher than a child's; he shall return to the days of his youth." (Job 33, 25.) If such a strong soul should not become well he will not feel bodily suffering, because he already enjoys a foretaste of the blessedness of the other world. True happiness and perfect rest cannot be found on earth; therefore we should not wonder, but neither should we weep, because of the evanescence of quiet, unmixed pleasure—of purest love, because it is so soon overcast by dark clouds and driven away by fierce storms—neither should we mourn because true happiness can only be found in another world, because true health exists only in the souls of those who are truly united with God, and because help, consolation, and blessing come only from the Father in heaven.

BOOKS OF MOSES.

Translated for the first time from the Cuthan-Samaritan Language into English.

ANNO MDCCXXVI.

TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

SINCE the Oriental transcript of this work was imperfect in many parts, the translation of it had to be taken according to the great original book, on account of the purity of its text, and, therefore, it won for itself the advantage of understanding and completing the exercises with serenity and confidence. The translator, in the meantime believes, that no one, who feels honestly called to these things, can ever be made the subject of ill-fortune, or be deceived by the wiles and deceptions of the old serpent, the inevitable fate that will and must fall to his lot under any other exorcisms, and that he may cheerfully and safely move thence, because only the angels of God will perform the service required by Him.

The Vestibule of the Entrance.—The language and manuscript of this rare and eternal monument of light, and of a higher wisdom, are borrowed from the Cuthans, a tribe of the Samaritans, who were called Cuthim in the Chaldee dialect according to the Talmud, and they were so called in a spirit of derision. They were termed sorcerers, because they taught in Cutha, their original place of abode, and afterwards, in Samaria, the Kabala or Higher Magic (Book of Kings). Caspar, Melchior, and Balthasar, the chosen arch-priests, are shining lights among the eastern Magicians. They were both kings and teachers—the first Priest-teachers of this glorious knowledge, and from these Samaritan Cuthans—from these omnipotent priests of the fountain of light, who were called Nergal, according to the traditions of Talmud, originated the Gypsies, who, through degeneracy, lost the consecration of their primordial power.

LAWS OF ENTRANCE.

1. Before you can enter the temple of consecrated light, you must purify your soul and body during thirteen days.

2. As a brother and disciple of the new covenant, or as a Christian, you must receive the holy sacrament for the glorification of the three kings—Caspar, Melchior and Balthasar.

3. Three holy masses must be read as often as you make use of this Book in your priestly service with your intention fixed upon the three glorified kings.

4. You must provide yourself with a ram's horn, wherewith to call together the angels and spirits. This horn must be included in your intentions of the holy mass.

5. You must wear a breastplate of parchment, ten inches high and ten inches wide, inscribed upon it the names of the twelve apostles with the five-fold name of Schemhamforasch, in the same order that it is placed on the last leaf.

6. You must draw a circle around you upon white paper, or upon sky-blue silk. Its circumference shall be thirteen feet, and, at the distance of each foot, one of the following names must be written, viz.: Moseh, Messias, Aaron, Jehova, Adoni, Jesus, Christus, Caspar, Melchior, Balthasar. Al. Al. Al.

7. Between each name you must place the holy symbol of Horet,—namely: —+— or +—+.

8. The breastplate must be included in the intention of the holy mass.

9. Through consecration with holy triple king's-water and with three burning wax tapers, you must finally pronounce a benediction over this book, the horn, the breastplate, and the circle, after reading a well-selected mysterious ritual.

10. You may enter alone, or begin this great work with two companions, by day or by night, but always from the first to the thirtieth of the month, and during the thirteenth day, and through the whole night of the new moon, and also during full moon, when the three planets, Saturn, Mars and Jupiter, are visible in the heavens on the day of exorcism, either singly or together.

11. You must always stand with your face toward Zion, or toward the rising of the sun.

12. He who refuses a copy of this book, or who suppresses it or steals it, will be seized with eternal trembling, like Cain, and the angels of God will depart from him.

INTRODUCTION AND BEGINNING.

BREASTPLATE OF MOSES.

Schedusi, Weduse, Tiwisi.—I have sinned, I shall sin.

Prayer.—Eternal God of our all ! Our God ! hear our voice, spare and have mercy upon us. Accept our prayer in mercy and with pleasure. I have sinned. I have committed transgressions. I have sinned before Thee ; I have done that which is displeasing unto Thee here in the earth. For the sake of Thy great name pardon me all the sins and iniquities and transgressions which I have committed against Thee from my youth. Perfect again all the holy names which I have blemished, great Champion, terrible, highest God, eternal Lord, God Sabaoth.

HELMET OF MOSES AND AARON.

Wochutu, Tukul, Beschufa, Gutal. If I shall sin, I shall blow with the great horn.

Here the horn must be blown, three times in succession, toward the four corners of the earth, or toward the four quarters of the earth.

For the ram's horn, in the old covenant, is the symbol of omnipotence and of purification, or of beauty, truth and holiness.

BREASTPLATE OF AARON.

Dehutu, Euwsaltu, Bescholam.—You have sinned. I shall sin in peace.

Prayer.—The Lord, King of all Kings, holy and praised is He, the Father, God, Son of God, the Holy Spirit of God are three in one among these three. In the power of Thy might and Thy right, release those that are bound, receive the prayer of Thy people, strengthen us, purify us, oh, terrible Hero, us who worship Thy only name. Protect them as the apple of Thine eye, bless them, cleanse them, repay them always in mercy and justice. Mighty, holy Lord, reward Thy congregation with Thy great goodness. Thou, the only and exalted God, appear unto Thy people with Thy holy name ; receive and remember our prayer ; hearken unto our cries, Thou who knowest all secrets and who knowest our desire.

Here the horn must be blown as before.

MAGICAL LAWS OF MOSES.

Kuta-Al, Lewuwat.—We are great ! Our hearts !

Prayer.—Oh, Lord, arise, that mine enemies may be destroyed and that they may fly; that those who hate Thee may be scattered like smoke—drive them away. As wax melteth before the fire, so pass away all evil-doers before God, for God has given Thee the kingdom. Pour out Thy wrath over them. Thy wrath seize them. Thou shalt stand upon leopards and adders, and Thou shalt subdue the lion and dragon. With God only can we do great things. He will bring them under our feet.

THE CHALICE OF HOLINESS.

Al, Al, Al. Arise, Thou eternal Angel!

This must be repeated three times in a loud voice, and also through the symbol of the horn, for he is an angel of the sanctuary.

Prayer.—Thou, that art, and wast, and wilt be in the old and new covenant! Eternal, Jehovah, Jesus Christ, Messiah, All-beautiful, All-true, All-holy! All-loving and All-merciful in the old and in the new covenant. Thou hast said: Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. Thou hast said: I came not to destroy the old covenant, but to fulfil it. Thou hast said: He who sees me sees the Father. Thou hast said: If ye have true faith, ye can perform the wonders which I have done, yea, ye will perform yet much greater wonders than I have done. Come also to me for the sake of my faith, come also unto me for the sake of Moses, Thy messenger of faith. Reveal also to me Thy mysterious name from Jehovah, as Thou once did to Thy fire prophet Moses, in solitude; come, and say unto me in love, through the heart of Moses and with the tongue of Aaron:

Scahebual! I shall come!

THE CONJURATION OF ELEAZAR.

Duwatu, Buwatie, Bemaim.—I come to you on the water!
Bring me up N. N.!

DISMISSAL OF ELEAZAR.

Orum, Bolectn, Ubajom.—Cursed by night and by day!

CITATION OF QUERNITHAY OR LEVIATHANS.

These, as well as the following exorcisms, contain only the peculiar names of the angels who will permit the conjured spirits to appear, or will compel them by force to appear. Here the three angels of omnipotence will be called up to drive forth the monsters of hell, namely: Elubatel, Ebuhuel Atuesuel!

Each name must be repeated three times.

DISMISSAL.

I beseech and conjure thee, angel Elubatel, conduct N. N. from my presence.

Each angel's name must be called three times toward the four quarters of the earth, and three times must be blown with the horn.

CHAP. III. — BALAAM'S SORCERY.

Onu, Baschba, Nischoaz Hueretz.—In the name of God I conjure the earth.

CHAP. V. — CONJURATION OF THE LAWS OF MOSES.

Keishnu, Nischba, Lawemso.—How to be God, so swarest Thou to our parents.

Prayer.—Eternal of Eternals! Jehovah of Light, Adonai of Truth! Messiah of the All-merciful! Jesus Christ the beloved and All-redemption and love! Thou hast said: Who seeth me seeth also the Father. Father, eternal Father of the old and new covenant; triune Father, triune Son, triune Spirit, our Father, I beseech and conjure Thee by the eternal words of Thy eternal truth.

And now the seventeenth chapter of John, or the prayer of Jesus, must be prayed:

Closing Prayer of the Conjunction of the Law.—Eternal God, Jehova, Thou hast said: Ask and it shall be given you. I pray that Thou mayest hear Thy servants Caspar, Melchior and Balthasar, the arch-priests of Thy fountain of light! I pray that thou mayest bid Thy angels to purify me from all sin; that they may breathe upon me in love, and that they may cover me with the shadow of their wings. Send them down! This is my prayer in peace!

CHAP. VI.—EGITGIM.

Conjunction of three angels, Gebril! Meachuel! Nesanel! By the lamp of the three-fold eternal light, let N. N. appear before me.

Three calls with the voice and three with the horn.

CHAP. VII. — GENERAL CITATION OF MOSES ON ALL SPIRITS.

Tubatlu! Bualu! Tulatu! Labusi! Ublisi!—Let there appear and bring before me the spirit of N. N.

Each of these five omnipotent angels must be called three times toward the four corners of the world, with a clear and powerful voice, and when the name of each is pronounced three times, then three sounds must be made by the horn. The name of each angel therefore, must have three calls with the voice and three with the horn.

DISMISSAL OF MOSES.

Ubelutusi! Kadukuliti! Kebutzi!—Take away from my presence the spirit of N. N.

Twelve calls with the voice, and twelve with the horn, for each name.

These signs were used at the time of burnt-offering in the holy temple.

FOR THE RIGHT HAND.

These are also symbolical of the plagues of Pharaoh in Egypt.

Schema Israel Adonai Elhoejno, Ekat.—Hear, oh, Israel, the Lord our God is God alone.

THE SEVENTH BOOK OF MOSES.

CHAP. I.—THE REVELATION OF ZION.

THE SPIRIT APPEARS IN A PILLAR OF FIRE BY NIGHT.

Talubsi ! Latubusi ! Kalubusi ! Alusi !

Arise and bring me the Pillar of Fire that I may see.

The name of each angel must again have three calls by the voice directed to the four quarters of the earth and an equal number by the horn.

CHAP. II. — THE SPIRIT APPEARS IN A PILLAR OF CLOUD BY DAY.

Bual ! come ! Aul ! arise ! Tubo ! I come ! Wegulo ! arise
In this place the blowing will be repeated.

CHAP. VII. — GENERAL CITATION OF MOSES ON ALL SPIRITS.

Adnal ! Abulal ! Lebusi !

Arise and bring before me the spirit N.

Calls with the voice and horn as already known,

Here follows the Pentagon, or, the Omnipotent Five-Corners.

This mysterious figure must be written before the exorcism, in the open air, and in the ground, with consecrated chalk or with the index finger of the right hand dipped in holy three-kings-water, the same as it is written up on the paper, but each line must be thirteen feet in length. The conjuror then kneels in the centre of the star, with uncovered head and with face turned toward Zion, and calls first in a loud voice, coming from the heart, the names of Caspar, Belchior and Balthasar, thirteen times, and after calling these thirteen times, he must also call the name of high and sacred name of Elokim 375 times with equal fervor and faith. But only as has already been stated in the Laws of Entrance, No. 10, in the first three days or nights of the new moon, or full moon, or when Saturn, Mars and Jupiter appear in the heavens.

ANNO MCCCXXXVIII.

Now Moses appears on the right of the silk, in a simple priestly garb, holding the tree of life, which has four leaves in the right hand, and the ram's horn in the left.

Upon his heart rests the cross; a wide, white band flows over his shoulder and breast, a broad, white girdle graces his loins. He stands upon a kind of hat, which is decorated with three flowers. On the right hand of the hat reposes a dove having a ring in her bill, on the left side and over the head of Moses a three-fold tripod with magical hieroglyphics thereon rises upward.

1. Upon the leaves of the tree of life you read the words:

Besulo! Bedunim! Labatel!

That is, if you are not pure, or if you do not become pure as a virgin through the two angels Bunedreim and Lebatal, you cannot reach toward the tree of life.

2. A hat adorned with three flowers, upon which Moses stands, and from which a dove with ring in her bill appears to descend, that is:

If you preserve faith and hope with holy care, the spirit of omnipotence will emanate from you.

3. A three-fold intertwined triangle, extending from the feet to the head, having inscribed upon it the names of the three angels, Meachuel, Labatel, Kautel, that is: And the three angels of the triune God, Meachuel, Labatei, Ketuel, will surround and carry you upon their hands.

On the reverse side of the picture of Moses, or rather on the first leaf, according to oriental reckoning, appears the elevated, winding and crowned serpent, holding a ring in her teeth. Around the serpent may be seen the moon, the stars, planets, water and many other magic hieroglyphical signs. On the left side of the tail may be seen seven nails, on the right side are magical hieroglyphics making the name of Schemhamporasch. To see Jesus Christ with the cross, that is to say: Jesus Christ, through his love and by his seven wounds and through his death on the cross, for his love's sake, has overcome the kingdoms of this world, and thus took again from the old serpent, the devil, the seal-ring of human omnipotence, or the happiness of man to all the eternal eternities, in order to fulfil the old covenant in the new covenant, for the eternal glorification of the eternal Father in the eternal Son, through the eternal Spirit. Amen.

INSTRUCTIONS.

If you want to cite and compel spirits to appear visibly before you and render you obedience, then observe the following instructions :

1. Keep God's commands as much as you can possibly do.
2. Build and trust solely upon the might and power of God ; believe firmly on his omnipotent help in your work, and the spirits will become your servants and will obey you.
3. Continue your citations, and do not cease, even if the spirits do not appear at once. Be steadfast in your work and faith, for the doubter will obtain nothing.
4. Take especial notice of the time, viz. :

Monday night, from eleven until three o'clock.

Tuesday night, from ten until two o'clock.

Wednesday night, from twelve until three o'clock.

Thursday night, from twelve until two o'clock.

Friday night, from ten until three o'clock.

Saturday night, from ten until twelve o'clock.

The Sabbath keep holy to the Lord Sabaoth, Adonai, Tetragrammaton.

5. It must, at the same time, be new moon. Perhaps you may say, "Why these hours and signs—are they not all the days of the Lord?" It is true; but not all hours, and all signs, are favorable to rule over their spirits.

6. Complete the following circle, described in this work, on parchment, written with the blood of young white doves. The size of the circle may be at your own option.

7. If you wish to undertake the operation, be sure to consecrate the circle previously.

Ego N. N., consecro et benedico istum Circulum per Nomina Dei Altissimi in eo Scripta, ut sit mihi et omnibus Scutum at Protectio Dei Fortissimi Elohim Invenietur contra omnes malignos Spiritus, geruntque Potestates. In Nomine Dei Patris Dei Filii Dei Spiritus Sancti. Amen.

Upon your entrance into this Circle speak as follows: Tetragrammaton; Theos, Ischiros, Athanatos, Messias, Imas, Kyrie Eleison: Amen.

After you have entered the Circle begin your operation with the following prayer from the Ninety-first Psalm.

He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord. He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in Him will I trust. Surely he shall deliver me from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust. His truth shall be thy shield and buckler. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night, nor for the arrow that flieth by day. Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation. There shall be no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come near thy dwelling. Because he hath set his love upon me: therefore will I deliver him. I will set him on high because he hath known my name. He will call upon me and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him and honor. With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation, even so help me and all them that seek thy holy God the Father ✠ God the Son ✠ God the Holy Ghost. Amen.

INSTRUCTIONS.

Since the spirits will now appear quickly, bring your desires forward honestly, as if before your fellow-man, without fear, for nothing can harm you, much rather, all must serve you and yield obedience and serve you according to your wishes. In this connection, be careful that you do not compromise in any degree with the spirit for all this power, and word of might, which Moses, Aaron and Solomon used according to the revelations of God, are sufficient to compel the spirits to reveal to you the treasures of the earth and sea, and to give them to you without harm and deception.

Mihl, Fausto, Crede (X) Expertis.

REMARKS.

AZIEL is a very prompt treasure-spirit of the earth and of the sea. He appears in the form of a wild ox.

ARIEL is a very serviceable spirit, and appears in the form of a ferocious dog. He commands the lost treasures of the land and sea.

MARBUEL appears in the form of an old lion. He delivers the treasures of the water and the land, and assists in obtaining all secret knowledge and honors.

MEPHISTOPHILES is ready to serve, and appears in the form of a youth. He is willing to help in all skilled arts, and gives the spiritus Servus, otherwise called "familiaris." He brings treasures from the earth and from the deep very quickly.

BARBUEL is a master of all arts and all secret knowledge, a great master of all treasure. He is very accommodating, and appears with alacrity in the form of a wild hog.

AZIBABEL is a prince of the water and mountain-spirits and their treasures. He is amiable, and appears with a large crown of pearls.

ANITUEL appears in the form of a serpent of Paradise. He confers great wealth and honors according to wish.

APPENDIX MAGICUS.

The Seals or General Characters of the Seven Great Princes of Spirits must be written upon virgins parchment, with the blood of butterflies, at the time of full moon; besides this, know that the Seven Great Princes of Spirits have among them some of the legions of crown-spirits which were expelled from Heaven, ita ex Revelatinoe Traditione. AN HUMBLE PRAYER FOR THE ATTAINMENT OF WISDOM AND UNDER-STANDING.

"For the Lord giveth wisdom, out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding."—PROVERBS, ii. 6.

"If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not."—EPISTLE OF JAMES, i. 5.

Oh, God, my Father and Lord of all goodness, who didst create all things by Thy word, and who didst prepare man in Thy wisdom to rule over all creatures that were made by Thee, that he should rule over the world with holiness and righteousness, and judge with an upright heart. Give unto me that wisdom that is constantly around Thy throne, and cast me not out from among Thy children. For I am Thy servant, and the son of Thy hand-maiden, a weak creature of a short existence, and too weak in understanding, in right and in the law. Send it down from Thy high heaven and from the throne of Thy glory that it may abide with me and labor with me that I may know and do the things that are pleasing unto Thee. For Thy wisdom knoweth and understandeth all things, and let it lead me in my works and protect me in its glory, and my labors will be acceptable unto Thee. When I was yet in my youth I sought wisdom without fear in my prayer. I prayed for it in the temple, and will seek it to my end. My heart rejoiceth over it as when the young grapes ripen.
Thou art my Father, my God, and my Shepherd, who helpeth me.
Thy hand created and prepared me; teach me that I may learn Thy commandments; open my eyes that I may behold the wonders of Thy law. Remember, Lord, Thy covenant, and teach me what to say and think. Instruct me and so shall I live. Lord, show me Thy ways, lead me in Thy truth, and teach me. I am Thy servant, teach me, that I may understand Thy evidence. Console me again with Thy help and let the happy spirit sustain me. Thou lover of life, Thy immortal spirit is in all things. Teach me to work in a manner that is well pleasing unto Thee, for Thou art my God. Let Thy good spirit lead me in pleasant paths. With Thee is the living fountain and in Thy light we see the light. Let my goings be established, and let no unrighteousness rule over me. Teach me wholesome manners and enlighten me, for I believe Thy commandments. Lead me in Thy truth and teach me, for Thou art the God who helps me, and I wait daily before Thee. Let Thy countenance shine upon Thy servant and teach me to know Thy justice. Let me behold Thy glory, for Thou, Lord, art my light, and Thou wilt turn my darkness into day. Wilt Thou join Thyself with me in eternity, and trust me in righteousness and in judgment, in grace and mercy, yea, wilt Thou join me in faith that I may know Thee, the Lord. Lord, let my complaints come before Thee. Instruct me according to Thy word. Let my prayers come before Thee, rescue me according to Thy word. Show me Thy ways, oh, Lord, that I may walk in Thy truth. Keep my heart in singleness that I may fear Thy name. I will remember Thy name from childhood, therefore, all people will thank Thee for ever and ever. Amen.

In the name of the highest, almighty Creator, I, King Solomon, hold to the interpretation of the name of (God) Semiphoras, in other words, the First and the Greatest, the oldest and hidden mystery of great power and virtue, to obtain all that which is asked of God, for God must be worshipped in spirit and in truth, which consists not in many and vain words, because each word and name of God is self-existent, and therefore the name and prayer must agree, and no strange name must be used unnecessarily if anything fearful or wonderful is intended to be accomplished, in order that the divine quality may pour into our soul and spirit His grace and gifts—that is the consciousness of God in His name through which he comes near and abides with those who know His name. Therefore, this name must be held in the highest honor and should be hidden from all frivolous and unworthy persons, since God says himself in Exodus: Out of all places will I come unto thee and bless thee, because thou rememberest my name. Therefore, have the Hebrew Maccabees seventy-two names for God, and named and wrote Schemhamphora, the name of seventy-two letters.

First, it must be known that the names of God cannot be taught and understood except only in the Hebrew language, neither can we pronounce them in any other dialect, as they were revealed to us through the grace of God. For they are the sacrament and emanation of divine omnipotence, not of man, nor of angels, but they are instituted and consecrated through the (generent) of God, to instil divine harmony in a certain manner according to the characters of his immovable number and figure, and of which those that are appointed over the heavens are afraid. The angels and all creatures honor them and use them to praise their Creator, and to bless Him with the greatest reverence in His divine works, and whosoever will apply them properly with fear and trembling and with prayer, will be powerfully enlightened by the spirit of God—will be joined with a divine unity—will be mighty according to the will of God—that he can perform supernatural things—that he can command angels and devils—that he can bind and unbind the things of the elements, over which he may elevate himself through the power of God. Therefore, he, who has perfected and improved his understanding and morals, and who, through faith, has purified his ears, so that he may without spurious alterations call upon the divine name of God, will become a house and a dwelling place of God, and will be a partaker of divine influences, etc., etc.

On the other hand, the order of God should be known, that God makes use of other words among angels and also others among men, but the true name of God is known neither to men nor to angels, for He has reserved it and will not reveal it until His order and exhibition are fulfilled and perfected. After that the angels will have their own tongues and speech, about which we need not concern ourselves, because it is not necessary for us to examine them.

In the third place, all the names of God are taken by us from His works, as indicating a communication with God, or are extracted out of the divine scriptures through the art of Cabalisticam, Calculatorem, Notariacum and Geometrium.

The beginning of the name and word, Sempiternus, which God the Creator, Jehovah, gave in Paradise, embraces three Hebrew letters, Jehovah, the inscrutable Creator of the world, almighty Providence, and all-powerful eternal Deity.

After this there are four parts of the earth which are the most subtle light of the spiritual world: 1. Hierarchia, Chernim at Seraphim, Potestates et Virgines, Archangelos et Angelos, Spiritus et Animas Hominum, which come before God. This part of the world has also four angels that stand upon the four corners of heaven; they are Michael, Raphael, Gabriel, Uriel; four angels stand for the elements, namely, Sempiternus, Cherub, Thauris, Ariel; four highly enlightened men full of the light of God.

For the other light or part of the world is the heaven of all the stars; has four Triplicities of the twelve signs, under which the sun revolves yearly, making the change of seasons, the Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter of birth and corruption, and changes the fourth element.

In the third part of the work are the elements and everything that is subordinate to them, in which is the small world, man. He again has four elements within him. Anima is in the head, per se nos; Spiritus is in the heart, and operates through the arteries; Corpus is the whole body with the veins; Genius, a spark of fire, is in the kidneys, and governs birth. He has four spiritual and strong working faculties, or facultates actiones, or spiritus, as his Animalis, Vitalis, Naturalis, Genitions. The soul has inward senses, as sensum commune; in which faith takes hold as (fides) and other senses Intellectus in the brain.

2. Imaginatrix, the imagination is another soul operation or phantasia, which draws a picture of power and accomplishes all things.

3. Ratiocinatio repeats the Species on the mind on all cases and judgments, Scientia; if the soul will now turn to real reason, it will acquire knowledge of all worldly wisdom.

4. Mensorstriz, the memory, retains all things which pertain to the faculties and operations of the spirit; to bring an experimentum et Sensum through agitation of the nerves the increase of the human race is effected by God. The living spirit of the heart embraces within itself four virtues: Justitia; Temperantia; Prudentia; Fortitudo; and thence it is the arterial blood and connect the soul with the body. Appetitus Sensitivus; the natural spiritual action and power lies in the liver and arteries, and effect motion and attraction, support and subsistence; the proper spirit of strength and sap lies in the kidneys; to multiply through divine perfection.

The body has four elements, namely, spirit, fruit, flesh and bone—four complexions or temperaments, warm, wet, dry; attraction is produced by warmth, dryness, dampness; repulsion is produced by coldness and dryness. Lien-Ostio by warmth and wet, id est stomachus; four wet, gall, blood, mucus and melancholia.

In the fourth quarter of the world there is darkness, instituted for condemnation in wrath and for punishment. Four princes of devils are injurious in the four elements: Samael; Azael; Azael; Mehazoz; four princes of devils over the four quarters of the earth; Orion; Fagmon; Eggs; Ameyon.

The first Semiphoras is that of Adam, because he spoke with the Creator in Paradise.

The second Semiphoras, because he spoke with angels and spirits.

The third, because he spoke with devils.

The fourth, because he spoke with the creatures of the four elements, the birds, the fishes, the animals, and the creeping things of the earth.

The fifth, because he spoke with inanimate objects, as herbs, seeds, trees and all vegetation.

The sixth, because he spoke with the winds.

The seventh, because he spoke with the sun, moon and stars.

By the power of the seven Semiphoras he could create and destroy all he desired.

The first Semiphoras was acknowledged by Adam, since God created him and placed him in Paradise, where he was allowed to remain only seven hours. The name is Jove, which name must be pronounced only in the greatest need, and then only with the most devout feelings toward the Creator. In this case you will find grace and sure help.

The second Semiphoras, in which Adam spoke with angels, and which gave him the expression, yesterday, that is, God without Beginning and without End; must be pronounced when speaking with angels, and then your questions will be answered and your wishes fulfilled.

The third Semiphoras, in which Adam spoke with the spirits of the departed, and inquired of them, who gave him satisfactory answers upon the word, Adonay-Sabaoth, cadus adonay amara; these words must be uttered when you wish to collect winds, spirits or demons, Aly, Adey, Sabaoth, amara.

The fourth Semiphoras, Layamen, Iava, Erin, Iavagellayn, Lava.

quiri, Lavagola, Lavatasorin, Layflafafin, Lyafaran; with this name he bound and unbound all animals and spirits.

The fifth Semiphoras, Lyacham, Lyalgema, Lyafaran, Lialfatah, Lebara, Lebarosin, Layararalus; if you wish to bind equals, as trees and seeds, you must pronounce the above words.

The sixth Semiphoras is great in might and virtue; Letamnin, Letayloge, Letaynin, Lebaganaritin, Letarminin, Letagelogin, Lotafalosin. Use these when you desire the elements or winds to fulfil your wishes.

The seventh Semiphoras is great and mighty. They are the names of the Creator; which must be pronounced in the beginning of each undertaking: Eliaon yoonadouay eadus ebreel, eloyela uglel, ayoni, Sechado, easuselas eloyra, delion iuu elynla, delia, yazi, Zazael, paliel man, umiel, onela dilatan saday alma paneim plyn, canal deus Uagmi yaras calipix calfas sasna saffasaday aylata panteomel auriel arion phanston seare panerionys emanuel Joth Jalaph amphia, than demisrael mu all le Leazyns ala pinar aglacyei qyol paeriterou theseroym barimel, jael haryon ya apiolell echet.

These holy names pronounce at each time in reverence toward God, when you desire to accomplish something through the elements or something connected therewith, and your wishes will be fulfilled, and what is to be destroyed will be destroyed, for God will be with you because you know his name.

The following is another name of Semiphoras which God gave to Moses in seven parts.

The first is, when Moses concealed himself and spoke with God, when the fire burned in the forest without consuming it.

The second, as he spoke with the Creator on the mountain.

The third, when he divided the Red Sea, and passed through with the whole people of Israel, etc.

The fourth, when his staff was turned into a serpent which devoured the other serpents.

The fifth, are the names which were written on the forehead of Aaron.

The sixth, when he made a brazen serpent and burned the golden calf to divert pestilence from the Israelites.

The seventh, when manna fell in the wilderness and when water gushed from the rock.

In the first are the words which Moses spoke as he went on the mountain, when he spoke to the flames of fire: Maya, Affaby, Zien, Jaramye, yne Latebni damaa yrsano, noy lyloo Lhay yly yre Eylvl Zya Lyelee, Loate, lideloy eloyl, mecha ramethy rybilasaa fu aziry scihiu rite Zelohabe vete hebe ede neyo ramy rahabe (eoyiq anubee). If you pray this word to God devoutly your undertaking will be fulfilled without a doubt.

In the second are the words which God spoke to Moses as he went on the mountain: Abtan, Abynistan, Zoratan Juran nondieas, potarte fajs alapeina pogrij podaj sacrosicium. In these words the prophet spoke to the angels with whom the four quarters of the earth are sealed, through which the temple was founded Bosale. If you wish to pronounce these you should fast three days, be chaste and pure, and then you can perform many wonders.

In the third are words which Moses spake in order to divide the Red Sea : Qna clalie saijec tolomomaati ; bekahn aijco inare asua haene hieha ijsale malieha arnija aremeholona queleij, Lineno, feijano, ijoije malao haboua nethee hijcere. If you have lost favor of your master, or if you wish to gain the good-will of some one, speak these words with fervor and humillty, etc.

In the fourth are words which Moses spake when he changed his staff into a serpent : Micrato, ræpjsathonich petanith pistan ijttn ijer hijgarin ijtgnitton tamayrou atjcou dunanas castas Lacias astas ijecon cijna caihera natu facas. Pronounce these names when you wish to have your desires fulfilled.

In the fifth are the written names of the forehead of Aaron as he spake with the Creator : Sadaij haijives Lucas elacijs jaconi hasihaia ijein mo, sep, actitas barne lud doncentij eija iehhu reu, vaha, vialia, eije. Vie haija hoij asaija salna bahai, quci, ijaia. Elenebel, na vena ; setna. The names are powerful in satisfying each request.

In the sixth are names which were written upon the staff of Moses, when he made the brazen serpent and broke the golden calf : Tane mare ayan, abijt ala, mmo, hja actenal tijogus ijaño, eloim ija nehn ijane haij ijanehn, ahijaco mea. With this name destroy all sorcery and evil. You must not pronounce it with levity in your works.

In the seventh are words which Moses employed in leading the Israelites out of Egypt, with which he brought manna from heaven and caused the water to flow from the rock : Sadaij amara elon pheneton eloij enelj ebeoel messias, ijahe yehu hejiane, ijanancel, elijon. Pronounce these words when you desire to do something wonderful, or when you are in great need, and call earnestly on God, etc.

PRAYER.

Oh, thou living God ; thou great, strong, mighty, holy and pure Creator full of mercy—a blessed Lord of all things ; praised be thy name. I implore Thee, fulfill my desire. Thou canst work. Permit us to accomplish this work. Grant us thy grace and give us thy divine blessing, that we may happily fulfill this work. Thou, holy, merciful and gracious God, have mercy upon us. Thy name, Jesu-raise be adored forever and ever. Amen, etc.

In the name of the Almighty Creator, I, Solomon, hold to the declaration of the divine names : Agia. Thou art a mighty God to all eternity. He who bears upon his person this name, written upon a gold plate, will never die a sudden death. Ararita—a beginning of all unity. Ahen—thou solid rock, united with the Son. Amen, etc. Thou, Lord, a true king, perfect it, etc.

The names consist of the beginning of the chapters Adonay, which the Hebrews made use of instead of the unutterable name, Asser Eerie.

The seven mighty names may be obtained at a favorable hour and place : Gomitetjon, sede aij, throtomas, asmagata bij iji ijeos.

The four names of the Creator : Jva, Jona, eloij, Jenu. He who calls often upon God in faith and with fear, and carries with him the golden letters, will never want for an honorable subsistence and good clothing. The name which Adam uttered at the entrance to hell, is mephenai phaton. He who bears this name with him is unconquerable.

The name which God communicated to Moses on Mount Sinai, Heedion, will put away all causes for sorrow.

The name which Joshua prayed when the sun stood still, baahand, beltaleir, deatzbat, brings vengeance upon enemies.

The ten names of Sepirot: I, Solomon, spoke in my prayer to God, and he gave me wisdom; Ethor, Hoshmai, binach, basced, Geburah, thiphretz, nezah, kod Jehod malchut.

Now follow the ten names of God: Esale, Jod tetragrammaton, Tetragrammaton Sepoth, elohim Sabaoth, Sadai, Adonai, aulech, all with ten letters. Tetragrammaton Vedeth have eight letters. Ehoie, the self-existence of God, Arerite Aser, abels, the names of God of seven letters.

Eesh, used by Moses as the fire of God, Elion has five letters and they are all Hebrew characters.

Emeth, the true God; is God's seal. The explanation of the ten names of God and the ten Sephiroth, is given in Cornel Agrippa, de occulta Philosophia, Lib. 3, Cap. 10.

Hacaba, the holy and adored God.

Hu, himself the power of the Deity.

Hod, Jod, a divine being.

Jah, a just God, comparing himself with man.

Inon.

Jeuba, the Messiah will come in the golden age.

Jaua, he who treated the light.

Isala, with the name El, resembles the changed era (each made up of 31.)

Mettetren for Sadai, each name composed of 314

Icru Maspar, both names are derived from a transposition of the name Jehova.

Messiah is derived from a transposition of the letters in Jinnas Masom.

Na, the name of God, should be used in tribulation and oppression.

Oromasim, Mitrim, Aramineta, signify God and the Spirit. These are three princes of the world.

Pele, he who worketh wonders, etc.

These names must be selected out of each letter constituting the work, for the accomplishment of which the help of God should be implored. Similar to a certain text, in Exodus 14, consisting of three verses which are always written with seventy-two letters, beginning with the three words: Yajia, Vaiduo, Vaidet; which, when placed in a line, one and three, from left to right, the middle one transposed from the right to the left, as in a reverse order, constitutes one name of the seventy-two letters of which are named Schemhemphe.

If now the divine names, El or Jod, are added, there will be seventy-two names of God, each of them syllables, for it is written:

under the favor of God, he will obtain his desire through faith and wisdom : first, from the stars and from the heavens by the rational reflections of His spirit ; second, by the animal kingdom, through his senses ; third, by the elements, through his fourfold body.

Therefore, man binds all creatures through comparison, by calling upon the higher power, through the name and power which governs one thing ; and thereafter through the lower things themselves, etc.

And now, he who desires to become master of the working of the soul, must become familiar with the order of all things, just as they are obtained by God in their proper state, from the highest to the lowest, through natural connections, that he may descend as if from a ladder. On this account the Heathens committed the error of worshipping the planets and fixed stars, not because they heard but because they were moved by the powers which governed them and were, at the same time, impelled thereto by the influence of their founder and creator. And in this manner, likewise, Christian nations have committed the error of paying homage to departed saints and giving honor to the creature which belongs only to the Creator, and God is a jealous God and will not permit the worship of idols. The prayer of faith, therefore, in proper language, and for proper objects, is intimately related to the name of God, from which we descend by words, from one to the other, following each other out of a natural relationship, in order to accomplish something.

The son, therefore, prevails upon the father that he may support him, although the father may not do so willingly ; still since he is his offspring he must calculate to maintain him. How much greater care our heavenly Father must feel for us, if we serve him in a proper manner ?

He who desires the influence of the sun, must not only direct his eyes toward it, but he must elevate his soul-power to the soul-power of the sun, which is God himself, having previously made himself equal to God, by fasting, purification and good works, but he must also pray in the name of the Mediator, with fervent love to God, and his fellow-man that he may come to the sun-spirit, so that he may be filled with its light and lustre, which he may draw to himself from heaven, and that he may become gifted with heavenly gifts and obtain all the desires of his heart ; and as soon as he grasps the higher light and arrives at a state of perfection, being gifted with supernatural intelligence, he will also obtain supernatural might and power. For this reason, without godliness, man will deny his faith in Christ, and will become unacceptable to God, therewith often falling a prey to the evil spirits against whom there is no better protection than the fear of the Lord and fervent love to God and man.

Most people who are skilled in divine works, and who possess the right to command spirits, must be worthy by nature or become worthy by education and discipline for their calling—must keep all their works secret, but may not conceal it from a true and pious person. Dignity of birth comes from station, but it is due to Satharub, Sol, Mercurium or Martem that he is made prosperous—that he is learned in Physics, Metaphysics and Theology.

If a man has a knowledge of God, as the first great cause, he must also acknowledge other causes or co-operative spirits, and determine what official station of dignity and honor to accord to them; and without which knowledge their presence and help cannot be enjoyed. Such honor and dignity must not be shown for the sake of the spirits but for the sake of their Lord, whose servants they are. In this manner the angels of God will encamp around those who fear and love the Lord; and, as Augustinus says: "Everything possesses a predestined angel-power." For this reason the Hebrew theologians, Meccubae and Cabalists, named ten principle divine names as members of God, and ten Numerationes or Zephirot, as niment and instruments of the Creator, through which he is infused into all his creatures, according to the order of the ten, Angelic and ten princely spirit-choirs, from which all things derive their power and quality.

1. The name ETHEE, ver Ethee, its number Oether elion, one Lord, is the simplest Deity, which no eye has seen, is ascribed to God, the Father, gives influence through the order Seraphia haiath, haiadosch, gate of holiness or of life, that transmits life to everything through Elieic. From this he flows in through premmu mabele so that all things must exist—that the heavens must revolve every twenty-four hours. This wonderful being is called Intelligentia Metatron, that is, a prince of faces. His office is to lead others into the presence of the Sovereign, and through him God spoke to Moses.

2. JEHOVAH, Jod, vel Jah, his number Chochma—wisdom: The Deity full of spirit. The first-born son through whom the Father redeemed man from his curse, is infused through the order of Cherubim, Hebrew Ophanim, of the form or Council. From these he flows into the star-bedeked heavens, and produces there many figures. Chavs of creatures, God, Jod, Tetragrammaton, through the peculiar Intelligentia razelem, who was a representative of Adam, etc.

3. TETRAGRAMMATON ELOHIM, his number is called Binah, That is, caution or sense, and signifies pardon and rest, cheerfulness, repentance and conversion—the great trumpet, the redemption of the world and life in time to come, is adapted to the Holy Spirit and flows in his might through the order of Thronorum, which is called Arachim in Hebrew—that is, the great, strong and mighty angels, from thence through the Saturul Sphaeram it gives to liquid matter the form Shopsie, which was an Intelligentia Zaphkiel, was Noah's representative, and another Intelligentia Jophiel, Shem's representative, and these are the three highest and greatest Numerationes, as a throne of the divine Persons, through whose commands everything takes place, and which is completed by the other seven, which, in this account are called Numerationes fabrica, etc.

4. EL, his number Haced, that is, grace or goodness, and is called mercy, pity, great power, scepter and right hand, and flows in through order Dominatum, Hebrew Hasmalin—confers peaceable justice through Sphaeram Jovis and bestows in a general manner special Intelligentia; Zadkiel, Abraham's representative.

5. ELOHIM quhar, a strong God, who punishes the guilt of the wicked. His number is Geburah, that is, might, gravity, strength, security, judgment. He inflicts punishment through the sword and through war. To this is added the judgment-seat of God, the globe of the Lord, a sword, and last arm; also Pashed, that is, four before God; flows in through the order of Potestatum Hebraei Seraphim, so named, and from thence through the Sphaeram Martia, which has great war and tribulation—moves the elements accordingly. His peculiar Intelligentia Gemael, Samson's representative.

6. ELCHA, the God of Alchemy; his number is Epheset, grace, beauty, adornment, happiness and pleasure—signifies the word of life and flows in through the order Virtutum, which in Hebrew is Malchiam: This angel, through Sphaeram Solis, gives perspicuity and life, and reveals metals. His particular Intelligentia, Raphael, was the representative of Isaac and of the youthful Tobias; and Pehet was the representative of Jacob.

7. MISERACORDIA TON SABAOTH, or Adonai Sabaoth, the God of Hosts. His number is Nemeth, that is, triumph and victory; to him is accorded the right pillar, and signifies eternity, the justice of God, and avenger; he flows in through the order of Principatum or through the Hebrew Elohim, that is, God in Sphaeram Venetis, love and justice. He produces all Vegetable growth and his peculiar Intelligentia Hamael, and the angel Gernaius is David's representative.

8. ELOHIM SABAOTH, God of Hosts, not of war or wrath, but of pity, for he has both names and goes before his hosts. His number is called Hod, that is, honorable confession, ornament and renew. To him is accorded the left pillar, and he flows in through the order of Archangelorum, before the gods in Sphaeram Mercuri, adornment, safety and sanctity, and brings forth animals; His peculiar Intelligentia Michael, the representative of Solomon.

9. SADAJ, the Almighty, who does all things abundantly, and Elhay, that is, the living God. His number is called Jesed, that is, a foundation, and is denominated goodness, redemption and rest. He flows in through the order of Angelorum, in Hebrew Chorabin in Sphaeram Lunae, to increase and decrease all things, supports and contributes the genius of man: his Intelligentia Gabriel, a representative of Joseph, Joshua, and Daniel.

10. ABONAY MELBOH, that is, a Lord and King. His number is called Malchet, that is, a kingdom and dominion, and is termed the Church and house of God, and the dew flows in through the order of Animaticum of the believing soul—in Hebrew, the life of princes, and they are inferior to the hierarchy. They afford information to the children of men, of the wonderful things of knowledge, guard them against prophecies. For their Anima Mentis Mentis, or according to others the Intelligentia Metatron, which is called the first creature—the soul of the world, is the representative of Moses, the fountain of all life.

Therefore, all the names of God and the ten Sephiroth, are embraced in the Archetypum.

In mundi intelligentia are included the nine choirs of the angels, or according to Dionysius, the ten blessed orders;

1. Seraphim; 2. Cherubim; 3. Throni; 4. Dominations; 5. Potestades; 6. Virtutes; 7. Principatus; 8. Archangeli; 9. Angeli; and 10. Animæ Beatae.

The Hebrews, therefore, call them: Haeleth, Hachden, Ophanim; Aralim; Hasmalim; Seraphim; Malachim; Elohim, Ben Elohim; Cherubim; Israhim.

The ten representative angels are: Matatron, Jophiel, Zaphiel, Camael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, Gabriel, Anna, Michael.

The Nine Chords of Angels divide Theology into Three Hierarchies.

In the first hierarchy are the Seraphim, Cherubim, and Throni. These more than celestial spirits are called gods, or the sons of the gods, because they continually behold the order of divine providence. Being foremost in the goodness of God, they praise Him unceasingly and pray for us. The second in the being of God, according to form, and the third in the wisdom of God, stand continually before God.

In the middle hierarchy are the Dominations, Potestates, Virtutes, as spirits of intelligence, to rule the whole world. The first command what the others perform. The second stand that which interfere with the laws of God. The third oversee the heavens and occasionally perform great wonders. These six orders of spirits are never sent upon the earth.

In the lower hierarchy are the Principatus, Archangeli, et angeli, which are administering spirits to oversee worldly affairs.

The first, in general, provide for princes and magistrates, and care for kingdoms and countries, each in his own especial sphere, as Moses declares in his song, Deut. xxxii. 8: "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." And Daniel says, chap. vi. 10: "But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me twenty-one days: And Jesus Sirach bears witness, that each nation has its angel as a director. Therefore did the Romans at all times invoke the angel of their country. 2. The second are engaged in divine affairs, facilitate and regulate the worship of God among all men; and present the prayers, offerings and piety of men to God. 3. The third order all things of minor importance, and each one is appointed as a protector to every man.

For this reason the fourth hierarchy are added to the former as the souls of heavenly bodies, Animæ Corporum Celestium; the souls of Herods, and Herons and of the Martyrs; They first control the light, and the influence of the strong, so that their power may proceed from God to the lower regions. The second are the chosen souls of the redeemed. The third are the souls of the innocent martyrs and followers of God, who offered up their lives, amid pain and suffering, out of love to God.

Since God the Father gave to the Son, our Mediator, Saviour and Redeemer, all power in heaven and on earth, and the angels of the great name of God and Jesus, which is the first might in God, it flows, accordingly, into the twelve angels and twelve signs, through which it spreads into the seven planets, and, as a natural consequence, into all other servants and instruments of God, until it penetrates into the lower regions, so that even an insignificant herb may develop a peculiar power, even if it is decayed, and so the angel of man appears before God at all times bearing his prayers into his presence.

Without the name of Jesus the old Hebrew cabalists can accomplish nothing in the present day, with old arts as they were used by the Fathers. Therefore, it is, that all treasures fear and honor him: All men who believe in him are enlightened through his brightness, our souls are united with him, and the divine power emanating from him is communicated to us.

OF THE MOVEMENT OF THE HEAVENLY POWERS.

The first course in Mundo Coelesti watches day and night. Primum Mobile Rechet Hagallalim. It continues from morning until night. From these the Heathens divided the angels into thirty-three orders. The first great light, communicates light, life and station out of the first course, and opposes others in the Sphaera Zodiaci; causes summer and winter, the spring of all the things of the elements: Hebrew Masloth, goes from evening to morning according to the twelve signs of the heavens.

But even if all things have their existence from God, the great First Cause, we should not despise other causes, according to changes in time, in the year, in the month, day and hour, neither should we regard these causes exclusively, and forget God, for in this manner heathen idolatry was instituted. For this reason God does not regard time, because it robs him of his honor: For the heathens experienced that the heavenly spirits were not united with their bodies, as our souls are united with our bodies, but they could rejoice in the presence of God, and prepare their bodies without much labor to work with the lower creatures of God. They regarded the celestial spirits as gods, and conferred divine honors upon them. Very often the Jews turned away from God and worshipped the hosts of heaven, and therefore the wrath of God was kindled against them. But on account of the order of all things, God has set them before us as his instruments, and which we, on account of their honorable office, are to regard as the noblest creation of God, and that we should honor them, next to God, according to their station, not as gods but as creatures, which he has appointed as twelve princes over the twelve gates of heaven, that they may admit what they received from the divine name, transposed twelve times.

Ezekiel writes: "The laws of the twelve tribes of Israel were thus written, and God Tetragrammaton ruled over them. Thus it is written in Revelations, that the stones in our heavenly city are planted in the ground, or that the Church of Christ is represented by the twelve names of the Apostles, including twelve angels and of them the name of Jesus, who received all the power of the Father, so that the heavens will receive what the angels give to them according to the will of God. If then an Intelligentia is ascribed to each heaven, each star and department of heaven must have a distinct and separate power and influence and, therefore, must also have a distinct Intelligentia. Therefore, there are twelve princes of angels, who represent the twelve signs of the Zodiac, and thirty-six, who represent so many Decurils, and seventy-two angels, who represent so many Quinarius of heaven, of the seventy-two nations and languages of man. Likewise seven angels of the hosts for the seven heavens of the seven planets, to rule the world, etc. Also, four angels who represent the Triplicitatibus of the twelve signs of the Zodiac and the four elements.

All of these have their names and signs which the philosophers used in their works, signs, images, clothes, mirrors, rings, cards, wax-figures, as if they had a sun-work before them, and they called them the names of the sun and his angels, and likewise of others, etc.

In the third place, they designated the lowest angels as servants. These they distributed over the world, and named them after the seven planets, and these have their special course after the four elements and after the four parts of the air and earth—of the daytime several Diurnos, several Nocturnos, several Merillianos, not that they are subordinate to the influence of the stars as the body which they represent, but that they are more nearly related to the star-body-kind-time than others, otherwise they might be everywhere, as each human being has three angels, for God has ordained that each human being shall have his good angel as a protector, who also strengthens the spirit and urges and exhorts us to what is good and commendable, that we may fly from what is fati malignitatem. And so every man has also an evil spirit, who controls the desires of the flesh and awakens the lusts of the heart; between these two angels there is a constant struggle for supremacy, and to whichever man gives the preference, he will receive the victory; and if the evil angel triumphs, then man becomes his servant; should the good angel prove the stronger, then he will cleanse the soul and save man from destruction. The angel and his impulses come from the stars. In the third place are the Genii of man who govern birth, and are joined to each perfection in man. These are recognized from the star which is the Lord of the births. The Chaldeans seek this Genium in the sun and moon. Astronomers would have the good Genium out of the eleventh house, which, on this account, they call bonum Genium. The evil one out of the sixth house. But each one will learn to know him through natural inclination, to which every one was inclined from his youth. On this account he is called the birth-angel, who is sent into the world by God. Of this the Psalmist says: "Thou hast made the spirit of man as a flame of fire." For experience teaches us, that the flame of fire and the spirit of birth may be separated without injury to man, that we can learn hidden things from him if he is good and true. But he is powerless over the members of birth. If, however, a virgin or a companion becomes marriageable, he may be liberated from the glass, and our time of life will be extended.

Moreover, God has endowed man with a divine character, through the number Rhabad—the left-hand sword of God; through which man becomes a curse to all creatures. And then again he has another character in the number of God, Heed—the right and sceptre of God, through which he finds favor in the sight of God and all his creatures. An evil conscience is the judge of men, but a good conscience is his happiness. Therefore, through the other divine numbers, and through the angels and stars a man becomes impressed with signs and characters of conscience, which causes him to be happy at one time and unhappy at another.

On this account, if a man has committed murder, theft, or any other act which his conscience condemns, he can be brought to a confession of his guilt through persistent calling upon the name of God, for his conscience will then give him no rest until he returns what he has stolen, or until he has suffered the punishment due to his crime. Therefore, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, take three small pieces of wood from the door-sill over which the thief passed in leaving the place where he committed the theft, place them within a wagon-wheel, and then through the hub of the wheel say the following words: "I pray thee, thou Holy Trinity, that thou mayest cause A, who stole from me B, a, C, to have no rest or peace until he again restores me that which he has stolen." Turn the wheel round three times and replace it again on the wagon. Nevertheless, all pious Christians, who have any regard for their future happiness, should carefully avoid all superstitious matters and should beware of using the holy name of God unworthily, holding it in the greatest reverence lest they bring upon themselves eternal punishment. If a man knows himself and realizes that he is created in the image and likeness of God, he will acknowledge God the Creator before all things, and afterward the world and all its creatures. From the high spirits, angels and the heavens, he has his portion, and from the elements, animals, vegetation and stones, he has within himself everything that he desires to obtain.

If a man knows how to appropriate the particular place, time, order, bulk, proportion and mental organization of any one, he can attract and draw them, just as a magnet attracts iron: but he must first be prepared, just as the magnet must be fashioned by the file and charged with electricity. To this end the soul must first be purified, and dedicated to God through faith; a pure heart and constant joy in the spirit are requisites. He must possess love to God and his fellow-man, and then he may arrive at a perfect state and become like unto the Son of God. He will become united with God, and will once more be like him. It is not given to angels nor to any creature to unite with God, but only to man, and he may become his son; and when this takes place, so that he overcomes himself, he overcomes and can draw to him all other creatures and command their obedience.

But our spirit, word and act, have no power in magic and knowledge, if they are not everywhere strengthened by the word of God, which we should hear often. We must pray to God without ceasing, live a sober, temperate and unstained life; we must live in a continual state of repentance, give alms and help the poor, for Christ has not said in vain : " Make unto you friends with the unrighteous Mam-mes, so that he will receive you into eternal habitations," that is, apply your wealth and abundance to the support of the poor, that they may receive their daily bread from you and be satisfied. Christ says : " What ye have done unto the least of mine, that have ye also done unto me." These are the friends that will lead us to a divine abode in heaven, where we shall receive a thousand-fold and life eternal. On the other hand there are others who will be rejected. For Christ also says : " I was hungry and thirsty and ye gave me no meat and drink, depart from-me ye workers of iniquity, into outer darkness."

Therefore, by fasting, praying, giving alms, preparing the souls of the believing for the temple, we may become co-heirs of heavenly gifts, which the Most High will confer upon us in this life if we know how to use them properly.

Since all things have their life and being from God, so the proper name of everything was taken from the being of that thing, and all things derive an influence from the Creator if they have been appropriately named, for as God brings forth all things through the influence of heaven and the operation of the planets, even so the names of all things have been given in accordance with some quality of the thing named by him who creates the stars. And thus God led all creatures to Adam in order to have them named, and their names indicated some peculiar quality or part possessed by each. Therefore, each name that has a meaning, shows by comparison with the heavenly influence an inherent qualification of the object, although it is frequently changed. When, however, both meanings of the name harmonize, then the will-power and natural power become identical. Moreover, the celestial office to which man is ordained by God, endows him with power to confer life, and tells him what to encourage, what to elevate, what to suppress in his cause. Sphaera, and to perform wonderful works with full devotion towards God, etc.

What Man Receives from the Order of Angels.

Man becomes strengthened with wonderful power through the order of angels, so that he delays the divine will.

From the Seraphim, that we cling with fervent love.

From the Cherubim, enlightenment of the mind, power and wisdom over the exalted figures and images, through which we can gaze upon divine things, etc.

From the Thrones, a knowledge of how we are made and constituted, that we may direct our thoughts upon eternal things.

From Dominationibus, assistance to bring into subjection our daily enemies, whom we carry with us constantly, and enabling us to attain salvation.

From Potestatibus, protection against human enemies of life.

From Virtutibus, God infuses strength into us, enabling us to contend against the enemies of truth and reward, that we may finish the course of our natural life.

From Principatibus, that all things become subject to man, that he may grasp all power, and draw unto himself all secret and supernatural knowledge.

From Archangells, that he may rule over all things that God has made subject to him, over the animals of the field, over the fishes of the sea, and over the birds of the air.

From the Angelis he receives the power to be the messenger of the Divine will.

What Man may Obtain from the Twelve Signs.

As each creature receives its spirit, number and measure from God, so also each creature has its time.

In the Ram, the vegetables of earth obtain new vigor, the trees sap, and females become better adapted to propagate the human species. In this sign the fecundity of all creatures is limited and regulated. It has Sunday for its peculiar time and end.

In the Bull, all transactions and enterprises are prospered and fostered, so that they may go forward according to the will of God, but to this end constant prayers are necessary, and particularly on Sunday.

In the Twins, the angels have power over bodily changes and travel from one place to another over the heavens and through the course of the stars—have power over the motion of the waters in rivers and in the sea, cause love between brethren, friends and neighbors, and give warning against dangers, persons and objects.

In the Scorpion, the angels rule over legacies and riches, over treasure and treasure-seekers—are calculated by nature to confer power, the art of speaking, and to enlighten the mind in holy things, in like manner as did the apostles in their unceasing prayers to God at Pentecost.

In the Lion, the angels have power to move every living thing, to multiply their species, to watch, and in certain manners to judge. And through the gift of God they confer Physicam, Medicinam and Alchymiam.

In the Virgin, the spirits have power to subvert kingdoms, to regulate all conditions, to discriminate between master and servant, to command evil spirits, to confer perpetual health, and give to man Musicum, Logicam and Ethicam.

In the Balance, the angels derive from God great power, inasmuch as the sun and moon stand under this sign. Their power controls the friendship and enmity of all creatures.

They have power over danger, warfare, over quarrels and slander—lead armies in all quarters of the earth, cause rain, and give to man Arithmetica, Astronomiam, Geometriam.

In the Scorpion, the angels have power over suffering and terror, over which man makes against God, over common privileges. They compel the conscience to obedience, and also force devils to keep their agreements with men, and vice versa. They govern the life and death of all creatures, have power over departed souls, and give to man Theologiam, Metaphysicam and Geomantiam.

In the Archer, they have power over the four elements, lead the people from one far country to another, regulate the changes of the elements and the propagation of animals.

In the Goat, the angels give high worldly honors, worthiness and virtue, such as Adam enjoyed in Paradise in his innocence. They also enlighten the understanding and confer human reason.

In the Aquitarius, angels keep man in good health, and teach him what is injurious to him, make him contented, and teach him through the command of God the mysteries of heaven and of nature.

In the Fish, the angels compel the evil spirits to become subject to man, protect the pious, so that the great enemy cannot harm him.

The Twelve Signs are Divided into Four Triplicities.

The twelve angels, which represent the twelve signs, are called in the Apoc. Maichidael, Asmodel, Ambriel, Muriel, Verohiel, Hamatiel, Zuriel, Barbiel, Aduachiel, Hanaeb, Gambiel, Barebiel. Over this the angels also received names from the stars over which they rule as the twelve signs : Teletial, Zariel, Tomimil, Sartimel, Ariel, Bataliel, Masuiel, Aerahiel, Ehesatiel, Gediel, Doliel, Dagymel, which means the same as if expressed in Latin : Ariel, Tawnel, Geminiel, Cancriel, Leonial, Virginiel, Libriel, Scorpiel, Sagitariel, Capriel, Aquariel, Pisciel.

This method of obtaining all kinds of things with peculiar power, in the twelve signs, is described in many kinds of books. The seal of Hermetis teaches how the powers of the heavenly influence may be obtained under each sign in a crystal or gem ; that they are constellated, and then, at each period of the twelve signs the appropriate character of each is divided into four parts, each of which is represented by an angel. Therefore, each of the twelve stories in the badge of office of Aaron (Solomonis) was constellated, and the Amorites possessed a constellated stone for each idol, and to this end they consecrated the book.

Further, King Solomon teaches a hidden Almadel or a Geometrical figure bearing upon the twelve signs of heaven, which he calls heights, and gives to each height seven or eight names of princes. There are also many other methods for seeking after the powers of heaven in the twelve signs, which, for good reasons, must not be made known, because they are not mentioned in the Holy Scriptures and were kept secret.

The Planets have Seven Heights and Seven Angels.

The heights are named as follows :

1. Samaym. 2. Raaquin 3. Taaquin. 4. Machonon. 5. Mathey. 6. Sebul. 7. Arabat.

Of the operations of these, and their angels, office, order, number and measure, an account may be found in a work by Rasiel, which constitutes the Sixth Book Physicum Salomonis and Elementia Magica Petri de Alano, page 574. From this book the book of the angel

Tractata takes its source. (2 Cornel. Agrippa, Lib. 3, page 24; Philosophias Occul, §77, §75.)

There are seven exalted Throne Angels, which execute the commands of Potentates, viz. :

1. Ophaniel. 2. Tychagara. 3. Barael. 4. Quolamia. 5. Anazimur. 6. Paschar. 7. Boel.

These are named with the name of God, through which they were created, and belong to the first heaven.

SCHAMAYN, GABRIEL.

The second heaven, Raasniae, has twelve lords; or twelve heights of angels, who are placed over all. Zachariel, Raphael.

The third heaven, Saaquin, has three princes, Jahniel, Babacyel, Dalgutiel; they rule over fire, and each has his subordinate angel. The principal prince of angels in this height is called $\frac{1}{2}$ Anabel, Avahel.

The fourth heaven, Machon, by his angels leads the sun by day, and through other angels by night. The chief angel is called Michael.

The fifth heaven, Matthey, sly Machon, has the prince Samael who is served by two millions of angels. These are divided among the four quarters of the world; in each quarter three, who control the twelve months, and over these are twelve chief angels.

The sixth heaven, Zebul, has for its prince, Zachiel, with two millions of angels. The angel Zebul is placed over these during the day, and another angel, Sabath, during the night. They rule over kings, create fear, and give protection from enemies.

Arasath, the seventh heaven, has for its prince the angel Cassiel.

The names of the angels of the seven planets are as follows :

Zaphiel (Saturn), Zadkiel (Jupiter), Camael (Mars), Raphael (Sun), Haniel (Venus), Michael (Mercury), Gabriel (Moon).

There are seven princes who stand continually before God, to whom are given the spirit-names of the planets. They are called Sabathiel, Zedekiel, Madimiel, Semefiel, or Semishia, Nogahel, Coahabiath or Cochabiel, Jareabel or Jevanael, for the planets are called for themselves :

Sabachay, through which God sends hunger and tribulation upon the earth.

Sodeck, through him come honor and favor, right and holiness of man.

Modym, through him wrath, hate, lies, and war.

Hamnia, from him comes light, and the power of distinguishing between time and life.

Noga, from him food and drink, love and consolation.

Cochab, from him proceeds all trade and commerce.

Lavaban, causes all things to increase and decrease.

I, Solomon, acknowledge that in the hours Sabachay. Modym it is burdensome to labor, but in the hours Zadeck and Noga labor is light. During other hours labor is middling, sometimes good and occasionally bad.

Some writers, as for example, Cornelius Agrippa, Occult. Philos, Lib. 3, chap. 16. call the seven regents of the world by other names, which are distributed among the powers of other stars as Orphiel, Zechariel, Samael, Michael, Anael, Raphael, Gabriel, and each of these rules the world three hundred and fifty-four years and four months. A few give the Angel-year at three hundred and sixty-five years—as many years as there are days in our year. Others, one hundred and forty-five years. Apac, twenty-one Spiritus, Septem in Conspectu Dei Throni sunt quos reperi etiam presidere Planetis.

The names of the seven angels over the seven heavens must be uttered first, and afterwards the names of those over the seven planets, over the seven days of the week, over the seven metals, over the seven colors; these must be uttered in the morning of each day of the week.

Invocation of Angels.

Oh, ye aforesaid angels, ye that execute the commands of the Creator; be willing to be present with me in the work which I have undertaken at this time, and help me to finish it, and be ye my attentive hearers and assistants, that the honor of God and my own welfare may be promoted.

Over this there are twenty-eight angels who rule over the twenty-eight houses of the moon, viz: Asariel, Gabiel, Dirachiel, Schelliel, Ammodiel, Amiziel, Ardesiel, Nerieli, Abdizriel, Jazeriel, Cogediel, Ataliel, Azerniel, Adriel, Amutiel, Icirieli, Bethusael, Geliel, Requieli, Abrudael, Azieli, Tagried, Abheiel, Amniziel. And each moon has her own guardian and ruler, and these are described in Lib. 2, Raziellis.

A man must also know how to divide the months, days and hours into four parts, for God has ordained that all things can best be perfected on suitable days and at proper hours.

The angels placed over the four parts of heaven are: Seantjan, Gabriel, Cabrael, Adrael, Madiel, Boamiel.

Alscius, Loquel, Zaniel, Hubael, Baccanael, Janael, Carpatiel.

Elael, Unael, Wallum, Vasans, Hialjel, Usara, Stajel.

Ducaniel, Baabiel, Barquiel, Hannu, Anael Nahijmel.

In the second heaven, Raquie, the following angels serve.

Nathan, Catroije, Betasbat.

Yeseraije, Yuacon:

Thiel, Jareael, Yanael, Venetal, Vebol, Abuionij, Vetameil.

Milliel, Nelepa, Baliel, Calliel, Holij, Batij, Jeli.

There are also, over the four quarters of the globe, four high angels.

Over the morning winds, Michael rules.

Over the evening winds, Raphael rules.

Over the midnight winds, Gabriel rules.

Over the noonday winds, Nariel or Uriel rules.

THE ANGELS OF THE ELEMENTS ARE:

Of the air, Cherub.

Of the water, Tharsh.

Of the earth, Ariel.

Of the fire, Seruph or Nathaniel.

These are all great princes, and each has many legions of angels under him ; they have great power in governing their planets, times, signs of the year, month, day, and hour, and in their part of the world and wind.

In the third heaven, Saaquin, the Angels are :

Sarquiel, Qnadissu, Caraniel, Tariescorat. Amael, Husael.

Turiel, Coniel, Babel, Kadie, Maltiel, Hufaltiel.

Faniel, Peneal, Penac, Raphael, Carniel, Deramiel.

Porna, Saditel, Kyniel, Samuel, Vascoaniel, Famiel.

In the fourth heaven, Machon, the Angel of the Divisions serves :

Carpriel, Beatiel, Raciell, Ragnel, Altel, Fabriell, Vionatraba.

Anahel, Papliell, Usael, Burcat, Suceratos, Cababili.

In the fifth heaven, Machijn, the following Angels serve in four divisions :

Friagne, Cnael, Damoel, Calzas, Arragon.

Lacana, Astrigna, Lobquin, Sonitas, Jael, Jasael, Nael.

Rabumiel, Jabijnuel, Baijel, Seraphiel, Mathiel, Sersael.

Sacriell, Maianiel, Gadiel, Hosael, Vianiel, Erastiel.

In the sixth heaven, Zebul ; and seventh, Arabat, over the fifth heaven.

Should no Spiritus Aeris or divisions be found, then pronounce in the direction of the four quarters of the world, the following words :

Oh, great exalted and adored God, from all eternity.

Oh, wise God, day and night I pray unto Thee, oh, most merciful God, that I may complete my work to-day, and that I may understand it perfectly, through our Lord Jesus Christ, Thou that livest and reignest, true God from eternity to eternity.

Oh, strong God, mighty and without end.

Oh, powerful and merciful God.

On Saturday call upon God in the words which he gave in Paradise in which is the name of God.

Oh, holy and merciful God of Israel, the highest terror and fear of Paradise, the Creator of heaven and earth (as before).

OR,

Use of the Psalms,

FOR THE PHYSICAL WELFARE OF MAN.

A Fragment out of the PRACTICAL KABALA, together with an Extraofrom a few other Kabalistical Writings. With Five Illustrations upon Four Tables.

Translated by GODFREY SELIG, Lect. Publ. Acad. Lips. : 1788.

This eminent publisher and translator insists stringently that only persons of a moral character can expect success in the use of the foregoing method.

FROM THE PREFACE OF THE TRANSLATOR.

It cannot be denied that true, wise and enlightened Kabalists lived at one time, and that some still live. But such do not wander from place to place, offering their art for sale, in order that they may accumulate wealth, but they are satisfied to remain quietly in the pillared palace of Solomon, where they are constantly employed in gathering divine wisdom, so that (as they express it), they may finally become worthy to receive the hidden gifts from above. I myself know such a man, who obtained exalted wisdom from the Kabala, and who, notwithstanding his extreme poverty, never undertakes a kabalistic process for money. When I once asked him why he refused to write a desired amulet for a noble lord, who offered him a large sum for his services, he answered me with an adage from the well-known Pirke Awoth (Extract or Fragment from the Fathers):

"Deitschtammasch Betaggo Chalof," that is to say, "whosoever accepts the crown for his reward, will perish suddenly. Not for all the money in the world would I do such a thing. But if I can assist my needy neighbor therewith, then I will do what I can, trusting in the omnipotence of the Most Holy, without looking for a reward. For my necessary support I do not feel any concern, for the Almighty has methods to support me. if I trust in Him. Why, he even cares for the sparrow.

It is particularly remarkable that the greatest and most genuine Kabalists of the Jewish nation were nearly all followers and disciples of the blessed Saviour of the world, and they are so still, as I can, prove satisfactorily, by numerous passages from their writings and prayers. Let this suffice for this one kind of men. But that Kabbalists live and still live, who engaged in experiments, and who performed wonderful works, and who will yet do wonderful things, is also an undeniable fact, unless we are prepared to condemn all that was ever said upon this subject by renowned men of wisdom.

as,
my has

The celebrated and well-known Prussian Hussar, Lord of Archewood declares, in a description of London, that there lives a man in that city, whose name is Doctor Falcon, who is known to be a great Kabbalist, and who is visited and consulted by the most honorable and intelligent people of London. He states further, that this same Dr. Falcon, lived not very long since in Brussels under the name of Jude Chayim Schmul-Fulk, who according to the evidence of the French Duke of Nancy, in his published memoirs of kabbalistical processes, performed the most astonishing feats:

I confidently hope and trust, and I can assert without hesitation, that my little book cannot have a tendency to foster superstition. Take it for granted that one of my readers should choose to employ one of the methods described in these pages in order to accomplish a desired object, his eagerness to satisfy curiosity will soon disappear when he takes into consideration the hard terms and strict morality which are required to avail himself of them in order to derive any benefit or be successful in their use.

Before concluding my preface, it is necessary to give the reader some instruction concerning the arrangement of this volume. We find in it, for instance, single words, names, sentences, and indeed entire experiments, printed in the Hebrew and Chaldean languages. This fact should not prevent any one from purchasing the book. Because all the words printed in Hebrew and Chaldean, which are intended to be impressed upon the mind, are also printed in English in plain terms, and they have been carefully translated. So far as the Hebrew passages are concerned, the meaning of each passage and experiment follows immediately in English, or it is placed beneath the Hebrew expression. I have made this arrangement in compliance with a request from a number of prominent persons, to make sure that the translation is genuine and correct. The chapter and verse of Holy Scripture, where all passages quoted may be found, are also correctly recorded.

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE OF THE KABBALISTIC PUBLISHER.

It is universally known and acknowledged, that we are named after the most holy name of the Ruler of the World, and that we receive the holy decalogue or the written law from him. It is further well known that in addition to the laws which he gave to Moses engraven upon stone, he also gave to him certain verbal laws, by which, through his protracted stay upon the mountain Sinai, where all doctrines, explanations of mysteries, holy names of God and the angels, and particularly how to apply this knowledge to the best interest of man, were entrusted to him. All these doctrines, which God pronounced good, but which were not generally made known, and which in the course of time were called The Kabbala, or Traditions; Moses communicated, during his life, to Joshua, his successor. Joshua handed them over to the elders, the elders gave them to the judges, and from the judges they descended to the prophets. The prophets entrusted them to the men of the great synagogue, and these gave them unto the wise men, and so the Kabbala was handed down from one to the other—from mouth to mouth—to the present day. Therefore do we know that in the Thora are many names of the Most High and his angels, besides deep mysteries, which may be applied to the welfare of man, but which, on account of the perverseness of humanity and to guard against their abuse, have been hidden from the great mass of human beings.

Everything that I have here stated is as clear as the sun, and needs no further proof, and it is equally clear and incontrovertible that the All-merciful gave the Thora in the beginning to promote the best interests of the soul and the body of man at the same time. Therefore has God endowed her with exalted talents, powers and virtues that, with a rational use of her, man may protect himself from danger when no other help is at hand and save himself simply by uttering the words of the living God. On this account, the expression "For it is thy life," occurs frequently in the Thora. And Solomon says in his Proverbs, vi. 22: "When thou goest it shall lead thee, and when thou sleepest it shall keep thee." That the Psalms and the Thora are equal in holiness and worthiness, will not be called in question. Our wise men declare, "He who will daily live closer to God; who deserves to unite his soul with Him, and who is willing to live in the closest communion with him, should often pray the Psalms with fervor and devotion. Happy the man who does this daily and hourly, for his reward will be great." The Psalms are formed and divided into five books, just like the Thora. We can, therefore, implicitly trust in the doctrines of the enlightened Kabbalists, when they assert that the Almighty accorded equal talents and powers to the Psalms as he did to the Thora, and that in them many names of the Most High Majesty of God and his angels, besides, many mysteries, are hidden.

Yea, dear reader, you must not doubt. Through a pious life and by a rational use of the Psalms you may obtain the grace of God, the favor of princes and magistrates and the love of your fellow-men. You will be enabled to protect yourself from danger, to escape suffering, and to promote your own welfare.

That this is all true, the contents of the prayer, with which we end each Psalm, and which we are in duty bound to pray, will amply demonstrate. But the correctness of it is also established by the teachings of the Talmud and of the old wise men, who assure us, that many of our famous forefathers availed themselves of apparently supernatural means from time to time, to protect their best interests. The truth of this I can establish by the most trustworthy witnesses; yea, I could even mention some great men, who, by a proper use of the Psalms, performed great works. Such examples are rare. Let it suffice I present you with a few passages out of standard books, through which you will become fully convinced that the Almighty has given his revealed word true and unexampled talents and power, and that, in an extreme case of necessity, we are permitted to make use of this gift of God, for our own and our neighbor's welfare. As for example, to cast out evil spirits, to relieve deep melancholy and to cure grievous diseases; to set free prisoners who have been unjustly imprisoned; to arrest and resist enemies, opponents, murderers and highway robbers; to quench the fiercest fires; to resist floods of water, to defend innocence and to reveal it, and to foster good fortune, well-being and peace in a general manner.

Read the treatise on this subject, of the excellent Rabbi Schimechon bar Abraham, in his book entitled "Responsiones Raschaba," Examine the words of the enlightened Rabbi Jochanan ben Safras in his Treatise of the Talmud and Sanhedrin, Chap. 2, where he treats of magical conjurations; and where he asserts and proves, that it is allowed, in dangerous and incurable diseases, to make use of words and passages in the Holy Scripture for their cure. You will find more or less similar references in the treatise of Sabbath in the Talmud, as well as in the Responsionibus, by Zemach, son of Simonis, in which the Ninety-second Psalm, with certain prescriptions added, are highly recommended as a certain means to avoid suffering and danger, even in cases of war, fire and similar instances, enabling us to escape unharmed, free, secure and without hindrance.

Under such happy circumstances, it is surely right and proper, that such wholesome knowledge, which up to this day was known but to a few men, and they only the learned, was yet free to all, but found only in the libraries and cabinets of the great, although not generally known, should at least, in some degree, be brought to light.

Since, however, I cannot gain my object in any other way than by giving these pages to the world in a printed form, and since they will unavoidably fall into unclean hands, I feel myself constrained, in order to prevent an unworthy use of them, to extend this preface, which might otherwise, very properly have ended here, in laying down a few rules and limits. Do not, however, be discouraged for I am really endeavoring to promote your best interests and shield you from harm.

1. If you are willing to avail yourself of the means indicated, I warn you not to attempt it in a case of extreme necessity, and when there is no other help at hand.

2. If this be so, in experimenting, place your trust in the goodness and power of the Most High and ever blessed God, upon whom you may perhaps have hitherto called under an unknown holy name.

3. The ordained Psalm, for this or the other undertaking, besides the appropriate prayer, you must pray with a broken and contrite heart to God, and in addition to this keep in mind the added holy name with its letters, which are given the wise Kabbalists. At the same time you must have your undertaking continually before your eyes.

4. I must say to you, if you wish to console yourself with this help, that you must live in such a manner that no crime or willful sin can trouble your conscience, for it is well known, that the prayer of the ungodly is not acceptable to God. And herewith I commit you to the protection of the Most High.

THE USE AND EFFICACY

OF

The Psalms,

AND

THE MANY PURPOSES TO WHICH THEY MAY BE APPLIED.

Psalm 1.—When a woman is pregnant and fears a premature delivery, or a dangerous confinement, she should write or cause to be written, on a piece of parchment prepared from the pure skin of a deer, the three first verses of the above Psalm, together with the hidden holy name and appropriate prayer contained therein, and place it in a small bag made expressly for that purpose, and suspend it by a string about the neck, so that the bag will rest against her naked body.

The holy name is called Eel Chad, which signifies, great, strong; only God, and is taken from the four following words: Aschre, verse 1; Lo, verse 4; Jatzliach, verse 3; Vederech, verse 6.

The prayer is as follows:

May it please thee, O, Eel Chad, to grant unto this woman, N., daughter of R., that she may not at this time, or at any other time, have a premature confinement; much more grant unto her a truly fortunate delivery, and keep her and the fruit of her body in good health. Amen! Selah!

Admonition of the Translator.

Before I proceed further with the translation of the Psalms, it is necessary to insert in this place an admonition, which the author, who wrote only for his own nation, deemed unnecessary, and which, nevertheless, should be addressed to every one.

"Each human being," says the celebrated Kabbalist, Rabbi Isaac Loriga, "except only the ignorant idolator, can by a pious and virtuous life enter into the consecrated temple of the true Kabbala, and can avail himself of its benefits without being able to speak or understand the Hebrew language. He can pray, read and write everything in his mother tongue; only the holy name of God and the angels that may occur in the experiment, must, under all circumstances, be written and retained in the mind in the Hebrew tongue (for they must in no case be uttered), because, on the contrary, a wrong direction might otherwise easily be given to the experiment, and consequently it would lose all its holiness, worth and efficiency.

With this pronouncement we must all be well satisfied, and, therefore, I must write all similar words and names, from the letters of which the holy names are taken, in Hebrew. In order, however, that the reader may read all similar occurring names and words in his mind and retain them, I have written all the Hebrew words with English letters together with their meaning.

Psalm 2.—Should you be exposed to danger in a storm at sea, and your life threatened, then recite this Psalm without delay and with becoming reverence, and think respectfully of the holiest name contained therein, namely, Schaddei (which means, mighty God), then immediately utter the prayer belonging thereto, after which write everything together on a fragment of a pot, and in full confidence in the Omnipotent, who fixes the boundary of the sea and restrain its power, throw it into the foaming waves, and you will see marvelous wonders, for the waves will instantly cease their roaring and the storm will be lulled.

The words, the letters of which constitute this holy name, are taken from Rageschu, verse 1; Nossedu, verse 2; and Jozes, verse 9.

The prayer is as follows: "Let it be, Oh, Schaddei! (Almighty God!) Thy holy will, that the raging of the storm and the roaring of the waves may cease, and that the proud billows may be stilled. Lead us, oh, all merciful Father, to the place of our destination in safety and in good health, for only with Thee is power and might. Thou alone canst help, and Thou wilt surely help to the honor and glory of Thy name. Amen! Selah!

This Psalm is also an effectual remedy against raging headache. The direction is as follows: Write the first eight verses of this Psalm together with the holy name and appropriate prayer, upon pure parchment, and hang it upon the neck of the patient; then pray over him the Psalm with the prayer arranged for it. Do this in humble devotion, and the sufferer will be relieved.

Psalm 3.—Whoever is subject to severe headache and backache, let him pray this Psalm, with the leading holy names and appropriate prayer contained therein, over a small quantity of olive oil, anoint the head or back while in the act of prayer. This will afford immediate relief. The holy name is, Adon (Lord), and is found in the words, Weatta, verse 3; Baadi, verse 3; Hekisoti, verse 5; and Haschein, verse 7. The prayer is as follows: Adon (Lord) of the world may it please thee to be my physician and helper. Heal me and relieve me from my severe headache and backache, because I can find help only with Thee, and only with Thee is counsel and action to be found. Amen! — Selah — — Selah!

Psalm 4.—If you have been unlucky hitherto, in spite of every effort, then you should pray this Psalm three times before the rising of the sun, with humility and devotion, while at the same time you should impress upon your mind its ruling holy name, and each time the appropriate prayer, trusting in the help of the mighty Lord, without whose will not the least creature can perish. Proceed in peace to execute your contemplated undertaking, and all things will result to your entire satisfaction.

The holy name is called: Jiheje, (He is and will be,) and is composed of the four final letters of the words. Teppillati, verse 2;

Selah, verse 5; Jehovah, verse 6; and Tosehiweni, verse 9. The prayer is as follows: May it please Thee, oh, Jiheje, to prosper my ways, steps and doings. Grant that my desire may be amply fulfilled, and let my wishes be satisfied even this day, for the sake of Thy great, mighty and praiseworthy name. Amen! — — Selah! — —

If you wish to accomplish an undertaking by or through another, proceed in all things as already stated above, with this exception: you must change the prayer as follows: Let me find grace, favor and mercy in the eyes of N., son of R., so that he may grant my petition. etc.

Again, if you have a cause to bring before high magistrates or princes, you must pray this Psalm and the closing prayer arranged for it, seven times in succession before the rising of the sun.

By the Translator.

I must be permitted in this place to insert another caution. When it is said N., son or daughter of N., it must be understood that we must first mention the name of the person by whom we wish to be served, and afterward the name of his mother, as, for example, Isaac, son of Sarah, or Dinah daughter of Leah.

Psalm 5.—If you have business to transact with your magistrates or with your princes, and desire to obtain their special favor, then pray this Psalm early at the rising of the sun and in the evening at sunset. Do this three times ever pure olive oil, while at the same time you think unceasingly, upon the holy name of Chananjah (merciful God), anoint your face, hands and feet with the oil and say: Be merciful unto me, for the sake of thy great, adorable and holy name, Chananjah, turn the heart of my prince to me, and grant that he may regard me with gracious eyes, and let me find favor and courtesy with him. Amen! — — Selah! — —

The holy name is found in the words; Chapez, verse 5; Nechini, verse 9; Nechona, verse 10; Hadichemo, verse 12; and Kazinna, verse 14.

Still another peculiarity of this Psalm is, when you find notwithstanding the utmost industry and care, your business does not prosper, and you have reason to fear that an evil Masal, that is, an evil star, spirit or destiny is opposing you, then pray this Psalm daily, even to the last verse with great devoutness, and you will soon find yourself in more favorable circumstances.

Psalm 6.—With this Psalm all diseases of the eye may be healed. Read the Psalm for three days successively, and pray the prescribed prayer seven times slowly, in a low tone, and with devotion, and with this keep continually in your mind the holy name of Jaschajah (which means help is with the Lord); believe without a doubt that the Lord can and will help you. The prayer is as follows: Jehovah my Father, may it please Thee, for the sake of the great, mighty, holy and adorable name, Jeschajah Baal Hatschna, that is, Help is with the Lord, (for he is the Lord of help, he can help), which name is contained in this Psalm, heal me from my diseases, infirmities, and from the pain of my eyes, for thine is the power and the help, and thou alone art mighty enough to help ; of this I am certain, and therefore I trust in thee. Amen ! — Selah ! —

Further it is said : If a traveler encounters danger by land or sea, he shall, when there is no other help to hope for, pray this Psalm seven times, and each time with full confidence in the mighty and sure help of the Almighty, and add thereto : Jeschajan, Lord of help ! may it be thy holy will and pleasure to assist me in this extremity and to avert this danger from me. Hear me for the sake of thy great and most holy name, for thine is the power and the help. Amen ! — Selah ! —

The five letters of this holy name contain, according to the prayer, the words ; Jehovah al, verse 2 ; Schuba, verse 6 ; Oschescha, verse 8 ; Bewoshn and Vejibbahn, verse 11.

Psalm 7.—When evil persons conspire to render you unfortunate, if your enemies watch for an opportunity to overthrow you, if they pursue you in order to harm you, then take upon the spot where you stand a handful of earth or dust, pray this Psalm and keep in your mind the holy name of Eel Elijon, great, strong, highest God ! then throw the dust in the direction of your enemies, uttering a prayer prescribed for this case, and you will find that your enemies will cease their persecutions and leave you undisturbed. The letters of the holy name are found in the words : Aisher, verse 1, Ode, verse 18, (according to the order of Al, bam, and the letters must be transposed), Hoshenei, verse 2 ; Eli, verse 7 ; Jadin, verse 9 ; Jashuf, verse 13. Elijon, verse 18.

The prayer is as follows : Oh, Eel Elijon ! great, strong and highest God ! may it please thee to change the hearts of my enemies and opposers, that they may do me good instead of evil, as thou didst in the days of Abraham when he called upon Thee by this holy name. (Gen. xiv. 22.) Amen !—Selah !—

If you have incurred the ill-will of an enemy, whose cunning power and vengeance you have reason to fear, you should fill a pot with fresh water from the well, and pronounce over it the twelve last verses of this Psalm, namely, the words : "Arise, Jehovah ! in thy wrath !" Pronounce these four times, and at the same time think of the holy name of Eel Elijon, and of your enemy, and pray each time. "Humble and overthrow, Oh ! Eel Elijon, mine enemy, N., son of R., that he may not have the power to provoke or to injure me." Amen ! After this prayer, pour the water upon a spot at your enemy's residence, or at a place where he must pass over it, and by doing this you will overcome him. :

If you have a case to decide before the court, and you have reasons to fear an unfavorable or partial verdict, then pray this Psalm slowly before you appear in the presence of the judge, thinking at the same time of Eel Elijon and of the righteousness of your cause, and as you approach the judge pray as follows : Oh, Eel Elijon ! turn thou the heart of the judge to favor my best interests, and grant that I may be fully justified when I depart. Give unto my words power and strength and let me find favor, Amen !—Selah !—

Psalm 8.—If you wish to secure the love and good will of all men in your business transactions, you should pray this Psalm three days in succession after sundown, and think continually of the holy name of Reehmial, which signifies great and strong God of love, of grace and mercy. Pronounce at each time the appropriate prayer over a small quantity of olive oil, and anoint the face as well as the hands and feet. The letters composing the holy name are found in the words: Addir, verse 2; Jareach, verse 4; Adam, verse 5; Melohim, verse 6; Tanischilehu, verse 7. The prayer reads as follows: May it please thee, Oh, Reehmial Eel, to grant that I may obtain love, grace and favor in the eyes of men according to thy holy will. Amen!—Selah!—

Psalm 9.—The principal attribute of this Psalm according to the precept is, that it is an unfailing remedy in the restoration of male children, who are feeble in health, when no medicines and help are at hand. This Psalm should also be prayed against the power and malignity of enemies. In the first instance write this Psalm, with its holy name, upon pure parchment, with a new pen, and hang it around the patient's neck. Afterwards repeat the prayer with reverence, and think at the same time of the holy name of Eheje Aischu Eheje, that is, I am he that will be, and utter the following prayer: All-merciful Father! for the sake of thy mighty, adorable and holy name, Eheje Aischer Eheje, may it please thee to take away from N., son of R., the illness [here name the disease] from which he suffers, and relieve him from his pains. Make him whole in soul, body and mind, and release him during his life from all plagues, injury and danger, and by thou his helper. Amen.

In the second case repeat this Psalm and pray devoutly: May it be agreeable to thy will for the sake of thy most holy name Eheje Aisher Eheje, to release me from the power of my enemies and opposers, and to protect me from their persecutions, as thou once didst protect the Psalmist from the enemies who pursued him. Amen.—Selah!

The letters of this holy name are in the words: Ode, 2; Haojeff, verse 7 and verse 16, and in alphabetical order in the At Baach.

Psalm 10.—If any one is plagued with an unclean, restless and evil spirit, let him fill a new earthen pot with water from the spring, and, in the name of the patient, pour into it pure olive oil, and pronounce over it this Psalm nine times, keeping in mind constantly the adorable name of Eel Mez, which means Strong God of the oppressed, and at each ending of the Psalm: May it be thy most holy will, Oh, Eel Mez, to heal the body and soul of N., son of R., and free him from all his plagues and oppressions: wilt thou strengthen him in soul and body and deliver him from evil. Amen!—Selah!

The holy name may be found in the words: Alah, verse 6; Lamma, Anawin, verse 16, and Haasez, verse 17.

Psalm 11.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with feelings of devotion, and with it keeps constantly in mind the holy name of Fela, that is, Wonderful, and who besides utters a suitable prayer to God: he will be safe from all persecution, and will not have any great evil to fear.

The holy name is in the words: Ofel, verse 2; Paal, verse 3, and Adam. The closing prayer may be as follows: Adorable, mighty and holy God Pele! with thee is advice, action and power, and only thou canst work wonders. Turn away from me all that is evil, and protect me from the persecution of evil men, for the sake of the great name Pele. Amen.—Selah.

Psalm 12.—This Psalm possesses similar power, action and worth as the foregoing. The holy name is Aineel, which means Strong God! my Father! and is found in the words of the sixth verse of Ewjonim, Akum Lo. The prayer is as follows: Almighty Father, my God Aineel! grant that all conspiracies against me may be set at naught; turn away from me all danger and injury, and thine is the kingdom and the power. Amen.—Selah!

Psalm 13.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with devotion, together with the proper prayer belonging thereto, and thinks at the same time of the powerful name of Essiel, that is, My help is the mighty God, will be safe for the next twenty-four hours from an unnatural death and from all bodily sufferings and punishments. The prayer is as follows: Protect me according to thy good will and pleasure from violent, sudden and unnatural death, and from all other evil accidents and severe bodily afflictions, for thou art my help and my God, and thine is the power and the glory. Amen.—Selah.

According to tradition this Psalm is also a good cure for dangerous and painful diseases of the eyes. The patient must procure a plant that is good for the eyes, and with this must pray this Psalm with a suitable prayer, trusting firmly in the certain help of the mighty Essiel, and then bind the plant upon his eyes. The letters composing this holy name are contained in the words: Ezoth, verse 3, Mimor, verse 1; Jarum, verse 3; Aeni, verse 4; Qjewi, verse 5; and Jagel, verse 6.

Psalm 14.—Whoso prays this Psalm in childlike faith and trust in the most holy name, Eel ennaet, that is, the true God, or God of Truth, and prays the prayer belonging to it daily, will find favor with all men, and will be free from slander and mistrust. The prayer is as follows: "May it please thee, Oh! Eel summet, to grant me grace, love and favor with all men whose help I need. Grant that all may believe my words, and that no slander may be effective against me to take away the confidence of men. Thou canst do this, for thou turnest the hearts of men according to thy holy will, and liars and slanderers are an abomination to thee. Hear me for the sake of thy name. Amen.—Selah!

The letters composing this holy name are found in the words Elohim, verse 1; Maskiel, verse 2; Echad, verse 3; Ammi, verse 4; and Agat, verse 6.

Psalm 15.—Against the presence of an evil spirit, insanity and melancholy, pray this Psalm with the prayer belonging to it, and the holy name Iah, which means: My Lord! or. The Lord, too, is mine, over a new pot filled with well-water that was drawn for this express purpose, and with this water bathe the body of the patient. The prayer which must be repeated during the process of washing, is as follows: May it be thy will, O God, to restore N., son of R., who has been robbed of his senses, and is grievously plagued by the devil, and enlighten his mind for the sake of thy holy name Iah. Amen.—Selah.

The three letters of this holy name are found in the words: Jagur, verse 1; Bagal, verse 3, and Jimmot, verse 5.

He who otherwise prays this Psalm with reverence will be generally received with great favor.

Psalm 16.—This Psalm is important and can be profitably employed in different undertakings. As for example, 1st, If any one has been robbed, and wishes to know the name of the robber, he must proceed as follows: Take mud or slime and sand out of a stream, mix them together; then write the names of all suspected persons upon small slips of paper and apply the mixture on the reverse side of the slips; afterwards lay them in a large and clean basin, filled for this purpose with fresh water from the stream—lay them in the water one by one, and at the same time pray this Psalm over them ten times with the prayer adapted to it keeping in mind at the same time the name of Caar, that is. Living, which name is found in the words of sixth verse, as follows: Chabalim, and Alei, and if the name of the real thief is written upon the slips, that upon which his name is written will rise to the surface. The prayer is as follows: Let it be thy will, E-l Caar, the Living God to make known the name of the thief, who stole from me (here name that which was stolen). Grant that the name of the thief, if it is among the names, may arise before thy eyes, and thus be made known to mine and all others who are present, that thy name may be glorified: grant it for the sake of thy holy name. Amen.—Selah!

2. Whoever prays this Psalm daily with reverence, and in childlike trust upon the eternal love and goodness of God, directed to circumstances, will have all his sorrows changed into joy.

Finally, it is said, that the daily praying of this Psalm will change enemies into friends, and will disperse all pain and sorrow.

Psalm 17.—A traveler, who prays this Psalm early in the morning, with ardor, together with the proper prayer, in the name of Jah, will be secure from all evil for twenty-four hours. The prayer is as follows: May it be thy holy will, Oh, Jah, Jenora, to make my journey prosperous, to lead me in pleasant paths, to protect me from all evil, and to bring me safely back to my loved ones, for thy mighty and adorable name's sake. Amen.

The two letters of the holy name Jah are taken from the words, Shoddini, verse 9, and Mirmah, verse 1.

Psalm 18.—If robbers are about to attack you, pray this Psalm quickly but fervently, with the prayer belonging to it, with confidence in the holiest name of Eel Jah, that is, mighty, all-merciful and compassionate God, the robbers will leave you suddenly, without inflicting the slightest injury upon you. The letters necessary to make the holy name of God are contained in the words, Aisher, verse 1; Shoal, verse 1; Tamin, verse 33, and Haol, verse 47.

The prayer is the following: "Mighty, all-merciful and compassionate God, Eel Jah! may it be pleasing to thy most holy will, to defend me against approaching robbers, and protect me against all enemies, opposers and evil circumstances, for thine is the power and thou canst help. Hear me for the sake of thy most holy name, Eel Jah. Amen.—Selah!

Is there a sick person with you, with whom the usual bodily remedies have failed, fill a small flask with olive oil and water, pronounce over it, with reverence, the eighteenth Psalm, anoint all the limbs of the patient, and pray a suitable prayer in the name of Eel Jah, and he will soon recover.

Psalm 19.—During a protracted and dangerous confinement take earth from a cross-roads, write upon it the five first verses of this Psalm, and lay it upon the abdomen of the parturient; allow it to remain until the birth is accomplished, but no longer, and in the meantime pray this entire Psalm seven times in succession, with the proper holy name of God and the appropriate prayer. The holy name of this Psalm consists of two letters from the most holy name Jehovah He, which, according to the tradition of the Kabbalists, are of great power, and which embrace the so-called ten Sephiroth or reckonings and other deep mysteries.

The prayer is as follows: Lord of heaven and earth! May it please thee graciously to be with this parturient, N., daughter of R., who is fluctuating between life and death; ameliorate her sufferings, and help her and the fruit of her body that she may soon be delivered. Keep her and her child in perfect health and grant her life, for the sake of the holy name, He. Amen.—Selah!

Do you desire your son to possess an open and broad heart, so that he may become an apt student and understand the lessons placed before him readily, then speak this Psalm over a cup filled with wine and honey, pronounce also the holy name and an appropriate prayer over it, and let the lad drink of it, and your desires will be realized.

Finally, it is claimed that this Psalm is effectual in driving away evil spirits. It is necessary, however, to pray this Psalm, with the holy name and an appropriate prayer, seven times over the person possessed of the evil spirit. The letters of the name He are contained in the words Haahamaijim, verse 2, and Begoaeli, verse 6.

Psalm 20.—Mix in a vessel, rose-oil, water and salt, pray over it seven times in the most holy name Jeho, this Psalm and a suitable prayer, in a low voice and with reverence, then anoint with this oil your face and hands, and sprinkle it on your clothing, and you will remain free from all danger and suffering for that day.

Are you summoned to appear before the judge in person, in a judicial trial, you should avail yourself of the above means shortly beforehand, and by so doing you will surely be justified and depart without restraint. The prayer in the last case is as follows : Lord and judge of all the World ! Thou holdest the hearts of all men in thy power and movest them according to thy holy will ; grant that I may find grace and favor in the sight of my judges and those placed above me in power, and dispose their hearts to my best interests. Grant that I may be favored with a reasonable and favorable verdict, that I may be justified by it, and that I may freely go from hence. Hear me, merciful, beloved Father, and fulfil my desire, for the sake of thy great and adorable name, Jeho. Amen.—Selah.

The letters of the holy name Jeho are contained in the words : Jaanah, verse 2 ; Sela, verse 4, and Korem, verse 10.

Psalm 21.—During an existing storm at sea, when there is danger at hand, mix rose-oil, water, salt and resin, pronounce over it slowly this Psalm, and the holy name Jehaen, and then pour the consecrated salve into the foaming sea while uttering the following prayer : Lord of the world ! Thou rulest the pride of the foaming and roaring sea, and calmest the terrible noise of the waves. May it please thee, for the sake of thy most holy name, Jehach, to calm the storm, and to deliver us mercifully from this danger. Amen. Selah !

The letters of this holy name are contained in the words : Jehovah, verse 2 ; Duma, verse 14, and Ki, verse 13.

If you have a petition to present to the king, or to some other person in high power, pronounce this Psalm over a mixture of olive oil and resin, and at the same time think of the holy name of Jehach, anoint your face, and pray in faith and in confidence a prayer suitable to your circumstances, and then you may comfort yourself with the assurance that you will be favorably received and receive grace.

Psalm 22.—If a traveler prays this Psalm seven times daily, with the appropriate divine name, Aha, and a prayer arranged according to surrounding circumstances, in full trust in the mighty protection of our exalted and most merciful God, no misfortune will happen to him. Should he travel by water neither pirates nor storms can harm him, and if he travels by land he will be safe from harm, by beasts and men.

The letters of this holy name are found in the words : Eli, verse 2 ; Assah, verse 33.

Psalm 23.—Should you desire to receive reliable instructions in regard to something through a vision or in a dream, then purify yourself by fasting and bathing, pronounce the Psalm with the holy name Jah seven times, and pray at the end of each repetition : Lord of the World ! notwithstanding thy unutterable mighty power, exaltation and glory, thou wilt still lend a listening ear to the prayer of thy humblest creature, and wilt fulfil his desires. Hear my prayer also, loving Father, and let it be pleasing to thy most holy will to reveal unto me in a dream, whether (here the affair of which a correct knowledge is deserved must be plainly stated) as thou didst often reveal through dreams the fate of our forefathers. Grant me my petition for the sake of thy adorable name, Jah. Amen. Selah!

The letters of the holy name Jah, contain the words: Jehovah, verse 1; Napschi, verse 3, and according to the alphabetical order Aasch Bechar, according to which the letters He and Nun became transposed.

Psalms 24 and 25.—Although the contents of these two Psalms differ materially, in respect to their mystical uses, they are equal and alike in power and action. Whoever repeats these Psalms daily in the morning with feelings of devotion, will escape from the greatest danger, and the devastating flood will not harm him.

The holy name is called Eli, and is found in the words of the twenty-fifth Psalm; Elecha, verse 1; Lemaan, verse 11, and Mi, verse 12.

Psalm 26.—When imminent dangers threaten, whether by land or by water, or if some one should be called upon to undergo severe imprisonment, he should pray this Psalm with the indicated holy name of Elohe, and with an appropriate prayer, and then he may confidently look forward to an early release from prison.

You will find the letters of this holy name in the words: Atscher, verse 10; Lischmoa, verse 7; Lo, verse 4 (after the order of At Basch), and Chattaim, verse 9.

Psalm 27.—If you wish to be well and kindly received in a strange city, and desire to be hospitably entertained, repeat this Psalm upon your journey again and again, with reverence, and in full confidence that God will dispose the hearts of men to receive and entertain you kindly.

Remark by the Translator.

Since the author has neither a holy name nor prayer for the above Psalm, it may be presumed that the frequent repetition of the Psalm is sufficient for all purposes intended.

Psalm 28.—Do you wish your enemy to become reconciled to you, pronounce this Psalm, with the appropriate holy name He, and a suitable prayer, trusting in the power and readiness of the Great Ruler of hearts, and so your wish will be fully realised.

The two letters of this holy name are contained in the words: Ledavid, verse 1, and Haelam, according to the order of At Basch.

Psalm 29.—This Psalm is highly recommended for casting out an evil spirit. The manner of proceeding is as follows: Take even splinters of the osier and seven leaves of a date palm that never bore fruit, place them in a pot filled with water upon which the sun never shone, and repeat over it in the evening, this Psalm with the most holy name of Aha, ten times with great reverence; and then in full trust in the power of God, set the pot upon the earth in the open air, and let it remain there until the following evening. Afterwards pour the whole of it, at the door of the possessed, and the Basch Roah, that is, the evil spirit, will surely depart.

The two letters of this holy name are contained in the words Jehovah, verse 11, and according to the alphabetical order called Ajack Bochar and Habre, verse 2.

Remarks by the Translator.

With this Psalm also there is no prescribed prayer given.

Psalm 30.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily, shall be safe from all evil occurrences. The holy name is Eel, and may be found in the words: Aromimcha, verse 2, and Lemaan, verse 12.

By the Translator.

This Psalm and the following are also without a prescribed prayer.

Psalm 31.—Would you escape slanders, and are you desirous that evil tongues may do you no harm or cause you vexation, repeat this Psalm in a low voice, with commendable devotion, over a small quantity of pure olive oil, and anoint your face and hands with it in the name of Jah.

The letters constituting this holy name are found in the words: Paltani, verse 2, and Hammesachlim, verse 22.

Remark.

The translator regards it necessary to remark once for all, that prayers especially adapted to these as well as many of the following Psalms are wanting, and that the author undoubtedly thought that the prayers already given would enable each one to extemporize a suitable prayer. This presumption is the more probable, since we find further on in the work, that the author exhorts all to engage in prayer to God, without prescribing any particular form. Another circumstance, however, relates to the holy names, and if these are wanting it was so ordered by the ancient Kabbalists, and on this account it should be particularly noted at all times.

Psalm 32.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily receives grace, Love and mercy. With this Psalm will be found neither holy name nor prayer.

Psalm 33.—Have you been unfortunate in respect to the constant death of your children at birth, pronounce this Psalm with the holiest name Jehovah, over pure olive oil and anoint your wife therewith, and the children born to you thereafter will live.

At the time of a general famine, the inhabitants of the afflicted district should pray this Psalm with united hearts and powers, and they will surely be heard.

The letters of this holy name you will find in Lajehovah, verse 2, Hodu, verse 3, Azath, verse 9, and Hejozer, verse 14.

Psalm 34.—Have you resolved to visit a prince or another person high in authority, pronounce this Psalm and the holy name Pele, that is, Wonderful, briefly before appearing in their presence and you will be received pleasantly and find favor.

The letters of this holy name are found in the words, Paude, verse 23; Lifne, verse 1. and Kara, verse 7.

Even so this Psalm is highly recommended to each traveler, for if he prays it diligently he will surely finish his journey in safety.

Psalm 35.—Have you a lawsuit pending in which you are opposed by unrighteous, revengeful and quarrelsome people, then, pray this Psalm with its holy name Jah, early in the morning for three successive days, and you will surely win your case.

The letters composing this holy name are contained in the words: Lochmi, verse 1; and in Wezinza, verse 2.

Psalm 36.—Against all evil and slanderous libels pray this Psalm, and they will cause you no injury.

The holy name of this Psalm is found in the words: Arven, verse 6; Mischpatecha, verse 7; and Tehom, verse 7.

Psalm 37.—If any one has drunken so much wine as to lose his reason, and in consequence, fears are entertained for his safety, then quickly pour water into a pitcher, pronounce this Psalm over it, and bathe his head and face with the consecrated water, and give him also to drink of it.

Psalms 38 and 39.—If you have been so much slandered that the king and the officers of the law have been turned against you, and are taking measures to punish you, arise early, at the break of day and go out into the fields. Pray these Psalms and their holy name seven times with great devotion, and fast the entire day.

The holy name of the first Psalm is Aha, and of the second He, taken from the words Hascha, verse 14, and Amarti, verse 2.

Psalm 40.—The principal characteristic of this Psalm is, that we can, by its use, free ourselves from evil spirits, if we pray it daily.

The holy name is Jah, and is found in the words: Schauaiti, verse 2, and Chuscha, verse 14.

Psalms 41 to 43.—If your enemies have despoiled you of credit and caused you to be mistrusted, and thereby reduce your earnings, or perhaps, deprive you of your office and installed another in your place, you should pray these three times a day for three successive days, together with a prayer that is appropriate to your circumstances, and by doing this you will perceive incredible things. Your enemies will be put to shame and you will be unscathed.

The 42d Psalm possesses this peculiar characteristic. If you wish to be sure in regard to a certain cause, and desire to obtain information through a dream, you must fast one day, and shortly before retiring to rest you must pray this Psalm and the holy name, Zawa, (which means the Lord of Hosts,) belonging to the Psalm, seven times, making known your desires, each time, in an appropriate prayer, in which your wishes should be plainly named.

Psalm 44.—If you wish to be safe from your enemies the frequent praying of this Psalm will, it is said, answer your expectations.

Psalms 45 and 46.—These two Psalms are said to possess the virtue of making peace between man and wife, and, especially, to tame cross wives. The saying is, namely: Whoever has a scolding wife, let him pronounce the 45th Psalm over pure olive oil, and anoint his body with it, when his wife, in the future, will be more lovable and friendly. But if a man has innocently incurred the enmity of his wife, and desires a proper return of conjugal love and peace, let him pray the 46th Psalm over olive oil, and anoint his wife thoroughly with it, and, it is said, married love will again return.

The holy name is Adojah, (this name is composed of the first syllables of the two most holy names of God, Adonai and Jehovah.)

The letters are in the words: Elohim, verse 2; Meod, verse 2; Jehovah, verse 8, and Sela, verse 12.

Psalm 47.—Do you wish to be beloved, respected and well received by all your fellow-men, pray this Psalm seven times daily.

Psalm 48.—If you have many enemies without cause, who hate you out of pure envy, pray this Psalm often, and with it think of the holy name Sach, which means Pure, Clear and Transparent, and your enemies will be seized with fear, terror and anxiety, and in future they will no more attempt to injure you.

The letters of the holy name are to be found in the words: Achasatan, verse 7, and Ki, verse 14.

Psalms 49 and 50.—Is one of your family burdened with a severe and perhaps incurable fever, then take a new pen and ink prepared for this purpose, and write the 49th Psalm and the first six verses of the 50th Psalm, together with the appropriate holy name Schaddi, which signifies Almighty, and which belongs to these Psalms, upon pure parchment prepared for this particular case, and hang it around the patient's neck with a silken string.

The letters composing the divine name, Schaddei, can be found in the words of the 49th Psalm, Schimma, verse 1; Adaw, verse 3, and Wikas, verse 8.

Remarks by the Translator.

(Should some one choose to write and wear a talisman such as is described above, we would kindly advise him to procure parchment, ink and pen from a Jewish writer of the ten commandments.)

It is asserted that whosoever wears the 50th Psalm, written as above described, upon his person, will be safe from all danger, and escape from all the machinations of robbers.

The holy name is Chai, which signifies, Living, and the letters are taken from the words: Sewach, verse 5; and Anochi, verse 7.

Psalm 51.—Is any one troubled with an anxious and restless conscience on account of the commission of a heavy sin, then let him pronounce this Psalm with the word Dam connected with it in the mind, three times a day, namely, early at noon and in the evening over poppy-oil, and at the same time utter a prayer suitable to the occasion in which the evil deed must be mentioned in deep humility and sorrow, which must be obtained from the just yet merciful Judge of all men through a contrite heart, then let him anoint himself with the consecrated oil over the body, and he will find in a few days that he has found grace and that the heavy burden has been removed.

The letters of the word Dam, through the transposition of the B and M in the words Parim, verse 20, and Bebo, verse 2, are taken according to the order of the alphabet, Al Bam, in which the B is taken for M.

Psalm 52.—He who is so unfortunate as to be disturbed through frequent slanders is advised to utter this Psalm daily in the morning, and no special prayer or holy name is needed to obtain the benefit of the Psalm.

Psalms 53 to 55.—These three Psalms are ordained to be uttered by him who is persecuted without cause by open and secret enemies. If he desires only to quiet his enemies, or fill them with fear, he must daily repeat the prescribed 53d Psalm with the holy name Ai. The letters of this name are the first letters of the two blessed names of God, Adonai, Jehovah, and are found in the words Amar, verse 2, and Jazmach, verse 6.

If, however, he wishes not only to be secure from their malice, but if he also desires to revenge himself upon them, then he must repeat the 54th Psalm with the prescribed holy name, Jah. The letters of this are found in the last words of this Psalm, Eeni, and in the word Immennu, verse 2, and indeed according to the Kabbalistic rule Gematria, inasmuch as the letter He, when it is written out signifies six in number, and in this manner may very easily be taken for the letter Vav, which, in counting, also numbers six.

Should he desire to render his enemies evil for evil, he shall repeat the 55th Psalm with the name Vah, which contains both of the final letters of the name Jehovah. The letters of this name are found in the words: Weattah, verse 12, and Haasinad, verse 2.

Psalm 56.—This Psalm is recommended to him, who is desirous of freeing himself from the bonds of passion and of sense, and who is anxious to be delivered from the so-called Jemer Horra, which means, the evil lusts or the desire to commit sin.

Psalm 57.—Whosoever wishes to be fortunate in all his undertakings should pray this Psalm daily after the morning prayer in the church, and with it the holy name Chai, signifying Living, which name he should keep constantly in his mind.

The two letters of this name are contained in the words: Chonnent, verse 2, and in Elohim, verse 6.

Psalm 58.—If you should be attacked by a vicious dog, pray this Psalm quickly, and the dog will not harm you.

Psalm 59.—Would you be entirely free from the Jemor Horra, that is, from the inclination which all men possess to do evil, and the sinful appetites and passions which often overcome them, then pray this Psalm from the second verse to the end, for three days in succession, at early noon and in the evening, and the holy name belonging thereto, namely, Paltioel, which signifies Strong God, My Rescuer and Saviour; also, pray the prescribed prayer, and you will become aware of the most wonderful changes within yourself.

The prayer is as follows: Lord, my Father and the Father of mine, mighty God! May it please thee for the sake of thy great, holy and adorable name, Paltioel, to release me from the Jezer Harra (from my evil desires and passions and from all evil thoughts and acts), as thou didst the author of this Psalm when he prayed to thee. Amen.—Selah!—

The letters of the holy name of Paltioel may be found in the words, Pischii, verse 3; Elohim, verse 6; Chattati, verse 3; Jehovah, verse 8; Aschir, verse 15, and Maschel, verse 14.

Psalm 60.—If you are a soldier in an army, and are about marching into the field, repeat this Psalm, keeping in mind the holy name of Jah, and at the conclusion of each repetition of the Psalm, utter a suitable prayer in full reliance upon the endless omnipotence of Him, who can give the victory where he will, and you will be enabled to return to your home uninjured.

The two letters of the holy name Jah, are contained in the word Zarenu, verse 14, as the last word of this Psalm, and in Lehanned, verse 1.

Psalm 61.—When you are about taking possession of a new dwelling, repeat this Psalm just before moving in, with a suitable prayer, trusting in the name of Schaddei, and you will experience blessing and good fortune.

The letters composing this name are taken from the words Schimmu, verse 2; Ken, verse 9; and Jom, the last word of this Psalm. It should, however, be remarked that both the last letters are selected according to the alphabetical order of Ajack Bechar.

Psalm 62.—Speak this Psalm with proper reverence on Sunday immediately after the evening prayer, and on Monday after vespers, and at the same time think of the holy name Ittami, which means "concealed, hidden, or invisible" (which most probably refers to the invisible God, who covers the transgressions of penitent sinners), and utter the following prayer: Great, mighty and merciful God! may it be thy holy will to pardon me all my sins, transgressions and offences; wilt thou cover them; and blot them out as thou didst the sins and transgressions of him who uttered this Psalm in thy presence, wilt thou do this for the sake of the adorable name of Ittami. Amen.—Selah!

The letters of this name may be found in the words: Achi, verse 2; Jeschuate, verse 2; Emot, verse 3; Lelohim, verse 6, and Leisch, verse 13.

Psalm 63.—If you have reason to believe that your business-partners are about to take unfair advantage of you, and that you will suffer loss through them; and if you desire, on this account, to withdraw from the firm, repeat this Psalm, and with it think of the holy name Jach, and you will not only be able to withdraw without loss, but you will obtain further good fortune and blessings.

The letters of this holy name are contained in the words Jasjmach, verse 11, and Jechuda, verse 1.

Psalm 64.—In reference to this Psalm it is only necessary to say, that seafarers who daily pray it with devotion will complete their voyage without accident, and reach their place of destination in good health. As for the rest, neither holy name nor especial prayer have been considered necessary.

Psalm 65.—Whosoever utters this Psalm with its appropriate name Jah, persistently, will be fortunate in all his undertakings, and everything he attempts will result to his best advantage. It is particularly recommended to one who has a petition to prefer, for it is asserted that he will certainly obtain his desires.

The two letters of this holy name are taken from the words Joschiru, verse 14, and Dumijah verse 2.

Psalm 66.—If any man is possessed of a Ruack Roah (evil spirit), write this Psalm on parchment and hang it upon him; then stretch your hands over him and say: Save me, O God, for the waters are come into my soul. Psalm lxix. 2.

Psalms 67 and 68.—Both these Psalms contain the divine name of Jah. The letters composing it are found in the first Psalm and are selected from the words: Jechonnenu, verse 2, and from the last word of the fifth verse, Sela. In the second, on the other hand, from Jakum, verse 2, and from Aora, verse 36. The first should be prayed in a protracted case of fever, or in severe imprisonment. The second, on the contrary should be prayed over a vessel filled with water upon which the sun never shone, in a low voice, and in the name of the patient, and then work his body with the water, and the evil spirit will depart from him.

Psalms 69 and 70.—The first of these Psalms should be uttered daily over water, by the libertine and sensualist, who is so confirmed in his evil habits, as to become a slave to them, and who, however much he may desire to escape these habits, is unable to do so. After having prayed this Psalm over the water he should drink of it.

The second should be prayed by him who desires to conquer his enemies.

Neither of these two Psalms have prescribed holy name or prayer.

Psalm 71.—With this Psalm there is likewise neither holy name nor prayer, but it is said to have the power to liberate any one from prison, who will for a time pray it reverentially seven times a day.

Psalm 72.—Write this Psalm with the name Aha, in the usual manner, upon pure parchment, and suspend it around your neck, and you will become a universal favorite, and find favor and grace from all men; you may then live unconcerned, for you can never come to poverty.

The letters of the holy name are taken from the words: Elohim, verse 1, and Jeassruhu, verse 17.

Psalms 78 to 78.—Since these eleven Psalms have neither holy names nor particular closing prayers, I shall, in order to economize space, record the peculiar virtues ascribed to each one for the good of mankind.

The 73d Psalm should be repeated reverently seven times daily by those who are compelled to sojourn in a heathen, idolatrous or infidel country, and by doing so, no one need feel afraid that he will be induced to deny his faith.

The frequent and earnest prayer of the 74th Psalm is said to defeat the persecution embittered by enemies, and will frustrate the oppressions of the self-mighty, wealth-seeking, hard-hearted people, and will at the same time bring them to a terrible end.

The devout prayer of the 74th Psalm will effect the forgiveness of sins.

The 76th Psalm is said to be the quickest and most effective defence against danger from fire and water.

Whoever prays the 77th Psalm daily will not be overtaken by want or danger.

Whoever prays the 78th Psalm earnestly and often, will be beloved and respected by kings and princes and will receive favor from them.

The frequent prayer of the 79th Psalm, it is said, is fatal to enemies and opponents.

The constant and industrious prayer of 80th and 81st Psalms is said to be a happy means of saving men from falling into unbelief and saves them also from other errors.

The prayer of the 82d Psalm will assist an envoy to transact his business to the satisfaction of his employers, and his business affairs will succeed and prosper.

You should write the 83d Psalm properly, upon pure parchment, and suspend it around your neck, and by so doing you will abide safely in war, avoiding defeat and captivity. If you should, however, be overcome, your captors will not harm you, for even in captivity no harm can befall you. ✓

Psalm 84.—When a man, through a severe and protracted illness, has acquired a repulsive, disgusting and bad odor, he should pronounce this Psalm with the prescribed holy name of Af, which means Father, over a pot of water upon which the sun never shone, and then pour the water all over himself, and then the bad smell will leave him. ✓

The letters of the holy name Af, are found in the words : Zebarth, verse 2, and in Bach, verse 6.

Psalm 85.—Do you wish that your former friend, but who now lives at enmity with you, should again be reconciled to you, if you can discover no disposition on his part to make it up with you, then go out into an open field, turn your face toward the South, and pronounce this Psalm, with its prescribed holy name Vah, seven times in succession; and he will approach and receive you in great friendship.

Psalms 86 to 88.—These three Psalms again are left without a holy name, and there is nothing further said about them, than that a person should accustom himself to pray them often, because by so doing much good can be done and much evil avoided. The frequent praying, of the 86th Psalm especially, is said to promote the welfare of the community and the congregation.

Psalm 89.—Should one of your own family or dear friends waste away so rapidly, in consequence of a severe illness, so that they are already nearly helpless and useless, speak this Psalm over olive oil and pour the oil over the wool that has been shorn from a wether or a ram, and with it anoint the body and limbs of the patient, and he will speedily recover.

If your friend is under arrest, and you desire his liberation, go into an open field, raise your eyes toward heaven and repeat this Psalm, with a prayer suited to the circumstances, which should be uttered in full confidence in God.

Psalm 90.—Should you accidentally encounter a lion in the forest, or should you be deceived, cheated or plagued by an evil spirit or ghost, then grasp in your mind the name of God (Schaddei) and repeat this Psalm, and they will withdraw themselves. But you will be still more secure when such a danger should arise, if you pray the following 91st Psalm in connection with the 90th, at one and the same time.

Psalm 91.—The holy name of this Psalm is El, which means Strong God. After speaking this Psalm, and the preceding one, over a person tormented by an evil spirit, or one afflicted by an incurable disease, in the name of Eel Schaddei, then pray humbly: Let it be thy holy pleasure, oh my God! to take from N., son of R., the evil spirit by which he is tormented, for the sake of thy great, mighty and holy name El Schaddei. Wilt thou presently send him health and let him be perfectly restored. Hear his prayer as thou once did that of thy servant Moses when he prayed this Psalm. Let his prayer penetrate to thee as once the holy incense arose to thee on high. Amen. Selah!

The two letters of the name Eel are contained in the words Jeschuti, verse 16, and Orech, verse 16.

Again write this Psalm in connection with the last verse of the previous Psalm upon clean parchment, and conceal it behind the door of your house, and you will be secure from all evil accidents.

Kabbalists ascribe to this Psalm when taken in connection with the above verse, the most wonderful virtue, when it is used in accordance with the nature of existing circumstances, and when it is combined with other scriptural passages, holy names of angels, characters and prayers. it is said, for example:

Prayer through which all distress, danger and suffering may be turned aside. If any one should be in danger of his life, or become distressed, be it what it may, such as being attacked by an incurable disease, pestilence, fire or water, overwhelmed by enemies or murderers, in battles, sieges, robberies, close imprisonment, etc., let him confess his sins first of all, and then speak the Vihi Noamprayer (the name by which the 91st Psalm with the aforesaid verse is usually known), ninety-nine times, according to the number of the two holiest names of God, Jehovah Adonai. Each time when he comes to the fourteenth verse, "Because he hath set his love upon me," etc, he shall keep in mind the holy name, and then pray devoutly each time: "Thou art the most holy, king over all that is revealed and hidden, exalted above all that is high, sanctify and glorify thy adorable name in this thy world, so that all the nations of the earth may know that thine is the glory and the power, and that thou hast secured me from all distress, but especially out of the painful emergency (here the object of the prayer must be distinctly stated), which has overtaken me N., son of R. And I herewith promise and vow that I will now and ever after this, as long as I shall live upon the earth, and until I return to the dust from which I was taken." (Here the vow must be verbally stated,—stating what we will do, perform or give in the service of our Creator. The vow may consist in fasting, giving alms, or in the daily reading of several chapters of the Holy Scriptures, Psalms, of the Sohar or of the Talmud, releasing of captives, nursing the sick and burying the dead.) "Praised be Jehovah, my Rock and my Salvation. Thou wilt be my representative and intercessor, and wilt help me, for thou helpest thy poor, feeble and humble creature, and in time of need releasest from fear and danger, and dealest mercifully with thy people; merciful and forgiving, thou hearest the prayer of every one. Praised art thou, Jehovah, thou who hearest prayer." (The last words should be repeated seven times at each ending of the prayer.)

And now, whoever will punctually observe the foregoing instructions three days in succession, in full trust in the mighty help of God, he may rest assured of the assistance which he desires.

Kabbalists, and especially the celebrated Rabbi Isaac Loria have assured us that in a time of pestilence or general emergency, the Vihi Noamprayer should be prayed seven times daily, connecting with it in the mind the figure of the golden candlestick, when it is composed of the forty-one holy and important words and names of this Psalm, with which we should especially consider the holy names in their order. The following are the names:

Vean,	Alm,	Bich,	Iba,	Wich,	Ika,	Aan,	Beni,
Mii,	Tmol,	Veal,	Ktaz,	Ilu,	Mehoh,	Imi,	Becha,
Im,	Retak,	Betu,	Lir,	Uma,	Ima,	Miz,	Mehi,
Aki,	Lakad,	Milli,	Ibak,	Rul,	Leta,	Afcham,	Pesch,
Aab,	Schin,	Aki,	Acchu,	Kuck,	Vetat,	Raasch,	Jaub,

Ana.

After this should be spoken verses 21-28, chapter xii. of Exodus, and with them keeping in mind the names contained in the 23d and 28th verses, in the following order :

Awal, Jahel, Ito, Huj Husch, Aha, Imo, Vil.

As also Vohu, Uha, Bam, Bili, Zel, Holo, Vesop, and finally the holy name : Nischaszlas.

And now, he who observes all these things to the very letter, and who can keep in his memory all the letters, points or vowels, he shall be safe from all danger, and shall be as strong as steel, so that no firearms can harm him. The certainty of this is shown by the Kabbalists, because the letter Sejjid is not to be found in the entire Psalm, and since the word Sejjin or Kie Sejjin embraces within its meaning all deadly weapons, this conclusion is entirely correct.

Remarks by the Translator.

The extraordinary powers ascribed to the 91st Psalm may all be right and proper enough, but it is to be regretted that the reader cannot avail himself of its benefits, especially in the last experiment, because all the recorded holy names consist of the first letter of all the words of the 91st Psalm, and likewise of the 23d and 28th verses of Exodus, chapter xii., a passage which has already been quoted. It is, therefore, impossible to pronounce this name properly, neither can it be translated into English or into any other language. And how shall we then memorize the first letters of each word of the Psalm together with the points or vowels belonging to them? If any one, notwithstanding the difficulties attending the use of this Psalm, should desire to avail himself of its virtues, then he must undertake the burdensome task of learning the Hebrew language, or he must write it, and wear it upon his heart as an amulet.

Psalm 92.—He who desires to attain to high honors, let him take with this object in view, a new pot filled with water. Place in it myrtle and vine leaves, and pronounce over it, with perfect trust, the following Psalms, namely, the 92, 94, 23, 20, 24, and 100, three times in succession, and at each time let him wash himself out of the pot and afterward anoint his face and whole body with the water; then turn his face toward the north, pray to God for the fulfilment of his desires, and he will see wonderful things. He will be astonished with his ever-increasing good fortune. He will also, in a wonderful manner, advance from one post of honor to another.

Psalm 93.—There is nothing special recorded of this Psalm, other than that it is highly recommended to any one who has a suit with a stern and unjust opponent. The proper use of this Psalm, it is said will surely win him his cause.

Psalm 94.—If you have a hard, unyielding and bitter enemy, who oppresses you sorely and causes you great anxiety, repair to an open field on Monday, take some incense into your mouth, turn with your face toward the East and West, and repeat first the 94th Psalm and then the 92d, seven times, keeping in mind at the same time the holy name Eel Kanno Taf, which signifies great, strong, zealous and good God, and pray each time at the ending of these Psalms: "May it please Thee, O great, strong, zealous and good God, to humble my enemy N., son of R., as thou once did the enemies of our great teacher Moses, who rests in peace, and who completed this Psalm to thy glorification. Let my prayer arise to thee as did the sweet smell of incense from the altar of incense, and let me behold thy wonderful power. Amen!—Selah!—

Psalm 95.—The appropriate holy name of God peculiar to this Psalm is Eel, which is, great, strong God, and the letters are found in the words: Eel, verse 3, and Lezur, verse 1.

The pious believer should pray this Psalm for his erring and unbelieving brethren.

Psalms 96 and 97.—The holy name of these two Psalms is Jah, and the letters of the first are found in the words, Jeschuato, verse 2, and Hawn, verse 7, and those of the other in the words, Jismechu, verse 1, and Atta, verse 9. Whosoever will pray these two Psalms three times daily, will cause his family great joy and contentment.

Psalm 98.—The holy name of this Psalm is also Jah, and should be pronounced in order to establish peace and unity between families. The letters of the holy name are taken out of the words: Israel, verse 3; and Haschiah, verse 1.

Psalm 99.—With this Psalm there is no holy name recorded, and all who wish to become really pious are advised to pray it often with proper devotion.

Psalms 100.—The holy name Jah, so often mentioned already, is also appropriate to this Psalm, and whoever prays it several days successively seven times, will overcome all his enemies. The two letters of this holy name are recorded in verse 3, and in Aetodah, verse 4.

Psalms 101.—Whoever bears this Psalm in addition to the 68th upon his person, written upon parchment, is secure from the persecution of evil spirits and vindictive persons.

Psalms 102 and 103.—Both these Psalms are said to be very good for barren women by the use of which they may receive grace and favor from God. The holy name of the one is called Jah, and is taken from Anneni, verse 3, and the name of the other one is Aha, and is taken from the word Adonai, verse 12, and from Sela, verse 20.

Psalms 104.—The frequent and earnest prayer of this Psalm is said to be attended with such great power, that through it the Masick may be destroyed.

Remarks of the Translator.

The word Masick signifies, according to its root, only something hurtful, something that will cause harm. it may be by spirits, beings or animals. Generally, however, the Jews understood the term to mean the Devil, and with its connections in this place the word must mean original sin and the propensity to commit sin.

Psalms 105 to 107.—To these three Psalms the holy name of Jah is ascribed, and according to the original writing, it is said, that the 105th Psalm will cure three days' fever; the praying of the 106th Psalm will cure the four days' fever, and finally the praying of the 107th will cure the daily fever.

The letters of the holy names are taken from Lejaikof, verse 7, and Hodu, verse 1, and further from Soehrent, verse 4, and from Tehillato, verse 2 of the 106th Psalm, and finally from Jischlach, verse 19, and Verinna, verse 21.

Psalms 108.—Write this Psalm with its proper holy name. Vi, (two letters from the most holy name of Jehovah. in which Kabbalists seek through its many divisions, great secrets), upon clean parchment, and hide it in a secure spot behind the door of your house, and then your going and coming will be blessed, and you will be successful in all your business transactions.

The two letters of the holy name Jehovah, by a transposition of Vav and Jod, are contained in the words : Zarenn, verse 14, and in Nachon, verse 2.

Psalms 109.—Have you a mighty enemy, who plagues and oppresses you, fill a new jug with new, sparkling wine, add some mustard to it, and then repeat this Psalm three days successively, while at the same time you keep in mind the holy name of El (great and strong God), and afterward pour the mixture before the door of your enemy's dwelling. Be careful, however, that you do not sprinkle a single drop upon yourself when in the act of pouring it out.

The letters of the name Eel are found in the words, Elohim, verse 3, and in Ki Jamood, verse 5.

Psalms 110 and 111.—The first of these Psalms is marked with the holy name Jah, and by its frequent use in the form of a prayer, and a man may compel all enemies and opposers to bow to him and beg for quarters and peace.

Through praying the 111th Psalm a man may acquire many friends without the necessity of keeping constantly in mind any special holy name.

Psalms 112 and 113.—By praying the first of these Psalms a man will increase in might and power from time to time, and by praying the second devoutly it is possible to check growing heresy and infidelity. Neither of these Psalms has a peculiar holy name.

Psalm 114.—The holy name of this Psalm consists of two letters, taken together from the names Adonai (Lord), and Jehovah, namely, Aha, which may be found in this Psalm in the words Jiszrael, verse 1, and Jehuda, verse 2. If you desire success in your trade or business, write this Psalm with its appropriate holy name upon clean parchment, and carry it about your person constantly in a small bag prepared especially for this purpose.

Psalm 115.—If you are determined to dispute with infidels, heretics and scoffers at religion, pray this Psalm devoutly beforehand.

Psalm 116.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with devotion, trusting fully in God, will be safe from violent death, neither will he be overtaken by a sudden death.

Psalm 117.—Did you make a vow to obtain a certain commandment or perform a good work, and fail in the performance of them through forgetfulness or carelessness, as soon as you recollect your remissness pray this Psalm with a broken and contrite heart.

Psalm 118.—If you pray this Psalm often and devoutly, you will be able to silence all free-thinkers, scoffers of religion and heretics, who labor to lead you astray.

Psalm 119.—This it is well known is the largest of all the Psalms, and consists in the Hebrew of eight alphabets, but in such a manner, that each letter appears in undisturbed regularity, and through this there arose twenty-two special divisions, which are included in each eight verses, because a particular power is ascribed to each division, which I cannot present to the reader in clearer manner than by placing each letter before him which forms the particular division.

Aleph.—The eight verses of this letter, which all begin with Aleph, should be pronounced over a man whose limbs shake and quiver, and if this be done in a low and even tone of voice, he will be relieved. If any one has made a vow, which has become burdensome to fulfil, it will be easy for him to keep his promise, Beth.—It is said that through the second division from the ninth to the sixteenth verse, a man may obtain a good memory, an open heart, desirous to learn, and an extended intelligence. Whosoever desires to attain this must begin as follows: Remove from a hard-boiled egg the shell deftly and cleanly, so that the inside shall remain uninjured, and write upon it the above eight verses as well as the fourth verse of Deuteronomy, xxxiii., and eight verses of Joshua, i., and also the holy name of the angels Chosniel, Schrewniel and Mupiel. The translation of these three angel-names it is not necessary to know, because they must not be pronounced, but since it will be of interest to the reader to know the meaning of them, it will not be superfluous to give them here. Chosniel, signifies Cover, or overshadow me, mighty God! (namely, with the spirit of wisdom and knowledge.) Schrewniel, turn me, again, mighty God! that is, change me, convert me into a better man or woman, as David once said, "Create in me, oh God," etc. Mupiel means: Out of the mouth of the mighty God (namely, let me attend upon the decrees of thy laws, as if I heard and received them from the mouth of God himself). Finally, the following must also be written upon the egg: Open and enlarge my heart and understanding, that I may hear and comprehend everything that I read, and that I may never forget it. All this must be done on a Thursday evening, after fasting the entire day, and then the egg must be inserted whole into the mouth, and when it is eaten, the four first verses of this division must be repeated three times in succession.

Gimel.—The division of the third letter, verses 17 to 24 should be prayed seven times in succession, in a low, solemn tone and with full confidence in the omnipotence of God, over the seriously injured eye of a friend, so that the pain may cease and the eye restored.

Daleth.—By the earnest praying of this division, verses 25 to 32, a painful injury of the left eye can be cured in the first place, in the same manner as is described above, and in the second place, if a man is engaged in a lawsuit, or is vexed by a change of occupation, or residence, or if he desires to make an advantageous selection, or make a resolution, he should repeat these eight times in succession. On the other hand, however, if a man must avail himself of the advice and assistance of many persons in order to accomplish an undertaking successfully, he should repeat this division ten times.

He.—The division of the letter He, verses 33 to 40, is said to make people refrain from committing sins. A sinful being, who has become so much accustomed to commit sin and vice, that he cannot refrain from them, notwithstanding his best resolutions, should write these eight verses upon parchment prepared from a clean deer skin, (or cause them thus to be written.) place it in a bag prepared for this purpose and hang it around his neck, so that he will carry it continually upon his breast.

Van.—Speak these eight verses, 41 to 48, properly over water, and give it to your servant or dependent to drink, and then your rule and power over him will become easy and agreeable, and he will serve you willingly.

Zain.—To the seventh division, verses 49 to 56, two different effects are ascribed. It is said, for example: If one of your friends or acquaintances is afflicted with melancholy, or becomes splenetic, or has severe stitching in the side, write this division, with the holy name Raphael, which signifies, heal, mighty God, properly upon a small piece of clean parchment, and bind it upon the patient where the spleen is situated.

If you have been led into an undertaking that promises evil results, through the misrepresentations of evil counsellors, repeat this division eighteen times, and you will find means to withdraw from the undertaking without injury to yourself.

Cheth.—Speak the division of this letter, verses 57 to 64, seven times over wine, and give a sick person, who has severe pains in the upper part of the body, to drink of it, and he will soon find relief.

Teth.—The division of the letter Teth, verses 65 to 72, is an easy, quick and tried remedy to cure the severest case of kidney or liver complaints, or to take away pain in the hips. Pronounces these eight verses properly, specially and reverently over the sick person and he will convalesce.

Jed.—Would you find grace and favor with God and man, pray at the close of each morning prayer the division of this letter, verses 70 to 80, trusting fully in the mercy and grace of God, and your prayer will be heard.

Caph.—If one of yours has a dangerous sore, or a burning swelling on the right side of the nose, pray the eight verses of this division verses 81 to 88, ten times, in a low and conjuring voice, over the sore, and you will perceive to your astonishment and joy, that the otherwise incurable sore will be healed.

Lamed.—If you are summoned to appear personally before the Judge in a lawsuit, pray on the preceding day, just after the evening prayer, the division of the letter Lamed, verses 89 to 96, and you will obtain a favorable hearing, and will be permitted to leave the court justified.

Mem.—For pain in the limbs, and especially for paralysis in the right arm or hand, a man should pray this division, verses 97 to 104, seven times for three successive days, in a low conjuring voice, over the affected arm, and the pain will cease and the arm will be healed.

Nun.—Have you a mind to travel, pray this division, verses 105 to 112, which begins with the words: "For thy word is a lamp to my feet," a few days previous to starting upon your journey, each time after the morning and evening prayer, and you will accomplish your journey safely and will prosper in your avocation.

Samech.—If you have a favor to ask of a superior, pray, before presenting your petition, or before you attempt to ask the favor verbally, the eight verses of the letter Samech, verses 113 to 120, and you will not go away unheard.

Ain.—In the same way and manner as the prayer of the division of the letter Mem, heals pain in the right arm, so also the praying of the eight verses of the letter Ain, verses 121 to 128, will cure pain in the left arm and hand.

Pe.—The prayer of this division, verses 129 to 136, will prove of the same effect in the case of a boil or swelling on the left side of the nose, and the proceedings in both cases must be the same to effect a cure.

Tsaddi.—Since it frequently happens that persons in an official station are induced, through misrepresentations and other circumstances, to give a wrong and unjust decision, even against their better knowledge and desire, they are kindly advised to pray the eight verses of this letter, verses 137 to 144, three times devoutly before giving their decision, at the same time asking the help of the Judge of all Judges, to enlighten their minds.

Koph.—The mysterious operation of this division, verses 145-152, relates to the cure of a dangerous and painful injury at the left leg. These eight verses should be pronounced in a low and conjuring voice over a quantity of rose-oil and the injury anointed with the oil.

Resh.—Are you burdened with a painful, constantly running boil in the right ear, pronounce the eight verses of the division of the letter Resh, verses 152-160, in a low and conjuring voice, over onion-water or juice, and let one drop run into the ear, when you will experience immediate relief.

Schin.—Against severe and burning headache speak the division of this letter, verses 161 to 168, in a low conjuring voice, three times over pure olive oil, and anoint the place where the pain is the most severe.

Tau.—The last division of this Psalm, verses 169-176, should be used in the same manner as the division of the letter Riah, that is, it should be spoken over onion-water, and by its use a boil in the left ear may be cured.

Finally, it is stated at the end of this Psalm, that whosoever is afflicted with a tearing pain in both arms, in the sides, and in the legs at one and the same time, should repeat this whole Psalm in the following order: 1. The eight verses of the letter Aleph; of Tau and Beth. 2. Those of the letter Schin. 3. The division of the letter Gimmel. 4. The eight verses of the letter Resh. 5. The division of the letter Daleth. 6. That of the letter Kuf. 7. The eight verses of the letter He. 8. Those of the letter Zain. 9. The division of the letter Vau. 10. The eight verses of the letter Pe. 11. The division of the letter Zain. 12. The division of the letter Ain. 13. The eight verses of the letter Cheth. 14. Those of the letter Tamech. 15. Those of the letter Teth. 16. Of Nun. 17. The eight verses of the letter Jud. and finally, 18, the division of the letters Mem, Caph, and Lamed. This remedy has been tried, and has proved infallible. Should any one become afflicted with tearing pains in the loins, make for him, at the conclusion of this Psalm, knots, combinations, or magical knots in water, with or under the names of: Adam, Seth, Enoch, Canaan, Mahalleel, Jared, Methusaleh, Lamech, Noah, Shem.

[The translator is compelled to admit honestly, that he does not comprehend this latter clause, and much less is he able to give any directions in regard to the method employed in making magical-knots, he does not presume that any one will be interested in this matter.]

Psalm 120.—If you must appear before the judge, repeat the Psalm beforehand, and you will receive grace and favor.

If a traveler should find himself in a forest infested with many poisonous snakes, scorpions and other poisonous reptiles as may easily happen, and thus be exposed to danger, let him pray this Psalm as soon as he comes in sight of the forest seven times, and he will be able to proceed on his journey without any harm.

Psalm 121.—Are you compelled to travel alone by night, pray this Psalm reverently seven times, and you will be safe from all accidents and evil occurrences.

Psalm 122.—If you are about to address a man high in station, repeat this Psalm thirteen times beforehand, and you will be received graciously and find favor. Also, pray this Psalm each time that you are present in church, and you will obtain a blessing.

Psalm 123.—If your servant or journeyman has run away from you, write this Psalm, together with his name, on a leaden or tin plate, when he will return to you.

Psalm 124.—If you are about to cross a swollen stream, or undertake a journey by water, pray this Psalm before entering the ship, and then you may commence your journey without fear.

Psalm 125.—If you are compelled to travel in a country, where you have avowed enemies whom you have reason to fear on account of threatened injury to yourself, then take, before entering the country, both your hands full of salt, pronounce this Psalm seven times over it, and then scatter it into the air toward the four quarters of the globe, and by so doing, not one of your enemies will be able to bring any harm against you.

Psalm 126.—Are you so unfortunate, that your children are taken away from you in their infancy, and that you are not able to raise any of them, then, when your wife again becomes pregnant, write this Psalm upon four amulets made out of clean parchment, and add to the last line of each amulet the names of the following angels: Sinui, Sinsuni, and Semanglaf, and afterward hide the amulets in the four walls of your house, when your child will live.

Psalm 127.—Write this Psalm upon pure parchment, place this amulet in a clean bag, and hang it about the neck of a new-born son immediately after birth, and no evil will ever befall him afterward.

Psalm 128.—Write this Psalm upon clean parchment, and hang it upon a pregnant woman, when she and the fruit of her body will always be secure from unlucky accidents, and she will have a fortunate confinement.

Psalm 129.—Whoever accustoms himself to repeat the Psalm daily after the morning prayer, will finally prepare himself to live piously and virtuously, and will be able to carry out many remunerative and good works.

Psalm 130.—If you are living in a besieged city, to and from which no one can go without danger, and if you have urgent business, so that you feel constrained to venture on a journey, then, just as you are about to leave the city, pray this Psalm in a low and abjuring voice, toward the four quarters of the earth, and then you will be able to pass all the sentries without being seen or harmed. A heavy sleep will overcome them, so that they will not be conscious of your presence.

Psalm 131.—He who is so strongly possessed of the evil spirit of pride that he regards all other people with scorn, but who, upon sober reflection, desires to occupy a middle path, if his intolerable pride would only permit him, is advised to pray this Psalm reverently three times daily, after the morning and evening prayer. His pride will receive a certain check.

Psalm 132.—If you have sworn to perform anything punctually, and notwithstanding your oath you neglect to perform your obligation, and in this manner have perjured yourself, you should, in order to avoid a future crime of a similar kind, pray this Psalm daily with profound reverence.

Psalm 133.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily, will not only retain the love and friendship of his friends, but he will also gain many more friends.

Psalm 134.—This very short Psalm, consisting of only three verses, should be repeated by every learned man, and especially by every student before entering college.

Psalm 135.—Whoever is desirous of repenting sincerely from sin, and of consecrating his life to the service of God, should pray this Psalm daily after the morning and evening prayers, and then his heart and spirit will be daily renewed, and he will become more closely united with God from day to day.

Psalm 136.—Whosoever desires, on account of wilful sins and transgressions, to make a penitent confession of his misdeeds, should pray this Psalm beforehand, and then make his confession with an humble and broken heart and with great reverence.

Psalm 137.—The praying of this Psalm, it is said, will root out of the heart the most inveterate hate, envy and malice.

Psalm 138.—Praying this Psalm, it is stated, will produce love and friendship.

Psalm 139.—This Psalm should be prayed to increase and preserve love among married people.

Psalm 140.—Praying this Psalm, is said to be a powerful means to remove growing hatred between man and wife.

Psalm 141.—Whoever is often oppressed with heartfelt fears should pray this Psalm frequently.

Psalms 142 and 143.—Praying of the first of these two Psalms will cure pain in the thighs, and praying the other will remove tearing pains in the arms.

Psalm 144.—When any one breaks an arm this Psalm should be prayed, and the perfect cure of the arm cannot be delayed or interrupted by untoward circumstances.

Psalm 145.—He who fears ghosts and evil spirits, should pray this Psalm in connection with the 144th, with reverence, for the praying of these Psalms will drive away all ghosts and apparitions instantly.

Psalm 146.—Whoever has been dangerously wounded by a sword or other deadly weapon, he shall, during the time he is receiving surgical assistance, pray this Psalm reverently daily, and especially when the wound is being dressed and the bandages renewed, and he will shortly find reason to rejoice in a perfect restoration from his injuries.

Psalm 147.—For the cure of dangerous and deadly wounds, bites, stings of a salamander, lizard, snake, scorpion or other poisonous reptile, the earnest prayer of this Psalm is said to possess the same power of healing as the former Psalm, already described.

Psalms 148 and 149.—These two Psalms are said to possess the desirable virtue of checking fire, when they are prayed in childlike trust on the unfailing help of the Almighty.

Psalm 150.—This happy Psalm of Praise should be uttered by every God-fearing, thankful being, after having escaped a great danger, or received a peculiar grace in answer to a prayer to the Lord of Hosts, and it should be repeated with a thankful heart to His praise and glory.

END OF THE PSALMS.

SUPPLEMENT.

Finally, the author adds the following as a supplement :

I.

Whoever prays the five appended verses daily and hourly to God, will receive grace from God and man, and will obtain prosperity and blessing in all his undertakings.

The verses must be spoken in the following order :

Psalm 121, verse 2 ; Psalm 55, verse 23 ; Psalm 37, verse 37 ; Psalm 37, verse 3 ; Psalm 118, verse 13.

II.

A truly mysterious wonder-working formula is contributed by the celebrated Kabbalist Raf Amram, which is said to possess the especial virtue to protect and defend him, who, after the morning prayer, prays it with proper reverence during a whole day of twenty-four hours, whether at home or on a journey, from all evil power or accident, from robbery, murder, and injury by guns, or other weapons. No man will be able to attack him or to injure him, and no gun can harm him. This wonderful saying is as follows :

See and know, that I am He ! I am He, and besides me there is no other God. I am He, who can kill and make alive ; I wound, and I am he that can heal, and no one can escape my hand or my power. For I stretch out my hand toward heaven (that is, I swear by heaven), and say : I am He that liveth forever.

Animon, Animon, Alimon, Rirvtip, Taftian ! The Lord can and will watch and keep. Amen After a man has uttered this three times in succession, and with it has kept in mind the three names of angels added thereto, he should say the following : Happy art thou people of God ! Who is like unto thee ; a people whose help is Jehovah. He is the breastplate of thy help, and the strong sword of thy pride. Thy enemies will deny themselves before thee (that is, will hide themselves or retreat from thee), but thou wilt stand in their high places. Lord of the earth let it be agreeable to thy holy will to command thy angels to protect me and defend me in all my ways. Amen !

Remarks by the Translator.

The above Hebrew words are Kabbalistic names of angels, and are very hard to understand, and yet harder to translate. Thus for example, the letters of the word Alimon, mean Eel Leolam. Jehovah, Melech Waed, Netzach, that is, Jehovah is an eternal God ! he is a victorious king to all eternity. This prince or king according to the belief of Kabbalists, is entrusted with the superintendency of all weapons and guns in the whole world, for the letters of the word Alimon, according to the signification of numbers aggregate 137, and the two small words Klo Sajin, under which all kinds of guns and weapons are understood, likewise contained, according to the signification of number, 137 letters, viz. :

Aleph.....	1	Beth.....	20
Lamed.....	30	Lamed.....	30
Jod.....	10	Jod.....	10
Mim.....	40	Zani.....	7
Vav.....	6	Jod.....	10
Nun.....	50	Jod.....	10
		Nun.....	50
	137		137

According to this, there are under the power of this field-general all cannons, howitzers, mortars, guns, rifles, pistols, all lances, spears, sabres, swords, and dirks in the whold world, and whenever he thinks proper, none of these will be able to do the least harm. Whoever, therefore, knows how to obtain the favor of the mighty Alemon, it will be very easy for him to make himself invulnerable against gunshot wounds and against sharp instruments of all kinds. The words Reivtip and Tafthi are also full of mysterious meaning and are the names of two angels who are servants of Alimon.

The letters of the holy name Animon, are contained in the words Ani, Nelech, Rased, Ne-Zachim, that is, I am King from Eternity to Eternity! Generally this angel claims a much higher rank than the angel Alimon, for he is first named, and is called upon twice in succession, through which he takes, according to the signification of numbers 314, letters, or as many as the holy name of the Schadai, the name of the Almighty

III.

I here present you (writes the celebrated Rabbi and great Kabbalist Moses, son of Nochman, who is also known as Ramban), a great and useful remedy, Leraue, Weacuo, Nirch, which means, that a man, (especially upon a journey) may see everything and yet remain invisible himself. It is said, that through this mysterious means a man may be able to see and know all watching or hidden enemies, persecutors, thieves, robbers and murderers, without being seen by them, and he may remain invisible to them. This means has been tried and tested, says the author, "and I have tried it myself on occasions and at places where my life and limbs were in danger, and at each trial, with the help of God, I escaped without injury. It is truly a blessed remedy! you must know, however, that the power of this means will last only from the morning until after vespers. (evening prayer.)

THE REMEDY IS :

After you have offered your devoted traveling prayer to God, early before commencing your journey, leave your lodging or dwelling, and when you arrive on the highway upon which you intend to travel, stand still and cover your eyes with the fingers of your right hand in the following manner: Lay the index finger on the right eye, the middle finger on the nose, and the third finger on the left eye, and then say three times: Through the word of Almighty God. But then also the following passages from the holy scriptures, Genesis, chap. i. verse 1: "In the beginning God created heaven and earth." Deuteronomy chap. xxxiv. and last verse: "And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses showed in the sight of all Israel." Genesis, chap. xxxii. 1, 2: "And Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him. And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's host; and he called the name of that place Mahanaim," that is, two hosts or camps, namely, God's and his own. Deuteronomy, chap. xxxii. 1, 2: "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." Numbers, chap. x. verse 35. And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, Rise up, Lord, and let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate thee flee before thee. And when it rested, he said, Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel." Numbers, chap. ii. verse 6. "And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred. All that were mustered of the camp of Ephraim were a hundred thousand, and eight thousand and a hundred throughout their armies, and they shall go forward in the third rank." Here follow several single verses from the Psalms, namely: Psalm 46, 46: "The God of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." "Lord of hosts! blessed is the man whose dependence is upon thee." "Help Lord! the King will hear us, when we call upon him" "Jehovah will give might unto his people, the Lord will bless his people in peace." Psalm 19. 14: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer." And now take your fingers from your eyes, and repeat the following Psalms with devotion—Psalm 121; Psalm 67 and Psalm 91—combined with the last verse of the 90th Psalm. and repeat the last verse of the 91st Psalm twice. Have you strictly complied with all the instructions in the mighty protection of God, and you may proceed securely and without fear, for no evil will befall you, and neither robbers nor murderers will attack you.

IV.

Here is another mysterious means of protection for travelers furnished by this author, but in a different manner. If you should see, says Ramban, in a dangerous locality, (for example, in forest, or wilderness.) heathens, robbers, or hostile troops approaching you, stand suddenly still, make a circle around you, and repeat from Exodus, chap. xi. verse 8: "And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee, and after that I will go out."

ASTROLOGICAL INFLUENCE UPON MAN

—AND—MAGICAL CURES

OF THE

From Dr. Gideon Brechee's work: "The Transcendental, Magic and Magical Healing Art in the Talmud." Vienna: 1850.]

ASTROLOGICAL INFLUENCES.

That the Cosmos constitutes an organic whole, whose separate parts operate upon and in opposition to each other, was well known to the ancients. Man, as the highest individuality on the earth, which served the ancients as the centre of the universe, reflects in his being as a microcosm, the macrocosm. The book of Jeziro (a division of the Talmud), accordingly parallelizes three factors of the Cosmos, namely, the earth, time and man, corresponding with the cardinal numbers and the elements of words (letters). In that place it is said: Three principal letters, Aleph, Mem, Schin, correspond in the earth with air, water and fire; in man with the breast, belly and head; in the year with mild temperature, cold and heat. The seven compound letters, Beth, Gimmel, Daleth, Khaf, Pe, Resch and Tau correspond in the earth with Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury and Moon; in man with wisdom, riches, dominion, life, amateness, blessing of children and peace; in the year to Saturday, Thursday, Tuesday, Sunday, Friday, Wednesday and Monday. The remaining twelve simple letters correspond in the world with Aries, the Bull, the Twins, the Crab, the Lion, the Virgin, the Balance, the Scorpion, the Bowman, the Goat, the Waterman, the Fishes; in man, the organs of sight, hearing, smelling, speaking, tasting, copulating, to put things in motion (the hands), to feel anger, to laugh, and to sleep; and in the year to the twelve months. The Tali with the boundary of the earth, the book of Jeziro states further, is like unto a king upon his throne. The spheres of the years is like a king in the country; the heart of man is like unto a king in battle.

The Tail, the ecliptic, and the heart, are the points of concentration and digression of the primum mevens of the Makro and Microcosm. The Tail, already mentioned, is declared by all the ancients, and among others by Rabbi Jehuda Hallawi, to be the Dragon known in astronomy which the Arabs call Bashar. (The supposition is that it is the eccentric orbit of the moon against the orbit of the sun.) The Gymnosophists termed the distance of the moon at the point of her intersection in the ecliptic, Patona Chandra: "The offended dragon" which, however, seems impossible, for the book of Jeziro gives the Tail as the primum mevens of the whole universe. It would be more reasonable to understand by it an assumed zone outside of the zodiac, on which account it appears like a king upon a throne who holds all the threads of the combined kingdom in his hands. Accordingly the Tail can be nothing else than the world serpent Seschat (Adischen Wasughl) of the ancient Hindoos, which served them as a symbol of the Divine protection and of eternity.

We have much less to do with the question how man as the Microcosm, through his spiritual powers, which he can bring into action through his will and through the mighty word operates on the whole universe, than with the physical and especially with the magical influence of the whole universe upon man as the part of nature.

Even Rabbi Jehuda Haleni calls attention to the wonderful phenomenon that even the elements and powers of nature which contribute to the maintenance of the human organism which man receives within himself, transforms and assimilates to reproduce the wasted particles of his body, and by which he preserves his corporeal integrity, that even these elements after a certain cycle of years, will exercise on their part an inimical and destructive influence upon the human organization, until man dissolves through an individual death, and he returns again unto the elements and chemistry of the general matter of nature. Admitting this constant struggle of man with surrounding nature, the book of Jeziro compares as already stated, the heart, as the fountain of life, to a king in battle, who in the beginning overpowers and subdues his enemies, but who notwithstanding, succumbs to the strife in the end.

That the whole universe, the sun, the moon, and the rest of the planets and heavenly bodies exercise a certain influence upon the earth, and consequently upon man as a part of it, and thus produce many and diversified effects, was no uncommon conclusion on the part of the ancients, for they were led to these conclusions by obvious visions and appearances, and they were compelled to discover the sidereal influences by close observation. The moon, especially, with her periods of twenty-seven and twenty-eight days, made her influence upon man and his condition felt in an unmistakable manner. Among these may be classed, menstruation in women, the different phases of worm diseases according to the different phases of the moon, the increase and decrease of certain cutaneous diseases, etc., after these phases; the influence of the moon upon certain bodily diseases. Reil mentions, that the influence of the moon in causing dysentery has been recognized by many eminent physicians, who, it is said, have observed that the attacks of dysentery are more frequent in new moon and full moon than at any other periods. Others declare that pestilence is much more severe at the time of new moon. The Brahmins also give warning against the new moon. Kant says: "It is a strong argument in favor of the hypothesis, that the moon influences diseases, from the fact that the deaths from fever in Bengal were greatly multiplied during an eclipse of the sun, etc., because the attraction of the moon at this time unites with that of the sun, whose power to operate upon bodies on the earth has been established beyond a cavil." Finally, belong in this place the critical days, and the moon's power of attraction upon travelers by night.

The influence of the light of the sun and the moon upon humanity must have been evident in the earliest period, and it was soon admitted that it affected mightily both the well-being of man, and his frame of mind, as well as the exhibitions of the various temperaments. This knowledge was extended by observation of local diseases during the different seasons of the year and the changes in the weather, the beneficial effect of the rays of the sun in painful and diseased parts of the body, and the influence of daytime upon births and deaths. Acknowledging the injurious effects of the sun and moon, the Psalmist says: "The sun will not harm by day, neither the moon by night." The Talmud ascribes healing powers to the sun. Abail says: The prophet speaks of the healing sun, for the rays of the sun possess healing powers. The Talmud says: "God hung a precious stone around the neck of Abraham; all they that were sick and gazed thereon became well." But after Abraham died, God took the precious stone and hung it up in the sphere of the sun.

But the Ancients also recognized a physical influence of the rest of the planets and the whole host of stars upon man. The belief that the heavenly bodies were gifted with life, and that they with being endowed with higher powers, could exercise an influence upon man by means of mysterious magical influences could regulate his temperament, his disposition and his term of life, was spread from the Ganges to the Tiber and to the pillars of Hercules. The Talmud likewise teaches this astrological faith, with this difference, that the Israelite is placed under the immediate guidance of God, and notwithstanding the iron astrological necessity and predestination, concedes the possibility, that through the omnipotence of God good may be brought about in spite of the constellations. This is expressed in the Talmud by the words; "The Israelite has no constellation." Rabbi Joham successfully establishes this fact against Rabbi Chanina, who asserts that, "Wisdom and riches are the gifts of the constellations;" for says Rabbi Joham, it is recorded in Jeremiah 10, 2;

"Be not afraid of the heavenly signs as the Heathens who fear them." Rab says: Abraham spake before God: Lord of the earth! shall my servant be my heir? God said: No, thy son shall be thy heir. Abraham answered: My horoscope has shown me that I shall be childless. Then spake God and said: Get thee away from thy astrology, the Israelite is not subjected to the constellations.

On the writing table of Rabbi Jeheschna was found written, says the Talmud; "Whoever is born on Sunday will be distinguished above others." Upon this Rabbi Asche says: Both Dime bar Kakustha and I were born on a Sunday; I became the principal of a school, and he became a captain of robbers. Light and darkness were created on the Sabbath. He who is born on Monday will always be a passionate man, for on this day the waters were divided. Whoever is born on Tuesday will become rich and given to pleasure; on this day all herbs were created. Whoever is born on Wednesday will be wise and happy: on this day the stars of the firmament were created. He who is born on Thursday will be constantly employed in works of love. Whoever is born on Friday will become active in good works. Whoever is born on the Sabbath will also die on the Sabbath, because the Sabbath was desecrated on his account. Raba, the Rabbi Schila adds: He will be called holy. Chanena said to his pupils: Go to the son of Levi, and say: Not the constellation of the day has an influence but the stars of the hour of birth. He that is born under the influence of the sun is gifted with beauty, eats and drinks of his own possessions, but his secrets will become known; should he become a thief, he will be unlucky. If any one is born under the influence of Venus, he will become rich and voluptuous, because the (fire) of love is born in him. He who is born under the influence of Mercury will become enlightened and prudent, because Mercury is the secretary of the sun. He who is born under the influence of the moon will learn to bear hardships. He builds and moves in, moves in and builds, eats and drinks of the possessions of the stranger; his secrets remain hidden, and as a thief he will be fortunate: he who is born under Mercury will find all his plans perverted and defeated. The plans of others against him, however, will also be defeated: Whoever is born under the influence of Jupiter will become a just man. He who is born under the influence of Mars will become a shedder of blood. Rabbi Asche asserts this. He will either become a robber or a butcher. Abam adds, or a judge.

We observe that the Talmud regards the sidereal nature of man as a hypo-tactical being of itself. This siderealism, pre-existing in the constellation of man, he denominates Masol. The most distinguished persons were their own star, and thus, according to the Talmud, the star of the field-general Sisra was called Meroz. Judges 5, 23. The siderealism of the proselytes was present at Sinai.

Upon the constellation, says Raba, depend—the blessing of children, longevity, success in life. Job cursed his constellations.. Since the fate of man is fixed beforehand by the constellation, no injury can take effect upon him, neither can an accidental death come upon him. If, therefore, a man meet serpents or scorpions by which he is attacked, if he destroys them, then let him be assured that they were predestined to be destroyed by him, although he may regard the act as a miracle.

Beings who are born under the same constellation stand in close relation and magical sympathy with each other. The Talmud even sets up a problem from these premises as to whether such persons have the same marks, as moles, for instance.

The conjunction of the planets, eclipse of the sun and moon, exercise a great influence upon vegetables and upon man. Samuel teaches when the spring equinox happens upon the hour of Jupiter, the strength of the fruit tree will be broken. Should the winter solstice fall upon the hour of Jupiter, then the grain will wither; but with this the new moon must also fall upon the hour of Jupiter or the moon. The first hour of Saturday evening (between six and seven o'clock) is that of Mercury. The second is that of the Moon. The third that of Saturn. The fourth that of Jupiter. The fifth that of Mars. The sixth that of the Sun. The seventh that of Venus. The eighth hour, again, is that of Mercury, etc.

The Rabbis teach: That an eclipse of the sun is an evil sign for all people. It is as if a king prepared a feast for his subjects, and placed before them a brilliant light; should he be angry with his subjects, however, he commands his servants to remove the light; in order that they might be in darkness. Rabbi Meir taught, that eclipses of the heavenly bodies were an evil sign, for the Israelites especially, because they were accustomed to misfortune. If the master enters the school with a rod in his hand, who is afraid? only he who receives daily punishment. The Rabbis teach, that an eclipse of the sun is an evil sign also for the rest of the nations; an eclipse of moon for the Israelites, for they reckon their time from the moon and other nations from the sun. If the eclipse is in the East, it is an evil omen for the inhabitants of the East; if in the western heavens, then it is an evil omen for the inhabitants of the West; if in the middle of the firmament, it is a bad sign for all the inhabitants of the earth. When the sun appears blood red it pretends war. If the sun has a grayish appearance it is a sign of famine. When an eclipse occurs at sundown it is a sign that the Judgment is yet far off; if at sunrise, it is an omen of the near approach of the Judgment. According to others, these omens signify the reverse of what is stated above. A general calamity never overtakes a people in which their heavenly prince (protecting spirit) does not suffer defeat with them. If, however, Israel walks according to the will of God, it will have nothing to fear of this kind.

The Rabbis teach further: On account of sin the sun will be darkened when the presiding judge dies, and is not properly mourned; when a young woman in a city, who is engaged, cries in vain for help when violence is offered to her; and on account of the simultaneous murder of two brothers. The other heavenly lights will be darkened on account of the making of counterfeit money; on account of false witness; when forcible possession is taken of a stranger's property, or when fruit trees are unnecessarily cut down.

To this belongs the dies nefasti, in regard to which we give the following passages from the Talmud:

Samuel teaches, that the time for blessing is Sunday, Wednesday and Friday. No man should allow himself to be bled on Monday or Thursday, for Mars says: Only he who can enjoy the savings of his parents should be bled on Monday and on Thursday, because on both these days the earthly and the heavenly courts are in session. On Tuesday a man should not be bled, because on this day Mars rules the hour. Racht explains this in the following manner: Mars has the supervision over wars, pestilence and all kinds of accidents. The paired (exact) number is likewise an ominous omen, since with it the demons have power (Pessach 110), and accidents are imminent. The order of the planets is: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon. The order of hours in which they rule, begins with the creation of the heavenly lights, namely, in the first hour Wednesday (with us between six and seven o'clock). In this hour Saturn rules, in the second Jupiter; in the third, Mars, etc., thus seven planets in seven hours. This cycle continues forever. According to this order we find that the planets rule in the first hour of each night in the following order: Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Sun, Moon, Mars, namely, in the first hour at the close of Sunday. Mercury, the first hour of the night on Monday; Jupiter, etc. According to this order, in the first hours of the week days are ruled further by the Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn. The first hour, on Sunday morning is ruled by the sun; the first hour on Monday by the moon, and Tuesday morning by Mars. Mars will rule again on the same day in the eighth hour, a direct hour. On other days his rule will not occur on a direct hour, but only during the night when it is not customary to be bled. Upon the remark of the Talmud that Mars rules in a direct hour on Friday, Baschi says: In the first hour on Friday Venus rules. This planet is followed in regular order by Mercury, Moon, Saturn, Jupiter and Mars. The last rules also in the sixth hour, upon follows the answer, that on Saturday many people are in the habit of being bled, and "God protects the simple."

Samuel teaches further, that he who is the fourth, fourteenth, or twenty-fourth, cannot be bled with safety, that is, on a Wednesday fourth, fourteenth and twenty-fourth of the month. So likewise on a fourth, which has no four after it, that is, on a Wednesday after which no four days will intervene until new moon. At new moon, and three days thereafter, bleeding is enervating; on the third day after new moon it is known to be dangerous.

OF MAGICAL REMEDIES IN GENERAL.

As in the ancient world diseases were regarded as the work of the angry gods and malicious demons, so there were, as in the present day by nations in a state of nature, but few magical remedies employed to secure the assistance of demons or to render them harmless.

Sanchuniaton declares that the children of the Kabirists could heal the venomous bite by their songs. The Brahmins regarded diseases as a punishment for sins committed in the present life or in earlier life. The cures consisted of expiation through prayer, alms, exorcisms, but also rational means. The Vedas contain hymns and prayers, to which magical powers are ascribed, and on this account they are used, without understanding them, as forms of exorcism. All diseases, says the Brahmin, are the result of evil demons, and can only be healed by purification, through sorcery. Ormuzd awakened the great prophet Hom, from whom all the magicians originated. He healed all diseases through the word of Ormuzd and by a plant that bears his name. Many cures, it is said in the ten books, are brought about by means of trees and herbs, others through the agency of the knife, others through the world, but perfect cures result only through the Divine Word. Even if the old Greeks cured with natural means, the common people still believed that a rapid convalescence was obtained through magical formulas, songs and incantations. The medical heroes of the Grecian primitive world were at the same time poets, lawgivers, generals and astronomers.

Of the cures of spiritual men and prophets we have already spoken. The prophets were unanimous in applying natural means prayer and blessing. Rabbi Jitzchak said: Four things destroy the evil passions of man, namely, alms, prayer, change of name, and repentance. According to other authors, also, change of place. Josephus writes in reference to king Chiskia, God gave him the power, through fervent adjurations, to reconcile the Deity, and to cast out the evil spirits which are the cause of evil diseases; and this method of healing, continues Josephus, is the prevailing one among us at the present day. Josephus adds: I was an eye witness to a cure which the prophet Eleazar, in the presence of the Emperor Vespasian, performed upon a man possessed of demons. He made use of a root that was recommended by King Solomon as being effectual against demoniacal disease, when the root was inserted into the nose of the patient, at the same time pronouncing the name of Solomon and the magical formula which this king taught. The Gnostics herein followed the example of the prophets. The theosophical-medical sect of the Escucans sought out the power of roots, herbs and stones for healing purposes, and at the same time attempted to heal diseases by living a devout life and by a total surrender of themselves into the idea of God, and by this means they also sought to perform wonders. The substantial word of God, which, as a mark of preference is called the Angel, the Monas, World of Light, Bread of Life, First Born of all Creatures, the Physician of all diseases, lives in the Epopets and causes them to partake of the Divine nature, so that they may heal diseases and perform wonders of all kinds. The magical Logos, who derives his analogy or origin from the exalted and holy word Oum of the Brahmins, we find again in the Book of Jeriza, where we read (1, 8): "One, the Spirit of the Living God, voice and Spirit and Word." "And this is the Holy Spirit." The Divine number, the Divine Word, the Divine Scriptures, says Rabbi Jehuda Halevi, in his illustration of the Book Jezira, is one and the same with the reality. That which God thinks and wills has at the same time reality. Only man makes a distinction between the will and the act; with God these two are identical. Rabbi Jehudah Halevi continues: "We can form some conception of this when we, in thinking of and pronouncing a name, at the same time form an image of the subject named in our minds. Among the languages and writings this peculiarity may be noticed, that some specify the existence of things particularly, while others do so in a general manner. The holy language, however, with which God called the universe into being, demonstrates the prime existence of all things with the utmost definiteness. Whoever, therefore, is acquainted with the original signification of the scriptures, and grasps with pure thought the existence of the thing intended, he can, in accordance with his thoughts and his will, will the things into being. Thorough knowledge of the holy word and of the transposition of its letters may, as the Talmud says, enable man to perform wonders and even create things. Rabbi Jonathan says: "The time will come when the pious will bring the dead to life." Raha says: "If the pious desire to do so, they can create a world." It is reported of this Rabbi that he created a man, and of the Rabbis Chanina and Oshaja, that they were occupied every Friday with the book of Jezira, and that they created a fatted calf which they consumed. Gechasi caused the golden image of the bull to speak, by imprinting upon his lips a "name." Solomon gave to Benajahn ben Jehojada a chain and a seal upon both of which he engraved a "name" with which to bind the demon king Asmedi. Of Bezalel, the builder of the temple in the wilderness, it is said: "He understood the transposition of letters by which heaven and earth were created." Abischai uttered a holy name, and thereby suspended David between heaven and earth.

The word which expresses the being of the prototypes and the idea of the intelligentia may operate through these through the whole chain of being down to the most minute, causing changes, reverses and new creations, and may also conquer demons.

"Rabbi Chanina bar Papi was required by a matron who became enamored of him, to fulfil her amorous desires. He uttered something, and his body was covered with scabs and boils. She also did something and he became whole; then he fled and concealed himself," etc.

But since there are holy words, whose literal ideas and their transpositions are countless modifications of existence, so there are also unholy words which give the prototypes of the dark side of the spirit world. And now, if the profane use of the holy name is forbidden upon pain of losing future happiness, so the use of unholy names, which Abraham transmitted to the children of his concubines is the most terrible, because they lead to the sins of idolatry, through which man acquires evil principles and becomes possessed of demons.

The Talmud, in general, forbids sorcery, heathen superstition and heathen usages. To these belong the charming of wounds and injuries, with which, notwithstanding the exorcism, a verse of the Bible was made use of; the charming of snakes and scorpions. The following usages especially, were given as being heathenish. 1. To suspend the egg of a grasshopper on the ear to cure earache. 2. To carry the tooth of a fox to promote sleep; the tooth of a dead fox was used to prevent drowsiness, and the tooth of a living fox caused sleep. 3. The bearing of a splinter from a gallows, to cure a wound caused by iron. 4. The proverb, "Good fortune! and be not weary day nor night," probably a saying to obtain good luck. "Gad" means luck, and it is the name of the idol Belus (Isaiah 65, 11). 5. In order to obtain good luck the man assumes the name of the woman, and the woman the name of the man. 6. The saying, "Be strong, O my barrels!" to increase the wine blessing—Dan is the name of an idol. (Amos 8, 14.) 7. To have luck, people call to the male raven: "Shriek!" and to the female raven: "Croak!" and turn unto me your tail for luck. 8. If any one says: "Kill this cock for he crows late in the evening, or kill this hen, for she crows like a cock." 9. I drink and leave some over; I drink and leave some over (so that the wine may increase.) 10. Whoever dashes the shells of eggs against the wall (out of which the young chickens have already crept, so that they may not die.) 11. He who stirs in a crock before the young chickens for the same purpose. 12. Whoever, for the same purpose dances before the chickens and counts seventy-one chickens. 13. Dancing during the preparation of a meal. To command silence during the boiling of the lentil. To cry out during the boiling of grain. To urinate before the pot to facilitate cooking.

Rabbi Acha says: Before bleeding we should repeat the following prayer: May it be thy will, O Lord! that this healing operation may hasten my convalescence, etc., for no one should seek the assistance of the physician, but should look for a return of health only to God. To this Allae objects, because Rabbi Jischmael teaches, and because he deduces from the Thora (Exodus 21, 19), The physician shall have an unconditional right to heal. The Talmud not only adopts this view of Alale's but it forbade to dwell in a place where no physician could be met with. If again, on the other hand, we read in the Talmud that King Chiskla, suffered the Book of Healing to be destroyed, and for this act was praised by the Rabbis, then that book, as is supposed by Maimonides, contained simply superstitious astrological and idolatrous remedies, which the pious king sought to consign to oblivion, of which, however, a large portion found their way into the hands of the people, and in time also became a common benefit to the more enlightened.

OF THE MAGICAL CURES IN PARTICULAR.

1.—HEALING BY AMULETS.

The amulet Kamea was used as a remedy against diseases and especially against sorcery. This amulet was either a written parchment, properly called Pitka, or a small bundle of plants. The words written on the amulet were of a diversified character; among the contents, however, were to be found verses from the Bible. Proof  is called an amulet, since cures have been effected through it three times, whether it was written or whether it consisted of roots. In reference to the Sabbath (whether or not it might be worn on that day or not), it must still be regarded as reliable, because it was made and perfected by a connoisseur. An amulet may prove effectual in healing a human being, while it is of no effect in the case of an animal, because in man the constellation operates in conjunction with the amulet. If it is expected to be effectual, it must have reference to the name and number of the demon. Thus, for example, the demons of the caper-tree are called spirits; of a service-tree, Schedim; in the gardens, Rispe. At the caper-tree not less than sixty Schedim congregate, and the amulet must therefore have reference to this number.

A string made of the seeds of the madder was hung upon children as a protection against certain diseases. The nurse of Abbai taught him: Three grains will check the disease, five will cure, and seven will prove effectual against sorcery. Rabbi Acha bar Jacob remarks: The last is true only when the bewitched person is not exposed to the light of the sun or moon, or to rain, and when he does not hear the ringing of iron, the crowing of the cock, or the sound of footsteps. Rabbi Nachmann bar Jitzchak says that this remedy was already forgotten in his time.

2.—HEALING BY CHARMS.

The nurse of Abbai taught him: "All numbering (naming?) should be done in the name of the mother (N. son of R.), and all external passages must be made on the left side of the body. Abbai says farther: If the number is fixed it should be strictly adhered to without deviation; if the number is not fixed, it is forty-one.

As anti-heathenish customs the four following things are allowed: 1. To place the splinter of a mulberry-tree or fragments of glass into the pot, in order to make the mess boil more readily. (The Rabbis, however, forbade the fragment of glass on account of the danger of swallowing in with the food.) 2. The drinking toast: Wine and life cheer the Rabbis! Rabbi Akiba repeated this toast with every vessel of wine used at the marriage feast of his son. Against intoxication: Anoint the palms of the hand and the soles of the feet of the drunken person with a mixture of oil and salt, and say: As the ointment becomes pure, so may the senses become clean; or, lay the bung of a barrel in the water and say: As the bung becomes clean, etc.

Charm against suppuration: say for instance, Bas, Basia, Mas Masia, Kas, Kasia, Scharial and Amarlia, the angels, who came out of the land of Sodom to heal painful boils. Let the color not become redder; let it not spread further, let the seed be absorbed in the bowels. And as a mule does not propagate its species, so may this evil be not propagated in the body of N., son of R.

Charm against small-pox: For example; Drawn sword and pointed sling. His name is not Jacob, the pain rages.

Against being possessed, as follows: Cursed, crushed and banished be the demon, by name Bar Tet, Bor Tama, etc.

Charm against injury inflicted by demons of by-places: Upon the head of the lion, and in the nose of the lioness, I found the demon Bar Schirka a Panda. I threw him into a fish-bed and slew him with the jawbone of an ass.

To make evil dreams good, three men recited certain consoling verses from the Bible. "Whosoever had a bad dream, should hasten in the morning, as soon as he awakens, to repeat a verse from the Bible, the contents of which should be favorable to him, and this must be done quickly, before a verse comes into the mind with an unfavorable meaning to him."

He that is upon the point of entering a city and fears the evil look, let him put his right thumb in his left hand, and his left thumb in his right hand, and say: I, N. N., am of the lineage of Joseph, over whom the evil eye can have no power. He makes the glance of the evil eye harmless; the tail of a fox was hung upon the horse.

3.—REMEDIES AND CHARMS AGAINST SORCERY.

Ben Asai says: Do not irritate your anus while sitting down in order to obtain a passage from the bowels, for he who does this will be attacked by sorcery, even though he were engaged in Spain. If a man, however, has done so in a mistake, after an evacuation, let him pronounce the following charm:

"Ye cannot approach, neither Tachimnor Tachtum, not all of you, not any of you, neither the enchantment of the sorcerer nor the charm of the sorceress."

Rabbi Chanina says: To drink one-eighth ounce of ass's milk, which is forty days' old, is effective against the sting of a wasp; one quart against the sting of a scorpion; one-half quart against sorcery, and the drinking of fluids that have been open and exposed.

Rabbi Jochanan said: A chief among witches told me: If you meet witches you should utter the following charm: "Hot dirt, in perforated baskets, in your mouths, ye enchanting women. May your heads become bald; may the wind blow away your bread crumbs; may it scatter your spices; may the fresh saffron which ye have in your hands fly away. Witches! so long as men were gracious to me, and I was careful, I came not in your midst; now I did, and you are not agreeable to me."

The Rabbi taught: There are three things between which we should not pass, and so, also, that two persons walking side by side should not allow to come between them. These three things are—a dog, a palm, and a woman. Some add also a hog, and others, a snake. Should this happen notwithstanding, what shall a man do to escape uninjured? Rabbi Papi says: "Repeat a verse from the Bible that begins and ends with the same letters."

If women are seated facing each other on opposite sides of the street, there is no doubt that they are engaged in witchcraft. How shall a man escape them without injury? He should avoid them and go another way. If this is not possible, then he shall take some one by the hand and pass by in his company. If there is no one at hand, he must say: "The demons of sorcery have already been killed by arrows. A rat Assia, Belussia, are the names of the demons. Raschi."

The Rabbis teach: A man should not drink water in the night, either from a stream or from water that is standing still. Whoever does this, his blood be upon his own head, because by so doing he will render himself liable to become blind: How can we make drinking at night safe? If there is some one present he should be awakened and addressed as follows: "I drink water!" If you are alone, rattle with the lid of the drinking cup and say to yourself: "N., son of R., thy mother said to thee: Guard thyself against Schabriri, briri, riri, iri, ri, in a white pitcher (Raschi), this is a magical charm." As the syllables of the word Schabriri decrease, so the demon will withdraw. The Targum of blindness (Genesis 19, 11), in Schabriri.

In reference to paired numbers, of which we have already spoken, Rabbi Papa says: "Joseph, the Demon, told me that through two we kill, through four we only inflict injury. In the number two the evil will follow, whether we have done a thing in this number intentionally or accidentally. In the number four only when the thing is done intentionally. If we have accidentally partaken of a meal or drank out of a paired plate or pitcher, number, how shall we avoid the fatal consequences? We must take the thumb of the right hand into the left, and the thumb of the left into the right hand, and say: You and I make three. If answered, is returned: You and I make five. If we again hear the answer: You and I are six, we must again answer: You and I are seven. It happened that some one carried this on to the 101st time, until finally the demon burst with chagrin.

APPLICATION OF THE CHARMS AND THE REMEDIES.

We insert the passages of the Talmud which treat of the subject, on account of their coherence, in all that extent, although it may not properly belong in this place, because in several cases in the following remedies the natural cures as well as the magical charms are prescribed, and because these passages from the Talmud otherwise offer many interesting matters. They treat of proceedings against snakes and other remarkable occurrences.

He that has swallowed a snake, let him eat ivy and then walk three miles. Rabbi Sime bar Asche saw a man who had swallowed a snake. Rabbi Sime fell upon him like a warrior, gave him ivy and salt to eat, and then drove him three miles before him, when the snake came from him in pieces. Others state that Rabbi Sime himself swallowed the snake, when the prophet Eli came in the form of a wild warrior, gave him ivy and salt to eat, etc., etc.

If a man be bitten by a snake, let him take seventy-nine hairs from the tail of a white she-ass, tie them with a silken thread, and he that is bitten sit upon them. The she-ass must, however, have been free from Trefa (an organic disease). An official in Pumbedithat was bitten by a snake. Now, there were found in Pumbedithat thirteen bearing white she-asses, which were opened one after another, but all were found to have been afflicted with Trefa. It was also known that in a distant part of the city there was another she-ass, and messengers were sent to bring her. But meanwhile a lion had eaten up the she-ass. Then spoke Abali: Perhaps the snake of the Rabbins have bitten him, against the bite of which there is no remedy. The pupils answered, Yes; so it is, master; for when Rab died, Rabbi Jitz-sechak bar Bina prohibited the use of myrtle and palm leaves for a whole year. This officer, however, paid no attention to this prohibition.

If a snake should wind around a person, he should go into the water and take a basket which he should hold above the head of the snake, then lower the basket in such a manner that the rim of it shall come between him and the snake (to grasp the snake with the hands would be dangerous, because it might become enraged and wound the person). When the snake is in the basket, throw it quickly into the water and hasten away.

Should any one be pursued by an angry snake (where the snake follows the person by scenting his tracks) he should suffer himself to be carried a short distance by a person, if any one should be present (through the stranger's footsteps the snake will lose his tracks); if no one is with him he should spring across water or seat himself over a fountain. On the following night he should place himself upon four barrels, so that the snake cannot easily reach him, or let him rather sleep in the open air, so that it cannot come to him through the roof, then let him tie four cats to the barrels and make a noise with straw or bushes, so that the cats, when the snake comes, may fall upon her and eat her up.

Should any one be pursued by a snake, let him seek safety between two beehives.

Rabbi Jochanan says: The root-drink described in the Mishna, consists of Alexandrian gum, pulverized alum and fine saffron, each of the weight of a Sus (a small coin). To cure jaundice two of them are taken in beer.

The following remedies are also recommended in cases of female weakness: Take the tops of three Persian onions, boil them in wine and let the woman drink of it, at the same time saying to her: Recover from thy sickness!

Another remedy: Take a handful of caraway, a handful of saffron, and an equal quantity of fœnugrek, boil them together in wine, and let the woman drink of it, saying: Recover from thy sickness!

Another remedy: Take sixty bungs of wine barrels, soak them in water, and give the woman of the water to drink, and say to her at the same time: Recover from thy sickness!

Or, take a quantity of the growth of tendrils, boil them in wine, and let the woman drink of it, and speak to her as above.

Or, take the plant that grows beside the thorn, and burn it to ashes. The woman should carry the ashes upon her person in a linen patch in the summer, or in a woolen patch in the winter.

Or, dig seven holes in the ground, and burn in each of them young grape vines not over three years' growth. Let the woman take a cup into her hands and seat herself over the first hole and drink: then rise up and seat herself upon the second hole, etc., etc. Each time speak to her: Recover, etc.

Or, anoint the lower part of her body with rose-water.

Or, take a wreath of feathers, burn them to ashes. These ashes the patient should carry in a linen bag in the summer, and in a woolen bag in the winter.

Or, open a cask of wine expressly for her. She should drink much wine.

Or, take a grain of barley that was found in the stable of a white she-ass. If she holds this one day in her hand (the right hand), the ailment will cease for two days. If she holds it during two days, it will cease for three days. If she holds it three days it will cease forever. According to others: if she takes one grain in her hand, etc.; if she takes two grains in her hand, etc.

5.—MAGICAL REMEDIES AGAINST VARIOUS DISEASES AND CONDITIONS.

ABORTUS—The actitee (eaglestone), rattle-snake stone—stone of retaining, remaining) was worn by women as a prevention against abortion.

BLOOD-LETTING.—If you have eaten fish, you must not be bled on the following day. If you have been bled, you must not eat fish on the following day. On the third day both would be dangerous.

The Rabbis teach: After blood-letting, a man must not, on the same day, drink milk, eat cheese, onions or vegetables. If a man, however, has eaten of these things, he should mix, says Abai, one quarter measure of vinegar, and one quarter measure of wine, and drink it. If a motion of the bowels ensues, the evacuation should take place without and on the east side of the town, for the exhalation of such is injurious.

DISEASES OF THE EYE.—The saliva of a first-born on the male side (not of the female side) is effective in the cure of eye diseases.

Rab says: A degenerate eye is dangerous to life, for the vision-power of the eye is closely connected with the pericardium.

Rapid traveling impairs the sight of the eye; but it may be restored by uttering the blessing of consecration of the Sabbath on Friday evening.

BLINDNESS.—Against blindness at night, take a string made out of the hair of an animal; tie one end of it to the foot of the patient, and the other end to the foot of a dog, and then let the children make a noise behind the dog, and say: "Hold the dog, fool the rock." Then take seven pieces of meat from seven different houses, and let the inmates of each house hang a piece of the meat at the door-post of the patient. The dog must eat this meat in an open place. Then let the patient unbind the hair-line and let some one say; Night blindness of F., son of R., leave N., son of R., and perforate the pupil of the dog.

AGAINST DAY BLINDNESS.—Take seven pieces of spleen from seven heifers, and lay them upon the vessel used by the physician to catch the blood when bleeding a patient. The patient must be seated in a chamber. A man must be stationed on the outside, who must say: "Blind one! give to me that I may eat." The patient answers: "How can I open? Come in and eat!" After eating he must break the plate or he will himself become blind.

Preface.

THE first edition of this volume has been commended and criticised by the public. It was admitted to be a valuable compendium of the curiosities of literature generally, and especially of that pertaining to magic, but that it was at the same time calculated to foster superstition, and thereby promote evil—a repetition of the charge made against the honorable HORST, the publisher of a magical library.

In our enlightened age, the unprejudiced will observe in the publication of such a work, only what the author claims, namely, a contribution in reference to the aforesaid literature and culture of no trifling merit; but in regard to the believer also, the issue of a cheap edition will be more serviceable than the formerly expensive productions on sorcery, which were only circulated in abstract forms and sold at extortionate rates. What other practical value the above named edition may possess is not the question. Let us not, therefore, underrate this branch of popular literature; the authors wrote in accordance with a system which was, or at least, seemed clear to them, and illustrious persons, in all ages and climes have not considered the labor requisite to fathom the mysteries of magic as labor expended in vain, and although they condemned the form, they could not deny the possibility or even fact that gifted men, of inherent worth, could accomplish such wonderful things.

In regard to the present edition it can only be said, that the so-called Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses, which have for several centuries attracted the popular faith, is reality in accordance with an old manuscript (the most legible among many), and given word for word, divested only of orthographical errors which the best interest of literature demand—with unerring fidelity. The publisher guarantees that not one syllable has been added.

THE Sixth Book of Moses.

MOSES' MAGICAL SPIRIT-ART.

Translated from the Ancient Hebrew.

MAGIA ALBA ET NIGRA UNIVERSALIS SEU NECROMANTIA ;

That is, that which embraces the whole of the White and Black Art, (Black Magic,) or the Necromancy of all Ministering Angels and Spirits; how to cite and desire the IX. Chori of the good angels and spirits, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, and Moon.

The most serviceable angels are the following:

SALATHEEL, MICHAEL, RAPHAEL, URIEL,

together with the Necromancy of the black magic of the best Ministering Spirits in the Chymia et Alchymia of Moses and Aaron.

That which was hidden from David, the father of Solomon, by the High Priest as the highest mystery, but which was finally found in the year CCCXXX., among others, by the first Christian Emperor Constantine the Great, and sent to Pope Sylvester at Rome, after its translation under Julius II. Pontifice max. Typis manabilis sub poena excommunicationis de numquam publica imprimendis sent to the Emperor Charles V., and highly recommended in the year MDXX., approved by Julii II. P. M. Cme. duos libros quos Mosis condidit arter antistitis summus sedalitate SADOCK. Libri hi colorum sacra sunt vota sequenter spiritus omnipotens qui uigil illa facit at est sumis pia necessaria. Fides.

Instruction.

These two Books were revealed by God, the Almighty, to his faithful servant Moses, on Mount Sinai, intervale lucis, and in this manner they also came into the hands of Aaron, Caleb, Joshua, and finally to David and his son Solomon and their high priest Sadock. Therefore, they are Bibliis arcanum arcanorum, which means, Mystery of all Mysteries.

The Conversation of God.

Adonai, Sother, Emanuel, Ehic, Tetragramaton, Ayscher, Jehova, Zebaoth, the Lord of Hosts, of Heaven and Earth; that which appertains to the Sixth and Seventh Book of Moses, as follows:

Adonai, E El, Zeboath, Jebaouha, Jehovah, E El, Chad, Tetragramaton Chaddai, Channaniah, al Elyon, Chaye, Ayscher, Adoyah Zawah, Tetragramaton, Awiel, Adoyah, Chay, Yechal, Kanus, Emmet, thus spake the Lord of Hosts to me Moses, Eheye, Ayscher, Jehel, Yazliah, Elion. Sum qui sum ab æterno in æternum, thou my servant Moses, open thou thine ears, hear the voice of thy God. Through me Jehovah, Aglai, the God of heaven and earth, thy race shall be multiplied and shall shine as the stars of heaven. In addition to this I will also give thee might, power and wisdom, to rule over the spirits of heaven and hell.

Over the ministering angels and spirits of the fourth element as well as of the seven planets. Hear also the voice of thy God wherewith I give thee the seven seals and twelve tables. Schem, Schel, Hamforach, that the angels and spirits may always yield obedient service to thee, when thou callest upon them and citest them by these seven seals and twelve tables of my omnipotence; and hereunto thou shalt also have herewith a knowledge of the highest mysteries.

Therefore, thou, my faithful friend, dear Moses, take thou the power and high might of thy God.

Aclon, Ysheye, Channanyah, Veschayah, E El, Elijon, Rachmiel, Ariel, Eheye, Ayscher, Eheye, Elyon. Through my Seals and Tables.

THE FIRST MYSTERY.

PART I.

THE MAGIC OF THE ISRAELITES.

THE complete and reliable history of the human and divine—the divine revelations, and the influence of godly or pious men are found in the Scriptural monuments of the old Hebrews in the Holy Scriptures.

The Bible is justly styled the Holy Scripture, because it contains the knowledge of the saints, while at the same time, it unites and harmonizes word and deed, doctrine and action. It points out the true relation of man to the Omnipotent—it affords the most direct reference to the great truths of the spiritual and intellectual; it treats of the origin of the universe and its laws, through which all things have to be brought to light—of the anterior and posterior history of mankind—of his future destiny and how to attain it; of the living and visible agents which God employs in the great work of redemption, and, finally, of the most exalted of all beings—of the world's Saviour, who was an universal expression in his own person, and who exhibited all divine power and action in one person, while all his forerunners were endowed only with single powers and perfections; who revealed to fallen man the highest and purest ends of his life and the means of his purification and restoration.

We find among oriental nations every grade of Magic—the steps necessary to solve the mysteries of somnambulism and second-sight, and the infinitely multiplied operations by which unusual occurrences are produced; in like manner we also find these things among the Israelites, but differing totally in character. In the former instance, it was the individual and his presence; in the latter, it was not the individual upon which magic depended, but upon mankind in general, and upon the great future. There, the light of man was made to shine by skillful actions, produced by the lowest arts; here, shone a pure, unclouded, quiet life, vitalized by the warm breath of the Almighty, a light shining into the future, and upon this light depended all life and action. To the Israelite seer not only the fate of single individuals stand revealed, but the fate of nations, yea, of mankind, which in the end must be reconciled to God by the unfolding of magical art, as often happened under the old dispensation, by instinctive somnambulist influences. If we examine the history of the old covenant we shall find that this remarkable people stood solitary and alone like a pillar of fire amid heathen darkness.

Although we find, among other nations, worthy men, who seek after the divine light, surrounded by darkness and uncertainty, here are men of God, bearing the impress of true faith, who give undoubted evidence of higher powers, by visible acts and signs which everywhere separate life from death, and truth from error, and while the ancient remnants of other nations show only theory without application, here we find a connected chain of acts and events—in fact, a divine and lifelike drama. Of all these things the various books of the Holy Scriptures speak with confidence, so that the history of no other people, interwoven with fables, can be compared with them. According to this, the Bible contains the light which illuminates every dark phase in life; it is the ground-work of all human actions, the guiding-star of the earthly to the eternal—of the intellectual to the divine, the aim and end of all knowledge. It is the first of three great lights, guiding and governing our faith, and bears no relation to the other two great lights of the angle which shall make these actions lawful, or the circle which sensualizes the fixed limits of the condition of mankind. The Bible is also more instructive and richer in reference to our subject than all other books taken together. We will, therefore, cite a few principal points, as well of the phenomena as of the mode of action and theory relating to magnetism, and then call attention especially to the healing of the sick according to scriptural teachings. We will give an account of the dreams, a great many of which are recorded in the Bible.

The dreams recorded in the Bible are many and remarkable. The voice with which God spoke to the prophets and the men consecrated to Him, were generally heard in dreams.

The visions of the ancients, according to the testimony of Moses, were nearly always dreams. Numbers xii. 6: "And he said: Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I, the Lord, will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream." Job xxxiii. 15: "In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction." 1 Kings iii. 5: "In Gibeon the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee. And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, etc., give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?" Genesis xx. 3: "But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife; and God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me." Genesis xxxi. 23: "And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad." The dreams of Joseph concerning his brethren are also remarkable. Genesis xxxvii. 5: "And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it to his brethren: and they hated him yet the more: and he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream, which I have dreamed: For behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright: and behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf. And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us?" And he had still another dream, and he told it to his brethren and said: Behold, I have dreamed a dream more: and behold, the sun and the moon and the stars made obeisance to me. And his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee on the earth?"

Sacred history proves that after Joseph was sold by his brethren to the Egyptian traders that he actually became their king in the court of Pharaoh. The power of Joseph to interpret dreams is further shown by the interpretation of the dreams of the butler and baker while in prison, Genesis i. 40; so, also, of the dreams of king Pharaoh, of the seven fat and lean kine which came out of the water, and of the seven rank and good ears of corn and the seven thin and blasted ears, Genesis xli. 1. In the New Testament many dreams are mentioned through which God designed to speak to his followers. In this manner Joseph, the husband of Mary, was told by an angel (Matthew i. 20), that she should conceive of the Holy Ghost and bear a son, who would become the Saviour of the world; and then again, that he should take the child and flee into Egypt to escape the murderous intent of Herod; and after the death of Herod, that he should again return to Nazareth (Matthew ii. 13-19). In like manner, the three wise men of the East were warned in a dream, that they should not return to Herod, but depart to their own country another way. The Apostles frequently had visions in the night; for example, Paul was commanded to go to Macedonia (Acts x. 9). And in the same book of the New Testament (xviii. 9), we read: "Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision. Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace." Many similar passages might be quoted, e. g., xxiii. 11; xxvii. 23, etc., etc.

Herein lies the great first cause. God is an uncreated being—heaven and earth are the first things created; the antithesis: that which was made of God. In reference to a second antithesis, Moses speaks of light and darkness: "And darkness was upon the face of the earth, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light." Here, too, the question is about light as a creation, which, however, had for its opposite darkness; therefore did the old Egyptians regard darkness as the beginning of all things. Even according to the writings of Moses, this was the Egyptian doctrine, for he says, "Darkness was upon the face of the deep." But as the Egyptian doctrine in its first inception may be regarded as good authority, their error originated in this, that they accepted the darkness before the light; as also a like error of the Persians, inasmuch that they accepted the light before the darkness as being created, the one before the other. The light stands beside darkness as its natural opposite, created and present, as Moses plainly says: "And God divided the light from the darkness, and God called the light day, and the darkness he called night." The Bible also points out another antithesis in the first germs and figures of the earth, namely, water and spirit—the water as matter, as the germ of the figurative, and the spirit, the Elohim, as the fruitful, active principle. "And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." One-sided views led the earlier philosophers into numerous errors. In this manner Thales brought everything out of the water and overlooked the spiritual active whole, in all of which he was imitated by subsequent champions of Materialism. The other one-sided view is, to hold everything as spiritual and regard matter only as an inert abstraction (caput mortuum), which was the case from the earliest period of time among Spiritualists and the advocates of Spiritualism. Moses, therefore, shows his superiority over all the disciples of Egyptian temple-wisdom, as well as of the more modern sects, inasmuch that he was enlightened by divine wisdom, and represented this subject, not in a partial manner, but in its true bearing and significance; he ascribed to matter its true worth and placed the spiritual beside it. Moreover, Moses has given the narrative of the creation in beautiful and captivating language, as for example, in regard to the waters—the difference between the wet and the dry, and how the dry land came forth from the water; how the grass and herbs, which bore seeds, and fruitful trees grew upon the earth; how the mighty deep was filled with living and moving animals, and the birds that fly in the firmament of heaven; how the earth finally brought forth living animals, each after its own kind, and last of all, how God made man “in his own image,” to whom he gave “dominion over the fishes of the sea, over the fowls of the air, over the cattle, and over every creeping thing that creeps upon the earth.”

The Mosaic Eden was the habitation of the originally purely created beings, within whose boundaries grew the tree of knowledge of good and evil. The figure of the serpent shows the nature of the fall of man. We spoke, in another part of this work, of the original purity and wisdom of godly men. Here is the place to record additional Bible principles. To this end we avail ourselves of a mystical, interesting manuscript from which we extract what follows: (MAGIKON; or, the Secret System of an Association of Unknown Philosophers, etc., v. 27–31. Frankfort and Leipzig, 1784. A rare Book, whose Teachings, in many Respects, agree with the Indian Brahmin Doctrine).

In view of his divine origin, as an unconditional emanation from God, Adam was not only the noblest being, which, as an expression of divine power, had the preference of all others, for he never owed his existence to a mother; he was a heavenly Adam, brought into being by God himself and was not born into the world in the ordinary manner. He also enjoyed, in consequence of his nature, every prerogative of a pure spirit, surrounded by an invulnerable veil. But this was not the sensual body of the present time, which is only an evidence of his degradation—a coarse mantle—by which he sought to protect himself against the raging elements. His garments were holy, simple, indestructible, and of an indissoluble character. To this condition of perfect “glory, in which he enjoyed the purest happiness, he was destined in order to reveal the power of the Almighty, and to rule the visible and invisible. Being in possession of all the prerogatives and insignia of a king, he could also use every means to fulfil his high destiny. As the champion of unity, he was secure from the attacks of all inward and outward enemies, because the veil by which he was covered (the germs of which are still within us), rendered him invulnerable. One advantage that the original pure man possessed was, that no natural poison, nor all the powers of the elements could harm him. Christ promised invulnerability to his apostles and all his followers, through the regeneration of man. In this condition man also bears a fiery, double-edged, all-penetrating sword, a living word, which combines in itself all power, and through which "everything is possible to him." Of this sword Moses says, Genesis iii. 24: "So he drove out the man, and he placed at the east end of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the tree of life." In Revelations i. 16, we read: "And out of his mouth went a two-edged sword," etc. By this sword we are to understand the living word, which was originally inherent in man, and which can only be restored to him by his return to a pure state, and by being cleansed from the blot of sensualism. It is the word of which we read in Hebrews iv. 12: "For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit."

Most extraordinary is the powerful, all-conquering Honover (word of power), of Zoroaster, which fully corresponds with the foregoing, by which Ormuzd overcame Ahriman and all evil. "In this condition of kingly honor and power," we read further, "man, as the most lifelike image of his father, (whose viceregent he was on earth), could have enjoyed the purest happiness had he properly guarded his Eden, but he committed a breach of trust. Instead of ruling over the things of sense and striving for a higher spiritual state, to which he was ordained, he imbibed the unhappy idea of exchanging the great cardinal points of light with truth, that is, he confounded light with truth, and in this confusion he lost both and robbed himself. Because he lost sight of the boundary of the kingdom over which he was placed as a watchman, and confined himself to only a portion of it, namely, the sensual, the glitter of which blinded him so greatly as to make him forget all else; because he flattered himself that he could find the light in another place than the first great fountain, he fastened his voluptuous eye on a false existence, became enamored of sensualism and became sensual himself. Through this adultery he sank into darkness and confusion, the result of which was, that he was transplanted from the light of day into the night of innumerable small twinkling stars, and now he experienced a sensual nakedness of which he was ashamed. The abuse of the knowledge of the connection between the spiritual and the bodily, according to which man endeavors to make the spiritual sensual and the sensual spiritual, is true adultery, of whom, he who is moved by the female sex is simply a consequence and an imitator. Through sin man lost not only his original habitation, and became an exile into the religious state of the fathers and mothers, having to go in the way of the flesh, but he also lost the fiery sword, and with it everything else that had made him all-seeing and unconquerable. His holy garments now became as the skin of animals, and this mortal, perishable covering afforded him no protection against the elements. With the wasted half of his body, the spiritual also added to the confusion, and discordant sounds were heard in the dark places of his spiritual domain.

Although man had sunk deep in sin, the hope of a full restoration was given to him on condition of a perfect reconciliation. Without such reconciliation, however, he sinks deeper and deeper, and his return becomes still more precarious. In order to be reconciled he must become self-abased, and resist the false allurements which only serve to steep him in the mire of the elements, and he must seek, by prayer, to obtain the more exalted blessings of benevolent influences, without which he cannot draw a pure breath. In this reconciliation he must gradually overcome everything, and put away everything from him that will cloud his inner nature and separate him from the great source of his being; because he can never enjoy peace within himself and with nature around him until he has thus overcome everything opposed to his own nature, and gained the victory over all his enemies. But this can only be done when he returns the same road upon which he had wandered away. He must wean himself by degrees from the sensual by a heroic life, and like a weary, footsore wanderer, who has many steep mountains to scale, continue to mount upward, until he reaches the goal, which is lost in the clouds. Overcoming one obstacle after another, he must dispel the dark vapors that intervene between himself and the true sun, so that in the end the pure rays of light may reach him without interruption. The following is a genuine scriptural doctrine according to the Indian creed, differing, however, in character:

"The Almighty has provided means to aid man in the work of reconciliation. God has appointed higher agents to lead him back to Him from the error of his ways. But he can only be fully restored through the Saviour of the world, who finished and perfected all that these agents had accomplished only in part at different times. Through Him all power became animated and exalted; through Him he approaches the first and only true light, a knowledge of all things, and especially, a knowledge of himself. If the man is willing to accept this offered help, he will surely arrive at the desired goal, and he will be so firmly established in faith, that no future doubts can ever cause him to waver. If he elevates his will, so as to bring it in unison with the divine will, he may spiritualize his being already in this world, so that the higher spiritual kingdom may become visible to his eyes, and feel God nearer to him than he ever thought it possible; that all things may become possible to him, because he adds all power to his own, and in this union and harmony, with a fulness of a higher vitality, the divine agents, Moses, Elias, yea, even Christ himself, may become visible to him, when, living amid thought, he requires books no longer. In short, man can attain to such a degree of perfection, even in this life, that death will have nothing more to do than to disrobe him of his coarse covering in order to reveal his spiritual temple, because he then lives and moves within the eternal. Only when he arrives at the end of this vale of darkness, will he receive, at each stage of his journey, more extended life, greater inward power, purer air, and a wider range of vision. His spiritual being will taste nobler fruits, and at the end of his race nothing can separate him from the exalted harmonies of those spheres, of which mortal sense can draw but a faint picture. Without distinction of sex, he will begin to live the life of angels, and will possess all their powers, of which he had but a faint sign here; he will then again enjoy the incense of the eternal temple, the source of all power, from which he was exiled, and Christ will be his great High Priest (Hebrews vii. 17, 24, 25). Man will not only enjoy his own gifts, but he will have a part in the gifts of the elect, who constitute the council of the wise; that holy sovereign will be more exalted there than he could be here; there will be no rising or setting of the light of the stars; no changes of day and night, and no multiplicity of languages; every being will in that moment be enabled to read the name of that holy book, out of which flows life for every creature (Hebrews xii. 22, 23). And here, too, the views of Zoroaster are in accord with the foregoing, for he also speaks of a heavenly meeting, and the participation of every follower of Ormuzd in the sacrifices and prayers of all, etc.

In placing this prominent treatise so plainly before the reader I felt no hesitation, because it was so clear and true, and because it seemed so proper for this work here, and to show why only pure and truly Christian men can perform great wonders and see visions of which the worldly-minded have not even a conception. I will now relate a few instances of magnetic appearances and occurrences, many of which are recorded in the Bible.

The first and most striking one we find in connection with Adam. Moses writes (Genesis ii. 21) as follows: "And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept." And now, the question arises, What kind of a sleep was this? The answer is, it was a deep sleep. It was either the sleep of death, or a state of lethargy, or a trance (raptus divinus), or, was it merely an ordinary sleep? The first appears improbable, and had this been the case, we know, that in the release of the body from its earthly bonds, and shortly before death, the clearest instances of second sight have occurred; but the question is not of a mortal illness, but of a deep sleep. If it was a trance, then that inward second-sight may be regarded the more probable. The seventy-two translators of the Bible actually regard this sleep as a trance, and Tertullian says, in direct reference to it, "The power of the prophecies of the Holy Ghost fell upon him." (Accidit super-illum spiritus sancti vis operatrix prophetiæ.)

Another remarkable vision is that which Noah had of the ark long before the deluge occurred. Again, the call of Abraham, in which he was commanded to leave his fatherland and move toward Haran in Canaan. Abraham had many visions, or was the conversation of the Lord with him, recorded in the Bible really only than a figurative expression of intuition? Through these visions or conversations, as you will, he was taught that he would be greatly blessed, and that he should be the father of a great nation, etc. As he came into the sacred grove of Moria, the Lord again appeared unto Abraham and said: "This land will I give unto thy seed."

The innocent life of the shepherds, and their frequent abode in sacred groves, very naturally brought such intuition to the very highest point of perfection, and this was especially the case, when their minds were occupied with God and godly things. And this is particularly shown in the history of the shepherd-life of the pious Israelites, not only by the ancient fathers, but subsequently, in the time of the kings and judges. Isaac and Jacob had visions similar to those of Abraham. We notice especially the vision of Jacob while journeying into Mesopotamia, in which he saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven. It is written (Genesis xxviii. 10): "And Jacob went out from Beersheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set: and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and behold, a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord, etc. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, etc. And in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And Jacob awoke out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." How truly was Jacob's dreamed fulfilled! The promised land became the possession of the Jews; through his seed, namely, through Christ the Saviour, who is the heavenly ladder upon which the angels of God ascended and descended, all the nations of the earth have been or will be blessed.

We find another remarkable instance of the magnetic influence in changing the nature and complexion of living objects, in the history of Jacob. It is as follows: Jacob agreed with Laban that he would still guard his sheep, provided, that Laban would give him as a reward for his service, all spotted lambs and goats that should in the future be added to his flocks. Laban consented to this proposal, and Jacob became immensely rich. It is worth the trouble to insert the passage relating to this transaction, as an application of the mysterious doctrine of magnetism.

When Jacob would no longer watch over the sheep and desired to go away with his wives and children, Laban said unto him, Genesis xxx. 27-43: "I pray thee, if I have found favor in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake. And he said Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it. And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee and how thy cattle was with me. For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now increased unto a multitude: and the Lord hath blessed thee since my coming: and now, when shall I provide for mine own house also? And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me anything: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock: I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and of such shall be my hire. So shall my righteousness answer for me in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me. And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word. And he removed that day the he-goats that were ring-streaked and speckled, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hands of his sons. And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks. And Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chestnut-tree: and pilled white streaks in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods. And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink. And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-streaked, speckled, and spotted. And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-streaked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle. And it came to pass whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods. But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in; so the feeble were Laban's and the stronger Jacob's. And the man increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maidservants, and menservants, and camels, and asses."

This proves clearly that the sheep and the goats could be made to bring forth their young changed in color and appearance corresponding with the pilled rods which were placed before them by Jacob as they drank from the water. In these days, the theory that the features of the offspring of a human mother can be affected by an object upon which the mother gazes, is pronounced absurd; and yet this theory, in the very nature of things, is as fully established as the fact that the mental qualities of many children differ totally from those of their parents. The fact that the sheep and the goats, upon seeing the objects which Jacob so skilfully placed before them, brought forth their young differing in appearance from themselves, has a very deep significance. Either Jacob knew what the result of this stratagem would be from experience, or it was revealed to him in a dream, for we read, Genesis xxxi. 10: "And it came to pass at the time the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and behold, the rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-streaked, speckled, and grizzled." With the water which they drank, and in which at the same time they saw their own reflection, they transmitted the image of the speckled rods to their young.

We have not the space here to enter into a more extended argument to prove the truth of this phenomenon, but the fact that the female progenitor, both human and animal, is capable at the period of gestation to transmit to her offspring the image and likeness of surrounding objects, has a surer foundation than is commonly believed to be possible. The great army of Materialists, who represent the spirit of the scriptures and of life as an ordinary earthly matter, so as to make it appear that nothing is hidden in the sanctuary that they cannot comprehend by their intellect, will never be converted, and those who rely upon the benign influences of a higher light in the temple, which will exist beyond the life of this world, will never need conversion.

Moses himself, the great man of God, had many remarkable visions. These visions consisted in part of dreams and partly in ecstasies, and for this reason was he educated in all the mysteries of the Egyptians and in all their magical arts, in which he excelled all others. On account of his extraordinary piety and wisdom he has made the savior of his people from the thralldom of Pharaoh. His visions were of a diversified character. His ability to lead and govern the people was the direct result of a deep intuition. If we regard this ability as mere inward sight, then we must admit that it was a purely magical gift; if as the result of direct command of the voice of God (for according to the scriptures God often spoke personally with Moses), we find in it a confirmation of the truth, that a pious mind, open to divine influences, can also perform divine acts.

The first important vision of Moses occurred at Mount Horeb, while he was yet engaged in watching over the flocks of Jethro, his father-in-law (Exodus iii. 2): "And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a burning bush: and Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burned. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the burning bush, and said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."

Moses, the prophetic seer, acquainted with the weakness of his brethren, full of religious zeal, and gifted with a glowing phantasia, came to the lodge of his father-in-law in Midian, where he had time and opportunity, as a shepherd, to store his mind with religious contemplations, so that in a state of ecstatic second-sight, he could review the ways and means by which he might become the leader and shepherd of his people. The centrum of his mind was open to the higher influences of God, who appeared unto him as a light in the burning bush which was not consumed, and with whom, with veiled countenance, he conversed familiarly. We find in Moses the emotions of an inward psychological struggle with hopes and fears, with extreme weakness and supernatural strength of will; of submission, reverence and obedience; of confidence, and finally of an enthusiasm, that, regarding all earthly obstacles as nought, he overcame all things. While he was thus equipped with godlike powers, he subdued the elements of nature and compelled them to testify to the greatness and glory of God by the marvelous wonders which he performed. In such ecstasies Moses could tarry long on the mountains and separate himself from the people on the journey in the wilderness, and would yet be venerated as a man of wonders. The visions of Moses embrace the present and the future. He not only delivered the commands of God from the mountain, but he also foresaw the offerings that were brought to the golden calf; he foresaw that he could prepare the children of Israel for the pure worship of God, and guard them against error and idolatry only by isolating them in the wilderness from the heathen nations around them. In addition to the above indications we need only call attention to the special visions of Moses, his gifts, his ability to transfer the power of divination to others, and class them among magnetic occurrences; we may omit the different kinds of sacrifices, the consecration and blessing with water, oil and blood, and laying on of hands, etc., as well as the stringent prohibitions against taking any part in sorcery, false divination, conjuring and inquiring of the dead.

Among a few instances, resembling magnetism, we mention particularly the rod with which Moses performed his wonders before Pharaoh, and the stretching out of his hands by which he divided the waters of the sea (Exodus xiv. 16): "But lift thou up thy rod and stretch out thy hand over the sea, and divide it; and as Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, the waters were divided. And when the Egyptians pursued them, Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it, and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea, so there remained not so much as one of them." The stretching out of the hand of Moses and the wonders he performed with his rod are of great significance. With his rod he smote the rock in Rephidim, and the water gushed forth to quench the thirst of the murmuring people (Exodus xvii. 5): "And the Lord said unto Moses, go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river take in thy hand and go; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall water come out of it, that the people may drink." And when Amalek came and fought against Israel, Moses said unto Joshua (Exodus xvii. 9-11): "Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek; to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in my hand. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed."

The gift of prophecy seems also to have been given to the pious elders of Israel through their intercourse with Moses, for it is written (Numbers xi. 23-29): "And the Lord said unto Moses, Is the Lord's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not. And Moses went out and told the people the words of the Lord, and gathered together the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them around about the tabernacle. And the Lord came down in a cloud, and spake unto him and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders; and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied, and did not cease. But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them: and they were of them that were written, but went not out into the tabernacle: and they prophesied in the camp. And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them. And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them!

The various conditions of clairvoyance are clearly described by Moses. Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses because of the Ethiopian whom he had married, and they said (Numbers xii. 2-8): "Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath he not also spoken by us? And the Lord heard it. And the Lord came down in a pillar of the cloud and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth. And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision and will speak unto him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all my house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently and not in dark speeches, and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold." And so it was also among the Israelites and other nations, and is now in our magnetic appearances and revelations by visions, and especially in dreams and dark words and figures, which is frequently the case in the lower condition of somnolency ; but in the highest grades of clairvoyance, when the mind is pure as in the case of Moses, it is to behold in the true form.

The personal conversations of God with Moses, and his power of beholding the Almighty in his true similitude are figurative expressions, and must not be taken in a literal sense. For the Lord speaks through revelation and by means of the light, and not by word of mouth, neither can God be seen by mortal eyes, for He says in another place, "No man can behold me and live." This language is the expression or impression of the divine word, and a light from the very purest source ; it is the spiritual gift and revelation of the Deity to man, which must be taken according to the various grades of intelligence of beings, as in nature, according to the kind of light produced by different actions, whether the effect be produced upon near or distant, thick or thin, hard or soft objects, etc.

This language was understood by prophets and consecrated men in all ages, and these could not communicate the light they had received in any other language than those which were spoken in their day, although, that which came over them was much more simple, comprehensive and spiritual than any spoken communication could have been. The language of God is the influence of a higher light through which the spirit which he pervades becomes electrified. God acts as a centrum only on the centrum of things, that is, on the inner or spiritual, and the outward manifestations follow ex post. It is not less significant that the bite of the fiery serpents was healed by gazing upon the brazen serpent. "And the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way, and spake against God and against Moses. And the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people ; and much people of Israel died. Therefore the people came to Moses and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the Lord and against thee : pray unto the Lord that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people. And the Lord said unto Moses, make thee a fiery serpent and set it upon a pole ; and it shall come to pass that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live." (Numbers xxi. 4-9.)

The visions and prophecies of Balaam, son of Beor, to whom Balak sent Messengers, that he might curse Israel, are also of a remarkable character. (Numbers xxii. 23, 24) : "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord, my God, to do less or more." So spake Balaam to Balak, who tried to bribe him to do evil.

In Numbers xxiv. 4, 15, 16, 17, 19, we have an account of the visions of the heathen seer, in which was announced the advent of Christ : "And the spirit of the Lord came upon him and he took up his parable and said : And the man whose eyes are open hath said : He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the visions of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open, I shall see him, but not now ; I shall behold him, but not nigh ; there shall come a Star out of Jacob and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion." The history of Balaam proves that the power to perform wonders was not possessed by holy seers alone. Balak, king of the Moabites, being afraid of the Israelites, desired to form a league with the Midianites. But since neither the Moabites nor the Midianites felt like engaging in hostilities with the Israelites, they resorted to magic, and since they had no magician among themselves, they sent for Balaam, who was celebrated for his powers of charming and divining. The messengers came to Balaam with costly presents in their hands (for he took money for his services as soothsayer), and demanded that he should curse this strange people. Balaam invited them to tarry over night; in the morning he arose and made known to the messengers that God neither permitted him to curse the Israelites, nor allowed him to accompany them to their country, for "that people was favored of God." Balak thinking he had not offered enough, sent more costly presents by the hands of his nobles, in order to induce Balaam to visit him and curse Israel. Balaam, a mixture of faith and fickleness, of truth and avarice, of true prophecy and magic, said to the servants of Balak: "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do less or more." And yet, after he had spoken with the Lord during the night, he arose in the morning, saddled his ass, and prepared to go with the Moabite princes, and afterward told the enemies of Israel how they could lead them into idolatry.

Here follows the history of Balaam's perfect somnambulism. Being a visionary, he was divided within himself, because he tried to serve God and Mammon. His conscience upbraided him. "And God's anger was kindled against him because he went: and the angel of the Lord stood in his way for an adversary against him." Now he changed his inward perception from the angel and transferred it to the ass, which now also beheld the angel standing in the way, and therefore began a rational conversation with its rider. The ass, with characteristic obduracy, preferred the fields to the uneven paths in the vineyards, and when force was employed to turn her in the way, she thrust herself against the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall, for which he smote her with his staff; and since there was no path to turn aside either to the right or to the left, the ass fell down under Balaam, and he smote her again. Finally the ass spoke to Balaam and pointed out to him his unreasonable conduct, and when he came unto himself he again saw the angel instead of the ass; but his conscience smote him; he confessed his sin and promised to go back again. But the angel permitted him to proceed upon condition that he should speak only what the Lord had commanded him to say, which condition he fulfilled in spite of every temptation that Balak could offer; and he went not at other times to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness." Instead of cursing the Israelites he blessed them, and afterward actually prophesied concerning the Star of Jacob. (Numbers xxiv.)

This spurious prophet had no truly divine inspirations, but he prophesied in the same manner as do our mesmeric clairvoyants. For, first, he always went into retirement, when he was about to prophesy, to avoid outward disturbance, which no true prophet ever did. Second, His inward perceptions were opened by closing his outward senses. "So sayeth the hearer of the word, whose eyes will be opened when he bows down."

It is evident that the angel with the drawn sword was a vision, and the fact that the ass speaking did not appear strange to him, proves clearly that he could not have been awake. According to the Arabic, Balaam was called "the man with the closed eye," and this induces Tholuck to compare his condition to a state of magnetic ecstasy. Third, Balaam was so incapable of distinguishing between the real object and the apparent subject, that the ass, gifted with speech, made no impression upon him, so that, after he had regained his senses, he saw the angel standing before him and bowed himself before him. Fourth, Balaam made use of certain external means to throw himself into an ecstatic state, which true prophets never did. He was led from place to place in order to obtain visions, differing in their nature, so as to make them conform with the pleasure of Balak. He even employed magic, for it is written: "And when Balaam saw that it pleased the Lord to bless Israel, he went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness." Fifth, finally, Balaam's ecstasies were unstable and uncertain, and his figures and expressions were symbolical, for we read, for example: "He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion." This false prophet then returned to his dwelling, but appears again later in the camp of the Midianites, where he finally perished by the sword at the hands of those whom Moses sent out to fight.

In the days of the judges and kings, dreams and prophetic visions signified the same thing. In 1 Samuel xxviii. 6, we read: "In olden times in Israel, when men inquired of the Lord, they said: Come let us go to the seer, for they were called seers who are now called prophets."

In Numbers xxvii. 18-21, when Moses asked the Lord to give him a worthy follower, it is written: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Take Joshua, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him, etc., and thou shalt put some of thine honor upon him, etc. And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord," etc. I have already quoted passages from the Bible to show that dreams and prophetic visions were regarded as the same thing; and indeed, so important were dreams, that a dreamer was placed in the same category with a prophet. "And when Saul saw the host of the Philistines, he was afraid, and his heart greatly trembled. And when Saul inquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets." (1 Samuel xxviii. 6.) We read in Deuteronomy xiii. 1-4: "If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or wonder, and the sign or wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying Let us go, after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them: Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." From this we learn that persons who were not prophets, and who were not of a pure heart, also had prophetic visions.

It would be tedious as well as superfluous to recite all the visions of the prophets. In the meantime we will not pass over the most remarkable in silence. In 1 Samuel xvi., we find the history of Saul, who, after the spirit of God had departed from him, became gloomy and ill, and whose condition could only be ameliorated by the sweet sounds of music. "But the spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him. And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee. Let our lord now command thy servants, which are before thee, to seek out a man, who is a cunning player on the harp: and it shall come to pass when the evil spirit of God is upon thee, that he shall play with his hand, and thou shalt be well: and Saul sent to Jesse, saying, Let David, I pray thee, stand before me, etc. And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took a harp, and played with his hand: so Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him." When Saul saw the Philistine host his heart failed him, and he inquired of the Lord, but the Lord answered him not, "neither by dreams, nor by Urim nor by prophets. If there arise among you prophets, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth a sign, etc. Saul was a seeker after signs and wonders, for he at one time inquired of Samuel about his missing asses; at another time he inquired of the witch of Endor, and at another time he depended upon deceptive dreams. The witch said to Saul: "Wherefore dost thou ask of me, seeing that the Lord is departed from thee, and thy kingdom is gone out of thy hand."

In the books of Samuel, who was a clairvoyant in his youth, we find many prophetic visions recorded. The most remarkable of these visions were those of Samuel and David. Even Saul attempted to prophesy until the spirit of the Lord departed from him. The history of the aged king David, who could no more obtain warmth of body, even though he was covered with clothing, we have already related. A young virgin was procured, who slept in the king's arms and cherished him, and so he obtained heat. (1 Kings i. 1.)

Among all the prophets of the old dispensation there was none more exalted than Elias, whose very name was a synonyme for a higher grade of being. We find in him an example of great significance in magnetic transactions. He imparted the most important doctrines of life, and he gave life to such as had apparently died, a history of which is here inserted verbatim: "And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick, and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him. And she said unto Elias, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son? And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed. And he cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord, my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son? And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elias; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived. And Elias took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him to his mother." (1 Kings xvii. 17-24.)

"And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father, to the reapers. And he said unto his father, My head, my head! And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother. And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died. And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door and went out. And she called unto her husband and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again. And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither new moon, nor Sabbath. And she said It shall be well. Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee. So she went, and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder that Shunammite: Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well. And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught him by the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her: and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me. Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me? Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take thy staff in thy hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff upon the face of the child. And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her. And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice nor hearing. Wherefore, he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked. And when Elisha had come into the house; behold the child was dead, and laid upon his bed. He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes. And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, take up thy son."

What may we learn from this? First, that one must be a man of God as Elisha was. Second, Elisha must have been well acquainted with the transferring of this power by means of a conductor, or he would not have sent his servant before him with the staff, by simply laying the same upon the face of the dead child, and thereby restore him to life. Third, the command that he gave unto his servant, to salute no one by the way, has a deep significance. He was to give his undivided attention to the business of raising the dead unto life, and not to be led away by any other consideration or occasion whatever. A proof that is highly necessary and important that a magnetic physician should be free from all diversions in order to concentrate all his energies upon the one object,—the patient.

Fourth, the very management in this case, is incomparable. Fifth, it is a proof that perseverance and continuance is a chief requisite in a magnetic operation: you cannot fell a tree with one stroke, so Elisha, after the first effort, arose and walked to and fro in the house, and only upon the second effort did the dead lad begin to breathe. By the conduct of Elisha (and Saul), we may learn, that the inner sense may also be developed by music, as for instance, when Elisha was called upon to prophesy to the kings of Israel and Judah, against the Moabites, he said: "But now, bring me a minstrel." And as the minstrel played the hand of the Lord came upon him, and he prophesied. (2 Kings iii. 15.) That they knew the method of healing by laying on of hands, and that they practiced it, is proven in the passage (2 Kings v. 11.) Naaman, the Syrian captain, expected Elisha to move his hand over the leprous part, and thus put away his leprosy.

We often read that the remains of saints worked marvelous wonders and healed the sick long after their decease. This was the case with Elisha, for we read (2 Kings xiii. 20): "And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year. And it came to pass as they were burying a man, that behold they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man was let down, and touched the bones of Elisha, he revived and stood upon his feet." If it might probably appear, that in the earliest ages men were chiefly given to prophecy and inner perceptions, in our day and among us the female more frequently possesses these gifts: still, there are numerous instances of prophetic women recorded in the Bible also, as, for example, the woman of Endor, who possessed the spirit of divination and to whom Saul went to inquire of. Huldah, the Prophetess, (2 Kings xxii. 14), and Deborah, the wife of Lapidoth, etc.

Let us once more take a retrospective glance upon the people of Israel, according to the history of the Old Testament, and upon the ancient days of the Orientals, and compare the magic among them to that of later years and we shall find many and essential differences. In the first place, I have remarked before, how that the people of Israel stood single and alone before all the heathen nations, and how the magic among them assumed an essential and diversified form. For although the Jews remained so long in Egypt, they brought very little Egyptian magic with them on their return; that is, of the genuine theurgical magic art, which is the result of natural powers and of human inventions. These magical ecstasies and wonder workings were more of the nature of divine inspiration, while the black art, practiced by natural means, which was to produce supernatural effects, was met with severe punishment as an unholy work of sorcery and witchcraft. We find quite the contrary in heathendom, since here the true knowledge of the divine was either lacking altogether, or it was adulterated by traditions and darkened by mysteries. As for instance, in Egypt Athor, according to the Theogony of Hesiod, the darkness of night was worshipped as the great unknown, through profound silence; but to the Israelites the light appeared in the unity of God, whom they worshipped with loud hymns. In the entire old world of Heathendom the power of the principle of nature governed, and brought down the spiritual vibration to the level of the terrestrial or earthly. The true magic of the divine was hid from that erring people, being covered with a veil through which but few glimpses of light penetrated. The light shown in the darkness, but the darkness comprehended it not. Hamberger says: "Heathendom was capable only to take up single rays, as it were, in an oblique direction, but the elect of God, as the posterity of Shem, in whom mankind was to be exhibited as such, and to whom all the rest of mankind, as the mere common people (Gojim) were retained, they could rejoice not only in a circuitous, but in a central influence on the part of the Lord. "Thou art a holy people unto the Lord, says God. (Deut. vii. 6.) The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people to Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth."

Israel was appointed thereto, not so much to conceive and grasp the outward glory of God, the ideal world, but much more His inner being, to be led deeper and deeper into the sanctuary of divine personality. This, however, cannot be done at once; and if Israel is not the only pardoned and favored, but if through him all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, this could only be accomplished gradually, and by degrees. Madam Schlegel says: "A longing or love is the root and beginning of every higher and divine knowledge. Perseverance in searching, in faith, and in the contest of life, only prefigure the middle of the way; the termination must always remain something that is hoped for. The necessary epoch for preparation to this gradual process may not be overturned nor set aside by the noblest strivings of man. The character and the history itself of the Hebrew nations are greatly misunderstood, for the very reason, that these things are not duly observed. The whole existence of this people was built only upon hope, and the highest centre of their inner life was placed at a great distance in the future. Upon this also rests the chief difference in the method of the holy deliverance of the Hebrews, as is exhibited by other old Asiatic nations. In the old records of these nations their glance in the proper historic parts is directed more toward the glorious past, with a regretful feeling in consequence of that which man has since lost. Out of all the fulness of these touching, holy remembrances, and out of the oldest joint proverbs, Moses, in his most direct and fixed revelations for the Hebrew children according to the wisest law of economy, brought out but very little, and only what seemed the most indispensable and necessary for his people and the object of God with the same. And as all the writings of the first lawgiver, who for this sole object led and brought out his favorite people from Egyptian servitude in a spiritual sense and according to the whole mode of thought, until up to the time of the prophet king and singer of psalms to the last voice of warning and promise that died away in the wilderness—the outward contents and the inward understanding are, according to prophetic writings: so may the people themselves be called a prophetic people in the highest sense of the word, and is such really, taken historically, in the whole course of the world and in their wonderful destinies they were and are such.

Molitor says further:—"The leading of the Israelites furnishes the most apparent proof of the divine nature of religion. Among all nations

there are oracles, and in all important affairs and transactions inquiry is made of them, and nothing is undertaken in life unless the favorable judgment of the gods is first obtained. Meantime these oracles do not appear to be positive leaders of the people. They simply reply to inquiries made. Not in a single heathen religion, therefore, do we observe a really positive, sensitive and divine guidance. But man stands here, solely in his own power. The case is entirely different with the people of Israel, who are nothing, and have nothing of themselves, but whose whole existence and guidance is singly the work of Divinity. Where is there a nation to be found that had such an ethical guidance? Where do you find a people who have made humility and obedience and a childlike surrender to God, their first and chief duty, and accepted chastisement as a token of love, and were brought to their destination through adversity and humiliation? True, there are guidances and trials also in Heathendom, but they are trials only in the vigorous subduing of evil, and the courageous bearing of great burdens. Nowhere, therefore, do we find merit or praise for baseness or lowness. When, for instance, it was said of Moses: "He was an humble man," it was a compliment which was never bestowed upon a heathen hero." (Kabbalah, Part III., page 116.)

The Hebrew prophets and the heathen seers present an essential difference. Even if the ground-work of natural magical visions appear here as elsewhere; if imagination and sympathy—if the outer influences of nature often produced like affects, and if the Israelites had learned and brought with them many and various Egyptian secrets, as for instance, Samuel's School of Prophets in the Old Testament gives ample proof, as also the holy inspired dance, the prophetic signing, etc., has in it something contagious, insomuch that prophetic students were seized and overcome, as was also Saul, who fell in with them and prophesied, so that the proverb, "How came Saul among the Prophets?" still shows something very curious and surprising; yet, in view of the motive and effect, great differences are found, so that they well deserve to be held to view in this place. They are as follows:

1. The Magician, the Indian Brahmin, the mystical Priest, etc., brings himself into an ecstatic condition, and into supposed union with God, by self-elected methods; Moses and the true prophets of Israel receive an unexpected call to serve Him.

2. The Magician elevates himself by his own innate strength to a higher state and condition than the world by whom he is surrounded; he isolates himself intentionally and his isolation becomes imperative, and through it follow the various castes and grades in life, as, for example, the Indian and Egyptian castes, which produces a special influence upon the diversified conditions of earthly life and intellect; Moses and the prophets are more casual, and in the passive dread of deep solitude, they suddenly hear the call and follow in humility, with veiled countenances. The liberation of his people is not effected by a strong will, and he claims no preference; he does not separate the different castes, but he separates the organic unity of the people from heathen blindness, which he dedicates to God; he is himself the expounder of the faith of God's overruling providence; of the hope in future punishment; of the love of God, and of order and justice among men.

3. Contempt of the world and pride in his own worthiness and knowledge characterize the magical seer. A wise use of life, obedience in serving God and a constant recollection of his sinful weakness, incites the prophet to implore divine help, to pray for a knowledge of the truth, to fulfil not his own, but a higher will. To the Brahmin, for example, the earth is a hell, a place of torment; to the prophet it is a school, through which, in the performance of duty, the peace of true happiness may be found.

4. The magician is a lawgiver, the prophets are obedient disciples, who preach and explain the revelations of God.

5. There we have the means of falling into a state of ecstasy, self-denial and unnatural mortification of the body. Here the world is adapted to the most judicious enjoyment of life. The prophet does not require extraordinary means to fall into a state of ecstasy; he utters the immediate word of God without preparation and without mortifying the body, presents it, and lives among his kind.

6. The index of prophecy itself, in the highest ecstasies of the magicians, is a kind of light lustre; when they are steeped therein, the world with its signatures, and perhaps too, the inner condition of the spirit may become plainly visible, like unto the clairvoyants of our day; but their lips are sealed in this ecstatic state of happiness and in the dazzling lustre of a pathological self-illumination. Therefore, the numerous antagonistic figures of truth and deception, of sensational emotions and phantasmagoria in broken and jarring forms, of convulsions and contortions of the body and the soul, which we find among our mesmeric subjects. Their visions are, like those of certain somnambulists, not reliable, and cannot, in their proper surroundings, be understood without a previous explanation. With the prophets, the visions according to form, are the illumination of a mildly divine light, reflected from the mirror of a pure mind, which retains a perfect personality, and causes a feeling of dependence on God and the outer world. The index of their visions relates to the general concerns of life in respect to religion and citizenship; the prophet speaks and his words are true doctrines, uttered clearly for the benefit of all men and ages, and comprehended by all. He seeks happiness yet finds it not in penance, but in his calling, in spreading abroad the word of God, not in secret contemplations, but by imparting it to his fellow-beings through active coöperation. The true prophet, therefore, is not lost in inward contemplations, neither does he forget himself in the world, but he continues in living relation with God and his neighbor, in word and in deed. Finally,

7. Since the motives and proceedings differ essentially among inspired races, so their aims and results also differ. The Indian magician mourns on account of the gradual lowering of the spiritual from its original lustre, following the rapidly succeeding eras of the world into perishing nature and into the kingdom of death, and deprecates the misery connected therewith, namely, discontent, the confusion and laceration of the spirit, all of which we may find among the different heathen nations. On the other hand, how greatly has universal brotherhood and companionship increased, step by step, through the agency of the true prophet, and how has the spiritual been glorified! The spirit that waved over the Jewish religion in the west spread its peaceful influences farther and wider, and while in the former instance everything is lost in weakness and darkness, in the latter mountains are removed by active faith, and trees are planted by mutual help and counsel, whose fruit will only ripen for enjoyment in another world, toward which we should turn our faces and our exertions.

The aim of the magician's life is to secure a pleasurable inward contemplation; the true prophet lives by faith and not by sight.

Historians and philosophers of modern times have declared that the ecstatic visions of the prophets of Israel and those of the apostles were identical with magnetic appearances. In order to form a clearer judgment of the circumstances given above, we will add the following:

True prophets receive an extraordinary call from God, and are urged by the Holy Spirit to proclaim the will and counsel of God. They are called seers, men of God, servants and messengers of the Lord, angels and watchmen. The marks of the true prophets of the Old Testament were: 1st. That their prophecies agreed with the doctrines of Moses and the patriarchs (Deuteronomy xiii. 1). 2d. Their prophecies were fulfilled (Deuteronomy xviii. 21; Jeremiah xxviii. 9). 3d. That they performed miracles, but only when a special covenant was made, or when a special reformation was to be undertaken. 4th. That they agreed with other prophets (Isaiah viii. 2; Jeremiah xxvi. 18). 5th. That they led a blameless life (Jeremiah xxvii. 4; Micah ii. 11). That they exhibited a holy zeal in the work of God (Jeremiah xxvi. 13); and 6th, That they possessed great elocutionary powers (Jeremiah xxiii. 28, 29). Their office consisted in this, 1st, That they instructed the people, when the priests, whose duty it was, became indifferent. 2d. That they restored the slack and decayed worship of God (2 Kings xvii. 18; Ezekiel iii. 17). 3d. That they foretold future events, and to this end asked counsel of God (1 Kings xiv. 2, 3; Ezekiel xxii. 5-8). 4th. That they prayed for the people and in this manner averted impending judgments (Genesis xx. 7; 2 Kings xix. 2); and 5th, That they composed the will of God (1 Chronicles xxix. 9).

The same may be said of the apostles and the preachers of the living word. They were called ministers because Christ had himself chosen them and sent them to the ends of the earth to proclaim the atonement and gather His elect. They did not force themselves in to his service, but Christ called them in a direct manner, and taught them personally to proclaim the advent of the Messiah, and with these credentials, to perform wonders through the divine word. This new doctrine originated expressly from the prophets of the old covenant: repent and believe in the gospel of the atonement, and prove thereby that ye love God above all things and your neighbor as yourselves. Their lives proved that they were true followers in the footsteps of their Lord and Master, in word and deed, in works and in suffering.

If we select these characters by which to form our judgment, it will not be difficult to distinguish between magnetic sight and prophetic inspiration, not to regard the former too highly, and not to underrate the latter. For if their superficial appearance at first sight seems the same, their dis-ference will soon become apparent when we examine them in a threefold point of view, namely, of cause, content or form and intention.

According to the cause, the palpable difference consists in this, that magical and magnetic second-sight is mainly the work of man, which grows out of a diseased physical soil, no matter whether it is developed by the arts of the physician or whether it is unfolded by chance. An abnormal condition of health always precedes it, and the somnolent state of the outward senses is the first condition of it. If in one person this mesmeric disposition is greater than in another, then the physiological foundation is in his own body, and if occasional circumstances promote second-sight in others, then such causes belong to the kingdom of nature, which binds the clairvoyant in strong bonds and which remains his determinate state even should he reach the highest degree.

Prophetic inspiration is not a procreation of nature or of man but it is an emanation of the Holy Spirit and a divine decree. The divine call comes unexpectedly, and the physical condition has no connection with it whatever. The physical powers can never become the determinate powers, but they remain dependent upon the spirit, which makes it a means to spiritual aims. A mesmeric life with changed functions of the senses and a physical crisis does not take place here.

Secondly, according to form, magnetic second-sight depends directly upon the health and on the life of the seer, or rather, it predominates in the relative modes of earthly life. The clairvoyant directs his attention at will to self-selected objects, at least in a majority of instances, or he interprets his own visions, conducts his own affairs or those immediately surrounding him, or he suffers himself to be outwardly determined without active and persistent independence, and without activity for the common good. Purely human nature, affectation and inclination are never wanting in the magic circle of the seer, and the operation of his will and his faith produces no supernatural or permanent effect, either upon himself or upon others.

The true prophet, according to form, has no diversity of visions, but an unchanging index of scriptural work—the annunciation of Him, who is the Beginning and the End, and by whom all things were created. A prophet is not only a seer, but he is the organ of the divine will. Instruction in the true knowledge of God, and spreading abroad his kingdom, which is truth and love, is his only and constant occupation, therefore he fights against error and wickedness, in order to overcome the world. That which is worldly or changeable—bigotry or sensuality, health, riches and honor in the world, and dominion over his fellow-men, is not his affair. He does not preach a present, but a future state of happiness, genuine peace in God, and the hope of eternal life in His presence, not from personal impulse or selfishness, or from human considerations, but as a willing instrument of perpetual enlightenment, inspired by God himself—a worthy example in work and walk; as an obedient servant and a mediator between God and man, between time and eternity, between heaven and earth. Through prayer, and in word and deed, the prophet continues in a living relation with God and his fellow-beings.

True prophets do not isolate themselves, neither do they sink into the absorbing depths of their own visions, feelings and relations. Their prophecies do not refer to personalities, but to the fate of nations and the world, therefore, are they able in their works to exhibit supernatural powers, strengthened by the omnipotent power of their faith and will, and this power they exercise over their own bodies as well as over the bodies of others and over all nature in its wide and temporal boundaries. The sudden conversions and changes of opinion, the instantaneous healing of severe and lingering diseases, the warnings against threatening dangers, and help for the needy from a distance, giving consolation and strength in trouble and suffering, etc., are proofs of their divine powers.

As we have already stated, the aim of the true prophets was, the revelation of the divine word to man; the spread of the kingdom of God on earth; the ennobling and well-being of the human race. Impelled by the spirit of God, upon whose assistance they relied, their efforts were directed to nothing less than to spread the light of truth and to infuse courage into their fellow-beings, to fight against evil; to awaken mutual attention and assistance, and to extend peace and happiness among men. Self-aggrandizement and the personal advantage of these organs of the Deity were not thought of. The foundation of all their works was faith in the power of God, and they fulfilled the whole sum of the commandments through love, the noblest of all virtues, "but the fruit of the spirit is love" (Galatians v. 22); "And God gives wisdom to them that love Him," (Ecclesiasticus i. 10); "And His banner over me was love." (Song of Solomon ii. 4.)

To these obvious variations the children of Israel bear special witness. 1st. That the causes of inward visions were actually objective, and that there is something outside of human intelligence that governs and controls the world of man, and that too, independently of the inner centrum of the mind, while the peripheral sense of day and nature are either inactive, or while they are in a very subordinate condition. 2d. That there is a still more exalted spiritual region which takes a positive hold upon the reason and offers revelations which are not of a natural order, and which cannot exist in these lower regions, and which are not merely phantasies, illusions or hallucinations of an abnormal condition of the brain. "The hand of the Lord was upon them." 3d. The ignoring, or rather, the denial of sophistical rationalism, especially by the Israelites, is also represented superficially, just as the pantheistical philosophy of nature is, which distils everything into a common mass, and which represents the prophets and the saints only as somnambulist sects, upon a somewhat higher plane than is ascribed to them in the partial Tellurian dark ages. 4th. Notwithstanding that this class of visions has an outward resemblance to the magical and magnetic, as well according to the anthropological expression as to the symbolical representations, as we have already seen, and it should remind us of magnetic relations. Inasmuch as prophetic revelation agrees with the purest forms of second-sight, and whereas dream-visions and fortune-telling originate from circumstances and conditions, so we may find many preparations and arrangements in the old covenant, the same as we have learned to know them among the rest of the magicians of the Orient. We often find among the prophets also, that they secluded themselves in solitary places, and that they fasted and gave themselves up to quiet contemplations.

They, like the clairvoyants, speak of an inward higher light, of a light that enlightens them, and they admit this higher illumination to be the spirit of the Eternal, whose hand came upon them and transfigured them, and they walked, as the Psalmist says, in the light of His countenance, "For in Thy light, we shall see light; the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness. Thou art the living fountain and in thy light we see the light." (36, 10, 18, 29.)

The prophets describe the divine higher light as an instantaneous view, presented very frequently in the most familiar symbols, of which the vision of Daniel, by the side of the great river Hiddekel, is one of the most remarkable, and which will serve as an illustration (Daniel x. 2-21): "In those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz: His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: Yet I heard the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground. And behold, a hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands. And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words. And when he had spoken such words unto me, I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb. And behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength, for how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me. Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me, and said, O man greatly beloved, Fear not; peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me. Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I came unto thee? but I will show thee that which is noted in the scripture of truth, etc." The following passage from Passavant will serve as an illustration of this vision:

"Such a condition, and so penetrating an illumination of the spirit can find its agreement only in the original relation of the creature to the Creator. The created spirit does not generally exist for itself, nor by itself, but only in reference to absolute being. The more perfect the creature, the more inward and free is the communion between the creature and the Creator—the more is man a free agent and a co-worker with God. That which holds good in human nature and in all spiritual power in perception and accomplishment, holds good also especially in the region, in which the human spirit, free from earthly nature and of the bonds of time and place, is more active. As we have, therefore, assumed, that the highest magical operation is, where the human spirit becomes the divine organ, so we are justified in assuming, that the highest magical knowledge must be a divinely illuminated power of second-sight, a spiritual beholding, which is moved and led by the divine spirit. So far now, as we must regard the most inward communion of the creature with the Creator as the final destiny of created spirits, so may we regard the holy power of prophecy as an anticipation of a higher and more perfect condition, in which man knows as he is known (1 Corinthians xiii. 9), where his spiritual freedom shall have attained a knowledge in which he can no longer be circumscribed by earthly laws. But since man must elevate himself to that which is good as well as receive good, so this law of the free and created spirit will repeat itself, because man can raise himself, in different degrees to a higher order in this world, and become enlightened in the same degree. If taken in this connection, the power of the divine seer is not to be regarded separately from other spiritual powers by which he can overcome anything foreign to his nature, but rather as a fixed form, a normal and regenerated soul-power. The spirit of man, the image of God, may become the mirror in which the divine type is reflected just in proportion to the purity of this image." (Passavant's Magnetic Life. Second edition, p. 167.)

Further it will only be necessary to remark, in a general way, that God has made use only of the nobleness of the spirit of Israel for the education and redemption of the human family, and that this people, which had become attached to heathen idolatry, and were disobedient and refractory, could only be brought slowly to their true destiny in the severe school of adversity and by heavy chastisements. The way from Ur in Chaldea to Canaan, which was taken by the patriarch Abraham, how far it stretched through its lengths and breadths across to Egypt, and from thence through the wilderness to the promised land of which they were to take possession! Yea, the children of Israel were compelled to wander hither and thither in the wilderness during a period of forty years on account of their vacillation between the service of God and heathen idolatry; were sent in captivity to Babylon; the holy city had to be destroyed, and finally, they were compelled to endure the very fullness of woe and persecution, and all because of their vacillating between the service of the true God and of heathen idolatry. If Israel then is, as it is represented, the favored people of God, then it can be nothing less than the pearl of perfection, and consequently the mirror of perverseness, which always strives after outward forms and ceremonies, and seeks happiness in nature and the dissipations of the present, a happiness which cannot be found on earth. The divine word of revelation alone can disclose the happiness of the peace and blessedness of Paradise, and in order to become partakers thereof, the spirit of man must become inured to two great qualifications, namely, natural obedience to the law and a more than natural hope of reaching his final destiny beyond the life of earth. In order to teach the children of Israel humble obedience to the laws, they were exposed to the severest trials and subjected to the meanest slavery.

To this people and to no other, the commandments were communicated in thunder tones by divinely appointed leaders, in order that it might heed with the inner depths of the mind and not merely superficially with the outward senses. Sacrifices and feasts were not to serve as temporal occasions of rejoicing, but they were to serve as a typical covering through which might be seen the true light of the coming Messiah, as the flower-bud turns toward the approaching light of the sun. The Mercy-seat, the Cherubim, the Holy of Holies, the Pillar of Fire, and Solomon's Temple, are all symbolical manifestations originating in magical visions and point to the coming of Christ. That the entire Mosaic regulation was symbolical and hieroglyphical is admitted by every expert, and the following words express this fact clearly: "and look that thou make them after their pattern, which was showed thee in the mount." Moses, the man of God, therefore, constitutes in the history of the children of Israel the second period of the beginning of religious development. The forms and ceremonies of the law were only now strictly enforced in order to impress men with the importance of the revealed word. But how long a period intervened between the wanderings and sufferings of the Israelites, the wonders by which they were surrounded, the death of the firstborn in Egypt, the lightnings which flashed from the heights of Mount Sinai, and the time of King David, with whom commenced the third period. "He was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to," (1 Samuel xvi. 12,) and he, the shepherd of his father's sheep was chosen by the Lord to be king over His people. His obedience toward God, and his unwavering faith not only caused it to be said of him, "that he was a man after God's own heart," but as the root of Judah, born in Bethlehem, he also became the type of Christ. He was both king and prophet, and had to bear many troubles and trials. As a servant of God he sought to lead the children of Israel to God at Jerusalem, the mountain of peace, where finally, the mild, illuminating light of the divine Prince of Peace appeared to the world out of the dark, transitory night, on the cross.

"Now I say, that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from the servant, though he be Lord of all; but is under tutors and governors until the time appointed by the father. Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the World." (Gal. iv. 1-3.)

"But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." (Galatians iv. 4, 5.)

The coming of Christ on earth was not an accidental occurrence as other natural events were. His coming was a revelation ordained by God from the foundation of the world. I have already shown in my anthropological views, that Christ, if he actually was the Son of God, would necessarily have to appear at a fixed time and place, and that his appearance would constitute the beginning of the second period of human power, and that this event would take place on the western coast of Asia.

THE NEW COVENANT.

Having brought forward many of the most extraordinary events of the old covenant which have reference to magic and magnetism, it seems important in more than one sense, also to speak of the new covenant, in order to extract from it that which concerns us so directly, because in the new covenant the magical healing of diseases was effected in so many instances without visible means, as well by Christ himself as by the apostles, from which it would appear that all these miracles and healings were the result of nothing else than magic or magnetism. There are a few extremes here which have been maintained by both the advocates and opponents of these miracles, which we will notice more particularly in this place. In concluding this section we will glance at the existence and signification of Christianity in a general sense, as well as the relation which it bears to magic.

The men of God under the old covenant, who performed such great wonders, and accomplished such wonderful works, were always rather more on the side of humanity than that of the divine, that is, they always evinced only single powers and perfections. The universal expression of full perfection became an absolute reality only through Christ. He it was who first unbarred the new door—severed the chains of slavery, and pointed out the true image of perfection and wisdom in all their fulness to man. Christ again restored to humanity the assurance of immortality. He elevated the spiritual being to a temple of holy fire, and made it a living altar and incense to an eternal peace.

“Since the first man Adam” we read in the Magikon, “is the first fountain of evil, so none of his posterity could be the Saviour, because weakness could not rule over strength; to be a Saviour it required a being that was more than man. Since God alone is superior to man, this agent, or Saviour, could be nothing less than the essential idea of divine powers. In order to awaken a consciousness in the soul of man of what God really was, he had to bear the Divine character in himself. Even the various judgments of men regarding Christ, show conclusively that all power, all gifts and perfections were united in him.”

There are beings for whom the Redeemer has already come, others for whom he comes now, and still others for whom he is yet to come. Since his advent all things have become simplified, and he will simplify himself more and more until everything earthly will vanish. A great sabbath of universal love and peace, as it was in the creation, will signalize the end. He entered the Holy of Holies as the true High Priest, and restored to the elect, through his spirit, not only the lost words of the old book, but gave them a new one, richer in content for the healing of all evil, and for making them invulnerable. In addition he gave to them the holy incense of prayer, and showed them, that without it they would be unable, except through Him alone, to obtain every principle of life. He performed on earth what is found above. He was constantly active, as the highest embodiment of wisdom, in spiritual and temporal acts of charity, and united both in one. But this could only be when He himself was joined in this unity on earth in which he was joined from all eternity. In the end he crowned his work by conferring a spirit which created a knowledge and vitality that were never experienced before. He chose an object of sense as a channel through which to communicate the highest powers of life. Even man may transfer his weak powers on any object: how much more must the mysteries (baptism by water, the communion through bread and wine), instituted by Himself, have possessed a power which man could never possess. The action of the Holy Communion is at the same time corporeal, spiritual and divine, and all things therein contained must become spirit and life, because He himself, who instituted it, was the spirit and the life.

Each true Christian is a living expression of this doctrine and an image of its author. He possesses fervor enough to absorb everything that is diseased and dissolute, and his life is a daily offering in humility and holy fear before God, for the mysteries of God are only revealed to those who fear Him. The true Christian relies upon the commandments of the author of his name. Only such a man can enter into the counsel of peace. If the highest human wisdom continues to be a tottering and perishable structure, a single ray of the sun of the world will make him purer and wiser than all the wise of this earth. Since there are mysteries in every religion, so there are certain things of indescribable power and of the highest weight in Christianity which cannot be explained. So long as these were known only to the true possessors as a sanctuary, Christianity was at rest. But after the great of earth began to set their feet within this sanctuary and desired to see with unprepared eyes; so soon as it was converted into a political machine, divisions and uncertainties ensued. Upon this came the High Priests who separated themselves farther and farther from original purity, and in this way a misshapen mixture of a true monstrosity resulted. Sophists, who flourished like weeds, multiplied these evils by their subtleties, separating that which was united, and covering with darkness and death what was formerly light and life. If even a few traces of purity, zeal and power could be seen here and there, they could accomplish nothing, because the horrors of desolation had already become too general and were preferred by too many. These corruptions were the cause, in later times, that the structure of Christianity was sapped in its very foundations. Only one step from Deism to utter ruin. Out of Deism grew a still worse brood of materialists, who declared that all connection of humanity with higher powers to be idle imagination, and who did not even believe in their own existence. It was very seldom that the generations of the earliest times sinned through great enterprises; those of later periods, on the contrary, sinned through nullity. But there is a truth whose sanctity cannot be shaken, and which will remain firm as long as the world exists.

But if man, through his reconciliation and return to God, and through a true Christian life, receives the powers which the Saviour promised to his followers, namely, "To expel serpents, to heal the sick, and to cast out devils," and this to the same extent that he did himself, (John xiv. 12), and if such a Christian man can in deed and in truth perform greater wonders than one who lives in a state of sin (and we find this to be the case not only with the apostles, but with all godly men of every age), then we must accord to man what is human. I have already spoken of the Christian method of healing, and inasmuch as I refer back to it in this place, the fact will not admit of a doubt, that the healing of Christ as well as by the apostles really had reference to magic and magnetism. They never obtained the means to heal diseases from the apothecary, neither did they possess any secret remedies or magical essences; they possessed an inherent power to heal diseases, and by words they cast out devils, restored the dead to life, healed, through prayer and the laying on of hands, the lame and paralytic, and caused the blind to see and the dumb to speak. To prove this, not however to represent them solely as magnetic cures, but to examine them as humanly divine wonders, I will mention a few cures performed by Christ and his apostles as they stand recorded by the Evangelists and the Acts of the Apostles:—

"When he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him. And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed." (Matt. viii. 1-3.)

"And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him to heal his servant. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only and my servant shall be healed. When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed: Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour." (Matt. viii. 5-13.)

"And when Jesus had come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose and ministered unto him." (Matt. viii. 14, 15.)

"When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick." (Matt. viii. 16; Mark i. 32.)

"And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." (Matt. ix. 2; Mark ii. 3.)

"And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment: For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith has made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour." (Matt. ix. 20-22.)

"And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, he said unto them, Give place; for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn. But when the people were put forth he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose."

"And when Jesus departed from thence, two blind men followed him, etc. And when he was come into the house, the blind men came unto him: And Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened." (Matt. ix. 27-30.)

The man with the withered hand he healed through the words: "Stretch forth thine hand: and it was restored whole like the other." (Matt. xii. 10-13.)

"And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased; and besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole." (Matt. xiv. 35, 36.)

The daughter of the woman of Canaan, who was grievously vexed with a devil was restored through the faith of the woman. (Matt. xv. 22-28.)

"And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them." (Matt. xv. 30; Luke vii. 22.)

The lunatic who oftentimes fell into the fire and into the water could not be healed by the disciples. But when Jesus rebuked the devil he departed out of him and the child was cured from that very hour. Jesus said unto his disciples: "Because of your unbelief, ye could not cure him. For verily I say unto you, if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by fasting and prayer." (Matt. xvii. 14-21.)

Two blind men on the road to Jericho cried unto the Son of David for help: "Then touched he their eyes, saying: according to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened." (Matt. ix. 27-36.)

He healed the lame and the blind in the temple at Jerusalem, who came to him to be healed. (Matt. xxi. 14.)

He healed the man in the synagogue who had a spirit of an unclean devil, whom he rebuked, saying, "Hold thy peace, and come out of him." (Luke iv. 33.)

"Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them and healed them." (Luke iv. 40.)

"Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city (Nain), behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. And he came and touched the bier. And he said: Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother." (Luke vii. 12-15.)

Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, the wife of Chuza and many others possessed of evil spirits were healed and freed. (Luke viii. 2, 3.)

The man possessed of a legion of devils which were driven into a herd of swine. (Luke viii. 27-33.)

"And behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in nowise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her, and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God." (Luke xiii. 11-13.)

He healed the king's son at Capernaum who was at the point of death, through the faith of the lad's father. (John iv. 47.)

The man who had an infirmity thirty and eight years, whom no one would carry into the pool at the sheep market, whose waters when troubled by the angel healed all diseases, he cured by the words: "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." (John v. 2-8.)

The man that was born blind he healed with ground clay and spittle. "He spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam. He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing." (John ix. 1-7.)

St. Mark relates a still more remarkable cure effected by Christ on a blind man: "And he cometh to Bethsaida, and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him. And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought? And he looked up and said, I see men as trees, walking. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up; and he was restored and saw every man clearly." (Mark viii. 22-25.)

He raised Lazarus from the dead through a fervent prayer to the Father. "Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already. It was a cave and a stone lay upon it. Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh; for he hath been dead four days. Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God? Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth? And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes; and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him and let him go." (John xi. 17, 38-44.)

These are incidental healings performed by our Saviour and recorded by the Evangelists. There are other legendary narratives of wonders performed by Christ which are not recorded by the Evangelists, of which I will mention only one. It may be found in the History of Jesus, by Eusebius (chap. xii., p. 16), from which Bushing extracted his "Weekly Intelligence for Inquiries into History, Magic and Learning of the Middle Ages" (vol. II., p. 64, Dec., 1817. Breslau)." It is also printed in Kosegarden's Legends. As an extraordinary instance of the vocation and power of Christ and his divine mission and love to man will not prove uninteresting to the friends of Christianity, we will give the contents of several letters written by Abgarus, King of Edessa, who lived cotemporary with Jesus.

The extraordinary mission of Christ and the fame of the wonders which he wrought were noised abroad to the most distant lands, especially his divine power to heal all kinds of diseases. These rumors also attracted the attention of Abgarus, who was the victim of a severe sickness. On this account he wrote the following letter to Jesus :

"Abgarus, King of Edessa, to Jesus, the compassionate Saviour, who appeared in the flesh, in the neighborhood of Jerusalem, All Hail !

"I have heard of Thy exalted virtues and of the wonderful cures performed by Thee without the use of medicine or herbs. The report saith, that Thou causest the blind to see, the lame to walk, and thou cleanseest the leprous. Thou castest out unclean spirits, and those that are plagued with grievous diseases Thou healest, and Thou bringest the dead back to life. As I heard these reports concerning Thee, I formed two opinions : either that Thou art God, descended from the heights of Heaven, or that Thou art the Son of God, from whom all these wonderful works proceed. Therefore I write this unto Thee, fervently praying that Thou wouldst undertake the trouble to heal me from the heavy sickness by which I am punished. I am told that the Jews threaten Thee with great evil, and resist Thee in anger. It is true, I have but a small city, but it is well appointed and fortified and celebrated, so that it will afford us everything needful."

Thus wrote Abgarus to Christ. Enlightened by divine light, this short letter contains what is of true worth, being full of power and virtue. The following answer was sent by Jesus to Abgarus the King, by the hands of Ananias, who was selected as a messenger :

"Abgarus ! Blessed art thou, who hast not seen, yet believed on me. It is written that those which see me believe not on me, that those who see me not may believe on me and be saved. As thou writest to me, I must of necessity fulfil those things for which I was sent into the world ; after I have accomplished all these things I shall again be taken up to him who sent me. As soon as I shall have ascended, I will send to you one of my disciples, who will heal you of your painful disease, so that your life and the lives of yours may be preserved."

After the ascension of Christ into heaven, Judas, who was also called Thaddeus, one of the seventy disciples, was sent to Abgarus, who tarried over night on his journey at the house of Tobias, the son of Tobit. Abgarus heard that the disciple whom Jesus had promised to send to him, had arrived, for Tobias had told Abgarus that he had entertained a mighty man of Jerusalem, who healed many diseases in the name of Jesus. "Bring him in to me," said Abgarus. Tobias went immediately to Thaddeus and said : "Abgarus the king sends me to you, and desires that I should lead you to him, in order that you may remove the disease by which he is tormented." "Let us go," answered Thaddeus. "For on his account was I sent here." On the morning of the next day, Tobias took Thaddeus with him and they went to Abgarus. Upon his arrival the lords of the castle stood ready to defend Abgarus, but when the disciple entered Abgarus observed a bright light in his countenance. As Abgarus saw this he humbly worshipped Thaddeus. The astonishment of all present was most complete, for they could not see the strange appearance which Abgarus saw. "Thou art indeed the disciple of Jesus, the Son of God, who promised me in his letter when he said: 'I will send you one of my disciples, who will heal your infirmity, and give you your life and the lives of those belonging to you!'" Hereupon Thaddeus replied: "I have been sent to you because of your trust in Jesus who sent me." And further: "If the faith you have in him increases more and more, then the desire of your heart will be fulfilled according to your faith." Abgarus answered: "I have faith in him to this extent, that if the Roman power did not hinder me, I would annihilate the Jews who crucified Him, with my hosts." Thaddeus said, "The Lord our God, Jesus Christ, fulfilled the will of his Father, and when his will was accomplished, he was taken up to his Father." Then said Abgarus, "I believe in Him and in his Father." Thaddeus answered: "Therefore I lay my hands upon thee in the name of Jesus," and as he did so, Abgarus was made whole from that very hour.

To this belongs the tradition which relates to the sending of the picture of Christ to Abgarus. According to some authors, principally the Damascenes, Abgarus sent a painter to Jerusalem to paint a likeness of Jesus; but the painter was not able to finish a portrait of him because of the splendor of his countenance. Then the Lord stamped his likeness on his mantle through divine power, and in this manner satisfied the desire of Abgarus. According to others, Jesus impressed his features on a linen kerchief and sent it to Abgarus. Be this matter of finishing and sending of this picture as it may, the Damascenes show through later circumstances that such a picture was at Edessa at some time or other, otherwise we should be compelled to reckon the narrative describing the siege of the city of Abgarus by the Persian king Kosroes as among discoveries that cannot be authenticated. According to this legend the walls of Edessa, built of the wood of the olive tree, were surrounded by Kosroes with a funeral-pile of poplar wood, in order to burn them. The then reigning king of Edessa, who is not named, had recourse to the linen shroud upon which were impressed the features of Christ and which was sent to Abgarus. Hereupon (divina vi.) a terrible whirlwind arose which blew the flames away from the city, igniting the funeral-pile of poplar wood, by which all in its immediate vicinity were consumed.

That the promises respecting Christ, namely, that he would heal the sick, were fulfilled, is proven by the additional wonders which were wrought by the apostles, who healed diseases in the same manner that their Master did:—

"And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple, who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms. And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something from them. Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and anklebones received strength, and he, leaping up, stood and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping, and praising God. (Acts iii. 2-8.)

"And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women, inasmuch as they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one." (Acts v. 14-16.)

The history of Simon, the sorcerer, who, on account of his knavery could not perform these wonders, and who attempted to buy the gift to work these wonders from the apostles with money, is especially remarkable. This wonderful story is also applicable to the Simons of our day. "But there was a certain man called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery (magic), who was converted under the preaching of Philip and was baptized. And the apostles gave unto the new converts the holy spirit. Then they laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity." (Acts viii. 9-23.) See also the history of Eneas, who had kept his bed for eight years and was sick of the palsy. (Acts ix. 33, 34, 36-41.)

Of the same kind are also the wonderful works of Paul, who challenges our wonder on account of his strength of spirit and his power in all things. "And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked; the same heard Paul speak, who steadfastly beholding him and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked." (Acts xiv. 8-10.)

"And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them." (Acts xix. 11, 12.)

The young man named Eutychus who fell from the third story and was taken up dead, and was restored by Paul in the following manner: "And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves, for his life is in him. When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day so he departed. And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted." (Acts xx. 8-12.) "And it came to pass that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a flux: to whom Paul entered in and prayed, and laid his hands on him and healed him. So when this was done, others also, who had diseases in the island, came, and were healed." (Acts xxviii. 8, 9.)

Having already spoken about the import of Christian healing and given more or less of a historical character, I will submit the matter to each reader to form his own conclusions to their special peculiarities, in order that he may select that which is most instructive. One thing must not be omitted, in conclusion, and that is, we must first become Christians before we can perform cures by Christian methods. Very few are really Christians who call themselves such; they are only Christians in name and appearance.

The art of healing, according to scriptural principles, deserves special mention in this place, in more than one respect, not only because something truly magical takes place therein, but because scriptural healing is often regarded as the only true one. The principles of this art of healing have been fully established according to certain declarations and doctrines of the Bible. (See Leviticus xxvi. 14; Deuteronomy xxviii. 15-22, etc.; Exodus xiv. 26; also, Ecclesiasticus xxxviii. 9; Psalms cvii. 17-20.)

In this manner, therefore, there exists a higher medical science than the ordinary one, and other pious persons than physicians can heal diseases. "The believing physician," says Marcarius, "is like unto God, but the medical body belongs to the heathen and to the unbeliever." But according to the wise saying of Sirach, the physician is entitled to honor, for he says: "Honor a physician with the honor due unto him for the use ye may have of him, for the Lord hath created him, and he shall receive honor of the king. The skill of the physician shall lift up his head, and in the sight of great men he shall be in admiration." But he too believes that the physician is made only for the sinner: "He that sinneth before his Maker, let him fall into the hands of the physician." (Sirach xxxviii. 15.)

In the New Testament also diseases generally are ascribed to sin. Jesus said to the paralytic when he healed him: "Thy sins are forgiven thee," and he was made whole. And when he healed the man at the pool of Bethesda, who had an infirmity thirty-eight years, when he met him afterward in the temple, he said to him: "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a greater evil befall thee." (John v. 14.) The apostles too, and all the saints, insisted upon first curing the patient morally, for a true restoration of the diseased body and spirit can only be effected by a return to God. It is truly remarkable that the wise men of the East, Zoroaster, and all the advocates of the doctrines of emission (system of emanation), the Kabbalists, as well as all later Theosophists, all of whom possess extraordinary power to heal diseases, defended this doctrine. By some of these, diseases are charged directly to sin, while others attribute them to evil spirits, with whom man becomes associated through sin. That evil spirits are the cause of diseases, destroying and vitiating the healthy sap of the system, no one with less spiritual views than the Theosophists possessed will deny; these are the true bands which Satan has bound. (Luke xiii. 16.)

much more destructive through misrepresentations by model Christians than was intended. Saturninus, Basilides and Karpokrates stood at the head of those according to whose theory everything proceeded from the Æon (heavenly powers). Christ himself was to them an Æon of the first rank, who, by a rigid restraint from sensualism subdued demons (evil spirits), and he who lives as Christ did can subdue them likewise. "Out of Æon, the chief outlet," says Basilides, "heaven was brought into existence." According to Valentine, one of the most celebrated teachers of that day, the Æons were divided into classes, even into male and female classes. Thus, the chief female Æon was the Holy Spirit. By laying on of consecrated hands the subject was made the recipient of this Æon and was sent out to heal demoniac diseases. Notwithstanding that this digression created a variety of ideas, differing from the original doctrine, the effort to heal diseases according to scriptural principles continued for a great length of time a ruling struggle for moral improvement and perfection. If a being is in earnest to live in unconditional obedience toward God, and becomes converted to God through living, active faith, then God becomes his physician, and he no longer requires the services of an earthly doctor. As soon as the soul is in a perfectly healthy condition, it is stated, so soon will this health be communicated to the body, or rather, the sufferings of the body cannot be regarded as disease—these sufferings cannot affect the soul which has been elevated to heaven. But if a man is not capable of such a self-cure, then let him turn to the physician, for "God created him, and he hath given men skill, that he might be honored in his marvelous works." (Sirach xxviii. 6.) The particular manner in which the physician is to heal according to scriptural principles, is apparent in the foregoing. He must in the first place, become a truly Christian physician, that is a physician priest. He is able to help the sick only through his own health, especially the health of his own soul, and then only when he himself is pure. He must heal the inner man (the soul), for without rest in the soul (inward peace) there can be no real cure of the body; it is therefore indispensable that a true physician must also be a true priest.

The question, whether a scriptural physician is above the necessity of using medicines, or whether he may at times avail himself of their use in healing diseases, can also be easily answered scripturally, and it stands in the same relations as does the question whether a magnetic physician requires any medicines? Generally he must possess the power as a scriptural, and more especially as a Christian physician to heal diseases through prayer and the Divine word, and without medicines; and only in certain cases and when he himself does not possess this power in a sufficient measure, can he avail himself of the use of medicine. They are not made in vain. "For medicine comes from the Most High. The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth, and he is wise that will not abhor them. With such doth he heal men and taketh away their pains." (Sirach xxxviii. 4, 7.) Medicines are good, but they are seldom sufficient. "Go up into Gilead and take balm," says Jeremiah, "in vain shalt thou use many medicines, for thou shalt not be cured." (Jeremiah xli. 11.) There are in the meantime also examples in the Bible where, in rare instances, recourse was had to physical remedies. Moses, by casting wood into the waters of Marah, made them sweet. (Exodus xv. 25.) His cure for leprosy by washing, purifying, etc., was truly remarkable. Elias threw salt into the bitter spring, and it became wholesome ever afterward. He also cast meal into the pot, wherein was death, and the vegetables became harmless. Isaiah laid figs on the glands of King Hezekiah and healed him. Tobias cured his blind father with fishgall, a cure that was shown him by an angel. And even Jesus anointed the eyes of the blind man with spittle and clay, and told him to wash in the pool of Siloam, etc. As for the rest, according to the Bible, only outward remedies were used in healing, and these of the simplest and most unstudied kinds. Internal remedies were not used. The means of cure consisted in spiritual purification, in conversion from sin, in prayer to the Father of Life—the physician of the believer. So we read in James v. 13-16: "Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms. Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him. Confess your faults one to another, and pray for one another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much. In St. Mark vi. 12, we read: "And they went out and preached that all men should repent. And they cast out devils and anointed with oil many that were sick and healed them."

But the scriptural physician does not always heal, and the disease is not always an evil. If temporal enjoyment and earthly felicity were the destiny and end of man, for which the great majority are striving, then should we be justified in regarding sickness as a great misfortune and a heavy punishment, which many will not admit of having deserved. But this planet is not a place of undisturbed peace—not the abode of beings who shall rejoice in a final happiness. Light and shade, day and night, rest and activity, love and hate, peace and war, joy and sorrow, fortune and misfortune, health and sickness, life and death, are the constant changes of this world, and they are not due to accident, but are arranged with caution by a higher hand, to serve as a touchstone, that we may through affliction and suffering, by overcoming evil and purifying ourselves from sensualism, prepare for a better existence. The main object is the health of the soul and the spirit; the health of the body is a secondary matter. If the soul is in a state of health the body will become healthy as a consequence. "His flesh shall be fresher than a child's; he shall return to the days of his youth." (Job xxxiii. 25.) If such a strong soul should not become well he will not feel bodily suffering, because he already enjoys a foretaste of the blessedness of the other world. True happiness and perfect rest cannot be found on earth; therefore we should not wonder, but neither should we weep, because of the evanescence of quiet, unmixed pleasure—of purest love, because it is so soon overcast by dark clouds and driven away by fierce storms—neither should we mourn because true happiness can only be found in another world, because true health exists only in the souls of those who are truly united with God, and because help, consolation, and blessing come only from the Father in heaven.

Translated for the first time from the Cuthan-Samaritan Language into English.

ANNO MDCCXXVI.

TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

SINCE the Oriental transcript of this work was imperfect in many parts, the translation of it had to be taken according to the great original book, on account of the purity of its text, and, therefore, it won for itself the advantage of understanding and completing the exercises with serenity and confidence. The translator, in the meantime believes, that no one, who feels honestly called to these things, can ever be made the subject of ill-fortune, or be deceived by the wiles and deceptions of the old serpent, the inevitable fate that will and must fall to his lot under any other exorcisms, and that he may cheerfully and safely move thence, because only the angels of God will perform the service required by Him.

The Vestibule of the Entrance.—The language and manuscript of this rare and eternal monument of light, and of a higher wisdom, are borrowed from the Cuthans, a tribe of the Samaritans, who were called Cuthim in the Chaldee dialect according to the Talmud, and they were so called in a spirit of derision. They were termed sorcerers, because they taught in Cutha, their original place of abode, and afterward, in Samaria, the Kabala or Higher Magic (Book of Kings). Caspar, Melchior, and Balthasar, the chosen arch-priests, are shining lights among the eastern Magicians. They were both kings and teachers—the first Priest-teachers of this glorious knowledge, and from these Samaritan Cuthans—from these omnipotent priests of the fountain of light, who were called Nergal, according to the traditions of Talmud, originated the Gypsies, who, through degeneracy, lost the consecration of their primordial power.

LAWS OF ENTRANCE.

1. Before you can enter the temple of consecrated light, you must purify your soul and body during thirteen days.

2. As a brother and disciple of the new covenant, or as a Christian, you must receive the holy sacrament for the glorification of three kings—Caspar, Melchior and Balthasar.

3. Three holy masses must be read as often as you make use of this Book in your priestly service with your intention fixed upon the three glorified kings.

4. You must provide yourself with a ram's horn, wherewith to call together the angels and spirits. This horn must be included in your intentions of the holy mass.

5. You must wear a breastplate of parchment, ten inches high and ten inches wide, inscribed upon it the names of the twelve apostles with the five-fold name of Schemhamforasch, in the same order that it is placed on the last leaf.

6. You must draw a circle around you upon white paper, or upon sky-blue silk. Its circumference shall be thirteen feet, and, at the distance of each foot, one of the following names must be written, viz: Mosch, Mesias, Aaron, Jehova, Adoni, Jesus, Christus, Caspar, Melchior, Balthasar. Al. Al. Al.

7. Between each name you must place the holy symbol of Horet,—namely: $\rightarrow\rightarrow\rightarrow$ or $\leftarrow\leftarrow\leftarrow$.

8. The breastplate must be included in the intention of the holy mass.

9. Through consecration with holy triple king's-water and with three burning wax tapers, you must finally pronounce a benediction over this book, the horn, the breastplate, and the circle, after reading a well-selected mysterious ritual.

10. You may enter alone, or begin this great work with two companions, by day or by night, but always from the first to the thirteenth of the month, and during the thirteenth day, and through the whole night of the new moon, and also during full moon, when the three planets, Saturn, Mars and Jupiter, are visible in the heavens on the day of exorcism, either singly or together.

11. You must always stand with your face toward Zion, or toward the rising of the sun.

12. He who refuses a copy of this book, or who suppresses it or steals it, will be seized with eternal trembling, like Cain, and the angels of God will depart from him.

INTRODUCTION AND BEGINNING.

BREASTPLATE OF MOSES.

Schedasi, Weduse, Tiwisi.—I have sinned, I shall sin.

Prayer.—Eternal God of our all! Our God! hear our voice, spare and have mercy upon us. Accept our prayer in mercy and with pleasure. I have sinned. I have committed transgressions. I have sinned before Thee; I have done that which is displeasing unto Thee here in the earth. For the sake of Thy great name pardon me all the sins and iniquities and transgressions which I have committed against Thee from my youth. Perfect again all the holy names which I have blemished, great Champion, terrible, highest God, eternal Lord, God Sabaoth.

HELMET OF MOSES AND AARON.

Wochutu, Tukul, Beschufa, Gutal.—If I shall sin, I shall blow with the great horn.

Here the horn must be blown, three times in succession, toward the four corners of the earth, or toward the four quarters of the earth.

For the ram's horn, in the old covenant, is the symbol of omnipotence and of purification, or of beauty, truth and holiness.

BREASTPLATE OF AARON.

Dehutu, Euwsaltu, Bescholam.—You have sinned. I shall sin in peace.

Prayer.—The Lord, King of all Kings, holy and praised is He, the Father, God, Son of God, the Holy Spirit of God are three in one among these three. In the power of Thy might and Thy right, release those that are bound, receive the prayer of Thy people, strengthen us, purify us, oh, terrible Hero, us who worship Thy only name. Protect them as the apple of Thine eye, bless them, cleanse them, repay them always in mercy and justice. Mighty, holy Lord, reward Thy congregation with Thy great goodness. Thou, the only and exalted God, appear unto Thy people with Thy holy name; receive and remember our prayer; hearken unto our cries, Thou who knowest all secrets and who knowest our desire.

Here the horn must be blown as before.

MAGICAL LAWS OF MOSES.

Kuta-Al, Lewuwat.—We are great! Our hearts!

Prayer.—Oh, Lord, arise, that mine enemies may be destroyed and that they may fly; that those who hate Thee may be scattered like smoke—drive them away. As wax melteth before the fire, so pass away all evil-doers before God, for God has given Thee the kingdom. Pour out Thy wrath over them. Thy wrath seize them. Thou shalt stand upon leopards and adders, and Thou shalt subdue the lion and dragon. With God only can we do great things. He will bring them under our feet.

THE CHALICE OF HOLINESS.

Al, Al, Al. Arise, Thou eternal Angel!

This must be repeated three times in a loud voice, and also through the symbol of the horn, for he is an angel of the sanctuary.

Prayer.—Thou, that art, and wast, and wilt be in the old and new covenant! Eternal, Jehovah, Jesus Christ, Messia, All-beautiful, All-true, All-holy! All-loving and All-merciful in the old and in the new covenant. Thou hast said: Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. Thou hast said: I came not to destroy the old covenant, but to fulfil it. Thou hast said: He who sees me sees the Father. Thou hast said: If ye have true faith, ye can perform the wonders which I have done, yea, ye will perform yet much greater wonders than I have done. Come also to me for the sake of my faith, come also unto me for the sake of Moses, Thy messenger of faith. Reveal also to me Thy mysterious name from Jehovah, as Thou once did to Thy fire prophet Moses, in solitude; come, and say unto me in love, through the heart of Moses and with the tongue of Aaron:

Scahebual! I shall come!

THE CONJURATION OF ELEAZAR.

Duwatu, Buwatie, Bemaim.—I come to you on the water!
Bring me up N. N.!

DISMISSAL OF ELEAZAR.

Orum, Bolectn, Ubajom.—Cursed by night and by day!

CITATION OF QUERNITHAY OR LEVIATHANS.

These, as well as the following exorcisms, contain only the peculiar names of the angels who will permit the conjured spirits to appear, or will compel them by force to appear. Here the three angels of omnipotence will be called up to drive forth the monsters of hell, namely: Elubatel, Ebuhuel Atuesuel!

Each name must be repeated three times.

DISMISSAL.

I beseech and conjure thee, angel Elubatel, conduct N. N. from my presence.

Each angel's name must be called three times toward the four quarters of the earth, and three times must be blown with the horn.

CHAP. III.—BALAAM'S SORCERY.

Onu, Baschba, Nischoaz Hueretz.—In the name of God I conjure the earth.

CHAP. V.—CONJURATION OF THE LAWS OF MOSES.

Keisehu, Nischba, Lawemso.—How to be God, so swarest Thou to our parents.

Prayer.—Eternal of Eternals! Jehovah of Light, Adonai of Truth! Messiah of the All-merciful! Jesus Christ the beloved and All-redemption and love! Thou hast said: Who seeth me seeth also the Father. Father, eternal Father of the old and new covenant; triune Father, triune Son, triune Spirit, our Father, I beseech and conjure Thee by the eternal words of Thy eternal truth.

And now the seventeenth chapter of John, or the prayer of Jesus, must be prayed.

Closing Prayer of the Conjunction of the Law.—Eternal God Jehovah, Thou hast said: Ask and it shall be given you. I pray that Thou mayest hear Thy servants Caspur, Melchior and Balthasar, the arch-priests of Thy fountain of light! I pray that thou mayest bid Thy angels to purify me from all sin; that they may breathe upon me in love, and that they may cover me with the shadow of their wings. Send them down! This is my prayer in peace!

CHAP. VI.—EGITGIM.

Conjunction of three angels, Gebril! Meachuel! Nesanel! By the lamp of the threefold eternal light, let N. N. appear before me.

Three calls with the voice and three with the horn.

CHAP. VII.—GENERAL CITATION OF MOSES ON ALL SPIRITS.

Tubatlu! Bualu! Tulatu! Labusi! Ublisi!—Let there appear and bring before me the spirit of N. N.

Each of these five omnipotent angels must be called three times toward the four corners of the world, with a clear and powerful voice, and when the name of each is pronounced three times, then three sounds must be made by the horn. The name of each angel therefore, must have three calls with the voice and three with the horn.

DISMISSAL OF MOSES.

Ubelutusi! Kadukuliti! Kebutzi!—Take away from my presence the spirit of N. N.

Twelve calls with the voice, and twelve with the horn, for each name.

These signs were used at the time of burnt-offering in the holy temple.

FOR THE RIGHT HAND.

These are also symbolical of the plagues of Pharaoh in Egypt.

Schema Israel Adonai Elhoejno, Ekato.—Hear, oh, Israel, the Lord our God is God alone.

THE SEVENTH BOOK OF MOSES.

CHAP. I.—THE REVELATION OF ZION.

THE SPIRIT APPEARS IN A PILLAR OF FIRE BY NIGHT.

Talubsi! Latubusi! Kalubusi! Alusi!

Arise and bring me the Pillar of Fire that I may see.

This mysterious figure must be written before the exorcism, in the open air, and in the ground, with consecrated chalk or with the index finger of the right hand dipped in holy three-kings-water, the same as it is written up on the paper, but each line must be thirteen feet in length. The conjuror then kneels in the centre of the star, with uncovered head and with face turned toward Zion, and calls first in a loud voice, coming from the heart, the names of Caspar, Belchior and Balthasar, thirteen times, and after calling these thirteen times, he must also then call the high and sacred name of Elokim 375 times with equal fervor and faith. But only as has already been stated in the Laws of Entrance, No. 10, in the first three days or nights of the new moon, or full moon, or when Saturn, Mars and Jupiter appear in the heavens.

ANNO MCCCXXXVIII

Now Moses appears on the right of the silk, in a simple priestly garb, holding the tree of life, which has four leaves in the right hand, and the ram's horn in the left.

Upon his heart rests the cross; a wide, white band flows over his shoulder and breast, a broad, white girdle graces his loins. He stands upon a kind of hat, which is decorated with three flowers. On the right hand of the hat reposes a dove having a ring in her bill, on the left side and over the head of Moses a threefold tripod with magical hieroglyphics thereon rises upward.

1. Upon the leaves of the tree of life you read the words:

Besulo! Bedunim! Labatel!

That is, if you are not pure, or if you do not become pure as a virgin through the two angels Bunedreim and Lebatal, you cannot reach toward the tree of life.

2. A hat adorned with three flowers, upon which Moses stands, and from which a dove with ring in her bill appears to descend, that is:

If you preserve faith and hope with holy care, the spirit of omnipotence will emanate from you.

3. A threefold intertwined triangle, extending from the feet to the head, having inscribed upon it the names of the three angels, Meachuel, Labatel, Kautel, that is: And the three angels of the 'rune God, Meachuel, Lebatei, Ketuel, will surround and carry you upon their hands.

On the reverse side of the picture of Moses, or rather on the first leaf, according to Oriental reckoning, appears the elevated, winding and crowned serpent, holding a ring in her teeth. Around the serpent may be seen the moon, the stars, planets, water and many other magic hieroglyphical signs. On the left side of the tail may be seen seven nails, on the right side are magical hieroglyphics making the name of Schemhamporasch. To see Jesus Christ with the cross, that is to say: Jesus Christ, through his love, and by his seven wounds and through his death on the cross, for his love's sake, has overcome the kingdoms of this world, and thus took again from the old serpent, the devil the seal-ring of human omnipotence, or the happiness of man to all the eternal eternities, in order to fulfil the old covenant in the new covenant, for the eternal glorification of the eternal Father in the eternal Son, through the eternal Spirit. Amen.

INSTRUCTIONS.

If you want to cite and compel spirits to appear visibly before you and render you obedience, then observe the following instructions :

1. Keep God's commands as much as you can possibly do.
2. Build and trust solely upon the might and power of God ; believe firmly on his omnipotent help in your work, and the spirits will become your servants and will obey you.
3. Continue your citations, and do not cease, even if the spirits do not appear at once. Be steadfast in your work and faith, for the doubter will obtain nothing.
4. Take especial notice of the time, viz :

Monday night, from eleven until three o'clock.

Tuesday night, from ten until two o'clock.

Wednesday night, from twelve until three o'clock.

Thursday night, from twelve until two o'clock.

Friday night, from ten until three o'clock.

Saturday night, from ten until twelve o'clock.

The Sabbath keep holy to the Lord Sabaoth, Adonai, Tetragrammaton.

5. It must, at the same time, be new moon. Perhaps you may say, "Why these hours and signs—are they not all the days of the Lord?" It is true ; but not all hours, and all signs, are favorable to rule over their spirits.

6. Complete the following circle, described in this work, on parchment, written with the blood of young white doves. The size of the circle may be at your own option.

7. If you wish to undertake the operation, be sure to consecrate the circle previously.

Ego N. N., consecro et benedico istum Circulum per Nomina Dei Attissimi in ec Scripta, ut sit mihi et omnibus Scutum at Protectio Dei Fortissimi Elohim Invincibilie contra omnes malignos Spiritus, gerumque Potestates. In Nomine Dei Patris Dei Filii Dei Spiritus Sancti. Amen.

Upon your entrance into this Circle speak as follows: Tetragrammaton, Theos, Ischiros, Athanatos, Messias, Imas, Kyrie Eleison. Amen.

After you have entered the Circle begin your operation with the following prayer from the Ninety-first Psalm.

He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in Him will I trust. Surely he shall deliver me from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust. His truth shall be thy shield and buckler. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night, nor for the arrow that flieth by day. Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation. There shall be no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come near thy dwelling. Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him. I will set him on high because he hath known my name. He will call upon me and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him and honor. With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation, even so help me and all them that seek thy holy

NOTE.

THE USE OF THE SEALS.

When these great princes do not appear immediately on the foregoing Citations, or if they hesitate in their obedience, then take frankincense and myrrh, and cast them upon burning coals, and when the smoke arises, place the spirit-seal thereon, with the following mysterious words:

INSTRUCTIONS.

Since the spirits will now appear quickly, bring your desires forward honestly, as if before your fellow-man, without fear, for nothing can harm you, much rather, all must serve you and yield obedience and serve you according to your wishes: In this connection, be careful that you do not compromise in any degree with the spirit for all this power, and word of might, which Moses, Aaron and Solomon used according to the revelations of God, are sufficient to compel the spirits to reveal to you the treasures of the earth and sea, and to give them to you without harm and deception.

REMARKS.

AZIEL is a very prompt treasure-spirit of the earth and of the sea. He appears in the form of a wild ox.

ARIEL is a very serviceable spirit, and appears in the form of a ferocious dog. He commands the lost treasures of the land and sea.

MARBUEL appears in the form of an old lion. He delivers the treasures of the water and the land, and assists in obtaining all secret knowledge and honors.

MEPHISTOPHILES is ready to serve, and appears in the form of a youth. He is willing to help in all skilled arts, and gives the spiritus Servos, otherwise called "familiares." He brings treasures from the earth and from the deep very quickly.

BARBUEL is a master of all arts and all secret knowledge, a great master of all treasure. He is very accommodating, and appears with alacrity in the form of a wild hog.

AZIABEL is a prince of the water and mountain-spirits and their treasures. He is amiable, and appears with a large crown of pearls.

ANITUEL appears in the form of a serpent of Paradise. He confers great wealth and honors according to wish.

AN HUMBLE PRAYER FOR THE ATTAINMENT OF WISDOM AND UNDER-STANDING.

“For the Lord giveth wisdom, out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.”—PROVERBS ii. 6.

“If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not.”—EPISTLE OF JAMES i. 5.

OH, God my Father and Lord of all goodness, who didst create all things by Thy word, and who didst prepare man in thy wisdom to rule over all creatures that were made by Thee, that he should rule over the world with holiness and righteousness, and judge with an upright heart. Give unto me that wisdom that is constantly around Thy throne, and cast me not out from among Thy children. For I am Thy servant, and the son of Thy hand-maiden, a weak creature of a short existence, and too weak in understanding, in right, and in the law. Send it down from Thy high heaven and from the throne of Thy glory that it may abide with me and labor with me, that I may know and do the things that are pleasing unto Thee. For Thy wisdom knoweth and understandeth all things, and let it lead me in my works and protect me in its glory, and my labors will be acceptable unto Thee. When I was yet in my youth I sought wisdom without fear in my prayer. I prayed for it in the temple, and will seek it to my end. My heart rejoiceth over it as when the young grapes ripen. Thou art my Father, my God, and my Shepherd, who helpeth me. Thy hand created and prepared me; teach me that I may learn Thy commandments; open my eyes that I may behold the wonders of Thy law. Remember, Lord, Thy covenant, and teach me what to say and think. Instruct me and so shall I live. Lord, show me Thy ways, lead me in Thy truth, and teach me. I am Thy servant, teach me that I may understand Thy evidence. Console me again with Thy help and let the happy spirit sustain me. Thou lover of life, Thy immortal spirit is in all things. Teach me to work in a manner that is well pleasing unto Thee, for Thou art my God. Let Thy good spirit lead me in pleasant paths. With Thee is the living fountain and in Thy light we see the light. Let my goings be established, and let no unrighteousness rule over me. Teach me wholesome manners and enlighten me, for I believe Thy commandments. Lead me in Thy truth and teach me, for Thou art the God who helps me, and I wait daily before Thee. Let Thy countenance shine upon Thy servant and teach me to know Thy justice. Let me behold Thy glory, for Thou, Lord, art my light, and Thou wilt turn my darkness into day. Wilt Thou join Thyself with me in eternity, and trust me in righteousness and in judgment, in grace and mercy, yea, wilt Thou join me in faith that I may know Thee, the Lord. Lord, let my complaints come before Thee. Instruct me according to Thy word. Let my prayers come before Thee, rescue me according to Thy word. Show me Thy ways, oh, Lord, that I may walk in Thy truth. Keep my heart in singleness that I may fear Thy name. I will remember Thy name from childhood, therefore, all people will thank Thee forever and ever. Amen.

In the name of the highest, almighty Creator, I, King Solomon, hold to the interpretation of the name of (God) Semiphoras, in other words, the First and the Greatest, the oldest and hidden mystery of great power and virtue, to obtain all that which is asked of God, for God must be worshipped in spirit and in truth, which consists not in many and vain words, because each word and name of God is self-existent, and therefore the name and prayer must agree, and no strange name must be used unnecessarily if anything fearful or wonderful is intended to be accomplished, in order that the divine quality may pour into our soul and spirit His grace and gifts—that is the consciousness of God in His name through which he comes near and abides with those who know His name. Therefore, this name must be held in the highest honor and should be hidden from all frivolous and unworthy persons, since God says himself in Exodus: Out of all places will I come unto thee and bless thee, because thou rememberest my name. Therefore, have the Hebrew Maccabees seventy-two names for God, and named and wrote Schemhamphora, the name of seventy-two letters.

First, it must be known that the names of God cannot be taught and understood except only in the Hebrew language, neither can we pronounce them in any other dialect, as they were revealed to us through the grace of God. For they are the sacrament and emanation of divine omnipotence, not of man, nor of angels, but they are instituted and consecrated through the (generent) of God, to instil divine harmony in a certain manner according to the characters of his immovable number and figure, and of which those that are appointed over the heavens are afraid. The angels and all creatures honor them and use them to praise their Creator, and to bless Him with the greatest reverence in His divine works, and whosoever will apply them properly with fear and trembling and with prayer, will be powerfully enlightened by the spirit of God—will be joined with a divine unity—will be mighty according to the will of God—that he can perform supernatural things—that he can command angels and devils—that he can bind and unbind the things of the elements, over which he may elevate himself through the power of God. Therefore, he, who has purified and improved his understanding and morals, and who, through faith, has purified his ears, so that he may without spurious alterations call upon the divine name of God, will become a house and a dwelling-place of God, and will be a partaker of divine influences, etc., etc.

On the other hand, the order of God should be known, that God makes use of other words among angels and also others among men, but the true name of God is known neither to men nor to angels, for He has reserved it and will not reveal it until His order and exhibition are fulfilled and perfected. After that the angels will have their own tongues and speech, about which we need not concern ourselves, because it is not necessary for us to examine them.

In the third place, all the names of God are taken by us from His works, as indicating a communication with God, or are extracted out of the divine scriptures through the art of Cabalisticam, Calculatoriam, Notariacam and Geometriam.

The beginning of the name and word Semiphoras, which God the Creator, Jehovah gave in Paradise, embraces three Hebrew letters, Jehovah the inscrutable Creator of the world, almighty Providence, and all-powerful strong Deity.

After this there are four parts of the earth which are the most subtle light of the spiritual world: 4. Hierarchus, Cherubim et Seraphim, Potestates et Virtutes, Archangelos et Angelos, Spiritus et Animus Hominum, which come before God. This part of the world has also four angels that stand upon the four corners of heaven; they are Michael, Raphael, Gabriel, Uriel; four angels stand for the elements, namely, Seraph, Cherub, Tharsis, Ariel; four highly enlightened men full of the light of God.

For the other light or part of the world is the heaven of all the stars; has four Triplicitates of the twelve signs, under which the sun revolves yearly, making the change of seasons, the Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter of birth and corruption, and changes the fourth element.

In the third part of the work are the elements and everything that is subordinate to them, in which is the small world, man. He again has four elements within him. Anima is in the head, per nemos; Spiritus is in the heart, and operates through the arteries; Corpus is the whole body with the veins; Genius, a spark of fire, is in the kidneys, and governs birth. He has four spiritual and strong working faculties, as facultates actiones, or spiritus, as his Animalis, Vitalis, Naturalis, Genitions. The soul has inward senses, as sensum communem; in which faith takes hold as (fides) and other senses Intellectus in the brain.

2. Imaginatrix, the imagination is another soul-operation or phantasie, which draws a picture of power and accomplishes all things.

3. Ratiocinatio repeats the Species on the mind on all causes and judgments, Scientia; if the soul will now turn to real reason, it will obtain a knowledge of all worldly wisdom.

4. Memoratrix, the memory, retains all things which pertains to the faculties and operations of the spirit, to bring an experimentum et Sensus; through agitation of the nerves the increase of the human race is effected by God. The living spirit of the heart embraces within itself four virtues: Justitia, Temperantia, Prudentia, Fortitudo, and these lie in the arterial blood and connect the soul with the body. Appetitus Sensitivus; the natural spiritual action and power lies in the liver and arteries, and effect motion and attraction, support and subsistence; the proper spirit of strength and sap lies in the kidneys . . . to multiply through divine perfection.

The body has four elements, namely, spirit, fruit, flesh and bone—four complexions or temperaments, warm, wet, dry; attraction is produced by warmth, dryness, dampness; rel retentio is produced by coldness and dryness; Lien Cactio by warmth and wet, id est stomachus: four wet, gall, blood, mucus and melancholia.

In the fourth quarter of the world there is darkness, instituted for condemnation in wrath and for punishment. Four princes of devils are injurious in the four elements: Samael, Azazel, Azael, Mehazaer, four princes of devils over the four quarters of the earth, Oriens, Pagmon, Egyn, Amayon.

The first Semiphoras is that of Adam, because he spoke with the Creator in Paradise.

The second Semiphoras, because he spoke with angels and spirits.

The third, because he spoke with devils.

The fourth, because he spoke with the creatures of the four elements, the birds, the fishes, the animals, and the creeping things of the earth.

The fifth, because he spoke with inanimate objects, as herbs, seeds, trees, and all vegetation.

The sixth, because he spoke with the winds.

The seventh, because he spoke with the sun, moon and stars.

By the power of the seven Semiphoras he could create and destroy all he desired.

The first Semiphoras was acknowledged by Adam, since God created him and placed him in Paradise, where he was allowed to remain only seven hours. The name is Jove, which name must be pronounced only in the greatest need, and then only with the most devout feelings toward the Creator. In this case you will find grace and sure help.

The second Semiphoras, in which Adam spoke with angels, and which gave him the expression, yesseraye, that is, God without Beginning and without End, must be pronounced when speaking with angels, and then your questions will be answered and your wishes fulfilled.

The third Semiphoras, in which Adam spoke with the spirits of the departed, and inquired of them, who gave him satisfactory answers upon the word, Adonay Sabaoth, cadaz adonay amara; these words must be uttered when you wish to collect winds, spirits or demons, Aly, Adoy, Sabaoth, amara.

The fourth Semiphoras, Layamen, Iava, firin, Iavagellayn, Lavaquiri, Lavagola, Lavatasorin, Layfialafin, Lyafaran; with this name he bound and unbound all animals and spirits.

The fifth Semiphoras, Lyacham, Lyalgema, Lyafarau, Lialfarah, Lebara, Lebarosin, Layararalus; if you wish to bind equals, as trees and seeds, you must pronounce the above words.

The sixth Semiphoras is great in might and virtue; Letamnin, Le taylogo, Letasynin, Lebaganaritin, Letarminin, Letageloin, Lotafalosin. Use these when you desire the elements or winds to fulfil your wishes.

The seventh Semiphoras is great and mighty. They are the names of the Creator, which must be pronounced in the beginning of each undertaking: Eliaon yoena adonay cadas ebreel, eloy ela agiel, ayoni, Sachado, essuselas eloyrn, delion iau elynla, delia, yazi, Zazael, paliel man, umiel, onela dilatan saday alma paneim alym, canal deus Usami yaras calipix calfas sasna saffasaday aylata panteomel auriel arion phaneton secare panerionys emanuel Joth Jalaph amphia, than demisrael mu all le Leazyns ala phonar aglacyei qyol paeriteron theferoyrn barimel, jael haryon ya apiolell echet.

These holy names pronounce at each time in reverence toward God, when you desire to accomplish something through the elements or something connected therewith, and your wishes will be fulfilled, and what is to be destroyed will be destroyed, for God will be with you because you know his name.

 The following is another name of Semiphoras which God gave to Moses in seven parts.

The first is, when Moses concealed himself and spoke with God, when the fire burned in the forest without consuming it.

The second, as he spoke with the Creator on the mountain.

The third, when he divided the Red Sea, and passed through with the whole people of Israel, etc.

The fourth, when his staff was turned into a serpent which devoured the other serpents.

The fifth, are the names which were written on the forehead of Aaron.

The sixth, when he made a brazen serpent and burned the golden calf to divert pestilence from the Israelites.

The seventh, when manna fell in the wilderness and when water gushed from the rock.

In the first are the words which Moses spake as he went on the mountain, when he spoke to the flames of fire: Maya, Affaby, Zien, Jaramye, yne Latebni damaa yrsano, noy lyloo Lhay yly yre Eylvi Zya Lyelee, Loate, lideloy eyloy, mecha ramethy rybifassa fu aziry scihui rite Zelo-habe vete hebe ede neyo ramy rahabe (conoc anuhec). If you pray this word to God devoutly your undertaking will be fulfilled without a doubt.

In the second are the words which God spake to Moses as he went on the mountain: Abtan, Abynistan, Zoratan Juran nondieras, potarte faijs alapeina pognij podaij sacroficium. In these words the prophet spoke to the angels with whom the four quarters of the earth are sealed, through which the temple was founded Bosale. If you wish to pronounce these you should fast three days, be chaste and pure, and then you can perform many wonders.

In the third are words which Moses spake in order to divide the Red Sea: Oua claiie saijec holomomaatl; bekahn aijclo inare asnia haene hieha ijfale malieha arnija aremeholona queleij, Lineno feijano, ijoije malac habona nethee hijcere. If you have lost favor of your master, or if you wish to gain the good-will of some one, speak these words with fervor and humility, etc.

In the fourth are words which Moses spake when he changed his staff into a serpent: Micrato, raepijsathonich petanith pistan ijtn ijer hijgarin ijgnition temayron aijcon dunsnas castas Lacias astas ijecon cijna caihera natu facas. Pronounce these names when you wish to have your desires fulfilled.

In the fifth are the written names of the forehead of Aaron as he spake with the Creator: Sadaij haijlves Lucas elacijus jaconi hasihaia ijein ino, sep, actitas barne lud doncnij eija iehhu reu, vaha, vialia, eije. Vie haija hoij asaija salna hahai, cuci ijaija. Elenehel, na vena; setna. The names are powerful in satisfying each request.

In the sixth are names which were written upon the staff of Moses, when he made the brazen serpent and broke the golden calf: Tane mare syam, abijl ala, nuno, hija actenal tijogas ijano, eloim ija nehn ijane haij ijanehn, ahijaco mea. With this name destroy all sorcery and evil. You must not pronounce it with levity in your works.

In the seventh are words which Moses employed in leading the Israelites out of Egypt, with which he brought manna from heaven and caused the water to flow from the rock: Sadaij amara elon pheneton elojj eneij ebeoel messias ijahe vehu hejiane, ijanancl elijon. Pronounce these words when you desire to do something wonderful, or when you are in great need, and call earnestly on God, etc.

PRAYER.

Oh, thou living God; thou great, strong, mighty, holy and pure Creator full of mercy—a blessed Lord of all things; praised be thy name. I implore Thee, fulfil my desire. Thou canst work. Permit us to accomplish this work. Grant us thy grace and give us thy divine blessing, that we may happily fulfil this work. Thou, holy, merciful and gracious God, have mercy upon us. Thy name, Jeseraire be adored forever and ever. Amen, etc.

In the name of the Almighty Creator, I, Solomon, hold to the declaration of the divine names: Agla. Thou art a mighty God to all eternity. He who bears upon his person this name, written upon a gold plate, will never die a sudden death. Ararita—a beginning of all unity. Ahen—thou solid rock, united with the Son. Amen, etc. Thou, Lord, a true king, perfect it, etc.

The names consist of the beginning of the chapters Adonay, which the Hebrews made use of instead of the unutterable name, Asser Eserie.

The seven mighty names may be obtained at a favorable hour and place: Comitijon, sede aij, throtomas, sasmagata bij ijl ijcos.

The four names of the Creator: Jva, Jona, elojj, Jeva. He who calls often upon God in faith and with fear, and carries with him the golden letters, will never want for an honorable subsistence and good clothing. The name which Adam uttered at the entrance to hell is mephenaij phanton. He who bears this name with him is unconquerable.

The name which God communicated to Moses on Mount Sanai, Hacedion, will put away all causes for sorrow.

The name which Joshua prayed when the sun stood still, baahando, heloioir, dealzhat, brings vengeance upon enemies.

The ten names of Sepiroth, I, Solomon, spoke in my prayer to God, and he gave me wisdom: Ethor, Hoehmal, binach, baesed, Geburah, thipheret, nezath, hod Jehod malchut.

Now follow the ten names of God: Eseie, Jod teragrammaton, Tetragrammaton Saboth, elohim Sabaoth, Sadaij Adonaij nulech, all with ten letters. Tetragrammaton Vedath have eight letters. Ehoie, the self-existence of God, Arerite Aser, ehele, the names of God of seven letters.

Eseh, used by Moses as the fire of God, Elion has five letters and they are all Hebrew characters.

Emeth, the true God, is God's seal. The explanation of the ten names of God and the ten Sephiroth, is given in Cornel Agrippa de occulta Philosophia, Lib. 3, Cap. 10.

Hacaba, the holy and adored God.

Hu, himself the power of the Deity.

Hod, Jod, a divine being.

Jah, a just God, comparing himself with man.

Inon.

Jesuba, the Messiah will come in the golden age.

Jaua, he who created the light.

Isaia, with the name El, resembles the changed era (each made up of 31).

Mettatron for Sadai, each name composed of 314.

Icuru Maapaz, both names are derived from a transposition of the name Jehova.

Messiah is derived from a transposition of the letters in Jisma Macom.

Na, the name of God, should be used in tribulation and oppression.

Oromasim, Mitrim, Araminem, signify God and the Spirit. These are three princes of the world.

Pele, he who worketh wonders, etc.

These names must be selected out of each letter constituting the work, for the accomplishment of which the help of God should be implored. Similar to a certain text, in Exodus xiv., consisting of three verses which are always written with seventy-two letters, beginning with the three words: Vaijsa, Vaiduo, Vaiot, which, when placed in a line, one and three, from left to right, the middle one transposed from the right to the left, as in a reverse order, constitutes one name, the seventy-two letters of which are named Schemhamphoras.

If now the divine names, El or Jad, are added, there will be seventy-two names of God, each of them syllables, for it is written: My angel goeth before me, behold him, for my name is in him. These are seventy-two deacons of the five departments of heaven, there are so many nations and tongues, so many bodily functions, working with the seventy-two disciples of Christ. And this is one method which Cabalists use in making up these names.

Another method to make the Schemhamforas is when the three verses are written in regular order from right to left subalternatim, without selecting this method from the tables of Zimph, or as it is selected from the table Commutationem.

Vehuiah, Jeliel, Sitael, Elemiah, Mahasia, Lehahel, Achuiah, Cahetel, Haziell, Aladiah, Laviah, Caliel, Leuniah, Pahaliah, Nelchael, Leiaiel, Melahel, Hahuiah, Mittaiah, Haaiah, Jerathel, Scehia, Rael, Orael, Lecabel Vasarias, Jehujah Labahiah Chauakiah Mahadel Aniel Haamiah. Richael, ieiazcl hahael Michael, Vehuel, Daniel, Hahasias Imamiahs, Nanael, Nitaël Behahia, Poiel Nemamah; Selalel, Harael, Mizrael, Sahhel Annanuel Mehael damabiah menkiel Eliapel, Habuiah. Rochel Jabamah Haianel. Maniah.

In the first period of nature God was addressed by the name of Sadai Trigrammaton. In the second period of the law he bore the unutterable name of Tetragrammaton, which is spoken Adonaij. In the period of grace he was called upon as Pentagrammaton effabile Jesu, which is also written Jusu, with four letters, and JHS with three letters.

The Father gave all power to the Son, the angels received heaven, but in the name of God and Jesus, which is the first power in God. Afterward it spreads into the twelve and seven angels through which it was communicated to the twelve signs and seven planets, and consequently into all the servants and instruments of God, even to the humblest. Therefore, said Jesus: Everything which ye ask of the Father in my name, that will he give unto you, if ye pray unto him with a pure heart and a fervent spirit, for there is no other name given to man whereby he can be saved but the name of Jesus. Amen.

OF THE BENEFIT AND USE OF THE SEMIPHORAS.

That man who lays hold in strong faith and trust in the first Creator, must first implore the divine help and blessing, not only with the lips, but also with holy gestures and humble heart, praying fervently and continually, that he may enlighten the mind, and take away from the soul all darkness of the body. For, precisely as when our souls are moved by some ordinary cause, so the soul moves all the members of the body to contribute something toward the accomplishment of a contemplated work. Therefore, the great Creator, when he is worshipped in spirit and in truth, and when no unnecessary things are asked of Him, when the prayer is devoutly preferred, will cause the lower order of creatures to yield obedience to the wishes of man, according to their state, order and calling, for man was made in the image and likeness of God, and endowed with reason and working under the favor of God, he will obtain his desire through faith and wisdom: first, from the stars and from the heavens by the rational reflections of His spirit; second, by the animal kingdom, through his senses; third, by the elements, through his fourfold body.

And now, he who desires to become master of the working of the soul, must become familiar with the order of all things, just as they are obtained by God in their proper state, from the highest to the lowest, through natural connections, that he may descend as if from a ladder. On this account the Heathens committed the error of worshipping the planets and fixed stars, not because they heard but because they were moved by the powers which governed them and were, at the same time, impelled thereto by the influence of their founder and creator. And in this manner, likewise, Christian nations have committed the error of paying homage to departed saints and giving honor to the creature which belongs only to the Creator, and God is a jealous God and will not permit the worship of idols. The prayer of faith, therefore, in proper language, and for proper objects, is intimately related to the name of God, from which we descend by words, from one to the other, following each other out of a natural relationship, in order to accomplish something.

The son, therefore, prevails upon the father that he may support him, although the father may not do so willingly; still since he is his offspring he must calculate to maintain him. How much greater care our heavenly Father must feel for us, if we serve him in a proper manner?

He who desires the influence of the sun, must not only direct his eyes toward it, but he must elevate his soul-power to the soul-power of the sun, which is God himself, having previously made himself equal to God, by fasting, purification and good works, but he must also pray in the name of the Mediator, with fervent love to God, and his fellow-man that he may come to the sun-spirit, so that he may be filled with its light and lustre, which he may draw to himself from heaven, and that he may become gifted with heavenly gifts and obtain all the desires of his heart; and as soon as he grasps the higher light and arrives at a state of perfection, being gifted with supernatural intelligence, he will also obtain supernatural might and power. For this reason, without godliness, man will deny his faith in Christ, and will become unacceptable to God, therewith often falling a prey to the evil spirits against whom there is no better protection than the fear of the Lord and fervent love to God and man.

Most people who are skilled in divine works, and who possess the right to command spirits, must be worthy by nature or become worthy by education and discipline for their calling—must keep all their works secret, but may not conceal it from a true and pious person. Dignity of birth comes from station, but it is due to Saturnum, Sol, Mercurium or Martem that he is made prosperous—that he is learned in Physics, Metaphysics and Theology.

If a man has a knowledge of God, as the first great cause, he must also acknowledge other causes or coöperative spirits, and determine what official station of dignity and honor to accord to them; and without which knowledge their presence and help cannot be enjoyed. Such honor and dignity must not be shown for the sake of the spirits but for the sake of their Lord, whose servants they are. In this manner the angels of God will encamp around those who fear and love the Lord, and, as Augustinus says: "Everything possesses a predestined angel-power." For this reason the Hebrew theologians, Mecubae and Cabalists, named ten principle divine names as members of God, and ten Numerationes or Zephireot, as raiment and instruments of the Creator, through which he is infused into all his creatures, according to the order of the ten, Angelic and ten princely spirit-choirs, from which all things derive their power and quality.

1. The name EHEIE, aser Eheie, its number Cether elion, one Lord, is the simplest Deity, which no eye has seen, is ascribed to God the Father, gives influence through the order Seraphin haiath, heidosch, gate of holiness or of life, that transmits life to everything through Elieic. From this he flows in through premum mohele so that all things must exist—that the heavens must revolve every twenty-four hours. This wonderful being is called Intelligentia Metatron, that is, a prince of faces. His office is to lead others into the presence of the Sovereign, and through him God spake to Moses.

2. JEHOVAH, Jod, vel Jah, his number Chochma—wisdom: The Deity full of spirit. The firstborn son through whom the Father redeemed man from his curse, is infused through the order of Cherubim, Hebrew Ophanim, of the form or Council. From these he flows into the star-bedecked heavens, and produces there many figures. Chavs of creatures, God, Jod, Tetragrammaton, through the peculiar Intelligentiam razelem, who was a representative of Adam, etc.

3. TETRAGRAMMATON ELOHIM, his number is called Binah. That is, caution or sense, and signifies pardon and rest, cheerfulness, repentance and conversion—the great trumpet, the redemption of the world and life in time to come, is adopted to the Holy Spirit and flows in his might through the order of Thronorum, which is called Arabim in Hebrew—that is, the great, strong and mighty angels, from thence through the Saturui Sphaeram it gives to liquid matter the form Stopsie, which was an Intelligentia Zaphkiel, was Noah's representative, and another Intelligentia Jophiel, Shem's representative, and these are the three highest and greatest Numerationes, as a throne of the divine Persons, through whose commands everything takes place, and which is completed by the other seven, which, in this account are called Numerationes fabrice, etc.

4. EL, his number Haesed, that is, grace or goodness, and is called mercy, pity, great power, sceptre and right hand, and flows in through order Dominationum, Hebrew Hasmalin—confers peaceable justice through Spaeram Jovis and bestows in a general manner special Intelligentia; Zadkiel, Abraham's representative.

5. ELOHIM cuhor, a strong God, who punishes the guilt of the wicked. His number is Geburah, that is, might, gravity, strength, security, judgment. He inflicts punishment through the sword and through wars. To this is added the judgment-seat of God, the girdle of the Lord, a sword and left arm; also Pached, that is, fear before God; flows in through the order of Potestatum Hebrai Seraphin, so named, and from thence through the Sphaeram Martis, which has great wars and tribulation—moves the elements accordingly. His peculiar Intelligentia Gamael, Samson's representative.

6. ELOHA, the God of Alchemy; his number is Tipheret, grace, beauty, adornment, happiness and pleasure—signifies the word of life and flows in through the order Virtutum, which in Hebrew is Malachien: This angel, through Sphaeram Solis, gives perspicuity and life, and reveals metals. His particular Intelligentia, Raphael, was the representative of Isaac and of the youthful Tobias, and Pehel was the representative of Jacob.

7. TETRAGRAMMATON SABAOTH, or Adonaij Sabaoth, the God of Hosts. His number is Nezaeh, that is, triumph and victory; to him is accorded the right pillar, and signifies eternity, the justice of God, and avenger; he flows in through the order of Principatum or through the Hebrew Elohem, that is, God in Sphaeram Veneris, love and justice. He produces all Vegetable growth and his peculiar Intelligencia Hamel, and the angel Cernaui is David's representative.

8. ELOHIM SABAOth, God of Hosts, not of war or wrath, but of pity, for he has both names and goes before his hosts. His number is called Hod, that is, honorable confession, ornament and renown. To him is accorded the left pillar, and he flows in through the order of Archangelorum, before the gods in Sphaeram Mercuri, adornment, safety and unanimity, and brings forth animals; His peculiar Intelligencia Michael, the representative of Solomon.

9. SADAI, the Almighty, who does all things abundantly, and Elhay, that is, the living God. His number is called Jesod, that is, a foundation, and is denominated good sense, redemption and rest. He flows in through the order of Angelorum, in Hebrew Cherubin in Sphaerem Lunae, to increase and decrease all things, supports and contributes the genius of man: his Intelligenciae Gabriel, a representative of Joseph, Joshua, and Daniel.

10. ADONAY MELECH, that is, a Lord and King. His number is called Malchat, that is, a kingdom and dominion, and is termed the Church and house of God, and the door flows in through the order of Animasticum of the believing soul—in Hebrew the life of princes, and they are inferior to the hierarchy. They afford information to the children of men, of the wonderful things of knowledge, guard them against prophesies. For their Anima Messiah Meshia, or according to others the Intelligencia Metratron, which is called the first creature—the soul of the world, is the representative of Moses, the fountain of all life.

Therefore, all the names of God and the ten Sephirot, are embraced in the Archetypum.

In mundo intelligibili are included the nine choirs of the angels, or according to Dionysius, the ten blessed orders:

1. Seraphim; 2. Cherubim; 3. Throni; 4. Deminationis; 5. Potestates; 6. Virtutes; 7. Principatus; 8. Archangeli; 9. Angeli; and 10, Animae Beatae.

The Hebrews, therefore, call them: Haioth, Hacades, Ophanim; Aralim; Hasmalim; Seraphim; Malachim Elohim, ben Elohim; Cherubim; Issim.

The ten representative angels are: Matron, Jophiel, Zaphkiel, Camael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, Gabriel, Anima Messiae.

The Nine Choirs of Angels divide Theology into Three Hierarchies.

In the first hierarchy are the Seraphim, Cherubim and Throni. These more than celestial spirits are called gods, or the sons of the gods, because they continually behold the order of divine providence. Being foremost in the goodness of God, they praise Him unceasingly and pray for us.

The second in the being of God, according to form, and the third, in the wisdom of God, stand continually before God.

In the middle hierarchy are the Dominations, Potestates, Virtutes, as spirits of intelligence, to rule the whole world. The first command what the others perform. The second steer that which interfere with the laws of God. The third oversee the heavens and occasionally perform great wonders. These six orders of spirits are never sent upon the earth.

In the lower hierarchy are the Principatus, Archangeli et angeli, which are ministering spirits to oversee earthly affairs.

The first, in general, provide for princes and magistrates, and care for kingdoms and countries, each in his own especial sphere, as Moses declares in his song, Deut. xxxii. 8: "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." And Daniel says, chap. x. 13: "But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me twenty-one days. And Jesus Sirach bears witness, that each nation has its angel as a director. Therefore did the Romans at all times invite the angel of their country. 2. The second are engaged in divine affairs, institute and regulate the worship of God among all men, and present the prayers, offerings and piety of men to God. 3. The third order all things of minor importance, and each one is appointed as a protector to every man.

For this reason the fourth hierarchy are added to the former as the souls of heavenly bodies; Animae Corporum Coelestium, the souls of Hervos, vel Heroas and of the Martyrum. They first control the light, and the influence of the strong, so that their power may proceed from God to the lower regions. The second are the chosen souls of the redeemed. The third are the souls of the innocent martyrs and followers of God, who offered up their lives, amid pain and suffering, out of love to God.

Since God the Father gave to the Son, our Mediator, Saviour and Redeemer, all power in heaven and on earth, and the angels of the great name of God and Jesus, which is the first might in God, it flows, accordingly, into the twelve angels and twelve signs, through which it spreads into the seven planets, and, as a natural consequence, into all other servants and instruments of God, until it penetrates into the lower regions, so that even an insignificant herb may develop a peculiar power, even if it is decayed, and so the angel of man appears before God at all times bearing his prayers into his presence.

Without the name of Jesus the old Hebrew cabalists can accomplish nothing in the present day, with old arts as they were used by the Fathers. Therefore, it is, that all creatures fear and honor him. All men who believe in him are enlightened through his brightness, our souls are united with him, and the divine power emanating from him is communicated to us.

OF THE MOVEMENT OF THE HEAVENLY POWERS.

The first course in Mundo Coelesti watches day and night. Primum Mobile Rechet Hagallalim. It continues from morning until night.

From these the Heathens divided the angels into thirty-three orders. The first great light, communicates light, life and station out of the first course, and opposes others in the Saphaera Zodiaci, causes summer and winter, the spring of all the things of the elements: Hebrew Masloth, goes from evening to morning according to the twelve signs of the heavens.

But even if all things have their existence from God, the great First Cause, we should not despise other causes, according to changes in time, in the year, in the month, day and hour, neither should we regard these causes exclusively, and forget God, for in this manner heathen idolatry was instituted. For this reason God does not regard time, because it robs him of his honor. For the heathens experienced that the heavenly spirits were not united with their bodies, as our souls are united with our bodies, but they could rejoice in the presence of God, and prepare their bodies without much labor to work with the lower creatures of God. They regarded the celestial spirits as gods, and conferred divine honors upon them. Very often the Jews turned away from God and worshipped the host of heaven, and therefore the wrath of God was kindled against them. But on account of the order of all things, God has set them before us as his instruments, and which we, on account of their honorable office, are to regard as the noblest creation of God, and that we should honor them, next to God, according to their station, not as gods but as creatures, which he has appointed as twelve princes over the twelve gates of heaven, that they may admit what they received from the divine name, transposed twelve times.

Ezekiel writes: "The laws of the twelve tribes of Israel were thus written, and God Tetragrammaton ruled over them. Thus it is written in Revelations, that the stones in our heavenly city are planted in the ground, or that the Church of Christ is represented by the twelve names of the Apostles, including twelve angels and of them the name of Jesus, who received all the power of the Father, so that the heavens will receive what the angels give to them according to the will of God. If then an Intelligentia is ascribed to each heaven, each star and department of heaven must have a distinct and separate power and influence and, therefore, must also have a distinct Intelligentiam. Therefore, there are twelve princes of angels, who represent the twelve signs of the Zodiac, and thirty-six, who represent so many Decuriis, and seventy-two angels, who represent so many Quinariis of heaven, of the seventy-two nations and languages of man. Likewise seven angels of the hosts for the seven heavens of the seven planets, to rule the world, etc. Also, four angels who represent the Triplicatibus of the twelve signs of the Zodiac and the four elements.

All of these have their names and signs which the philosophers used in their works, signs, images, clothes, mirrors, rings, cards, wax-figures, as if they had a sun-work before them, and they called them the names of the sun and his angels, and likewise of others, etc.

In the third place, they designated the lowest angels as servants. These they distributed over the world, and named them after the seven planets, and these have their special course after the four elements and after the four parts of the air and earth—of the daytime several Diurnos, several Nocturnos, several Merailianos, not that they are subordinate to the influence of the stars as the body which they represent, but that they are more nearly related to the star-body-kind-time than others, otherwise they might be everywhere, as each human being has three angels, for God has ordained that each human being shall have his good angel as a protector, who also strengthens the spirit and urges and exhorts us to what is good and commendable, that we may fly from what is fati malignitatem. And so every man has also an evil spirit, who controls the desires of the flesh and awakens the lusts of the heart; between these two angels there is a constant struggle for supremacy, and to whichever man gives the preference, he will receive the victory; and if the evil angel triumphs, then man becomes his servant; should the good angel prove the stronger, then he will cleanse the soul and save man from destruction. The angel and his impulses come from the stars. In the third place are the Genii of man who govern birth, and are joined to each perfection in man. These are recognized from the star which is the Lord of the births. The Chaldeans seek this Genium in the sun and moon. Astronomers would have the good Genium out of the eleventh house, which, on this account, they call bonum Genium. The evil one out of the sixth house. But each one will learn to know him through natural inclination, to which every one was inclined from his youth. On this account he is called the birth-angel, who is sent into the world by God. Of this the Psalmist says: "Thou hast made the spirit of man as a flame of fire." For experience teaches us, that the flame of fire and the spirit of birth may be separated without injury to man, that we can learn hidden things from him if he is good and true. But he is powerless over the members of birth. If, however, a virgin or a companion becomes marriageable, he may be liberated from the glass, and our time of life will be extended.

Moreover, God has endowed man with a divine character, through the number Phahad—the left-hand sword of God, through which man becomes a curse to all creatures. And then again he has another character in the number of God, Hesed—the right and sceptre of God, through which he finds favor in the sight of God and all his creatures. An evil conscience is the judge of men, but a good conscience is his happiness. Therefore, through the other divine numbers, and through the angels and stars a man becomes impressed with signs and characters of conscience, which causes him to be happy at one time and unhappy at another.

On this account, if a man has committed murder, theft, or any other act which his conscience condemns, he can be brought to a confession of his guilt through persistent calling upon the name of God, for his conscience will then give him no rest until he returns what he has stolen, or until he has suffered the punishment due to his crime. Therefore, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, take three small pieces of wood from the door-sill over which the thief passed in leaving the place where he committed the theft, place them within a wagon-wheel, and then through the hub of the wheel say the following words: "I pray thee, thou Holy Trinity, that thou mayest cause A, who stole from me B, a, C, to have no rest or peace until he again restores me that which he has stolen." Turn the wheel round three times and replace it again on the wagon. Nevertheless, all pious Christians, who have any regard for their future happiness, should carefully avoid all superstitious matters and should beware of using the holy name of God unworthily, holding it in the greatest reverence lest they bring upon themselves eternal punishment. If a man knows himself and realizes that he is created in the image and likeness of God, he will acknowledge God the Creator before all things, and afterward the world and all its creatures. From the high spirits, angels and the heavens, he has his portion, and from the elements, animals, vegetation and stones, he has within himself everything that he desires to obtain.

If a man knows how to appropriate the particular place, time, order, bulk, proportion and mental organization of any one, he can attract and draw them, just as a magnet attracts iron: but he must first be prepared, just as the magnet must be fashioned by the file and charged with electricity. To this end the soul must first be purified, and dedicated to God through faith; a pure heart and constant joy in the spirit are requisites. He must possess love to God and his fellow-man, and then he may arrive at a perfect state and become like unto the Son of God. He will become united with God, and will once more be like him. It is not given to angels nor to any creature to unite with God, but only to man, and he may become his son; and when this takes place, so that he overcomes himself, he overcomes and can draw to him all other creatures and command their obedience.

But our spirit, word and act, have no power in magic and knowledge, if they are not everywhere strengthened by the word of God, which we should hear often. We must pray to God without ceasing, live a sober, temperate and unstained life; we must live in a continual state of repentance, give alms and help the poor, for Christ has not said in vain: "Make unto you friends with the unrighteous Mammon, so that he will receive you into eternal habitations," that is, apply your wealth and abundance to the support of the poor, that they may receive their daily bread from you and be satisfied. Christ says: "What ye have done unto the least of mine, that have ye also done unto me." These are the friends that will lead us to a divine abode in heaven, where we shall receive a thousandfold and life eternal. On the other hand there are others who will be rejected. For Christ also says: "I was hungry and thirsty and ye gave me no meat and drink, depart from me ye workers of iniquity, into outer darkness."

Therefore, by fasting, praying, giving alms, preparing the souls of the believing for the temple, we may become co-heirs of heavenly gifts, which the Most High will confer upon us in this life if we know how to use them properly.

Since all things have their life and being from God, so the proper name of everything was taken from the being of that thing, and all things derive an influence from the Creator if they have been appropriately named, for as God brings forth all things through the influence of heaven and the operation of the planets, even so the names of all things have been given in accordance with some quality of the thing named by him who counts the stars. And thus God led all creatures to Adam in order to have them named, and their names indicated some peculiar quality or part possessed by each. Therefore, each name that has a meaning, shows by comparison with the heavenly influence an inherent qualification of the object, although it is frequently changed. When, however, both meanings of the name harmonize, then the will-power and natural power become identical. Moreover, the celestial office to which man is ordained by God, endows him with power to confer life, and tells him what to encourage, what to elevate, what to suppress in his cause Sphaera, and to perform wonderful works with full devotion toward God, etc.

What Man Receives from the Order of Angels.

Man becomes strengthened with wonderful power through the order of angels, so that he declares the divine will.

From the Seraphim, that we cling with fervent love.

From the Cherubim, enlightenment of the mind, power and wisdom over the exalted figures and images, through which we can gaze upon divine things, etc.

From the Thronis, a knowledge of how we are made and constituted, that we may direct our thoughts upon eternal things.

From Dominationibus, assistance to bring into subjection our daily enemies, whom we carry with us constantly, and enabling us to attain salvation.

From Potestatibus, protection against human enemies of life.

From Virtutibus, God infuses strength into us, enabling us to contend against the enemies of truth and reward, that we may finish the course of our natural life.

From Principatibus, that all things become subject to man, that he may grasp all power, and draw unto himself all secret and supernatural knowledge.

From Archangelis, that he may rule over all things that God has made subject to him, over the animals of the field, over the fishes of the sea, and over the birds of the air.

From the Angelis he receives the power to be the messenger of the Divine will.

What Man may Obtain from the Twelve Signs.

As each creature receives its spirit, number and measure from God, so also each creature has its time.

In the Ram, the vegetables of earth obtain new vigor, the trees sap, and females become better adapted to propagate the human species. In this sign the fecundity of all creatures is limited and regulated. It has Sunday for its peculiar time and end.

In the Bull, all transactions and enterprises are prospered and fostered, so that they may go forward according to the will of God, but to this end constant prayers are necessary, and particularly on Sunday.

In the Twins, the angels have power over bodily changes and travel from one place to another over the heavens and through the course of the stars—have power over the motion of the waters in rivers and in the sea, cause love between brethren, friends and neighbors, and give warning against dangers, persons and objects.

In the Scorpion, the angels rule over legacies and riches, over treasure and treasure-seekers—are calculated by nature to confer power, the art of speaking, and to enlighten the mind in holy things, in like manner as did the apostles in their unceasing prayers to God at Pentecost.

In the Lion, the angels have power to move every living thing, to multiply their species, to watch, and in certain manners to judge. And through the gift of God they confer Physicam, Medicinam and Alchymiam.

In the Virgin, the spirits have power to subvert kingdoms, to regulate all conditions, to discriminate between master and servant, to command evil spirits, to confer perpetual health, and give to man Musicum, Logicism and Ethicam.

In the Balance, the angels derive from God great power, inasmuch as the sun and moon stand under this sign. Their power controls the friendship and enmity of all creatures.

They have power over danger, warfare, over quarrels and slander—lead armies in all quarters of the earth, cause rain, and give to man Arithmeticism, Astronomiam, Geometriam.

In the Scorpion, the angels have power over suffering and terror, over which man makes against God, over common privileges. They compel the conscience to obedience, and also force devils to keep their agreements with men, and vice versa. They govern the life and death of all creatures, have power over departed souls, and give to man Theologiam, Metaphysicam and Geomantiam.

In the Archer, they have power over the four elements, lead the people from one far country to another, regulate the changes of the elements and the propagation of animals.

In the Goat, the angels give high worldly honors, worthiness and virtue, such as Adam enjoyed in Paradise in his innocence. They also enlighten the understanding and confer human reason.

In the Aquitarius, angels keep man in good health, and teach him what is injurious to him, make him contented, and teach him through the command of God the mysteries of heaven and of nature.

In the Fish, the angels compel the evil spirits to become subject to man, protect the pious, so that the great enemy cannot harm him.

The Twelve Signs are Divided into Four Triplicitates.

The twelve angels, which represent the twelve signs, are called in the Apoc. Malchidael, Asmodel, Ambriel, Muriel, Verchiei, Hamaliel, Zuriel, Barbiel, Aduachiel, Hanaeb, Gambiel, Barehiel. Over this the angels also received names from the stars over which they rule as the twelve signs: Teletial, Zariel, Tomimil, Sartimel, Ariel, Bataliel, Masuiel, Aerahiel, Ehesatiel, Gediel, Doliel, Dagymel, which means the same as if expressed in Latin: Ariel, Tawnel, Geminiel, Cancriel, Leonial, Virginiel, Libriel, Scorpiel, Sagitariel, Capriel, Aquariel, Pisciel.

This method of obtaining all kinds of things with peculiar power, in the twelve signs, is described in many kinds of books. The seal of Hermetis teaches how the powers of the heavenly influence may be obtained under each sign in a crystal or gem; that they are constellated, and then, at each period of the twelve signs the appropriate character of each is divided into four parts, each of which is represented by an angel. Therefore, each of the twelve stories in the badge of office of Aaron (Solomonis) was constellated, and the Amorites possessed a constellated stone for each idol, and to this end they consecrated the book.

Further, King Solomon teaches a hidden Almadel or a Geometrical figure bearing upon the twelve signs of heaven, which he calls heights, and gives to each height seven or eight names of princes. There are also many other methods for seeking after the powers of heaven in the twelve signs, which, for good reasons, must not be made known, because they are not mentioned in the Holy Scriptures and were kept secret.

The Planets have Seven Heights and Seven Angels.

The heights are named as follows:

1. Samaym. 2. Raaquin. 3. Taaquin. 4. Machonon. 5. Mathey.
6. Sebul. 7. Arabat.

Of the operations of these, and their angels, office, order, number and measure, an account may be found in a work by Rasiel, which constitutes the Sixth Book Physicum Salomonis and Elementia Magica Petri de Alano, page 574. From this book the book of the angel Tractatu takes its source. (2 Cornel. Agrippa, Lib. 3, page 24; Philosophiae Occul, 377, 575.)

There are seven exalted Throne Angels, which execute the commands of Potestates, viz:

1. Ophaniei. 2. Tythagara. 3. Barael. 4. Quelamia. 5. Anazimur. 6. Paschar. 7. Boel.

These are named with the name of God, through which they were created, belong to the first heaven.

SCHAMAYM GABRIEL.

The second heaven, Raaquia, has twelve lords, or twelve heights of angels, who are placed over all. Zachariel, Raphael.

The third heaven, Saaquin, has three princes, Jabniel, Rabacyel, Dalquiel; they rule over fire, and each has his subordinate angel. The principal prince of angels in this height is called  Anahel, Avahel.

The fourth heaven, Machon, by his angels leads the sun by day, and through other angels by night. The chief angel is called Michael.

The fifth heaven, Matthey, alý Machon, has the prince Samael who is served by two millions of angels. These are divided among the four quarters of the world; in each quarter three, who control the twelve months, and over these are twelve chief angels.

The sixth heaven, Zebul, has for its prince, Zachiel, with two millions of angels. The angel Zebul is placed over these during the day, and another angel, Sabath, during the night. They rule over kings, create fear, and give protection from enemies.

Arabath, the seventh heaven, has for its prince the angel Cassiel.

The names of the angels of the seven planets are as follows:

Zaphiel (Saturn), Zadkiel (Jupiter), Camael (Mars), Raphael (Sun), Haniel (Venus), Michael (Mercury), Gabriel (Moon).

There are seven princes who stand continually before God, to whom are given the spirit-names of the planets. They are called Sabathiel, Zedekiel, Madimiel, Semiel, or Semishia, Nogahel, Coahabiath or Cochabiel, Jareahel or Jevanael, for the planets are called for themselves:

Sabachay, through which God sends hunger and tribulation upon the earth.

Sodeck, through him come honor and favor, right and holiness of man.

Modym, through him wrath, hate, lies, and war.

Hamnia, from him comes light, and the power of distinguishing between time and life.

Noga, from him food and drink, love and consolation.

Cochab, from him proceeds all trade and commerce.

Lavahan, causes all things to increase and decrease.

I, Solomon, acknowledge that in the hours Sabachay Madym it is burdensome to labor, but in the hours Zadeck and Noga labor is light. During other hours labor is middling, sometimes good and occasionally bad.

Some writers, as for example, Cornelius Agrippa, Occult, Philos. Lib. 3, chap. xvi., call the seven regents of the world by other names, which are distributed among the powers of other stars as Orphiel, Zechariel, Samael, Michael, Anael, Raphael, Gabriel, and each of these rules the world three hundred and fifty-four years and four months. A few give the Angel-year at three hundred and sixty-five years—as many years as there are days in our year. Others, one hundred and forty-five years, Apac, twenty-one Spiritu, Septem in Conspectu Dei Throni sunt quos reperi etima presidere Planetis.

The names of the seven angels over the seven heavens must be uttered first, and afterward the names of those over the seven planets, over the seven days of the week, over the seven metals, over the seven colors, these must be uttered in the morning of each day of the week.

Invocation of Angels.

Oh, ye aforesaid angels, ye that execute the commands of the Creator; be willing to be present with me in the work which I have undertaken at this time, and help me to finish it, and be ye my attentive hearers and assistants, that the honor of God and my own welfare may be promoted.

Over this there are twenty-eight angels who rule over the twenty-eight houses of the moon, viz: Asariel, Cabel, Dirachiel, Scheliel, Amnodiell, Amixiel, Ardesiel, Neriell, Abdizriel, Jazeriel, Cogediell, Ataliell, Azerniell, Adriel, Amutiell, Iciriell, Bethuaell, Geliell, Requiell, Abrunaell, Aziell, Tagried, Abheiel, Amnixiell. And each moon has her own guardian and ruler, and these are described in Lib. 2, Raziellis.

A man must also know how to divide the months, days and hours into four parts, for God has ordained that all things can best be perfected on suitable days and at proper hours.

The angels placed over the four parts of heaven are : Scamijm, Gabriel, Cabrael, Adrael, Madiel, Boamiel.

Alscius, Loquel, Zaniel, Hubaiel, Baccanael, Janael, Carpatiel.

Elael, Unaël, Wallum, Vasans, Hiaijel, Usera, Staijel.

Ducaniel, Baabiel, Barquiel, Hannu, Anaël Nahijmel.

In the second heaven, Raquie, the following angels serve.

Nathan, Catroijs, Betaabat.

Yeseraije, Yuacon :

Thiel, Jareael, Yanael, Venetal, Vebol, Abuionij, Vetameil.

Milliel, Nelepa, Baliel, Calliel, Holij, Batij, Jeli.

There are also, over the four quarters of the globe, four high angels.

Over the morning winds, Michael rules.

Over the evening winds, Raphael rules.

Over the midnight winds, Gabriel rules.

Over the noonday winds, Nariel or Uriel rules.

THE ANGELS OF THE ELEMENTS ARE :

Of the air, Cherub.

Of the water, Tharsis.

Of the earth, Ariel.

Of the fire, Seruph or Nathaniel.

These are all great princes, and each has many legions of angels under him; they have great power in governing their planets, times, signs of the year, month, day, and hour, and in their part of the world and wind.

In the third heaven, Saaquin, the Angels are :

Sarquiel, Qnadissu, Caraniel, Tariescorat, Amael, Husael.

Turiel, Coniel, Babel, Kadie, Maltiel, Hufaltiel.

Faniel, Peneal, Penac, Raphael, Carniel, Deramiel.

Porna, Saditel, Kyniel, Samuel, Vascaniel, Famiel.

In the fourth heaven, Machon, the Angel of the Divisions serves :

Carpiel, Beatiel, Baciël, Raguel, Altel, Fabriël, Vionatraba.

Anahel, Papliel, Uslael, Burcat, Suceratos, Cababili.

In the fifth heaven, Machijn, the following Angels serve in four divisions :

Friagne, Cnael, Damoel, Calzas, Arragon.

Lacana, Astrgna, Lobquin, Sonitas, Jael, Jasiael, Naei.

Rahumiël, Jahijniël, Baijel, Seraphiël, Mathiël, Seraël.

Sacriël, Maianiël, Gadiël, Hosael, Vianiël, Erastiël.

In the sixth heaven, Zebul; and seventh, Arabat, over the fifth heaven.

Should no Spiritus Aeris or divisions be found, then pronounce in the direction of the four quarters of the world, the following words :

Oh, great exalted and adored God, from all eternity.

Oh, wise God, day and night I pray unto Thee, oh, most merciful God, that I may complete my work to-day, and that I may understand it perfectly, through our Lord Jesus Christ, Thou that livest and reignest, true God from eternity to eternity.

Oh, strong God, mighty and without end.

Oh, powerful and merciful God.

On Saturday call upon God in the words which he gave in Paradise in which is the name of God.

Oh, holy and merciful God of Israel, the highest terror and fear of Paradise, the Creator of heaven and earth (as before).

 Quere hoc signum.

END OF THE FIRST DIVISION.

SECOND DIVISION.

Sepher Schimmusch Tehillim;

OR,

Use of the Psalms,

FOR THE PHYSICAL WELFARE OF MAN.

A fragment out of the PRACTICAL KABALA, together with an Extract from a few other Kabalistical Writings. With five Illustrations upon Four Tables.

Translated by GODFERY SELIG, Lect. Publ. Acad. Lips.: 1788.

This eminent publisher and translator insists stringently that only persons of a moral character can expect success in the use of the foregoing method.

FROM THE PREFACE OF THE TRANSLATOR.

It cannot be denied that true, wise and enlightened Kabalists lived at one time, and that some still live. But such do not wander from place to place, offering their art for sale, in order that they may accumulate wealth, but they are satisfied to remain quietly in the pillared palace of Solomon, where they are constantly employed in gathering divine wisdom, so that (as they express it), they may finally become worthy to receive the hidden gifts from above. I myself know such a man, who obtained exalted wisdom from the Kabala, and who, notwithstanding his extreme poverty, never undertakes a kabalistic process for money. When I once asked him why he refused to write a desired amulet for a noble lord, who offered him a large sum for his services, he answered me with an adage from the well-known Pirke Awoth (Extract or Fragment from the Fathers):

"Deitschtammasch Betaggo Chalof," that is to say, "whosoever accepts the crown for his reward, will perish suddenly. Not for all the money in the world would I do such a thing. But if I can assist my needy neighbor therewith, then I will do what I can, trusting in the omnipotence of the Most Holy, without looking for a reward. For my necessary support I do not feel any concern, for the Almighty has methods to support me if I trust in Him. Why, he even cares for the sparrow."

It is particularly remarkable that the greatest and most genuine Kabalists of the Jewish nation were nearly all followers and disciples of the blessed Saviour of the world, and they are so still, as I can prove satisfactorily, by numerous passages from their writings and prayers. Let this suffice for this one kind of men. But that Kabalists live and still live, who engaged in experiments, and who performed wonderful works, and who will yet do wonderful things, is also an undeniable fact, unless we are prepared to condemn all that was ever said upon this subject by renowned men of wisdom.

The celebrated and well-known Prussian Hussar, Lord of Archenwood declares, in a description of London, that there lives a man in that city, whose name is Doctor Falcon, who is known to be a great Kabalist, and who is visited and consulted by the most honorable and intelligent people of London. He states further, that this same Dr. Falcon, lived not very long since in Brussels under the name of Jude Chayim Schmul Fulk, who according to the evidence of the French Duke of Nancy, in his published memoirs of kabalistical processes, performed the most astonishing feats.

I confidently hope and trust, and I can assert without hesitation, that my little book cannot have a tendency to foster superstition. Take it for granted that one of my readers should choose to employ one of the methods described in these pages in order to accomplish a desired object, his eagerness to satisfy curiosity will soon disappear when he takes into consideration the hard terms and strict morality which are required to avail himself of them in order to derive any benefit or be successful in their use.

Before concluding my preface, it is necessary to give the reader some instruction concerning the arrangement of this volume. We find in it, for instance, single words, names, sentences, and indeed entire experiments, printed in the Hebrew and Chaldean languages. This fact should not prevent any one from purchasing the book. Because all the words printed in Hebrew and Chaldaic, which are intended to be impressed upon the mind, are also printed in English in plain terms, and they have been carefully translated. So far as the Hebrew passages are concerned, the meaning of each passage and experiment follows immediately in English, or it is placed beneath the Hebrew expression. I have made this arrangement in compliance with a request from a number of prominent persons, to make sure that the translation is genuine and correct. The chapter and verse of Holy Scripture, where all passages quoted may be found, are also correctly recorded.

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE OF THE KABALISTIC PUBLISHER.

It is universally known and acknowledged, that we are named after the most holy name of the Ruler of the World, and that we receive the holy decalogue or the written law from him. It is further well known that in addition to the laws which he gave to Moses engraven upon stone, he also gave to him certain verbal laws, by which, through his protracted stay upon the mountain Sinai, where all doctrines, explanations of mysteries, holy names of God and the angels, and particularly how to apply this knowledge to the best interest of man, were entrusted to him. All these doctrines, which God pronounced good, but which were not generally made known, and which in the course of time were called The Kabala, or Traditions, Moses communicated, during his life, to Joshua, his successor. Joshua handed them over to the elders, the elders gave them to the judges, and from the judges they descended to the prophets. The prophets entrusted them to the men of the great synagogue, and these gave them unto the wise men, and so the Kabala was handed down from one to the other—from mouth to mouth—to the present day. Therefore do we know that in the Thora are many names of the Most High and his angels, besides deep mysteries, which may be applied to the welfare of man, but which, on account of the perverseness of humanity and to guard against their abuse, have been hidden from the great mass of human beings.

Everything that I have here stated is as clear as the sun, and needs no further proof, and it is equally clear and incontrovertible that the All-merciful gave the Thora in the beginning to promote the best interests of the soul and the body of man at the same time. Therefore has God endowed her with exalted talents, powers and virtues that, with a rational use of her, man may protect himself from danger when no other help is at hand and save himself simply by uttering the words of the living God. On this account, the expression. "For it is thy life," occurs frequently in the Thora. And Solomon says in his Proverbs vi. 22: "When thou goest it shall lead thee, and when thou sleepest it shall keep thee." That the Psalms and the Thora are equal in holiness and worthiness, will not be called in question. Our wise men declare, "He who will daily live closer to God, who deserves to unite his soul with Him, and who is willing to live in the closest communion with him, should often pray the Psalms with fervor and devotion. Happy the man who does this daily and hourly, for his reward will be great." The Psalms are formed and divided into five books, just like the Thora. We can, therefore, implicitly trust in the doctrines of the enlightened Kabalists, when they assert that the Almighty accorded equal talents and powers to the Psalms as he did to the Thora, and that in them many names of the Most High Majesty of God and his angels, besides, many mysteries, are hidden.

Yes, dear reader, you must not doubt. Through a pious life and by a rational use of the Psalms you may obtain the grace of God, the favor of princes and magistrates and the love of your fellow-men. You will be enabled to protect yourself from danger, to escape suffering, and to promote your own welfare.

That this is all true, the contents of the prayer, with which we end each Psalm, and which we are in duty bound to pray, will amply demonstrate. But the correctness of it is also established by the teachings of the Talmud and of the old wise men, who assure us, that many of our famous forefathers availed themselves of apparently supernatural means from time to time, to protect their best interests. The truth of this I can establish by the most trustworthy witnesses; yea, I could even mention some great men, who, by a proper use of the Psalms, performed great works. Such examples are rare. Let it suffice. I present you with a few passages out of standard books, through which you will become fully convinced that the Almighty has given his revealed word true and unexampled talents and power, and that, in an extreme case of necessity, we are permitted to make use of this gift of God, for our own and our neighbor's welfare. As for example, to cast out evil spirits, to relieve deep melancholy and to cure grievous diseases; to set free prisoners who have been unjustly imprisoned; to arrest and resist enemies, opponents, murderers and highway robbers; to quench the fiercest fires; to resist floods of water, to defend innocence and to reveal it, and to foster good fortune, well-being and peace in a general manner.

Read the treatise on this subject, of the excellent Rabbi Schimschon bar Abraham, in his book entitled "Responsiones Raschaba." Examine the words of the enlightened Rabbi Jochanan ben Sackas in his Treatise of the Talmud and Sanhedrin, Chap. ii., where he treats of magical conjurations, and where he asserts and proves that it is allowed, in dangerous and incurable diseases, to make use of words and passages in the Holy Scripture for their cure. You will find more or less similar references in the treatise of Sabbath in the Talmud, as well as in the Responsonibus, by Zemach, son of Simonis, in which the Ninety-second Psalm, with certain prescriptions added, are highly recommended as a certain means to avoid suffering and danger, even in cases of war, fire and similar instances, enabling us to escape unharmed, free, secure and without hindrance.

Under such happy circumstances, it is surely right and proper, that such wholesome knowledge, which up to this day was known but to a few men, and they only the learned, was yet free to all, but found only in the libraries and cabinets of the great, although not generally known, should at least, in some degree, be brought to light.

Since however, I cannot gain my object in any other way than by giving these pages to the world in a printed form, and since they will unavoidably fall into unclean hands, I feel myself constrained, in order to prevent an unworthy use of them, to extend this preface, which might otherwise, very properly have ended here, in laying down a few rules and limits. Do not, however, be discouraged for I am really endeavoring to promote your best interests and shield you from harm.

1. If you are willing to avail yourself of the means indicated, I warn you not to attempt it in a case of extreme necessity, and when there is no other help at hand.

2. If this be so, in experimenting, place your trust in the goodness and power of the Most High and ever blessed God, upon whom you may perhaps have hitherto called under an unknown holy name.

3. The ordained Psalm, for this or the other undertaking, besides the appropriate prayer, you must pray with a broken and contrite heart to God, and in addition to this keep in mind the added holy name with its letters, which are given the wise Kabalists. At the same time you must have your undertaking continually before your eyes.

4. I must say to you, if you wish to console yourself with this help, that you must live in such a manner that no crime or wilful sin can trouble your conscience, for it is well known, that the prayer of the ungodly is not acceptable to God. And herewith I commit you to the protection of the Most High.

OF

The Psalms,

AND

THE MANY PURPOSES TO WHICH THEY MAY BE APPLIED.

Psalm 1.—When a woman is pregnant and fears a premature delivery, or a dangerous confinement, she should write or cause to be written, on a piece of parchment prepared from the pure skin of a deer, the three first verses of the above Psalm, together with the hidden holy name and appropriate prayer contained therein, and place it in a small bag made expressly for that purpose, and suspend it by a string about the neck, so that the bag will rest against her naked body.

The holy name is called Eel Chad, which signifies, great, strong, only God, and is taken from the four following words: Aschre, verse 1; Lo, verse 4; Jatzliach, verse 3; Vederech, verse 6.

The prayer is as follows:

May it please thee, O Eel Chad, to grant unto this woman, N., daughter of R., that she may not at this time, or at any other time, have a premature confinement; much more grant unto her a truly fortunate delivery, and keep her and the fruit of her body in good health. Amen! Selah!

Admonition of the Translator.

Before I proceed further with the translation of the Psalms, it is necessary to insert in this place an admonition, which the author, who wrote only for his own nation, deemed unnecessary, and which, nevertheless, should be addressed to every one.

"Each human being," says the celebrated Kabbalist, Rabbi Isaac Loriga, "except only the ignorant idolator, can by a pious and virtuous life enter into the consecrated temple of the true Kabala, and can avail himself of its benefits without being able to speak or understand the Hebrew language. He can pray, read and write everything in his mother tongue; only the holy name of God and the angels that may occur in the experiment, must, under all circumstances, be written and retained in the mind in the Hebrew tongue (for they must in no case be uttered), because, on the contrary, a wrong direction might otherwise easily be given to the experiment, and consequently it would lose all its holiness, worth and efficiency.

With this pronunciation we must all be well satisfied, and, therefore, I must write all similar words and names, from the letters of which the holy names are taken, in Hebrew. In order, however, that the reader may read all similar occurring names and words in his mind and retain them, I have written all the Hebrew words with English letters together with their meaning.

Psalm 2.—Should you be exposed to danger in a storm at sea, and your life threatened, then recite this Psalm without delay and with becoming reverence, and think respectfully of the holiest name contained therein, namely, Schaddei (which means, mighty God), then immediately utter the prayer belonging thereto, after which write everything together on a fragment of a pot, and in full confidence in the Omnipotent, who fixes the boundary of the sea and restrains its power, throw it into the foaming waves, and you will see marvelous wonders, for the waves will instantly cease their roaring and the storm will be lulled.

The words, the letters of which constitute this holy name, are taken from Rageschu, verse 1; Nossedu, verse 2; and Jozes, verse 9.

The prayer is as follows: "Let it be, Oh, Schaddei! (Almighty God!) Thy holy will, that the raging of the storm and the roaring of the waves may cease, and that the proud billows may be stilled. Lead us, oh, all-merciful Father, to the place of our destination in safety and in good health, for only with Thee is power and might. Thou alone canst help, and Thou wilt surely help to the honor and glory of Thy name. Amen! Selah!

This Psalm is also an effectual remedy against raging headache. The direction is as follows: Write the first eight verses of this Psalm together with the holy name and appropriate prayer, upon pure parchment, and hang it upon the neck of the patient; then pray over him the Psalm with the prayer arranged for it. Do this in humble devotion, and the sufferer will be relieved.

Psalm 3.—Whosoever is subject to severe headache and backache, let him pray this Psalm, with the leading holy names and appropriate prayer contained therein, over a small quantity of olive oil, anoint the head or back while in the act of prayer. This will afford immediate relief. The holy name is, Adon (Lord), and is found in the words, Weatta, verse 3; Baadi, verse 3; Hekizoti, verse 5; and Hascheini, verse 7. The prayer is as follows: Adon (Lord) of the world may it please thee to be my physician and helper. Heal me and relieve me from my severe headache and backache, because I can find help only with Thee, and only with Thee is counsel and action to be found. Amen! — Selah — Selah!

Psalm 4.—If you have been unlucky hitherto, in spite of every effort, then you should pray this Psalm three times before the rising of the sun, with humility and devotion, while at the same time you should impress upon your mind its ruling holy name, and each time the appropriate prayer, trusting in the help of the mighty Lord, without whose will not the least creature can perish. Proceed in peace to execute your contemplated undertaking, and all things will result to your entire satisfaction.

The holy name is called: Jiheje, (He is and will be,) and is composed of the four final letters of the words. Teppillati, verse 2; Selah, verse 5; Jehovah, verse 6; and Toschiweni, verse 9. The prayer is as follows: May it please Thee, oh, Jiheje, to prosper my ways, steps and doings. Grant that my desire may be amply fulfilled, and let my wishes be satisfied even this day, for the sake of Thy great, mighty and praiseworthy name. Amen! — Selah! —

If you wish to accomplish an undertaking by or through another, proceed in all things as already stated above, with this exception: you must change the prayer as follows: Let me find grace, favor and mercy in the eyes of N., son of R., so that he may grant my petition, etc.

Again, if you have a cause to bring before high magistrates or princes, you must pray this Psalm and the closing prayer arranged for it, seven times in succession before the rising of the sun.

By the Translator.

I must be permitted in this place to insert another caution. When it is said N., son or daughter of N., it must be understood that we must first mention the name of the person by whom we wish to be served, and afterward the name of his mother, as, for example, Isaac, son of Sarah, or Dinah daughter of Leah.

Psalm 5.—If you have business to transact with your magistrates or with your princes, and desire to obtain their special favor, then pray this Psalm early at the rising of the sun and in the evening at sunset. Do this three times over pure olive oil, while at the same time you think unceasingly, upon the holy name of Chananjah (merciful God), anoint your face, hands and feet with the oil and say: Be merciful unto me, for the sake of thy great, adorable and holy name, Chananjah, turn the heart of my prince to me, and grant that he may regard me with gracious eyes, and let me find favor and courtesy with him. Amen! — — Selah! — —

The holy name is found in the words: Chapez, verse 5; Nechini, verse 9; Nechona, verse 10; Hadichemo, verse 12; and Kazinna, verse 14.

Still another peculiarity of this Psalm is, when you find notwithstanding the utmost industry and care, your business does not prosper, and you have reason to fear that an evil Masal, that is, an evil star, spirit or destiny is opposing you, then pray this Psalm daily, even to the last verse with great devoutness, and you will soon find yourself in more favorable circumstances.

Psalm 6.—With this Psalm all diseases of the eye may be healed. Read the Psalm for three days successively, and pray the prescribed prayer seven times slowly, in a low tone, and with devotion, and with this keep continually in your mind the holy name of Jeshajah (which means help is with the Lord); believe without a doubt that the Lord can and will help you. The prayer is as follows: Jehovah my Father, may it please Thee, for the sake of the great, mighty, holy and adorable name, Jeshajah Baal Hatschna, that is, Help is with the Lord, (for he is the Lord of help, he can help,) which name is contained in this Psalm, heal me from my diseases, infirmities, and from the pain of my eyes, for thine is the power and the help, and thou alone art mighty enough to help; of this I am certain, and therefore I trust in thee. Amen! — — Selah! — —

Further it is said: If a traveler encounters danger by land or sea, he shall, when there is no other help to hope for, pray this Psalm seven times, and each time with full confidence in the mighty and sure help of the Almighty, and add thereto: Jeshajah, Lord of help! may it be thy holy will and pleasure to assist me in this extremity and to avert this danger from me. Hear me for the sake of thy great and most holy name, for thine is the power and the help. Amen! — Selah! —

The five letters of this holy name contain, according to the prayer, the words: Jehovah al, verse 2; Schuba, verse 6; Oschescha, verse 8; Bewoshn and Vejibbahl, verse 11.

Psalm 7.—When evil persons conspire to render you unfortunate, if your enemies watch for an opportunity to overthrow you, if they pursue you in order to harm you, then take upon the spot where you stand a handful of earth or dust, pray this Psalm and keep in your mind the holy name of Eel Elijon, great, strong, highest God! then throw the dust in the direction of your enemies, uttering a prayer prescribed for this case, and you will find that your enemies will cease their persecutions and leave you undisturbed. The letters of the holy name are found in the words: Aisher, verse 1; Ode, verse 18, (according to the order of Al, bam, and the letters must be transposed), Hoshenei, verse 2; Eli, verse 7; Jadin, verse 9; Jashuf, verse 13; Elijon, verse 18.

The prayer is as follows: Oh, Eel Elijon! great, strong and highest God! may it please thee to change the hearts of my enemies and opposers, that they may do me good instead of evil, as thou didst in the days of Abraham when he called upon Thee by this holy name. (Gen. xiv. 22.) Amen! — Selah! —

If you have incurred the ill-will of an enemy, whose cunning power and vengeance you have reason to fear, you should fill a pot with fresh water from the well, and pronounce over it the twelve last verses of this Psalm, namely, the words: "Arise, Jehovah! in thy wrath!" Pronounce these four times, and at the same time think of the holy name of Eel Elijon, and of your enemy, and pray each time. "Humble and overthrow, Oh! Eel Elijon, mine enemy, N., son of R., that he may not have the power to provoke or to injure me." Amen! After this prayer, pour the water upon a spot at your enemy's residence, or at a place where he must pass over it, and by doing this you will overcome him.

If you have a case to decide before the court, and you have reasons to fear an unfavorable or partial verdict, then pray this Psalm slowly before you appear in the presence of the judge, thinking at the same time of Eel Elijon and of the righteousness of your cause, and as you approach the judge pray as follows: Oh, Eel Elijon! turn thou the heart of the judge to favor my best interests, and grant that I may be fully justified when I depart. Give unto my words power and strength and let me find favor. Amen! — Selah! —

Psalm 8.—If you wish to secure the love and good will of all men in your business transactions, you should pray this Psalm three days in succession after sundown, and think continually of the holy name of Rechmial, which signifies great and strong God of love, of grace and mercy. Pronounce at each time the appropriate prayer over a small quantity of olive oil, and anoint the face as well as the hands and feet. The letters composing the holy name are found in the words: Addir, verse 2; Jareach, verse 4; Adam, verse 5; Melohim, verse 6; Tanis chilehu, verse 7. The prayer reads as follows: May it please thee, Oh, Rechmial Eel to grant that I may obtain love, grace and favor in the eyes of men according to thy holy will. Amen!—Selah!—

Psalm 9.—The principal attribute of this Psalm according to the precept is, that it is an unfailing remedy in the restoration of male children, who are feeble in health, when no medicines and help are at hand. This Psalm should also be prayed against the power and malignity of enemies. In the first instance write this Psalm, with its holy name, upon pure parchment, with a new pen, and hang it around the patient's neck. Afterward repeat the prayer with reverence, and think at the same time of the holy name of Eheje Aischu Eheje, that is, I am he that will be, and utter the following prayer: All-merciful Father! for the sake of thy mighty, adorable and holy name, Eheje Aischer Eheje, may it please thee to take away from N., son of R., the illness [here name the disease] from which he suffers, and relieve him from his pains. Make him whole in soul, body and mind, and release him during his life from all plagues, injury and danger, and be thou his helper. Amen.

In the second case repeat this Psalm and pray devoutly: May it be agreeable to thy will for the sake of thy most holy name Eheje Aisher Eheje, to release me from the power of my enemies and opposers, and to protect me from their persecutions, as thou once didst protect the Psalmists from the enemies who pursued him. Amen.—Selah!

The letters of this holy name are in the words: Ode, 2; Haojeff, verse 7 and verse 16, and in alphabetical order in the At Basch.

Psalm 10.—If any one is plagued with an unclean, restless and evil spirit, let him fill a new earthen pot with water from the spring, and in the name of the patient, pour into it pure olive oil, and pronounce over it this Psalm nine times, keeping in mind constantly the adorable name of Eel Mez, which means Strong God of the oppressed, and at each ending of the Psalm: May it be thy most holy will, Oh, Eel Mez, to heal the body and soul of N., son of R., and free him from all his plagues and oppressions: wilt thou strengthen him in soul and body and deliver him from evil. Amen!—Selah!

The holy name may be found in the words: Alah, verse 6; Lamma, Anawin, verse 16, and Haasez, verse 17.

Psalm 11.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with feelings of devotion, and with it keeps constantly in mind the holy name of Pele, that is, Wonderful, and who besides utters a suitable prayer to God, he will be safe from all persecution, and will not have any great evil to fear.

The holy name is in the words: Ofel, verse 2; Paal, verse 3, and Adam. The closing prayer may be as follows: Adorable, mighty and holy God Pele! with thee is advice, action and power, and only thou canst work wonders. Turn away from me all that is evil, and protect me from the persecution of evil men, for the sake of the great name Pele. Amen.—Sela.

Psalm 12.—This Psalm possesses similar power, action and worth as the foregoing. The holy name is Aineel, which means Strong God! my Father! and is found in the words of the sixth verse of Ewjonim, Akum Lo. The prayer is as follows: Almighty Father, my God Aineel! grant that all conspiracies against me may be set at naught; turn away from me all danger and injury, and thine is the kingdom and the power. Amen.—Selah!

Psalm 13.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with devotion, together with the proper prayer belonging thereto, and thinks at the same time of the powerful name of Essiel, that is, My help is the mighty God, will be safe for the next twenty-four hours from an unnatural death and from all bodily sufferings and punishments. The prayer is as follows: Protect me according to thy good will and pleasure from violent, sudden and unnatural death, and from all other evil accidents and severe bodily afflictions, for thou art my help and my God, and thine is the power and the glory. Amen.—Selah.

According to tradition this Psalm is also a good cure for dangerous and painful diseases of the eyes. The patient must procure a plant that is good for the eyes, and with this must pray this Psalm with a suitable prayer, trusting firmly in the certain help of the mighty Essiel, and then bind the plant upon his eyes. The letters composing this holy name are contained in the words: Ezoth, verse 3; Mismor, verse 1; Jarum, verse 3; Aneni, verse 4; Ojewi, verse 5, and Jagel, verse 6.

Psalm 14.—Whoso prays this Psalm in childlike faith and trust in the most holy name, Eel enunet, that is, the true God, or God of Truth, and prays the prayer belonging to it daily, will find favor with all men, and will be free from slander and mistrust. The prayer is as follows: "May it please thee, Oh! Eel summet, to grant me grace, love and favor with all men whose help I need. Grant that all may believe my words, and that no slander may be effective against me to take away the confidence of men. Thou canst do this, for thou turnest the hearts of men according to thy holy will, and liars and slanderers are an abomination to thee. Hear me for the sake of thy name. Amen.—Selah!

The letters composing this holy name are found in the words: Elohim, verse 1; Maskiel, verse 2; Echad, verse 3; Ammi, verse 4, and Azat, verse 6.

Psalm 15.—Against the presence of an evil spirit, insanity and melancholy, pray this Psalm with the prayer belonging to it, and the holy name Iali, which means: My Lord! or, The Lord, too, is mine, over a new pot filled with well-water that was drawn for this express purpose, and with this water bathe the body of the patient. The prayer which must be repeated during the process of washing, is as follows: May it be thy will, O God, to restore N., son of R., who has been robbed of his senses, and is grievously plagued by the devil, and enlighten his mind for the sake of thy holy name Iali. Amen.—Selah.

The three letters of this holy name are found in the words: Jagur, verse 1; Ragal, verse 3, and Jimmot, verse 5.

He who otherwise prays this Psalm with reverence will be generally received with great favor.

Psalm 16.—This Psalm is important and can be profitably employed in different undertakings. As for example, 1st, If any one has been robbed, and wishes to know the name of the robber, he must proceed as follows: Take mud or slime and sand out of a stream, mix them together; then write the names of all suspected persons upon small slips of paper and apply the mixture on the reverse side of the slips; afterward lay them in a large and clean basin, filled for this purpose with fresh water from the stream—lay them in the water one by one, and at the same time pray this Psalm over them ten times with the prayer adapted to it keeping in mind at the same time the name of Caar, that is, Living, which name is found in the words of the sixth verse, as follows: Chabalim, and Alei, and if the name of the real thief is written upon the slips, that upon which his name is written will rise to the surface. The prayer is as follows: Let it be thy will, Eel Caar, the Living God to make known the name of the thief, who stole from me (here name that which was stolen). Grant that the name of the thief, if it is among the names, may arise before thy eyes, and thus be made known to mine and all others who are present, that thy name may be glorified: grant it for the sake of thy holy name. Amen.—Selah!

2. Whoever prays this Psalm daily with reverence, and childlike trust upon the eternal love and goodness of God, directed to circumstances, will have all his sorrows changed into joy.

Finally, it is said, that the daily praying of this Psalm will change enemies into friends, and will disperse all pain and sorrow.

Psalm 17.—A traveler, who prays this Psalm early in the morning, with ardor, together with the proper prayer, in the name of Jah, will be secure from all evil for twenty-four hours. The prayer is as follows: May it be thy holy will, Oh, Jah, Jenora, to make my journey prosperous, to lead me in pleasant paths, to protect me from all evil, and to bring me safely back to my loved ones, for thy mighty and adorable name's sake. Amen.

The two letters of the holy name Jah are taken from the words, Shod-dini, verse 9, and Mirmah, verse 1.

Psalm 18.—If robbers are about to attack you, pray this Psalm quickly but fervently, with the prayer belonging to it, with confidence in the holiest name of Eel Jah, that is, mighty, all-merciful and compassionate God, the robbers will leave you suddenly, without inflicting the slightest injury upon you. The letters necessary to make the holy name of God are contained in the words, Aisher, verse 1; Shoal, verse 1; Tamin, verse 33, and Haol, verse 47.

The prayer is the following: "Mighty, all-merciful and compassionate God, Eel Jah! may it be pleasing to thy most holy will, to defend me against approaching robbers, and protect me against all enemies, opposers and evil circumstances, for thine is the power and thou canst help. Hear me for the sake of thy most holy name, Eel Jah. Amen.—Selah!

Is there a sick person with you, with whom the usual bodily remedies have failed, fill a small flask with olive oil and water, pronounce over it, with reverence, the eighteenth Psalm, anoint all the limbs of the patient, and pray a suitable prayer in the name of Eel Jah, and he will soon recover.

Psalm 19.—During a protracted and dangerous confinement take earth from a crossroads, write upon it the five first verses of this Psalm, and lay it upon the abdomen of the parturient; allow it to remain until the birth is accomplished, but no longer, and in the meantime pray this entire Psalm seven times in succession, with the proper holy name of God and the appropriate prayer. The holy name of this Psalm consists of two letters from the most holy name Jehovah He, which, according to the tradition of the Kabalists, are of great power, and which embrace the so-called ten Sepiroth or reckonings and other deep mysteries.

The prayer is as follows: Lord of heaven and earth! May it please thee graciously to be with this parturient, N., daughter of R., who is fluctuating between life and death; ameliorate her sufferings, and help her and the fruit of her body that she may soon be delivered. Keep her and her child in perfect health and grant her life, for the sake of the holy name, He. Amen.—Selah!

Do you desire your son to possess an open and broad heart, so that he may become an apt student and understand the lessons placed before him readily, then speak this Psalm over a cup filled with wine and honey, pronounce also the holy name and an appropriate prayer over it, and let the lad drink of it, and your desires will be realized.

Finally, it is claimed that this Psalm is effectual in driving away evil spirits. It is necessary, however, to pray this Psalm, with the holy name and an appropriate prayer, seven times over the person possessed of the evil spirit. The letters of the name He are contained in the words Hashamajim, verse 2, and Begoaeli, verse 6.

Psalm 20.—Mix in a vessel, rose-oil, water and salt, pray over it seven times in the most holy name Jeho, this Psalm and a suitable prayer, in a low voice and with reverence, then anoint with this oil your face and hands, and sprinkle it on your clothing, and you will remain free from all danger and suffering for that day.

Are you summoned to appear before the judge in person, in a judicial trial, you should avail yourself of the above means shortly beforehand, and by so doing you will surely be justified and depart without restraint. The prayer in the last case is as follows: Lord and judge of all the World! Thou holdest the hearts of all men in thy power and movest them according to thy holy will; grant that I may find grace and favor in the sight of my judges and those placed above me in power, and dispose their hearts to my best interests. Grant that I may be favored with a reasonable and favorable verdict, that I may be justified by it, and that I may freely go from hence. Hear me, merciful, beloved Father, and fulfil my desire, for the sake of thy great and adorable name, Jeho. Amen.—Selah.

The letters of the holy name Jeho are contained in the words: Jaanah, verse 2; Sela, verse 4, and Korem, verse 10.

Psalm 21.—During an existing storm at sea, when there is danger at hand, mix rose-oil, water, salt and resin, pronounce over it slowly this Psalm, and the holy name Jehaen, and then pour the consecrated salve into the foaming sea while uttering the following prayer: Lord of the world! Thou rulest the pride of the foaming and roaring sea, and calmest the terrible noise of the waves. May it please thee, for the sake of thy most holy name, Jehach, to calm the storm, and to deliver us mercifully from this danger. Amen. Selah!

The letters of this holy name are contained in the words: Jehovah, verse 2; Duma, verse 14, and Ki, verse 13.

If you have a petition to present to the king, or to some other person in high power, pronounce this Psalm over a mixture of olive oil and resin, and at the same time think of the holy name of Jehach, anoint your face, and pray in faith and in confidence a prayer suitable to your circumstances, and then you may comfort yourself with the assurance that you will be favorably received and receive grace.

Psalm 22.—If a traveler prays this Psalm seven times daily, with the appropriate divine name, Aha, and a prayer arranged according to surrounding circumstances, in full trust in the mighty protection of our exalted and most merciful God, no misfortune will happen to him. Should he travel by water neither pirates nor storms can harm him, and if he travels by land he will be safe from harm, by beasts and men.

The letters of this holy name are found in the words: Eli, verse 2; Assah, verse 33.

Psalm 23.—Should you desire to receive reliable instructions in regard to something through a vision or in a dream, then purify yourself by fasting and bathing, pronounce the Psalm with the holy name Jah seven times, and pray at the end of each repetition: Lord of the World! notwithstanding thy unutterable mighty power, exaltation and glory, thou wilt still lend a listening ear to the prayer of thy humblest creature, and wilt fulfil his desires. Hear my prayer also, loving Father, and let it be pleasing to thy most holy will to reveal unto me in a dream, whether (here the affair of which a correct knowledge is deserved must be plainly stated) as thou didst often reveal through dreams the fate of our forefathers. Grant me my petition for the sake of thy adorable name, Jah. Amen. Selah!

The letters of the holy name Jah, contain the words: Jehovah, verse 1; Napschi, verse 3, and according to the alphabetical order Aasch Bechar, according to which the letters He and Nun become transposed.

Psalms 24 and 25.—Although the contents of these two Psalms differ materially, in respect to their mystical uses, they are equal and alike in power and action. Whoever repeats these Psalms daily in the morning with feelings of devotion, will escape from the greatest danger, and the devastating flood will not harm him.

The holy name is called Eli, and is found in the words of the twenty-fifth Psalm: Elecha, verse 1; Lemaan, verse 11, and Mi, verse 12.

Psalm 26.—When imminent dangers threaten, whether by land or by water, or if some one should be called upon to undergo severe imprisonment, he should pray this Psalm with the indicated holy name of Elohe, and with an appropriate prayer, and then he may confidently look forward to an early release from prison.

You will find the letters of this holy name in the words: Aischer, verse 10; Lischmoa, verse 7; Lo, verse 4 (after the order of At Basch), and Chattaim, verse 9.

Psalm 27.—If you wish to be well and kindly received in a strange city, and desire to be hospitably entertained, repeat this Psalm upon your journey again and again, with reverence, and in full confidence that God will dispose the hearts of men to receive and entertain you kindly.

Remark by the Translator.

Since the author has neither a holy-name nor prayer for the above Psalm, it may be presumed that the frequent repetition of the Psalm is sufficient for all purposes intended.

Psalm 28.—Do you wish your enemy to become reconciled to you, pronounce this Psalm, with the appropriate holy name He, and a suitable prayer, trusting in the power and readiness of the Great Ruler of hearts, and so your wish will be fully realized.

The two letters of this holy name are contained in the words: Ledavid, verse 1, and Haolam, according to the order of At Basch.

Psalm 29.—This Psalm is highly recommended for casting out an evil spirit. The manner of proceeding is as follows: Take even splinters of the osier and seven leaves of a date palm that never bore fruit, place them in a pot filled with water upon which the sun never shone, and repeat over it in the evening, this Psalm with the most holy name of Aha, ten times with great reverence; and then in full trust in the power of God, set the pot upon the earth in the open air, and let it remain there until the following evening. Afterward pour the whole of it, at the door of the possessed, and the Ruach Roah, that is, the evil spirit, will surely depart.

The two letters of this holy name are contained in the words Jehovah, verse 11, and according to the alphabetical order called Ajack Bechar and Habre, verse 2.

Remarks by the Translator.

With this Psalm also there is no prescribed prayer given.

Psalm 30.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily, shall be safe from all evil occurrences. The holy name is Eel, and may be found in the words: Aromimtha, verse 2, and Lemaan, verse 12.

By the Translator.

This Psalm and the following are also without a prescribed prayer.

Psalm 31.—Would you escape slanders, and are you desirous that evil tongues may do you no harm or cause you vexation, repeat this Psalm in a low voice, with commendable devotion, over a small quantity of pure olive oil, and anoint your face and hands with it in the name of Jah.

The letters constituting this holy name are found in the words: Pal teni, verse 2, and Hammesachlim, verse 22.

Remark.

The translator regards it necessary to remark once for all, that prayers especially adapted to these as well as many of the following Psalms are wanting, and that the author undoubtedly thought that the prayers already given would enable each one to extemporize a suitable prayer. This presumption is the more probable, since we find further on in the work, that the author exhorts all to engage in prayer to God, without prescribing any particular form. Another circumstance, however, relates to the holy names, and if these are wanting it was so ordered by the ancient Kabalists, and on this account it should be particularly noted at all times.

Psalm 32.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily receives grace. Love and mercy. With this Psalm will be found neither holy name nor prayer.

Psalm 33.—Have you been unfortunate in respect to the constant death of your children at birth, pronounce this Psalm with the holiest name Jehovah, over pure olive oil and anoint your wife therewith, and the children born to you thereafter will live.

At the time of a general famine, the inhabitants of the afflicted district should pray this Psalm with united hearts and powers, and they will surely be heard.

The letters of this holy name you will find in Lajehovah, verse 2; Hodu, verse 3; Azath, verse 9, and Hejozer, verse 14.

Psalm 34.—Have you resolved to visit a prince or another person high in authority, pronounce this Psalm and the holy name Pcle, that is, Wonderful, briefly before appearing in their presence and you will be received pleasantly and find favor.

The letters of this holy name are found in the words: Paude, verse 23; Lifne, verse 1, and Kara, verse 7.

Even so this Psalm is highly recommended to each traveler, for if he prays it diligently he will surely finish his journey in safety.

Psalm 35.—Have you a lawsuit pending in which you are opposed by unrighteous, revengeful and quarrelsome people, then, pray this Psalm with its holy name Jah, early in the morning for three successive days, and you will surely win your case.

The letters composing this holy name are contained in the words: Lochmi, verse 1, and in Wezinna, verse 2.

Psalm 36.—Against all evil and slanderous libels pray this Psalm, and they will cause you no injury.

The holy name of this Psalm is found in the words: Arven, verse 6; Mischpatecha, verse 7, and Tehom, verse 7.

Psalm 37.—If any one has drunken so much wine as to lose his reason, and in consequence, fears are entertained for his safety, then quickly pour water into a pitcher, pronounce this Psalm over it, and bathe his head and face with the consecrated water, and give him also to drink of it.

Psalms 38 and 39.—If you have been so much slandered that the king and the officers of the law have been turned against you, and are taking measures to punish you, arise early, at the break of day and go out into the fields. Pray these Psalms and their holy name seven times with great devotion, and fast the entire day.

The holy name of the first Psalm is Aha, and of the second He, taken from the words Hascha, verse 14, and Amarti, verse 2.

Psalm 40.—The principal characteristic of this Psalm is, that we can, by its use, free ourselves from evil spirits, if we pray it daily.

The holy name is Jah, and is found in the words: Schauaiti, verse 2, and Chuscha, verse 14.

Psalms 41 to 43.—If your enemies have despoiled you of credit and caused you to be mistrusted, and thereby reduce your earnings, or perhaps, deprive you of your office and installed another in your place, you should pray these three times a day for three successive days, together with a prayer that is appropriate to your circumstances, and by doing this you will perceive incredible things. Your enemies will be put to shame and you will be unscathed.

The 42d Psalm possesses this peculiar characteristic. If you wish to be sure in regard to a certain cause, and desire to obtain information through a dream, you must fast one day, and shortly before retiring to rest you must pray this Psalm and the holy name, Zawa, (which means the Lord of Hosts,) belonging to the Psalm, seven times, making known your desires, each time, in an appropriate prayer, in which your wishes should be plainly named.

Psalm 44.—If you wish to be safe from your enemies the frequent praying of this Psalm will, it is said, answer your expectations.

Psalms 45 and 46.—These two Psalms are said to possess the virtue of making peace between man and wife, and, especially, to tame cross wives. The saying is, namely: Whoever has a scolding wife, let him pronounce the 45th Psalm over pure olive oil, and anoint his body with it, when his wife, in the future, will be more lovable and friendly. But if a man has innocently incurred the enmity of his wife, and desires a proper return of conjugal love and peace, let him pray the 46th Psalm over olive oil, and anoint his wife thoroughly with it, and, it is said, married love will again return.

The holy name is Adojah, (this name is composed of the first syllables of the two most holy names of God, Adonai and Jehovah).

The letters are in the words: Elohim, verse 2; Meod, verse 2; Jehovah, verse 8, and Sela, verse 12.

Psalm 47.—Do you wish to be beloved, respected and well received by all your fellow-men, pray this Psalm seven times daily.

Psalm 48.—If you have many enemies without cause, who hate you out of pure envy, pray this Psalm often, and with it think of the holy name Sach, which means Pure, Clear and Transparent, and your enemies will be seized with fear, terror and anxiety, and in future they will no more attempt to injure you.

The letters of the holy name are to be found in the words: Ahasatam, verse 7, and Ki, verse 14.

Psalms 49 and 50.—Is one of your family burdened with a severe and perhaps incurable fever, then take a new pen and ink prepared for this purpose, and write the 49th Psalm and the first six verses of the 50th Psalm, together with the appropriate holy name Schaddi, which signifies Almighty, and which belongs to these Psalms, upon pure parchment prepared for this particular case, and hang it around the patient's neck with a silken string.

The letters composing the divine name, Schaddei, can be found in the words of the 49th Psalm, Schimma, verse 1; Adaw, verse 3, and Wikas, verse 8.

Remarks by the Translator.

(Should some one choose to write and wear a talisman such as is described above, we would kindly advise him to procure parchment, ink and pen from a Jewish writer of the ten commandments.)

It is asserted that whosoever wears the 50th Psalm, written as above described, upon his person, will be safe from all danger, and escape from all the machinations of robbers.

The holy name is Chai, which signifies, Living, and the letters are taken from the words: Sewach, verse 5, and Anochi, verse 7.

Psalm 51.—Is any one troubled with an anxious and restless conscience on account of the commission of a heavy sin, then let him pronounce this Psalm with the word Dam connected with it in the mind, three times a day, namely, early at noon and in the evening over poppy-oil, and at the same time utter a prayer suitable to the occasion in which the evil deed must be mentioned in deep humility and sorrow, which must be obtained from the just yet merciful Judge of all men through a contrite heart, then let him anoint himself with the consecrated oil over the body, and he will find in a few days that he has found grace and that the heavy burden has been removed.

The letters of the word Dam, through the transposition of the B and M in the words Parim, verse 20, and Bebo, verse 2, are taken according to the order of the alphabet, Al Bam, in which the B is taken for M.

Psalm 52.—He who is so unfortunate as to be disturbed through frequent slanders is advised to utter this Psalm daily in the morning, and no special prayer or holy name is needed to obtain the benefit of the Psalm.

Psalms 53 to 55.—These three Psalms are ordained to be uttered by him who is persecuted without cause by open and secret enemies. If he desires only to quiet his enemies, or fill them with fear, he must daily repeat the prescribed 53d Psalm with the holy name Ai. The letters of this name are the first letters of the two blessed names of God, Adonai, Jehovah, and are found in the words Amar, verse 2, and Jiszmach, verse 6.

If, however, he wishes not only to be secure from their malice, but if he also desires to revenge himself upon them, then he must repeat the 54th Psalm with the prescribed holy name, Jah. The letters of this are found in the last words of this Psalm, Eeni, and in the word Immenu, verse 2, and indeed according to the Kabalistic rule Gematria, inasmuch as the letter, He, when it is written out signifies six in number, and in this manner may very easily be taken for the letter Vav, which, in counting, also numbers six.

Should he desire to render his enemies evil for evil, he shall repeat the 55th Psalm with the name Vah, which contains both of the final letters of the name Jehovah. The letters of this name are found in the words: Weattah, verse 12, and Haasinad, verse 2.

Psalm 56.—This Psalm is recommended to him, who is desirous of freeing himself from the bonds of passion and of sense, and who is anxious to be delivered from the so-called Jezer Horra, which means, the evil lusts or the desire to commit sin.

Psalm 57.—Whosoever wishes to be fortunate in all his undertakings should pray this Psalm daily after the morning prayer in the church, and with it the holy name Chai, signifying Living, which name he should keep constantly in his mind.

The two letters of this name are contained in the words: Chonneni, verse 2, and in Elohim, verse 6.

Psalm 58.—If you should be attacked by a vicious dog, pray this Psalm quickly, and the dog will not harm you.

Psalm 59.—Would you be entirely free from the Jezer Horra, that is, from the inclination which all men possess to do evil, and the sinful appetites and passions which often overcome them, then pray this Psalm from the second verse to the end, for three days in succession, at early noon and in the evening, and the holy name belonging thereto, namely, Paltioel, which signifies Strong God, My Rescuer and Saviour; also, pray the prescribed prayer, and you will become aware of the most wonderful changes within yourself.

The prayer is as follows: Lord, my Father and the Father of mine, mighty God! May it please thee for the sake of thy great, holy and adorable name, Paltioel, to release me from the Jezer Harra (from my evil desires and passions and from all evil thoughts and acts), as thou didst the author of this Psalm when he prayed to thee. Amen.—Selah!—

The letters of the holy name of Paltioel may be found in the words: Pischii, verse 3; Elohim, verse 5; Chattati, verse 3; Jehovah, verse 8; Aschir, verse 15, and Maschel, verse 14.

Psalm 60.—If you are a soldier in an army, and are about marching into the field, repeat this Psalm, keeping in mind the holy name of Jah, and at the conclusion of each repetition of the Psalm, utter a suitable prayer in full reliance upon the endless omnipotence of Him, who can give the victory where he will, and you will be enabled to return to your home uninjured.

The two letters of the holy name Jah, are contained in the word Zarenu, verse 14, as the last word of this Psalm, and in Lelammed, verse 1.

Psalm 61.—When you are about taking possession of a new dwelling, repeat this Psalm just before moving in, with a suitable prayer, trusting in the name of Schaddei, and you will experience blessing and good fortune.

The letters composing this name are taken from the words Schimmu, verse 2; Ken, verse 9; and Jom, the last word of this Psalm. It should, however, be remarked that both the last letters are selected according to the alphabetical order of Ajack Bechar.

Psalm 62.—Speak this Psalm with proper reverence on Sunday immediately after the evening prayer, and on Monday after vespers, and at the same time think of the holy name Ittami, which means "concealed, hidden, or invisible" (which most probably refers to the invisible God, who covers the transgressions of penitent sinners), and utter the following prayer: Great, mighty and merciful God! may it be thy holy will to pardon me all my sins, transgressions and offences; wilt thou cover them, and blot them out as thou didst the sins and transgressions of him who uttered this Psalm in thy presence, wilt thou do this for the sake of the adorable name of Ittami. Amen.—Selah!

The letters of this name may be found in the words: Achi, verse 2; Jeschuate, verse 2; Emot, verse 3; Lelohim, verse 6, and Leisch, verse 13.

Psalm 63.—If you have reason to believe that your business-partners are about to take unfair advantage of you, and that you will suffer loss through them, and if you desire, on this account, to withdraw from the firm, repeat this Psalm, and with it think of the holy name Jach, and you will not only be able to withdraw without loss, but you will obtain further good fortune and blessings.

The letters of this holy name are contained in the words Jasjmach, verse 11, and Jechuda, verse 1.

Psalm 64.—In reference to this Psalm it is only necessary to say, that seafarers who daily pray it with devotion will complete their voyage without accident, and reach their place of destination in good health. As for the rest, neither holy name nor especial prayer have been considered necessary.

Psalm 65.—Whosoever utters this Psalm with its appropriate name Jah, persistently, will be fortunate in all his undertakings, and everything he attempts will result to his best advantage. It is particularly recommended to one who has a petition to prefer, for it is asserted that he will certainly obtain his desires.

The two letters of this holy name are taken from the words Joschiru, verse 14, and Dumijah, verse 2.

Psalm 66.—If any man is possessed of a Ruack Roah (evil spirit), write this Psalm on parchment and hang it upon him; then stretch your hands over him and say: Save me, O God, for the waters are come into my soul. Psalm lxi. 2.

Psalms 67 and 68.—Both these Psalms contain the divine name of Jah. The letters composing it are found in the first Psalm and are selected from the words; Jechonnenu, verse 2, and from the last word of the fifth verse, Sela. In the second, on the other hand, from Jakum, verse 2, and from Aora, verse 36. The first should be prayed in a protracted case of fever, or in severe imprisonment. The second, on the contrary, should be prayed over a vessel filled with water upon which the sun never shone, in a low voice, and in the name of the patient, and then work his body with the water, and the evil spirit will depart from him.

Psalms 69 and 70.—The first of these Psalms should be uttered daily over water, by the libertine and sensualist, who is so confirmed in his evil habits, as to become a slave to them, and who, however much he may desire to escape these habits, is unable to do so. After having prayed this Psalm over the water he should drink of it.

The second should be prayed by him who desires to conquer his enemies.

Neither of these two Psalms have prescribed holy name or prayer.

Psalm 71.—With this Psalm there is likewise neither holy name nor prayer, but it is said to have the power to liberate any one from prison, who will for a time pray it reverentially seven times a day.

Psalm 72.—Write this Psalm with the name Aha, in the usual manner, upon pure parchment, and suspend it around your neck, and you will become a universal favorite, and find favor and grace from all men; you may then live unconcerned, for you can never come to poverty.

The letters of the holy name are taken from the words: Elohim, verse 1, and Jeassshruhu, verse 17.

Psalms 73 to 78.—Since these eleven Psalms have neither holy names nor particular closing prayers, I shall, in order to economize space, record the peculiar virtues ascribed to each one for the good of mankind.

The 73d Psalm should be repeated reverently seven times daily by those who are compelled to sojourn in a heathen, idolatrous or infidel country, and by doing so, no one need feel afraid that he will be induced to deny his faith.

The frequent and earnest prayer of the 74th Psalm is said to defeat the persecution embittered by enemies, and will frustrate the oppressions of the self-mighty, wealth-seeking, hard-hearted people, and will at the same time bring them to a terrible end.

The devout prayer of the 74th Psalm will effect the forgiveness of sins.

The 76th Psalm is said to be the quickest and most effective defence against danger from fire and water.

Whosoever prays the 77th Psalm daily will not be overtaken by want or danger.

Whosoever prays the 78th Psalm earnestly and often, will be beloved and respected by kings and princes and will receive favor from them.

The frequent prayer of the 79th Psalm, it is said, is fatal to enemies and opponents.

The constant and industrious prayer of 80th and 81st Psalms is said to be a happy means of saving men from falling into unbelief and saves them also from other errors.

The prayer of the 82d Psalm will assist an envoy to transact his business to the satisfaction of his employers, and his business affairs will succeed and prosper.

You should write the 83d Psalm properly, upon pure parchment, and suspend it around your neck, and by so doing you will abide safely in war, avoiding defeat and captivity. If you should, however, be overcome, your captors will not harm you, for even in captivity no harm can befall you.

Psalm 84.—When a man, through a severe and protracted illness, has acquired a repulsive, disgusting and bad odor, he should pronounce this Psalm with the prescribed holy name of Af, which means Father, over a pot of water upon which the sun never shone, and then pour the water all over himself, and then the bad smell will leave him.

The letters of the holy name Af, are found in the words: Zebarth, verse 2, and in Bach, verse 6.

Psalm 85.—Do you wish that your former friend, but who now lives at enmity with you, should again be reconciled to you, if you can discover no disposition on his part to make it up with you, then go out into an open field, turn your face toward the South, and pronounce this Psalm, with its prescribed holy name Vah, seven times in succession, and he will approach and receive you in great friendship.

Psalms 86 to 88.—These three Psalms again are left without a holy name, and there is nothing further said about them, than that a person should accustom himself to pray them often, because by so doing much good can be done and much evil avoided. The frequent praying, of the 85th Psalm especially, is said to promote the welfare of the community and the congregation.

Psalm 89.—Should one of your own family or dear friends waste away so rapidly, in consequence of a severe illness, so that they are already nearly helpless and useless, speak this Psalm over olive oil and pour the oil over the wool that has been shorn from a wether or a ram, and with it anoint the body and limbs of the patient, and he will speedily recover.

If your friend is under arrest, and you desire his liberation, go into an open field, raise your eyes toward heaven and repeat this Psalm, with a prayer suited to the circumstances, which should be uttered in full confidence in God.

Psalm 90.—Should you accidentally encounter a lion in the forest, or should you be deceived, cheated or plagued by an evil spirit or ghost, then grasp in your mind the name of God (Schaddei) and repeat this Psalm, and they will withdraw themselves. But you will be still more secure when such a danger should arise, if you pray the following 91st Psalm in connection with the goth, at one and the same time.

Psalm 91.—The holy name of this Psalm is El, which means Strong God. After speaking this Psalm, and the preceding one, over a person tormented by an evil spirit, or one afflicted by an incurable disease, in the name of Eel Schaddei, then pray humbly: Let it be thy holy pleasure, oh my God! to take from N., son of R., the evil spirit by which he is tormented, for the sake of thy great, mighty and holy name El Schaddei. Wilt thou presently send him health and let him be perfectly restored. Hear his prayer as thou once did that of thy servant Moses when he prayed this Psalm. Let his prayer penetrate to thee as once the holy incense arose to thee on high. Amen. Selah!

The two letters of the name Eel are contained in the words Jeschuti, verse 16, and Orech, verse 16.

Again write this Psalm in connection with the last verse of the previous Psalm upon clean parchment, and conceal it behind the door of your house, and you will be secure from all evil accidents.

Kabalists ascribe to this Psalm when taken in connection with the above verse, the most wonderful virtue, when it is used in accordance with the nature of existing circumstances, and when it is combined with other scriptural passages, holy names of angels, characters and prayers, it is said, for example:

Prayer through which all distress, danger and suffering may be turned aside. If any one should be in danger of his life, or become distressed, be it what it may, such as being attacked by an incurable disease, pestilence, fire or water, overwhelmed by enemies or murderers, in battles, sieges, robberies, close imprisonment, etc., let him confess his sins first of all, and then speak the Vihi Noamprayer (the name by which the 91st Psalm with the aforesaid verse is usually known), ninety-nine times, according to the number of the two holiest names of God, Jehovah Adonei. Each time when he comes to the fourteenth verse, "Because he hath set his love upon me," etc., he shall keep in mind the holy name, and then pray devoutly each time: "Thou art the most holy, king over all that is revealed and hidden, exalted above all that is high, sanctify and glorify thy adorable name in this thy world, so that all the nations of the earth may know that thine is the glory and the power, and that thou hast secured me from all distress, but especially out of the painful emergency (here the object of the prayer must be distinctly stated), which has overtaken me N., son of R. And I herewith promise and vow that I will now and ever after this, as long as I shall live upon the earth, and until I return to the dust from which I was taken." (Here the vow must be verbally-stated,—stating what we will do, perform or give in the service of our Creator. The vow may consist in fasting, giving alms, or in the daily reading of several chapters of the Holy Scriptures, Psalms, of the Sohar or of the Talmud, releasing of captives, nursing the sick and burying the dead.) "Praised be Jehovah, my Rock and my Salvation. Thou wilt be my representative and intercessor, and wilt help me, for thou helpest thy poor, feeble and humble creature, and in time of need releasest from fear and danger, and dealest mercifully with thy people; merciful and forgiving, thou hearest the prayer of every one. Praised art thou, Jehovah, thou who hearest prayer." (The last words should be repeated seven times at each ending of the prayer.)

And now, whoever will punctually observe the foregoing instructions three days in succession, in full trust in the mighty help of God, he may rest assured of the assistance which he desires.

Kabalists, and especially the celebrated Rabbi Isaac Loria have assured us that in a time of pestilence or general emergency, the Vihi Noam-prayer should be prayed seven times daily, connecting with it in the mind the figure of the golden candlestick, when it is composed of the forty-one holy and important words and names of this Psalm, with which we should especially consider the holy names in their order. The following are the names:

Vean,	Alm,	Bich,	Iba,	Wich,	Ika,	Aan,	Beni,
Mii,	Tmol,	Veal,	Ktaz,	Ilu,	Mehoh,	Imi,	Becha,
Im,	Retak,	Betu,	Lir,	Uma,	Ima,	Miz,	Mehi,
Aki,	Lakad,	Mili,	Ibak,	Rul,	Leta,	Afcham,	Pesch,
Aab,	Schin,	Aki,	Acchu,	Kuck,	Vetat,	Raasch,	Jaub,

Ana.

(See Fig. A.)

Fig. A.

After this should be spoken verses 21-28, chapter xii. of Exodus, and with them keeping in mind the names contained in the 23d and 28th verses, in the following order:

Awal, Jahel, Ito, Huj Husch, Aha, Imo, Vil.

As also Vohu, Uha, Bam, Bili, Zel, Holo, Vesop, and finally the holy name: Nischaszas.

And now, he who observes all these things to the very letter, and who can keep in his memory all the letters, points or vowels, he shall be safe from all danger, and shall be as strong as steel, so that no firearms can harm him. The certainty of this is shown by the Kabalists, because the letter Seijid is not to be found in the entire Psalm, and since the word Seijin or Kie Seijin embraces within its meaning all deadly weapons, this conclusion is entirely correct.

Remarks by the Translator.

The extraordinary powers ascribed to the 91st Psalm may all be right and proper enough, but it is to be regretted that the reader cannot avail himself of its benefits, especially in the last experiment, because all the recorded holy names consist of the first letter of all the words of the 91st Psalm, and likewise of the 23d and 28th verses of Exodus, chapter xii., a passage which has already been quoted. It is, therefore, impossible to pronounce this name properly, neither can it be translated into English or into any other language. And how shall we then memorize the first letters of each word of the Psalm together with the points or vowels belonging to them? If any one, notwithstanding the difficulties attending the use of this Psalm, should desire to avail himself of its virtues, then he must undertake the burdensome task of learning the Hebrew language, or he must write it, and wear it upon his heart as an amulet.

Psalm 92.—He who desires to attain to high honors, let him take with this object in view, a new pot filled with water. Place in it myrtle and vine leaves, and pronounce over it, with perfect trust, the following Psalms, namely, the 92, 94, 23, 20, 24, and 100, three times in succession, and at each time let him wash himself out of the pot and afterward anoint his face and whole body with the water; then turn his face toward the north, pray to God for the fulfilment of his desires, and he will see wonderful things. He will be astonished with his ever-increasing good fortune. He will also, in a wonderful manner, advance from one post of honor to another.

Psalm 93.—There is nothing special recorded of this Psalm, other than that it is highly recommended to any one who has a suit with a stern and unjust opponent. The proper use of this Psalm, it is said will surely win him his cause.

Psalm 94.—If you have a hard, unyielding and bitter enemy, who oppresses you sorely and causes you great anxiety, repair to an open field on Monday, take some incense into your mouth, turn with your face toward the East and West, and repeat first the 94th Psalm and then the 92d, seven times, keeping in mind at the same time the holy name Eel Kanno Taf, which signifies great, strong, zealous and good God, and pray each time at the ending of these Psalms: "May it please Thee, O great, strong, zealous and good God, to humble my enemy N., son of R., as thou once did the enemies of our great teacher Moses, who rests in peace, and who completed this Psalm to thy glorification. Let my prayer arise to thee as did the sweet smell of incense from the altar of incense, and let me behold thy wonderful power. Amen!—Selah!—

Psalm 95.—The appropriate holy name of God and peculiar to this Psalm is Eel, which is, great, strong God, and the letters are found in the words: Eel, verse 3, and Lezur, verse 1.

The pious believer should pray this Psalm for his erring and unbelieving brethren.

Psalms 96 and 97.—The holy name of these two Psalms is Jah, and the letters of the first are found in the words, Jeschuato, verse 2, and Hawn, verse 7, and those of the other in the words, Jismechu, verse 1, and Atta, verse 9. Whosoever will pray these two Psalms three times daily, will cause his family great joy and contentment.

Psalm 98.—The holy name of this Psalm is also Jah, and should be pronounced in order to establish peace and unity between families. The letters of the holy name are taken out of the words: Israel, verse 3, and Haschiah, verse 1.

Psalm 99.—With this Psalm there is no holy name recorded, and all who wish to become really pious are advised to pray it often with proper devotion.

Psalm 100.—The holy name Jah, so often mentioned already, is also appropriate to this Psalm, and whoever prays it several days successively seven times, will overcome all his enemies. The two letters of this holy name are recorded in verse 3, and in Aetodah, verse 4.

Psalm 101.—Whoever bears this Psalm in addition to the 68th upon his person, written upon parchment, is secure from the persecution of evil spirits and vindictive persons.

Psalms 102 and 103.—Both these Psalms are said to be very good for barren women by the use of which they may receive grace and favor from God. The holy name of the one is called Jah, and is taken from Anneni, verse 3, and the name of the other one is Aha, and is taken from the word Adonai, verse 12, and from Sela, verse 20.

Psalm 104.—The frequent and earnest prayer of this Psalm is said to be attended with such great power, that through it the Masick may be destroyed.

Remarks of the Translator.

The word Masick signifies, according to its root, only something hurtful, something that will cause harm, it may be by spirits, beings or animals. Generally, however, the Jews understood the term to mean the Devil, and with its connections in this place the word must mean original sin and the propensity to commit sin.

Psalms 105 to 107.—To these three Psalms the holy name of Jah is ascribed, and according to the original writing, it is said, that the 105th Psalm will cure three days' fever; the praying of the 106th Psalm will cure the four days' fever, and finally the praying of the 107th will cure the daily fever.

The letters of the holy names are taken from Lejaikof, verse 7, and Hodu, verse 1, and further from Sochreni, verse 4, and from Tehillato, verse 2 of the 106th Psalm, and finally from Jischlach, verse 19, and Verinna, verse 21.

Psalm 108.—Write this Psalm with its proper holy name, Vi, (two letters from the most holy name of Jehovah, in which Kabalists seek through its many divisions, great secrets,) upon clean parchment, and hide it in a secure spot behind the door of your house, and then your going and coming will be blessed, and you will be successful in all your business transactions.

The two letters of the holy name Jehovah, by a transposition of Vav and Jod, are contained in the words: Zarenn, verse 14, and in Nachon, verse 2.

Psalm 109.—Have you a mighty enemy, who plagues and oppresses you, fill a new jug with new, sparkling wine, add some mustard to it, and then repeat this Psalm three days successively, while at the same time you keep in mind the holy name of Eel (great and strong God), and afterward pour the mixture before the door of your enemy's dwelling. Be careful, however that you do not sprinkle a single drop upon yourself when in the act of pouring it out.

The letters of the name Eel are found in the words, Elohim, verse 3, and in Ki Jamood, verse 5.

Psalms 110 and 111.—The first of these Psalms is marked with the holy name Jah, and by its frequent use in the form of a prayer, and a man may compel all enemies and opposers to bow to him and beg for quarters and peace.

Through praying the 111th Psalm a man may acquire many friends without the necessity of keeping constantly in mind any special holy name.

Psalms 112 and 113.—By praying the first of these Psalms a man will increase in might and power from time to time, and by praying the second devoutly it is possible to check growing heresy and infidelity. Neither of these Psalms has a peculiar holy name.

Psalm 114.—The holy name of this Psalm consists of two letters, taken together from the names Adonai (Lord), and Jehovah, namely, Aha, which may be found in this Psalm in the words Jisraael, verse 1, and Jehuda, verse 2. If you desire success in your trade or business, write this Psalm with its appropriate holy name upon clean parchment, and carry it about your person constantly in a small bag prepared especially for this purpose.

Psalm 115.—If you are determined to dispute with infidels, heretics and scoffers at religion, pray this Psalm devoutly beforehand.

Psalm 116.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily with devotion, trusting fully in God, will be safe from violent death, neither will he be overtaken by a sudden death.

Psalm 117.—Did you make a vow to obtain a certain commandment or perform a good work, and fail in the performance of them through forgetfulness or carelessness, as soon as you recollect your remissness pray this Psalm with a broken and contrite heart.

Psalm 118.—If you pray this Psalm often and devoutly, you will be able to silence all free-thinkers, scoffers of religion and heretics, who labor to lead you astray.

Psalm 119.—This it is well known is the largest of all the Psalms, and consists in the Hebrew of eight alphabets, but in such a manner, that each letter appears in undisturbed regularity, and through this there arose twenty-two special divisions, which are included in each eight verses, because a particular power is ascribed to each division, which I cannot present to the reader in clearer manner than by placing each letter before him which forms the particular division.

Aleph.—The eight verses of this letter, which all begin with Aleph, should be pronounced over a man whose limbs shake and quiver, and if this be done in a low and even tone of voice, he will be relieved. If any one has made a vow, which has become burdensome to fulfil, it will be easy for him to keep his promise.

Beth.—It is said that through the second division from the ninth to the sixteenth verse, a man may obtain a good memory, an open heart, desirous to learn, and an extended intelligence. Whosoever desires to attain this must begin as follows: Remove from a hard-boiled egg the shell deftly and cleanly, so that the inside shall remain uninjured, and write upon it the above eight verses as well as the fourth verse of Deuteronomy, xxxiii., and eight verses of Joshua i., and also the holy name of the angels, Chosniel, Schrewniel and Mupiel. The translation of these three angel-names it is not necessary to know, because they must not be pronounced, but since it will be of interest to the reader to know the meaning of them, it will not be superfluous to give them here. Chosniel, signifies Cover, or overshadow me, mighty God! (namely, with the spirit of wisdom and knowledge). Schrewniel, turn me, again, mighty God! that is, change me, convert me into a better man or woman, as David once said, "Create in me, oh God," etc. Mupiel means: Out of the mouth of the mighty God (namely, let me attend upon the decrees of thy laws, as if I heard and received them from the mouth of God himself). Finally, the following must also be written upon the egg: Open and enlarge my heart and understanding, that I may hear and comprehend everything that I read, and that I may never forget it. All this must be done on a Thursday evening, after fasting the entire day, and then the egg must be inserted whole into the mouth, and when it is eaten, the four first verses of this division must be repeated three times in succession.

Gimel.—The division of the third letter, verses 17 to 24, should be prayed seven times in succession, in a low, solemn tone and with full confidence in the omnipotence of God, over the seriously injured eye of a friend, so that the pain may cease and the eye restored.

Daleth.—By the earnest praying of this division, verses 25 to 32, a painful injury of the left eye can be cured in the first place, in the same manner as is described above, and in the second place, if a man is engaged in a lawsuit, or is vexed by a change of occupation, or residence, or if he desires to make an advantageous selection, or make a resolution, he should repeat these eight times in succession. On the other hand, however, if a man must avail himself of the advice and assistance of many persons in order to accomplish an undertaking successfully, he should repeat this division ten times.

Ho.—The division of the letter He, verses 33 to 40, is said to make people refrain from committing sins. A sinful being, who has become so much accustomed to commit sin and vice, that he cannot refrain from them, notwithstanding his best resolutions, should write these eight verses upon parchment prepared from a clean deer skin, (or cause them thus to be written,) place it in a bag prepared for this purpose and hang it around his neck, so that he will carry it continually upon his breast.

Vau.—Speak these eight verses, 41 to 48, properly over water, and give it to your servant or dependent to drink, and then your rule and power over him will become easy and agreeable, and he will serve you willingly.

Zain.—To the seventh division, verses 49 to 56, two different effects are ascribed. It is said, for example: If one of your friends or acquaintances is afflicted with melancholy, or becomes splenetic, or has severe stitching in the side, write this division, with the holy name Raphael, which signifies, heal, mighty God, properly upon a small piece of clean parchment, and bind it upon the patient where the spleen is situated.

If you have been led into an undertaking that promises evil results, through the misrepresentations of evil counsellors, repeat this division eighteen times, and you will find means to withdraw from the undertaking without injury to yourself.

Oheth.—Speak the division of this letter, verses 57 to 64, seven times over wine, and give a sick person, who has severe pains in the upper part of the body, to drink of it, and he will soon find relief.

Teth.—The division of the letter Teth, verses 65 to 72, is an easy, quick and tried remedy to cure the severest case of kidney or liver complaints, or to take away pain in the hips. Pronounce these eight verses properly, specially and reverently over the sick person and he will convalesce.

Jod.—Would you find grace and favor with God and man, pray at the close of each morning prayer the division of this letter, verses 70 to 80, trusting fully in the mercy and grace of God, and your prayer will be heard.

Caph.—If one of yours has a dangerous sore, or a burning swelling on the right side of the nose, pray the eight verses of this division, verses 81 to 88, ten times, in a low and conjuring voice, over the sore, and you will perceive to your astonishment and joy, that the otherwise incurable sore will be healed.

Lamed.—If you are summoned to appear personally before the Judge in a lawsuit, pray on the preceding day, just after the evening prayer, the division of the letter Lamed, verses 89 to 96, and you will obtain a favorable hearing, and will be permitted to leave the court justified.

Mem.—For pain in the limbs, and especially for paralysis in the right arm or hand, a man should pray this division, verses 97 to 104, seven times for three successive days, in a low conjuring voice, over the affected arm, and the pain will cease and the arm will be healed.

Nun.—Have you a mind to travel, pray this division, verses 105 to 112, which begins with the words: "For thy word is a lamp to my feet," a few days previous to starting upon your journey, each time after the morning and evening prayer, and you will accomplish your journey safely and will prosper in your avocation.

Samech.—If you have a favor to ask of a superior, pray, before presenting your petition, or before you attempt to ask the favor verbally, the eight verses of the letter Samech, verses 113 to 120, and you will not go away unheard.

Ain.—In the same way and manner as the prayer of the division of the letter Mem, heals pain in the right arm, so also the praying of the eight verses of the letter Ain, verses 121 to 128, will cure pain in the left arm and hand.

Pe.—The prayer of this division, verses 129 to 136, will prove of the same effect in the case of a boil or swelling on the left side of the nose, and the proceedings in both cases must be the same to effect a cure.

Tsaddi.—Since it frequently happens that persons in an official station are induced, through misrepresentations and other circumstances, to give a wrong and unjust decision, even against their better knowledge and desire, they are kindly advised to pray the eight verses of this letter, verses 137 to 144, three times devoutly before giving their decision, at the same time asking the help of the Judge of all Judges, to enlighten their minds.

Koph.—The mysterious operation of this division, verses 145-152, relates to the cure of a dangerous and painful injury at the left leg. These eight verses should be pronounced in a low and conjuring voice over a quantity of rose-oil and the injury anointed with the oil.

Resh.—Are you burdened with a painful, constantly running boil in the right ear, pronounce the eight verses of the division of the letter Resh, verses 152-160, in a low and conjuring voice, over onion-water or juice, and let one drop run into the ear, when you will experience immediate relief.

Schin.—Against severe and burning headache speak the division of this letter, verses 161 to 168, in a low conjuring voice, three times over pure olive oil, and anoint the place where the pain is the most severe.

Tau.—The last division of this Psalm, verses 169-176, should be used in the same manner as the division of the letter Resh, that is, it should be spoken over onion-water, and by its use a boil in the left ear may be cured.

Finally, it is stated at the end of this Psalm, that whosoever is afflicted with a tearing pain in both arms, in the sides, and in the legs at one and the same time, should repeat this whole Psalm in the following order: 1. The eight verses of the letter Aleph; of Tau and Beth. 2. Those of the letter Schin. 3. The division of the letter Gimmel. 4. The eight verses of the letter Resh. 5. The division of the letter Daleth. 6. That of the letter Kuf. 7. The eight verses of the letter He. 8. Those of the letter Zain. 9. The division of the letter Vau. 10. The eight verses of the letter Pe. 11. The division of the letter Zain. 12. The division of the letter Ain. 13. The eight verses of the letter Cheth. 14. Those of the letter Tamech. 15. Those of the letter Teth. 16. Of Nun. 17. The eight verses of the letter Jud, and finally, 18, the division of the letter Mem, Caph, and Lamed. This remedy has been tried, and has proved infallible. Should any one become afflicted with tearing pains in the loins, make for him, at the conclusion of this Psalm, knots, combinations, or magical knots in water, with or under the names of: Adam, Seth, Enoch, Canaan, Mahalleel, Jared, Methusaleh, Lamech, Noah, Shem.

[The translator is compelled to admit honestly, that he does not comprehend this latter clause, and much less is he able to give any directions in regard to the method employed in making magical-knots, he does not presume that any one will be interested in this matter.]

Psalm 120.—If you must appear before the judge, repeat the Psalm beforehand, and you will receive grace and favor.

If a traveler should find himself in a forest infested with many poisonous snakes, scorpions and other poisonous reptiles as may easily happen, and thus be exposed to danger, let him pray this Psalm as soon as he comes in sight of the forest seven times, and he will be able to proceed on his journey without any harm.

Psalm 121.—Are you compelled to travel alone by night, pray this Psalm reverently seven times, and you will be safe from all accidents and evil occurrences.

Psalm 122.—If you are about to address a man high in station, repeat this Psalm thirteen times beforehand, and you will be received graciously and find favor. Also, pray this Psalm each time that you are present in church, and you will obtain a blessing.

Psalm 123.—If your servant or journeyman has run away from you, write this Psalm, together with his name, on a leaden or tin plate, when he will return to you.

Psalm 124.—If you are about to cross a swollen stream, or undertake a journey by water, pray this Psalm before entering the ship, and then you may commence your journey without fear.

Psalm 125.—If you are compelled to travel in a country, where you have avowed enemies whom you have reason to fear on account of threatened injury to yourself, then take, before entering the country, both your hands full of salt, pronounce this Psalm seven times over it, and then scatter it into the air toward the four quarters of the globe, and by so doing, not one of your enemies will be able to bring any harm against you.

Psalm 126.—Are you so unfortunate, that your children are taken away from you in their infancy, and that you are not able to raise any of them, then, when your wife again becomes pregnant, write this Psalm upon four amulets made out of clean parchment, and add to the last line of each amulet the names of the following angels: Sinui, Sinsuni, and Semanglaf, and afterward hide the amulets in the four walls of your house, when your child will live.

Psalm 127.—Write this Psalm upon pure parchment, place this amulet in a clean bag, and hang it about the neck of a newborn son immediately after birth, and no evil will ever befall him afterward.

Psalm 128.—Write this Psalm upon clean parchment, and hang it upon a pregnant woman, when she and the fruit of her body will always be secure from unlucky accidents, and she will have a fortunate confinement.

Psalm 129.—Whoever accustoms himself to repeat the Psalm daily after the morning prayer, will finally prepare himself to live piously and virtuously, and will be able to carry out many remunerative and good works.

Psalm 130.—If you are living in a besieged city, to and from which no one can go without danger, and if you have urgent business, so that you feel constrained to venture on a journey, then, just as you are about to leave the city, pray this Psalm in a low and abjuring voice toward the four quarters of the earth, and then you will be able to pass all the sentries without being seen or harmed. A heavy sleep will overcome them, so that they will not be conscious of your presence.

Psalm 131.—He who is so strongly possessed of the evil spirit of pride that he regards all other people with scorn, but who, upon sober reflection, desires to occupy a middle path, if his intolerable pride would only permit him, is advised to pray this Psalm reverently three times daily, after the morning and evening prayer. His pride will receive a certain check.

Psalm 132.—If you have sworn to perform anything punctually, and notwithstanding your oath you neglect to perform your obligation, and in this manner have perjured himself, you should, in order to avoid a future crime of a similar kind, pray this Psalm daily with profound reverence.

Psalm 133.—Whoever prays this Psalm daily, will not only retain the love and friendship of his friends, but he will also gain many more friends.

Psalm 134.—This very short Psalm, consisting of only three verses, should be repeated by every learned man, and especially by every student before entering college.

Psalm 135.—Whoever is desirous of repenting sincerely from sin, and of consecrating his life to the service of God, should pray this Psalm daily after the morning and evening prayers, and then his heart and spirit will be daily renewed, and he will become more closely united with God from day to day.

Psalm 136.—Whosoever desires, on account of wilful sins and transgressions, to make a penitent confession of his misdeeds, should pray this Psalm beforehand, and then make his confession with an humble and broken heart and with great reverence.

Psalm 137.—The praying of this Psalm, it is said, will root out of the heart the most inveterate hate, envy and malice.

Psalm 138.—Praying this Psalm, it is stated, will produce love and friendship.

Psalm 139.—This Psalm should be prayed to increase and preserve love among married people.

Psalm 140.—Praying this Psalm, is said to be a powerful means to remove growing hatred between man and wife.

Psalm 141.—Whoever is often oppressed with heartfelt fears should pray this Psalm frequently.

Psalms 142 and 143.—Praying of the first of these two Psalms will cure pain in the thighs, and praying the other will remove tearing pains in the arms.

Psalm 144.—When any one breaks an arm this Psalm should be prayed, and the perfect cure of the arm cannot be delayed or interrupted by untoward circumstances.

Psalm 145.—He who fears ghosts and evil spirits, should pray this Psalm in connection with the 144th, with reverence, for the praying of these Psalms will drive away all ghosts and apparitions instantly.

Psalm 146.—Whoever has been dangerously wounded by a sword or other deadly weapon, he shall, during the time he is receiving surgical assistance, pray this Psalm reverently daily, and especially when the wound is being dressed and the bandages renewed, and he will shortly find reason to rejoice in a perfect restoration from his injuries.

Psalm 147.—For the cure of dangerous and deadly wounds, bites, stings of a salamander, lizard, snake, scorpion or other poisonous reptile, the earnest prayer of this Psalm is said to possess the same power of healing as the former Psalm, already described.

Psalms 148 and 149.—These two Psalms are said to possess the desirable virtue of checking fire, when they are prayed in childlike trust on the unfailing help of the Almighty.

Psalm 150.—This happy Psalm of Praise should be uttered by every God-fearing, thankful being, after having escaped a great danger, or received a peculiar grace in answer to a prayer to the Lord of Hosts, and it should be repeated with a thankful heart to His praise and glory.

SUPPLEMENT.

Finally, the author adds the following as a supplement:

I.

Whoever prays the five appended verses daily and hourly to God, will receive grace from God and man, and will obtain prosperity and blessing in all his undertakings.

The verses must be spoken in the following order:

Psalm cxxi. verse 2; Psalm lv. verse 23; Psalm xxxvii. verse 37; Psalm xxxvii. verse 3; Psalm cxviii. verse 13.

II.

A truly mysterious wonder-working formula is contributed by the celebrated Kabbalist Raf Amram, which is said to possess the especial virtue to protect and defend him, who, after the morning prayer, prays it with proper reverence during a whole day of twenty-four hours, whether at home or on a journey, from all evil power or accident, from robbery, murder, and injury by guns, or other weapons. No man will be able to attack him or to injure him, and no gun can harm him. This wonderful saying is as follows:

See and know, that I am He! I am He, and besides me there is no other God. I am He, who can kill and make alive; I wound, and I am he that can heal, and no one can escape my hand or my power. For I stretch out my hand toward heaven (that is, I swear by heaven), and say: I am He that liveth forever.

Animon, Animon, Alimon, Rirvtip, Taftian! The Lord can and will watch and keep, Amen. After a man has uttered this three times in succession, and with it has kept in mind the three names of angels added thereto, he should say the following: Happy art thou people of God! Who is like unto thee; a people whose help is Jehovah. He is the breastplate of thy help, and the strong sword of thy pride. Thy enemies will deny themselves before thee (that is, will hide themselves or retreat from thee), but thou wilt stand in their high places. Lord of the earth let it be agreeable to thy holy will to command thy angels to protect me and defend me in all my ways. Amen!

Remarks by the Translator.

The above Hebrew words are Kabbalistic names of angels, and are very hard to understand, and yet harder to translate. Thus for example, the letters of the word Alimon, mean Eel Leolam, Jehovah, Melech Waaed, Netzach, that is, Jehovah is an eternal God! he is a victorious king to all eternity. This prince or king according to the belief of Kabbalists, is entrusted with the superintendency of all weapons and guns in the whole world, for the letters of the word Alimon, according to the sig-nification of numbers aggregate 137, and the two small words Klo Sajin, under which all kinds of guns and weapons are understood, likewise contained, according to the signification of number, 137 letters, viz:

Aleph	1	Beth	20
Lamed	30	Lamed	30
Jod	10	Jod	10
Mim	40	Zani	7
Vav	6	Jod	10
Nun	50	Jod	10
		Nun	50
	137		137

According to this, there are under the power of this field-general all cannons, howitzers, mortars, guns, rifles, pistols, all lances, spears, sabres, swords, and dirks in the whole world, and whenever he thinks proper, none of these will be able to do the least harm. Whoever, therefore, knows how to obtain the favor of the mighty Alemon, it will be very easy for him to make himself invulnerable against gun-shot wounds and against sharp instruments of all kinds. The words Reivtip and Tafthi are also full of mysterious meaning and are the names of two angels who are servants of Alimon.

The letters of the holy name Animon, are contained in the words Ani, Nelech, Raaed, Ne-Zachim, that is, I am King from Eternity to Eternity! Generally this angel claims a much higher rank than the angel Alimon, for he is first named, and is called upon twice in succession, through which he takes, according to the signification of numbers 314, letters, or as many as the holy name of the Schadai, the name of the Almighty.

III.

I here present you (writes the celebrated Rabbi and great Kabbalist Moses, son of Nochman, who is also known as Ramban), a great and useful remedy, Leraue, Weacuo, Nirch, which means, that a man, (especially upon a journey) may see everything and yet remain invisible himself. It is said, that through this mysterious means a man may be able to see and know all watching or hidden enemies, persecutors, thieves, robbers and murderers, without being seen by them, and he may remain invisible to them. This means has been tried and tested, says the author, "and I have tried it myself on occasions and at places where my life and limbs were in danger, and at each trial, with the help of God, I escaped without injury. It is truly a blessed remedy! you must know, however, that the power of this means will last only from the morning until after vespers. (evening prayer.)

THE REMEDY IS:

After you have offered your devoted traveling prayer to God, early before commencing your journey, leave your lodging or dwelling, and when you arrive on the highway upon which you intend to travel, stand still and cover your eyes with the fingers of your right hand in the following manner: Lay the index finger on the right eye, the middle finger on the nose, and the third finger on the left eye, and then say three times: Through the word of Almighty God. But then also the following passages from the holy scriptures, Genesis, chap. i. verse 1: "In the beginning God created heaven and earth." Deuteronomy, chap. xxxiv. and last verse: "And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses showed in the sight of all Israel." Genesis, chap. xxxii. 1, 2: "And Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him. And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's host, and he called the name of that place Mahanaim," that is, two hosts or camps, namely, God's and his own. Deuteronomy, chap. xxxii. 1, 2: "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." Numbers, chap. x. verse 35. And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, Rise up, Lord, and let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate thee flee before thee. And when it rested, he said, Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel." Numbers, chap. ii. verse 6. "And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred. All that were mustered of the camp of Ephraim were a hundred thousand, and eight thousand and a hundred throughout their armies, and they shall go forward in the third rank." Here follow several single verses from the Psalms, namely: Psalm xlv. 46: "The God of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." "Lord of hosts! blessed is the man whose dependence is upon thee." "Help Lord! the King will hear us, when we call upon him." "Jehovah will give might unto his people, the Lord will bless his people in peace." Psalm xix. 14: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer." And now take your fingers from your eyes, and repeat the following Psalms with devotion—Psalm cxxi.; Psalm lxxvii. and Psalm xci.—combined with the last verse of the 90th Psalm, and repeat the last verse of the 91st Psalm twice. Have you strictly complied with all the instructions in the mighty protection of God, and you may proceed securely and without fear, for no evil will befall you, and neither robbers nor murderers will attack you.

IV.

Here is another mysterious means of protection for travelers furnished by this author, but in a different manner. If you should see, says Ramban, in a dangerous locality, (for example, in forest, or wilderness), heathens, robbers, or hostile troops approaching you stand suddenly still, make a circle around you, and repeat from Exodus, chap. xi. verse 8: "And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee, and after that I will go out."

ASTROLOGICAL INFLUENCE UPON MAN

— AND —

MAGICAL CURES

OF THE

OLD HEBREWS.

[From Dr. Gideon Brechee's work: "The Transcendental, Magic and Magical Healing Art in the Talmud." Vienna: 1850.]

ASTROLOGICAL INFLUENCES.

THAT the Cosmos constitutes an organic whole, whose separate parts operate upon and in opposition to each other, was well known to the ancients. Man, as the highest individuality on the earth, which served the ancients as the centre of the universe, reflects in his being as a microcosm, the macrocosm. The book of Jeziro (a division of the Talmud), accordingly parallelizes three factors of the Cosmos, namely, the earth, time and man, corresponding with the cardinal numbers and the elements of words (letters). In that place it is said: Three principal letters, Aleph, Mem, Schin, correspond in the earth with air, water and fire; in man with the breast, belly and head; in the year with mild temperature, cold and heat. The seven compound letters, Beth, Gimmel, Daleth, Khaf, Pe, Resch and Tau correspond in the earth with Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury and Moon; in man with wisdom, riches, dominion, life, amateness, blessing of children and peace; in the year to Saturday, Thursday, Tuesday, Sunday, Friday, Wednesday and Monday. The remaining twelve simple letters correspond in the world with Aries, the Bull, the Twins, the Crab, the Lion, the Virgin, the Balance, the Scorpion, the Bowman, the Goat, the Waterman, the Fishes; in man, the organs of sight, hearing, smelling, speaking, tasting, copulating, to put things in motion (the hands), to feel anger, to laugh, and to sleep; and in the year to the twelve months. The Tali with the boundary of the earth, the book of Jeziro states further, is like unto a king upon his throne. The spheres of the years is like a king in the country; the heart of man is like unto a king in battle.

The Tali, the ecliptic, and the heart, are the points of concentration and digression of the primum mevens of the Makro and Microcosm.

The Tali, already mentioned, is declared by all the ancients, and among others by Rabbi Jehuda Hallawi, to be the Dragon known in astronomy which the Arabs call Bashar. (The supposition is that it is the eccentric orbit of the moon against the orbit of the sun.) The Gymnosophists termed the distance of the moon at the point of her intersection in the ecliptic, Patona Chandra: "The offended dragon" which, however, seems impossible, for the book of Jeziro gives the Tali as the primum movens of the whole universe. It would be more reasonable to understand by it an assumed zone outside of the zodiac, on which account it appears like a king upon a throne who holds all the threads of the combined kingdom in his hands. Accordingly the Tali can be nothing else than the world serpent Seschat (Adischen Wasughl) of the ancient Hindoos, which served them as a symbol of the Divine protection and of eternity.

We have much less to do with the question how man as the Microcosm, through his spiritual powers, which he can bring into action through his will and through the mighty word operates on the whole universe, than with the physical and especially with the magical influence of the whole universe upon man as the part of nature.

Even Rabbi Jehuda Haleni calls attention to the wonderful phenomenon that even the elements and powers of nature which contribute to the maintenance of the human organism which man receives within himself, transforms and assimilates to reproduce the wasted particles of his body, and by which he preserves his corporeal integrity, that even these elements after a certain cycle of years, will exercise on their part an inimical and destructive influence upon the human organization, until man dissolves through an individual death, and he returns again unto the elements and chemistry of the general matter of nature. Admitting this constant struggle of man with surrounding nature, the book of Jeziro compares as already stated, the heart, as the fountain of life, to a king in battle, who in the beginning overpowers and subdues his enemies, but who notwithstanding, succumbs to the strife in the end.

That the whole universe, the sun, the moon, and the rest of the planets and heavenly bodies exercise a certain influence upon the earth, and consequently upon man as a part of it, and thus produce many a diversified effects, was no uncommon conclusion on the part of the ancients, for they were led to these conclusions by obvious visions and appearances, and they were compelled to discover the sidereal influences by close observation. The moon, especially, with her periods of twenty-seven and twenty-eight days, made her influence upon man and his condition felt in an unmistakable manner. Among these may be classed, menstruation in women, the different phases of worm diseases according to the different phases of the moon, the increase and decrease of certain cutaneous diseases, etc., after these phases; the influence of the moon upon certain bodily diseases. Reil mentions, that the influence of the moon in causing dysentery has been recognized by many eminent physicians, who, it is said, have observed that the attacks of dysentery are more frequent in new moon and full moon than at any other periods. Others declare that pestilence is much more severe at the time of new moon. The Brahmins also give warning against the new moon. Kant says: "It is a strong argument in favor of the hypothesis, that the moon influences diseases, from the fact that the deaths from fever in Bengal were greatly multiplied during an eclipse of the sun, etc., because the attraction of the moon at this time unites with that of the sun, whose power to operate upon bodies on the earth has been established beyond a cavil." Finally, belong in this place the critical days, and the moon's power of attraction upon travelers by night.

The influence of the light of the sun and the moon upon humanity must have been evident in the earliest period, and it was soon admitted that it affected mightily both the well-being of man, and his frame of mind, as well as the exhibitions of the various temperaments. This knowledge was extended by observation of local diseases during the different seasons of the year and the changes in the weather, the beneficial effect of the rays of the sun in painful and diseased parts of the body, and the influence of daytime upon births and deaths. Acknowledging the injurious effects of the sun and moon, the Psalmist says: "The sun will not harm by day, neither the moon by night." The Talmud ascribes healing powers to the sun. Abail says: The prophet speaks of the healing sun, for the rays of the sun possess healing powers. The Talmud says: "God hung a precious stone around the neck of Abraham; all they that were sick and gazed thereon became well." But after Abraham died, God took the precious stone and hung it up in the sphere of the sun.

But the Ancients also recognized a physical influence of the rest of the planets and the whole host of stars upon man. The belief that the heavenly bodies were gifted with life, and that they with being endowed with higher powers, could exercise an influence upon man by means of mysterious magical influences could regulate his temperament, his disposition and his term of life, was spread from the Ganges to the Tiber and to the pillars of Hercules. The Talmud likewise teaches this astrological faith, with this difference, that the Israelite is placed under the immediate guidance of God, and notwithstanding the iron astrological necessity and predestination, concedes the possibility, that through the omnipotence of God good may be brought about in spite of the constellations. This is expressed in the Talmud by the words: "The Israelite has no constellation." Rabbi Joham successfully establishes this fact against Rabbi Chanina, who asserts that, "Wisdom and riches are the gifts of the constellations;" for says Rabbi Joham, it is recorded in Jeremiah x. 2: "Be not afraid of the heavenly signs as the Heathens who fear them." Rab says: Abraham spake before God: Lord of the earth! shall my servant be my heir? God said: No, thy son shall be thy heir. Abraham answered: My horoscope has shown me that I shall be childless. Then spake God and said: Get thee away from thy astrology, the Israelite is not subjected to the constellations.

On the writing table of Rabbi Jeheschna was found written, says the Talmud: "Whoever is born on Sunday will be distinguished above others." Upon this Rabbi Asche says: Both Dime bar Kakustha and I were born on a Sunday; I became the principal of a school, and he became a captain of robbers. Light and darkness were created on the Sabbath. He who is born on Monday will always be a passionate man, for on this day the waters were divided. Whoever is born on Tuesday will become rich and given to pleasure; on this day all herbs were created. Whoever is born on Wednesday will be wise and happy: on this day the stars of the firmament were created. He who is born on Thursday will be constantly employed in works of love. Whoever is born on Friday will become active in good works. Whoever is born on the Sabbath will also die on the Sabbath, because the Sabbath was desecrated on his account. Raba, the Rabbi Schila adds: He will be called holy. Chancna said to his pupils: Go to the son of Levi, and say: Not the constellation of the day has an influence but the stars of the hour of birth. He that is born under the influence of the sun is gifted with beauty, eats and drinks of his own possessions, but his secrets will become known; should he become a thief, he will be unlucky. If any one is born under the influence of Venus, he will become rich and voluptuous, because the (fire) of love is born in him. He who is born under the influence of Mercury will become enlightened and prudent, because Mercury is the secretary of the sun. He who is born under the influence of the moon will learn to bear hardships. He builds and moves in, moves in and builds, eat and drinks of the possessions of the stranger; his secrets remain hidden, and as a thief he will be fortunate: he who is born under Mercury will find all his plans perverted and defeated. The plans of others against him, however, will also be defeated. Whoever is born under the influence of Jupiter will become a just man. He who is born under the influence of Mars will become a shedder of blood. Rabbi Asche asserts this. He will either become a robber or a butcher. Abam adds, or a judge.

We observe that the Talmud regards the sidereal nature of man as a hypo-tatical being of itself. This siderealism, preëxisting in the constellation of man, he denominates Masol. The most distinguished persons were their own star, and thus, according to the Talmud, the star of the field-general Sisra was called Meroz. Judges v. 23. The siderealism of the proselytes was present at Sinai.

Upon the constellation, says Raba, depend—the blessing of children, longevity, success in life. Job cursed his constellations. Since the fate of man is fixed beforehand by the constellation, no injury can take effect upon him, neither can an accidental death come upon him. If, therefore, a man meet serpents or scorpions by which he is attacked, if he destroys them, then let him be assured that they were predestined to be destroyed by him, although he may regard the act as a miracle.

Beings who are born under the same constellation stand in close relation and magical sympathy with each other. The Talmud even sets up a problem from these premises as to whether such persons have the same marks, as moles, for instance.

The conjunction of the planets, eclipse of the sun and moon, exercise a great influence upon vegetables and upon man. Samuel teaches when the spring equinox happens upon the hour of Jupiter, the strength of the fruit tree will be broken. Should the winter solstice fall upon the hour of Jupiter, then the grain will wither; but with this the new moon must also fall upon the hour of Jupiter or the moon. The first hour of Saturday evening (between six and seven o'clock) is that of Mercury. The second is that of the Moon. The third that of Saturn. The fourth that of Jupter. The fifth that of Mars. The sixth that of the Sun. The seventh that of Venus. The eighth hour, again, is that of Mercury, etc.

The Rabbis teach: That an eclipse of the sun is an evil sign for all people. It is as if a king prepared a feast for his subjects, and placed before them a brilliant light; should he be angry with his subjects, however, he commands his servants to remove the light, in order that they might be in darkness. Rabbi Meir taught, that eclipses of the heavenly bodies were an evil sign, for the Israelites especially, because they were accustomed to misfortune. If the master enters the school with a rod in his hand, who is afraid? only he who receives daily punishment. The Rabbis teach, that an eclipse of the sun is an evil sign also for the rest of the nations; an eclipse of moon for the Israelites, for they reckon their time from the moon and other nations from the sun. If the eclipse is in the East, it is an evil omen for the inhabitants of the East; if in the western heavens, then it is an evil omen for the inhabitants of the West; if in the middle of the firmament, it is a bad sign for all the inhabitants of the earth. When the sun appears blood red it protends war. If the sun has a greyish appearance it is a sign of famine. When an eclipse occurs at sundown it is a sign that the Judgment is yet far off; if at sunrise, it is an omen of the near approach of the Judgment. According to others, these omens signify the reverse of what is stated above. A general calamity never overtakes a people in which their heavenly prince (protecting spirit) does not suffer defeat with them. If, however, Israel walks according to the will of God, it will have nothing to fear of this kind.

The Rabbis teach further: On account of sin the sun will be darkened when the presiding judge dies, and is not properly mourned; when a young woman in a city, who is engaged, cries in vain for help when violence is offered to her; and on account of the simultaneous murder of two brothers. The other heavenly lights will be darkened on account of the making of counterfeit money; on account of false witness; when forcible possession is taken of a stranger's property, or when fruit trees are unnecessarily cut down.

To this belongs the dies nefasti, in regard to which we give the following passages from the Talmud:

Samuel teaches, that the time for blessing is Sunday, Wednesday and Friday. No man should allow himself to be bled on Monday or Thursday, for Mars says: Only he who can enjoy the savings of his parents should be bled on Monday and on Thursday, because on both these days the earthly and the heavenly courts are in session. On Tuesday a man should not be bled, because on this day Mars rules the hour. Racht explains this in the following manner: Mars has the supervision over wars, pestilence and all kinds of accidents. The paired (exact) number is likewise an ominous omen, since with it the demons have power (Pessach 110), and accidents are imminent. The order of the planets is: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon. The order of hours in which they rule, begins with the creation of the heavenly lights, namely, in the first hour Wednesday (with us between six and seven o'clock). In this hour Saturn rules, in the second Jupiter; in the third, Mars, etc., thus seven planets in seven hours. This cycle continues forever. According to this order we find that the planets rule in the first hour of each night in the following order: Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Sun, Moon, Mars, namely, in the first hour at the close of Sunday. Mercury, the first hour of the night on Monday; Jupiter, etc. According to this order, in the first hours of the week days are ruled further by the Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn. The first hour, on Sunday morning is ruled by the sun; the first hour on Monday by the moon, and Tuesday morning by Mars. Mars will rule again on the same day in the eighth hour, a direct hour. On other days his rule will not occur on a direct hour, but only during the night when it is not customary to be bled. Upon the remark of the Talmud that Mars rules in a direct hour on Friday, Raschi says: In the first hour on Friday Venus rules. This planet is followed in regular order by Mercury, Moon, Saturn, Jupiter and Mars. The last rules also in the sixth hour, upon follows the answer, that on Saturday many people are in the habit of being bled, and "God protects the simple."

Samuel teaches further, that he who is the fourth, fourteenth, or twenty-fourth, cannot be bled with safety, that is, on a Wednesday fourth, fourteenth and twenty-fourth of the month. So likewise on a fourth, which has no four after it, that is, on a Wednesday after which no four days will intervene until new moon. At new moon, and three days thereafter, bleeding is enervating; on the third day after new moon it is known to be dangerous.

OF MAGICAL REMEDIES IN GENERAL.

As in the ancient world diseases were regarded as the work of the angry gods and malicious demons, so there were, as in the present day by nations in a state of nature, but few magical remedies employed to secure the assistance of demons or to render them harmless.

Sanchuniaton declares that the children of the Kabirists could heal the venomous bite by their songs. The Brahmins regarded diseases as a punishment for sins committed in the present life or in earlier life. The cures consisted of expiation through prayer, alms, exorcisms, but also rational means. The Vedas contain hymns and prayers, to which magical powers are ascribed, and on this account they are used, without understanding them, as forms of exorcism. All diseases, says the Brahmin, are the result of evil demons, and can only be healed by purification, through sorcery. Ormuzd awakened the great prophet Hom, from whom all the magicians originated. He healed all diseases through the word of Ormuzd and by a plant that bears his name. Many cures, it is said in the ten books, are brought about by means of trees and herbs, others through the agency of the knife, others through the word, but perfect cures result only through the Divine Word. Even if the old Greeks cured with natural means, the common people still believed that a rapid convalescence was obtained through magical formulas, songs and incantations. The medical heroes of the Grecian primitive world were at the same time poets, lawgivers, generals and astronomers.

Of the cures of spiritual men and prophets we have already spoken. The prophets were unanimous in applying natural means, prayer and blessing. Rabbi Jitzchak said: Four things destroy the evil passions of man, namely, alms, prayer, change of name, and repentance. According to other authors, also, change of place. Josephus writes in reference to king Chiskia, God gave him the power, through fervent adjurations, to reconcile the Deity, and to cast out the evil spirits which are the cause of evil diseases; and this method of healing, continues Josephus, is the prevailing one among us at the present day. Josephus adds: I was an eyewitness to a cure which the prophet Eleazar, in the presence of the Emperor Vespasian, performed upon a man possessed of demons. He made use of a root that was recommended by King Solomon as being effectual against demoniacal disease, when the root was inserted into the nose of the patient, at the same time pronouncing the name of Solomon and the magical formula which this king taught. The Gnostics herein followed the example of the prophets. The theosophical-medical sect of the Escucans sought out the power of roots, herbs and stones for healing purposes, and at the same time attempted to heal diseases by living a devout life and by a total surrender of themselves into the idea of God, and by this means they also sought to perform wonders. The substantial word of God, which, as a mark of preference is called the Angel, the Monas, World of Light, Bread of Life, First Born of all Creatures, the Physician of all diseases, lives in the Eopts and causes them to partake of the Divine nature, so that they may heal diseases and perform wonders of all kinds. The magical Logos, who derives his analogy or origin from the exalted and holy word Oum of the Brahmins, we find again in the Book of Jeriza, where we read (i. 8): "One, the Spirit of the Living God, voice and Spirit and word." "And this is the Holy Spirit." The Divine number, the Divine Word, the Divine Scriptures, says Rabbi Jehuda Halevi, in his illustration of the Book Jezira, is one and the same with the reality. That which God thinks and wills has at the same time reality. Only man makes a distinction between the will and the act; with God these two are identical. Rabbi Jehudah Halevi continues: "We can form some conception of this when we, in thinking of and pronouncing a name, at the same time form an image of the subject named in our minds. Among the languages and writings this peculiarity may be noticed, that some specify the existence of things particularly, while others do so in a general manner. The holy language, however, with which God called the universe into being, demonstrates the prime existence of all things with the utmost definiteness. Whoever, therefore, is acquainted with the original signification of the scriptures, and grasps with pure thought the existence of the thing intended, he can, in accordance with his thoughts and his will, will the things into being. Thorough knowledge of the holy word and of the transposition of its letters may, as the Talmud says, enable man to perform wonders and even create things. Rabbi Jonathan says: "The time will come when the pious will bring the dead to life." Raha says: "If the pious desire to do so, they can create a world." It is reported of this Rabbi that he created a man, and of the Rabbis Chanina and Oschaja, that they were occupied every Friday with the book of Jezira, and that they created a fattened calf which they consumed. Gechasie caused the golden image of the bull to speak, by imprinting upon his lips a "name." Solomon gave to Benajahn ben Jehojada a chain and a seal upon both of which he engraved a "name" with which to bind the demon king Asmedi. Of Bezalel, the builder of the temple tent in the wilderness, it is said: "He understood the transposition of letters by which heaven and earth were created." Abischai uttered a holy name, and thereby suspended David between heaven and earth.

The word which expresses the being of the prototypes and the idea of the intelligentia may operate through these through the whole chain of being down to the most minute, causing changes, reverses and new creations, and may also conquer demons. "Rabbi Chanina bar Papi was required by a matron who became enamored of him, to fulfil her amorous desires. He uttered something, and his body was covered with scabs and boils. She also did something and he became whole; then he fled and concealed himself," etc.

But since there are holy words, whose literal ideas and their transpositions are countless modifications of existence, so there are also unholy words which give the prototypes of the dark side of the spirit world. And now, if the profane use of the holy name is forbidden upon pain of losing future happiness, so the use of unholy names, which Abraham transmitted to the children of his concubines is the most terrible, because they lead to the sins of idolatry, through which man acquires evil principles and becomes possessed of demons.

The Talmud, in general, forbids sorcery, heathen superstition and heathen usages. To these belong the charming of wounds and injuries, with which, notwithstanding the exorcism, a verse of the Bible was made use of; the charming of snakes and scorpions. The following usages especially, were given as being heathenish. 1. To suspend the egg of a grasshopper on the ear to cure earache. 2. To carry the tooth of a fox to promote sleep; the tooth of a dead fox was used to prevent drowsiness, and the tooth of a living fox caused sleep. 3. The bearing of the splinter from a gallows, to cure a wound caused by iron. 4. The proverb, "Good fortune! and be not weary day nor night," probably a saying to obtain good luck. "Gad" means luck, and it is the name of the idol Belus (Isaiah lxxv. 11). 5. In order to obtain good luck the man assumes the name of the woman, and the woman the name of the man. 6. The saying, "Be strong, O my barrels!" to increase the wine blessing—Dan is the name of an idol. (Amos viii. 14.) 7. To have luck, people call to the male raven: "Shriek!" and to the female raven: "Croak!" and turn unto me your tail for luck. 8. If any one says: "Kill this cock, for he crows late in the evening, or kill this hen, for she crows like a cock." 9. I drink and leave some over; I drink and leave some over (so that the wine may increase). 10. Whoever dashes the shells of eggs against the wall (out of which the young chickens have already crept, so that they may not die). 11. He who stirs in a crock before the young chickens for the same purpose. 12. Whoever, for the same purpose dances before the chickens and counts seventy-one chickens. 13. Dancing during the preparation of a meal. To command silence during the boiling of the lentil. To cry out during the boiling of grain. To urinate before the pot to facilitate cooking.

Rabbi Acha says: Before bleeding we should repeat the following prayer: May it be thy will, O Lord! that this healing operation may hasten my convalescence, etc., for no one should seek the assistance of the physician, but should look for a return of health only to God. To this Aliaë objects, because Rabbi Jischmael teaches, and because he deduces from the Thora (Exodus xxi. 19). The physician shall have an unconditional right to heal. The Talmud not only adopts this view of Aliaë's but it forbade to dwell in a place where no physician could be met with. If again, on the other hand, we read in the Talmud that King Chiskia, suffered the Book of Healing to be destroyed, and for this act was praised by the Rabbis, then that book, as is supposed by Maimonides, contained simply superstitious astrological and idolatrous remedies, which the pious king sought to consign to oblivion, of which, however, a large portion found their way into the hands of the people, and in time also became a common benefit to the more enlightened.

OF THE MAGICAL CURES IN PARTICULAR.

1.—HEALING BY AMULETS.

The amulet Kamea was used as a remedy against diseases and especially against sorcery. This amulet was either a written parchment, properly called Pitka, or a small bundle of plants. The words written on the amulet were of a diversified character; among the contents, however, were to be found verses from the Bible. Proof  is called an amulet, since cures have been effected through it three times, whether it was written or whether it consisted of roots. In reference to the Sabbath (whether or not it might be worn on that day or not), it must still be regarded as reliable, because it was made and perfected by a connoisseur. An amulet may prove effectual in healing a human being, while it is of no effect in the case of an animal, because in man the constellation operates in conjunction with the amulet. If it is expected to be effectual, it must have reference to the name and number of the demon. Thus, for example, the demons of the caper-tree are called spirits; of a service-tree, Schedim; in the gardens, Rispe. At the caper-tree not less than sixty Schedim congregate, and the amulet must therefore have reference to this number.

A string made of the seeds of the madder was hung upon children as a protection against certain diseases. The nurse of Abbai taught him: Three grains will check the disease, five will cure, and seven will prove effectual against sorcery. Rabbi Acha bar Jacob remarks: The last is true only when the bewitched person is not exposed to the light of the sun or moon, or to rain, and when he does not hear the ringing of iron, the crowing of the cock, or the sound of footsteps. Rabbi Nachmann bar Jitzchak says that this remedy was already forgotten in his time.

2.—HEALING BY CHARMS.

The nurse of Abbai taught him: "All numbering (naming?) should be done in the name of the mother (N. son of R.), and all external passages must be made on the left side of the body. Abbaii says farther: If the number is fixed it should be strictly adhered to without deviation; if the number is not fixed, it is forty-one.

As anti-heathenish customs the four following things are allowed: 1. To place the splinter of a mulberry-tree or fragments of glass into the pot, in order to make the mess boil more readily. (The Rabbis, however, forbade the fragment of glass on account of the danger of swallowing in with the food.) 2. The drinking toast: Wine and life cheer the Rabbis! Rabbi Akiba repeated this toast with every vessel of wine used at the marriage feast of his son. Against intoxication: Anoint the palms of the hand and the soles of the feet of the drunken person with a mixture of oil and salt, and say: As the ointment becomes pure, so may the senses become clean; or, lay the bung of a barrel in the water and say: As the bung becomes clean, etc.

Charm against suppuration: say for instance, Bas, Basia, Mas Masia, Kas, Kasia, Scharial and Amarlia, the angels, who came out of the land of Sodom to heal painful boils. Let the color not become redder; let it not spread further, let the seed be absorbed in the bowels. And as a mule does not propagate its species, so may this evil be not propagated in the body of N. son of R.

Charm against smallpox: For example; Drawn sword and pointed sling. His name is not Jacob, the pain rages.

Against being possessed, as follows: Cursed, crushed and banished be the demon, by name Bar Tet, Bor Tama, etc.

Charm against injury inflicted by demons of by-places: Upon the head of the lion, and in the nose of the lioness, I found the demon Bar Schirk a Panda. I threw him into a fish-bed and slew him with the jawbone of an ass.

To make evil dreams good, three men recited certain consoling verses from the Bible. "Whosoever had a bad dream, should hasten in the morning, as soon as he awakens, to repeat a verse from the Bible, the contents of which should be favorable to him, and this must be done quickly, before a verse comes into the mind with an unfavorable meaning to him."

He that is upon the point of entering a city and fears the evil look, let him put his right thumb in his left hand, and his left thumb in his right hand, and say: I, N. N., am of the lineage of Joseph, over whom the evil eye can have no power. He makes the glance of the evil eye harmless; the tail of a fox was hung upon the horse.

3.—REMEDIES AND CHARMS AGAINST SORCERY.

Ben Asai says: Do not irritate your anus while sitting down in order to obtain a passage from the bowels, for he who does this will be attacked by sorcery, even though he were engaged in Spain. If a man, however, has done so in a mistake, after an evacuation, let him pronounce the following charm:

"Ye cannot approach, neither Tachimnor Tachtum, not all of you, not any of you, neither the enchantment of the sorcerer nor the charm of the sorceress."

Rabbi Chanina says: To drink one-eighth ounce of ass's milk, which is forty days old, is effective against the sting of a wasp; one quart against the sting of a scorpion; one-half quart against sorcery, and the drinking of fluids that have been open and exposed.

Rabbi Jochanan said: A chief among witches told me: If you meet witches you should utter the following charm: "Hot dirt, in perforated baskets, in your mouths, ye enchanting women. May your heads become bald; may the wind blow away your bread crumbs; may it scatter your spices; may the fresh saffron which ye have in your hands fly away. Witches! so long as men were gracious to me, and I was careful, I came not in your midst; now I did, and you are not agreeable to me."

The Rabbi taught: There are three things between which we should not pass, and so, also, that two persons walking side by side should not allow to come between them. These three things are—a dog, a palm, and a woman. Some add also a hog, and others, a snake. Should this happen notwithstanding, what shall a man do to escape uninjured? Rabbi Papi says: "Repeat a verse from the Bible that begins and ends with the same letters."

If women are seated facing each other on opposite sides of the street, there is no doubt that they are engaged in witchcraft. How shall a man escape them without injury? He should avoid them and go another way. If this is not possible, then he shall take some one by the hand and pass by in his company. If there is no one at hand, he must say: "The demons of sorcery have already been killed by arrows. A rat Assia, Belussia, are the names of the demons. Raschi."

The Rabbis teach: A man should not drink water in the night, either from a stream or from water that is standing still. Whoever does this, his blood be upon his own head, because by so doing he will render himself liable to become blind. How can we make drinking at night safe? If there is some one present he should be awakened and addressed as follows: "I drink water!" If you are alone, rattle with the lid of the drinking cup and say to yourself: "N., son of R., thy mother said to thee: Guard thyself against Schabririri, briri, riri, iri, ri, in a white pitcher (Raschi), this is a magical charm." As the syllables of the word Schabririri decrease, so the demon will withdraw. The Targum of blindness (Genesis xix. 11), in Schabririri.

In reference to paired numbers, of which we have already spoken, Rabbi Papa says: "Joseph, the Demon, told me that through two we kill, through four we only inflict injury. In the number two the evil will follow, whether we have done a thing in this number intentionally or accidentally. In the number four only when the thing is done intentionally. If we have accidentally partaken of a meal or drank out of a paired plate or pitcher, number, how shall we avoid the fatal consequences? We must take the thumb of the right hand into the left, and the thumb of the left into the right hand, and say: You and I make three. If answered, is returned: You and I make five. If we again hear the answer: You and I are six, we must again answer: You and I are seven. It happened that some one carried this on to the 101st time, until finally the demon burst with chagrin.

APPLICATION OF THE CHARMS AND THE REMEDIES.

We insert the passages of the Talmud which treat of the subject, on account of their coherence, in all that extent, although it may not properly belong in this place, because in several cases in the following remedies the natural cures as well as the magical charms are prescribed, and because these passages from the Talmud otherwise offer many interesting matters. They treat of proceedings against snakes and other remarkable occurrences.

He that has swallowed a snake, let him eat ivy and then walk three miles. Rabbi Sime bar Asche saw a man who had swallowed a snake. Rabbi Sime fell upon him like a warrior, gave him ivy and salt to eat, and then drove him three miles before him, when the snake came from him in pieces. Others state that Rabbi Sime himself swallowed the snake, when the prophet Eli came in the form of a wild warrior, gave him ivy and salt to eat, etc., etc.

If a man be bitten by a snake, let him take seventy-nine hairs from the tail of a white she-ass, tie them with a silken thread, and he that is bitten sit upon them. The she-ass must, however, have been free from Trefa (an organic disease). An official in Pumbeditha was bitten by a snake. Now, there were found in Pumbeditha thirteen bearing white she-asses, which were opened one after another, but all were found to have been afflicted with Trefa. It was also known that in a distant part of the city there was another she-ass, and messengers were sent to bring her. But meanwhile a lion had eaten up the she-ass. Then spoke Abaii: Perhaps the snake of the Rabbis have bitten him, against the bite of which there is no remedy. The pupils answered, Yes; so it is, master; for when Rāb died, Rabbi Jitzsechak bar Bina prohibited the use of myrtle and palm leaves for a whole year. This officer, however, paid no attention to this prohibition.

If a snake should wind around a person, he should go into the water and take a basket which he should hold above the head of the snake, then lower the basket in such a manner that the rim of it shall come between him and the snake (to grasp the snake with the hands would be dangerous, because it might become enraged and wound the person). When the snake is in the basket, throw it quickly into the water and hasten away.

Should any one be pursued by an angry snake (where the snake follows the person by scenting his tracks) he should suffer himself to be carried a short distance by a person, if any one should be present (through the stranger's footsteps the snake will lose his tracks); if no one is with him he should spring across water or seat himself over a fountain. On the following night he should place himself upon four barrels, so that the snake cannot easily reach him, or let him rather sleep in the open air, so that it cannot come to him through the roof, then let him tie four cats to the barrels and make a noise with straw or bushes, so that the cats, when the snake comes, may fall upon her and eat her up.

Should any one be pursued by a snake, let him seek safety between two beehives.

Rabbi Jochanan says: The root-drink described in the Mischna, consists of Alexandrian gum, pulverized alum and fine saffron, each of the weight of a Sus (a small coin). To cure jaundice two of them are taken in beer.

The following remedies are also recommended in cases of female weakness: Take the tops of three Persian onions, boil them in wine and let the woman drink of it, at the same time saying to her: Recover from thy sickness!

Another remedy: Take a handful of caraway, a handful of saffron, and an equal quantity of fœnugrek, boil them together in wine, and let the woman drink of it, saying: Recover from thy sickness!

Another remedy: Take sixty bungs of wine barrels, soak them in water, and give the woman of the water to drink, and say to her at the same time: Recover from thy sickness!

Or, take a quantity of the growth of tendrils, boil them in wine, and let the woman drink of it, and speak to her as above.

Or, take the plant that grows beside the thorn, and burn it to ashes. The woman should carry the ashes upon her person in a linen patch in the summer, or a woollen patch in the winter.

Or, dig seven holes in the ground, and burn in each of them young grapevines not over three years' growth. Let the woman take a cup into her hands and seat herself over the first hole and drink: then rise up and seat herself upon the second hole, etc., etc. Each time speak to her: Recover, etc.

Or, anoint the lower part of her body with rose-water.

Or, take a wreath of feathers, burn them to ashes. These ashes the patient should carry in a linen bag in the summer, and in a woollen bag in the winter.

Or, open a cask of wine expressly for her. She should drink much wine.

Or, take a grain of barley that was found in the stable of a white she-ass. If she holds this one day in her hand (the right hand), the ailment will cease for two days. If she holds it during two days, it will cease for three days. If she holds it three days it will cease forever. According to others: if she takes one grain in her hand, etc.; if she takes two grains in her hand, etc.

5.—MAGICAL REMEDIES AGAINST VARIOUS DISEASES AND CONDITIONS.

ABORTUS.—The actitee (eaglestone, rattle-snake stone—stone of retaining, remaining) was worn by women as a prevention against abortion.

BLOOD-LETTING.—If you have eaten fish, you must not be bled on the following day. If you have been bled, you must not eat fish on the following day. On the third day both would be dangerous.

The Rabbis teach: After blood-letting, a man must not, on the same day, drink milk, eat cheese, onions or vegetables. If a man, however, has eaten of these things, he should mix, says Abaii, one quarter measure of vinegar, and one quarter measure of wine, and drink it. If a motion of the bowels ensues, the evacuation should take place without and on the east side of the town, for the exhalation of such is injurious.

DISEASES OF THE EYE.—The saliva of a firstborn on the male side (not of the female side) is effective in the cure of eye diseases.

Rab says: A degenerate eye is dangerous to life, for the vision-power of the eye is closely connected with the pericardium.

Rapid traveling impairs the sight of the eye; but it may be restored by uttering the blessing of consecration of the Sabbath on Friday evening.

BLINDNESS.—Against blindness at night, take a string made out of the hair of an animal; tie one end of it to the foot of the patient, and the other end to the foot of a dog, and then let the children make a noise behind the dog, and say: "Hold the dog, fool the rock." Then take seven pieces of meat from seven different houses, and let the inmates of each house hang a piece of the meat at the door-post of the patient. The dog must eat this meat in an open place. Then let the patient unbind the hair-line and let some one say; Night blindness of F., son of R., leave N., son of R., and perforate the pupil of the dog.

AGAINST DAY BLINDNESS.—Take seven pieces of spleen from seven heifers, and lay them upon the vessel used by the physician to catch the blood when bleeding a patient. The patient must be seated in a chamber. A man must be stationed on the outside, who must say: "Blind one! give to me that I may eat." The patient answers: "How can I open? Come in and eat!" After eating he must break the plate or he will himself become blind.

MIND POWER.—Rab says: The "Bird of the Vineyard" (mentioned in the Mishna) is found on the palm-tree having a single bark.

It is employed as a means to strengthen the mind. The right half of it must be eaten, and the left half of it must be preserved in a copper tube which must be sealed with sixty seals (with wax, putty, earth, etc.), and hung upon the left arm. Upon this a man obtains clearer ideas, and is enabled to comprehend matters with more ease. Afterward the other half should also be eaten, for if this be neglected, what has been learned will soon be forgotten.

THE SOFT-BOILED EGG.—Samuel says: A slave that knows how to prepare a soft-boiled egg is worth a thousand dollars. The egg must be handled thousands of times in warm as well as in cold water, until it becomes so small that it can be swallowed with a single effort. Whatever disease may be in the abdomen will be known to the physician through the decreasing egg, and he will at once know what remedy to prescribe.

FEVER.—The nurse of Samuel gave him the following remedies:

Against the Daily Fever: Take a new silver coin and a piece of salt of equal weight, and carry both over the pit of the heart, attached to a string.

Or, take a seat on a crossroad, and as soon as you observe a large ant carrying something, take her up and place her in a copper tube, close the opening with lead, and seal it with sixty seals, shake the tube and hand upon your body, and say to the ant: Thy burden upon me; and my burden upon thee.

Or, take a new earthen pipkin, go to a spring and say: Spring, Spring! lend me a pipkin full of water for the road that happens to me. Then swing the pipkin full of water seven times around your head, throw it backward and say: Spring, Spring! take the water you gave me, for the way that happened to me came in his day and departed in his day.

Rabbi Huna says: For fever recurring every three days, take seven different grapes from seven different grapevines, seven chips from seven joists, seven nails from seven bridges, seven small quantities of ashes from seven stoves, seven bits of earth from seven holes in the ground, seven pieces of pitch from seven ships, seven grains of cumin, seven hairs out of the beard of an old dog. Bind these all together and carry them with a string upon the nape of the neck.

Rabbi Jochanan says: For the burning fever, take a knife that is made entirely of iron, go to a thorn bush and tie a hair line to it. On the first day make a notch in it and say: "And there appeared unto him an angel of God in a flame of fire out of the midst of the burning bush." On the next day make another indentation and say: "Then God saw that he approached in order to see, etc." The following day make another indentation and say: "Come nigh, etc." Then cut the thorn off near the ground and say: O thornbush! O thornbush! I trust in thee!

About the Book of Enoch

(Also known as "Ethiopian Enoch")

The Book of Enoch (also known as 1 Enoch) was once cherished by Jews and Christians alike, this book later fell into disfavor with powerful theologians - precisely because of its controversial statements on the nature and deeds of the fallen angels.

The Enochian writings, in addition to many other writings that were excluded (or lost) from the Bible (i.e., the Book of Tobit, Esdras, etc.) were widely recognized by many of the early church fathers as "Apocryphal" writings. The term "apocrypha" is derived from the Greek word meaning "hidden" or "secret". Originally, the import of the term may have been complimentary in that the term was applied to sacred books whose contents were too exalted to be made available to the general public.

In Dan. 12:9-10 we hear of words that are shut up until the end of time and, words that the wise shall understand and the wicked shall not. In addition, 4 Ezra 14:44ff. mentions 94 books, of which 24 (the OT) were to be published and 70 were to be delivered only to the wise among the people. Gradually, the term "apocrypha" took on a pejorative connotation, for the orthodoxy of these hidden books was often questionable. Origen (Comm. in Matt. 10.18; p. 13.881) distinguished between books that were to be read in public worship and apocryphal books. Because these secret books were often preserved for use within the esoteric circles of the divinely - knit believers, many of the critically - spirited or "unenlightened" Church Fathers found themselves outside the realm of understanding, and therefore came to apply the term "apocryphal" to, what they claimed to be, heretical works which were forbidden to be read.

In Protestant parlance, "the Apocrypha" designate 15 works, all but one of which are Jewish in origin and found in the Septuagint (parts of 2 Esdras are Christian and Latin in origin). Although some of them were composed in Palestine in Aramaic or Hebrew, they were not accepted into the Jewish canon formed late in the 2nd century AD (Canonicity, 67:31-35). The Reformers, influenced by the Jewish canon of the Old Testament, did not consider these books on a par with the rest of the Scriptures; thus the custom arose of making the Apocrypha a separate section in the Protestant Bible, or sometimes even of omitting them entirely (Canonicity, 67:44-46). The Catholic view, expressed as a doctrine of faith at the Council of Trent, is that 12 of these 15 works (in a different enumeration, however) are canonical Scripture; they are called the Deuterocanonical Books (Canonicity, 67:21, 42-43).

The three books of the Protestant Apocrypha that are not accepted by Catholics are 1-2 Esdras and the Prayer of Manasseh. The theme of the Book of Enoch dealing with the nature and deeds of the fallen angels so infuriated the later Church fathers that one, Filastrius, actually condemned it openly as heresy (Filastrius, Liber de Haeresibus, no. 108). Nor did the rabbis deign to give credence to the book's teaching about angels. Rabbi Simeon ben Jochai in the second century A.D. pronounced a curse upon those who believed it (Delitzsch, p. 223). So the book was denounced, banned, cursed, no doubt burned and shredded - and last but not least, lost (and conveniently forgotten) for a thousand years. But with an uncanny persistence, the Book of Enoch found its way back into circulation two centuries ago.

In 1773, rumors of a surviving copy of the book drew Scottish explorer James Bruce to distant Ethiopia. True to hearsay, the Book of Enoch had been preserved by the Ethiopic church, which put it right alongside the other books of the Bible. Bruce secured not one, but three Ethiopic copies of the book and brought them back to Europe and Britain. When in 1821 Dr. Richard Laurence, a Hebrew professor at Oxford, produced the first English translation of the work, the modern world gained its first glimpse of the forbidden mysteries of Enoch.

Most scholars say that the present form of the story in the Book of Enoch was penned sometime during the second century B.C. and was popular for at least five hundred years. The earliest Ethiopic text was apparently made from a Greek manuscript of the Book of Enoch, which itself was a copy of an earlier text. The original was apparently written in Semitic language, now thought to be Aramaic.

Though it was once believed to be post-Christian (the similarities to Christian terminology and teaching are striking), recent discoveries of copies of the book among the Dead Sea Scrolls found at Qumran prove that the book was in existence before the time of Jesus Christ. But the date of the original writing upon which the second century B.C. Qumran copies were based is shrouded in obscurity. It is, in a word, old. It has been largely the opinion of historians that the book does not really contain the authentic words of the ancient biblical patriarch Enoch, since he would have lived (based on the chronologies in the Book of Genesis) several thousand years earlier than the first known appearance of the book attributed to him. Although in the book he commands his son Methuselah to preserve the book unto future generations, which in itself is a call to copy the books he wrote so they might not be lost to the ages.

Despite its unknown origins, Christians once accepted the words of this Book of Enoch as authentic scripture, especially the part about the fallen angels and their prophesied judgment. In fact, many of the key concepts used by Jesus Christ himself seem directly connected to terms and ideas in the Book of Enoch. Thus, it is hard to avoid the conclusion that Jesus had not only studied the book, but also respected it highly enough to adopt and elaborate on its specific descriptions of the coming kingdom and its theme of inevitable judgment descending upon "the wicked" - the term most often used in the Old Testament to describe the Watchers.

There is abundant proof that Christ approved of the Book of Enoch. Over a hundred phrases in the New Testament find precedents in the Book of Enoch. Another remarkable bit of evidence for the early Christians' acceptance of the Book of Enoch was for many years buried under the King James Bible's mistranslation of Luke 9:35, describing the transfiguration of Christ: "And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, 'This is my beloved Son: hear him.'" Apparently the translator here wished to make this verse agree with a similar verse in Matthew and Mark. But Luke's verse in the original Greek reads: "This is my Son, the Elect One (from the Greek ho eklelegmenos, lit., "the elect one"): hear him." The "Elect One" is a most significant term (found fourteen times) in the Book of Enoch. If the book was indeed known to the apostles of Christ, with its abundant descriptions of the Elect One who should "sit upon the throne of glory" and the Elect One who should "dwell in the midst of them," then the great scriptural authenticity is accorded to the Book of Enoch when the "voice out of the cloud" tells the apostles, "This is my Son, the Elect One" - the one promised in the Book of Enoch.

The Book of Jude tells us in verse 14 that "Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied..." Jude also, in verse 15, makes a direct reference to the Book of Enoch (2:1), where he writes, "to execute judgment on all, to convict all who are ungodly..." The time difference between Enoch and Jude is approximately 3400 years. Therefore, Jude's reference to the Enoch's prophecies strongly leans toward the conclusion that these written prophecies were available to him at that time.

Fragments of ten Enoch manuscripts were found among the Dead Sea Scrolls. The famous scrolls actually comprise only one part of the total findings at Qumran. Much of the rest was Enochian literature, copies of the Book of Enoch, and other apocryphal works in the Enochian tradition, like the Book of Jubilees. With so many copies around, the Essenes could well have used the Enochian writings as a community prayer book or teacher's manual and study text.

The Book of Enoch was also used by writers of the non-canonical (i.e. apocryphal or "hidden") texts. The author of the apocryphal Epistle of Barnabas quotes the Book of Enoch three times, twice calling it "the Scripture," a term specifically denoting the inspired Word of God (Epis. of Barnabas 4:3, 16:5,6). Other apocryphal works reflect knowledge of the Enoch story of the Watchers, notably the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs and the Book of Jubilees.

Many of the early church fathers also supported the Enochian writings. Justin Martyr ascribed all evil to demons whom he alleged to be the offspring of the angels who fell through lust for women—directly referencing the Enochian writings. Athenagoras, writing in his work called Legatio in about 170 A.D., regards Enoch as a true prophet. He describes the angels which "violated both their own nature and their office." In his writings, he goes into detail about the nature of fallen angels and the cause of their fall, which comes directly from the Enochian writings.

Many other church fathers: Tatian (110-172); Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons (115-185); Clement of Alexandria (150-220); Tertullian (160-230); Origen (186-255); Lactantius (260-330); in addition to: Methodius of Philippi, Minucius Felix, Commodianus, and Ambrose of Milan—also approved of and supported the Enochian writings.

The twentieth-century discovery of several Aramaic Enochian texts among the Dead Sea Scrolls prompted Catholic scholar J.T. Milik to compile a complete history of the Enochian writings, including translations of the Aramaic manuscripts. Milik's 400-page book, published in 1976 by Oxford (J. T. Milik, ed. and trans., The Books of Enoch: Aramaic Fragments of Qumran Cave 4, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1976) is a milestone in Enochian scholarship, and Milik himself is no doubt one of the finest experts on the subject. His opinions, based as they are on years of in-depth research, are highly respected.

One by one the arguments against the Book of Enoch fade away. The day may soon arrive when the final complaints about the Book of Enoch's lack of historicity and "late date" are also silenced by new evidence of the book's real antiquity. Such evidence would be perhaps the return of Enoch, of whom there is no record of ever dying but rather still living in the Kingdom of Heaven. It is appointed unto man once to die, so Enoch has to die once in order for that Scripture to be fulfilled. Spiritual scholars have attributed the fulfilment of the prophecies of Enoch being revealed in Revelation 11 of which we find the return of Enoch with a second reprimand of the world for three and a half years. Wearing sackcloth and perhaps with Elijah for company - we may finally be able to account of his life and times after hearing what he has to say in those days to come - until we see him finally die, lay lifeless for three days and then rise up into the heavens yet again.

Book 1: The Watchers

Chapter 1

The Words of the Blessing of Enoch

1 The words of the blessing of Enoch, wherewith he blessed the elect and righteous, who will be living in the days of tribulation, when all the wicked and godless are to be removed.

2 And Enoch, a righteous man whose eyes were opened by God took up his parable and said, "I saw the vision of the Holy One in the heavens, which the angels showed me, and from them I heard everything, and from them I understood as I saw, but not for this generation, but for a remote one which is for to come."

3 Concerning the elect I said, and took up my parable concerning them: "The Holy Great One will come forth from His dwelling,

4 And the eternal God will tread upon the earth, even on Mount Sinai and will appear in the strength of His might from the heaven of heavens.

5 And all shall be smitten with fear and the Watchers shall quake, and great fear and trembling shall seize them unto the ends of the earth.

6 And the high mountains shall be shaken and the high hills shall be made low, and shall melt like wax before the flame.

7 And the earth shall be wholly rent in sunder and all that is upon the earth shall perish, and there shall be a judgement upon all.

8 But with the righteous He will make peace.

And will protect the elect,

And mercy shall be upon them.

And they shall all belong to God,

And they shall be prospered,

And they shall all be blessed.

And He will help them all,

And light shall appear unto them,

And He will make peace with them.

9 And behold! He cometh with ten thousands of His holy ones to execute judgement upon all, And to destroy all the ungodly: And to convict all flesh Of all the works of their ungodliness which they have ungodly committed, And of all the hard things which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him."

Chapter 2

The Creation

1 Observe ye everything that takes place in the heaven, how they do not change their orbits, and the luminaries which are in the heaven, how they all rise and set in order each in its season, and transgress not against their appointed order.

2 Behold ye the earth, and give heed to the things which take place upon it from first to last, how steadfast they are, how none of the things upon earth change, but all the works of God appear to you. Behold the summer and the winter, how the whole earth is filled with water, and clouds and dew and rain lie upon it.

3 Observe and see how in the winter all the trees seem as though they had withered and shed all their leaves, except fourteen trees, which do not lose their foliage but retain the old foliage from two to three years till the new comes.

4 And again, observe ye the days of summer how the sun is above the earth over against it. And you seek shade and shelter by reason of the heat of the sun, and the earth also burns with growing heat, and so you cannot tread on the earth, or on a rock by reason of its heat.

5 Observe ye how the trees cover themselves with green leaves and bear fruit: wherefore give ye heed and know with regard to all His works, and recognize how He that liveth for ever hath made them so.

6 And all His works go on thus from year to year for ever, and all the tasks which they accomplish for Him, and their tasks change not, but according as God hath ordained so is it done.

7 And behold how the sea and the rivers in like manner accomplish and change not their tasks from His commandments.

8 But ye have not been steadfast, nor done the commandments of the Lord, But ye have turned away and spoken proud and hard words With your impure mouths against His greatness. Oh, ye hard-hearted, ye shall find no peace.

9 Therefore shall ye execrate your days, and the years of your life shall perish, and the years of your destruction shall be multiplied in eternal abomination, and ye shall find no mercy.

10 In those days ye shall make your names an eternal abomination unto all the righteous, and by you shall all who curse, curse. All the sinners and godless shall imprecate by you. And for you, the godless there shall be a curse."

11 And all the righteous shall rejoice, and there shall be forgiveness of sins, and every mercy and peace and forbearance.

12 There shall be salvation unto them, a goodly light.

13 And for all of you sinners there shall be no salvation but on you all shall abide the curse of the beast.

14 But for the elect there shall be light and joy and peace, and they shall inherit the earth.

15 And then there shall be bestowed upon the elect wisdom, and they shall all live and never again sin either through ungodliness or through pride: But they who are wise shall be humble.

16 And they shall not again transgress, nor shall they sin all the days of their life, nor shall they die of anger or wrath but they shall complete the number of the days of their life.

17 And their lives shall be increased in peace, and the years of their joy shall be multiplied in eternal gladness and peace all the days of their life.

Chapter 3

Fallen Angels

1 And it came to pass when the children of men had multiplied that in those days were born unto them beautiful and comely daughters.

2 And the angels, the children of the heaven, saw and lusted after them, and said to one another: "Come, let us choose us wives from among the children of men and beget us children."

3 And Semjaza, who was their leader, said unto them: "I fear ye will not indeed agree to do this deed, and I alone shall have to pay the penalty of a great sin."

4 And they all answered him and said: "Let us all swear an oath, and all bind ourselves by mutual imprecations not to abandon this plan but to do this thing."

5 Then swore they all together and bound themselves by mutual imprecations upon it. And they were in all two hundred; who descended in the days of Jared on the summit of Mount Hermon, and they called it Mount Hermon, because they had sworn and bound themselves by mutual imprecations upon it.

6 And these are the names of their leaders: Samlazaz, their leader, Araklba, Rameel, Kokabel, Tamlel, Ramlel, Danel, Ezeqeel, Baraqijal, Asael, Armaros, Batarel, Ananel, Zaqllel, Samsapeel, Satarel, Turel, Jomjael, Sariel. These are their chiefs of tens.

7 And all the others together with them took unto themselves wives, and each chose for himself one, and they began to go in unto them and to defile themselves with them.

8 And they taught them charms and enchantments, and the cutting of roots, and made them acquainted with plants.

9 And they became pregnant, and they bare great giants, whose height was three thousand ells: Who consumed all the acquisitions of men. And when men could no longer sustain them, the giants turned against them and devoured mankind.

10 And they began to sin against birds, and beasts, and reptiles, and fish, and to devour one another's flesh, and drink the blood. Then the earth laid accusation against the lawless ones.

11 And Azazel taught men to make swords, and knives, and shields, and breastplates, and made known to them the metals of the earth and the art of working them, and bracelets, and ornaments, and the use of antimony, and the beautifying of the eyelids, and all kinds of costly stones, and all colouring tinctures.

12 And there arose much godlessness, and they committed fornication, and they were led astray, and became corrupt in all their ways.

13 Semjaza taught enchantments and root-cuttings, Armaros the resolving of enchantments, Baraqijal taught astrology, Kokabel the constellations, Ezeqeel the knowledge of the clouds, Araquel the signs of the earth, Shamsiel the signs of the sun, and Sariel the course of the moon.

14 And as men perished, they cried, and their cry went up to heaven.

Chapter 4

Intercession of Angels

1 And then Michael, Uriel, Raphael, and Gabriel looked down from heaven and saw much blood being shed upon the earth, and all lawlessness being wrought upon the earth.

2 And they said one to another, "The earth made without inhabitant cries the voice of their cryingst up to the gates of heaven."

3 And now to you, the holy ones of heaven, the souls of men make their suit, saying, "Bring our cause before the Most High."

4 And they said to the Lord of the ages, "Lord of lords, God of gods, King of kings, and God of the ages, the throne of Thy glory standeth unto all the generations of the ages, and Thy name holy and glorious and blessed unto all the ages! Thou hast made all things, and power over all things hast Thou, and all things are naked and open in Thy sight, and Thou seest all things, and nothing can hide itself from Thee.

5 Thou seest what Azazel hath done, who hath taught all unrighteousness on earth and revealed the eternal secrets which were in heaven, which men were striving to learn; and Samlazaz, to whom Thou hast given authority to bear rule over his associates.

6 And they have gone to the daughters of men upon the earth, and have slept with the women, and have defiled themselves, and revealed to them all kinds of sins. And the women have borne giants, and the whole earth has thereby been filled with blood and unrighteousness.

7 And now, behold, the souls of those who have died are crying out making their suit to the gates of heaven, and their lamentations have ascended and cannot cease because of the lawless deeds which are wrought on the earth.

8 And Thou knowest all things before they come to pass, and Thou seest these things and Thou dost suffer them, and Thou dost not say to us what we are to do to them in regard to these."

9 Then said the Most High, the Holy and Great One spake, and sent Uriel to the son of Lamech and said to him, "Go to Noah and tell him in my name 'Hide thyself!' and reveal to him the end that is approaching, that the whole earth will be destroyed, and a deluge is about to come upon the whole earth, and will destroy all that is on it. And now instruct him that he may escape and his seed may be preserved for all the generations of the world."

10 And again the Lord said to Raphael, "Bind Azazel hand and foot, and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert, which is in Dudael, and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there for ever, and cover his face that he may not see light. And on the day of the great judgement he shall be cast into the fire.

11 And heal the earth which the angels have corrupted, and proclaim the healing of the earth, that they may heal the plague, and that all the children of men may not perish through all the secret things that the Watchers have disclosed and have taught their sons. And the whole earth has been corrupted through the works that were taught by Azazel, to him ascribe all sin."

12 And to Gabriel said the Lord, "Proceed against the bastards and the reprobates, and against the children of fornication and destroy the children of the Watchers from amongst men. Send them one against the other that they may destroy each other in battle, for length of days shall they not have. And no request that they make of thee shall be granted unto their fathers on their behalf; for they hope to live an eternal life, and that each one of them will live five hundred years."

13 And the Lord said unto Michael, "Go, bind Samlazaz and his associates who have united themselves with women so as to have defiled themselves with them in all their uncleanness. And when their sons have slain one another, and they have seen the destruction of their beloved ones, bind them fast for seventy generations in the valleys of the earth, till the day of their judgement and of their consummation, till the judgement that is for ever and ever is consummated. In those days they shall be led off to the abyss of fire and to the torment and the prison in which they shall be confined for ever.

14 And whosoever shall be condemned and destroyed will from thenceforth be bound together with them to the end of all generations. and destroy all the spirits of the reprobate and the children of the Watchers because they have wronged mankind.

15 Destroy all wrong from the face of the earth and let every evil work come to an end, and let the plant of righteousness and truth appear, and it shall prove a blessing; the works of righteousness and truth shall be planted in truth and joy for evermore.

16 And then shall all the righteous escape and shall live till they beget thousands of children, and all the days of their youth and their old age shall they complete in peace.

17 And then shall the whole earth be tilled in righteousness, and shall all be planted with trees and be full of blessing.

18 And all desirable trees shall be planted on it, and they shall plant vines on it and the vine which they plant thereon shall yield wine in abundance, and as for all the seed which is sown thereon each measure shall bear a thousand, and each measure of olives shall yield ten presses of oil.

19 And cleanse thou the earth from all oppression, and from all unrighteousness, and from all sin, and from all godlessness, and all the uncleanness that is wrought upon the earth destroy from off the earth.

20 And all the children of men shall become righteous, and all nations shall offer adoration and shall praise Me, and all shall worship Me. And the earth shall be cleansed from all defilement, and from all sin, and from all punishment, and from all torment, and I will never again send upon it from generation to generation and for ever.

21 And in those days I will open the store chambers of blessing which are in the heaven, so as to send them down upon the earth over the work and labour of the children of men. And truth and peace shall be associated together throughout all the days of the world and throughout all the generations of men."

22 Before these things Enoch was hidden, and no one of the children of men knew where he was hidden, and where he abode, and what had become of him.

And his activities had to do with the Watchers, and his days were with the holy ones.

23 And I Enoch was blessing the Lord of Majesty and the King of the ages, and lo! the Watchers called me, Enoch the scribe, and said to me: "Enoch, thou scribe of righteousness, go, declare to the Watchers of the heaven who have left the high heaven, the holy eternal place, and have defiled themselves with women, and have done as the children of earth do, and have taken unto themselves wives.

24 Say to them: 'Ye have wrought great destruction on the earth and ye shall have no peace nor forgiveness of sin.'

25 And inasmuch as they delight themselves in their children the murder of their beloved ones shall they see, and over the destruction of their children shall they lament, and shall make supplication unto eternity, but mercy and peace shall ye not attain."

26 And Enoch went and said: "Azazel, thou shalt have no peace, a severe sentence has gone forth against thee to put thee in bonds and thou shalt not have toleration nor request granted to thee, because of the unrighteousness which thou hast taught, and because of all the works of godlessness and unrighteousness and sin which thou hast shown to men."

27 Then I went and spoke to them all together, and they were all afraid, and fear and trembling seized them. And they besought me to draw up a petition for them that they might find forgiveness, and to read their petition in the presence of the Lord of heaven.

28 For from thenceforward they could not speak with Him nor lift up their eyes to heaven for shame of their sins for which they had been condemned.

29 Then I wrote out their petition, and the prayer in regard to their spirits and their deeds individually and in regard to their requests that they should have forgiveness and length.

30 And I went off and sat down at the waters of Dan, in the land of Dan, to the south of the west of Hermon, I read their petition till I fell asleep.

31 And behold a dream came to me, and visions fell down upon me, and I saw visions of chastisement, and a voice came bidding me to tell it to the sons of heaven, and reprimand them.

32 And when I awaked, I came unto them, and they were all sitting gathered together, weeping in Abelsjail, which is between Lebanon and Seneser, with their faces covered.

33 And I recounted before them all the visions which I had seen in sleep, and I began to speak the words of righteousness, and to reprimand the heavenly Watchers.

Chapter 5

Book of the Words of Righteousness

1 The book of the words of righteousness, and of the reprimand of the eternal Watchers in accordance with the command of the Holy Great One in that vision I saw in my sleep.

2 What I will now say with a tongue of flesh and with the breath of my mouth, which the Great One has given to men to converse therewith and understand with the heart.

3 As He has created and given to man the power of understanding the word of wisdom, so hath He created me also and given me the power of reprimanding the Watchers, the children of heaven.

4 "I wrote out your petition, and in my vision it appeared thus, that your petition will not be granted unto you throughout all the days of eternity, and that judgement has been finally passed upon you.

5 Your petition will not be granted unto you. And from henceforth you shall not ascend into heaven unto all eternity, and in bonds of the earth the decree has gone forth to bind you for all the days of the world.

6 And previously you shall have seen the destruction of your beloved sons and ye shall have no pleasure in them, but they shall fall before you by the sword.

7 And your petition on their behalf shall not be granted, nor yet on your own even though you weep and pray and speak all the words contained in the writing which I have written.

8 And the vision was shown to me thus: Behold, in the vision clouds invited me and a mist summoned me, and the course of the stars and the lightnings sped and hastened me, and the winds in the vision caused me to fly and lifted me upward, and bore me into heaven.

9 And I went in till I drew nigh to a wall which is built of crystals and surrounded by tongues of fire: and it began to affright me.

10 And I went into the tongues of fire and drew nigh to a large house which was built of crystals and the walls of the house were like a tessellated floor made of crystals, and its groundwork was of crystal.

11 Its ceiling was like the path of the stars and the lightnings, and between them were fiery cherubim, and their heaven was water.

12 A flaming fire surrounded the walls, and its portals blazed with fire.

13 And I entered into that house, and it was hot as fire and cold as ice. There were no delights of life therein; fear covered me, and trembling got hold upon me.

14 And as I quaked and trembled, I fell upon my face and I beheld a vision, and lo! there was a second house, greater than the former, and the entire portal stood open before me, and it was built of flames of fire.

15 And in every respect it so excelled in splendor and magnificence and extent that I cannot describe to you its splendor and its extent.

16 And its floor was of fire, and above it were lightnings and the path of the stars, and its ceiling also was flaming fire. And I looked and saw therein a lofty throne, its appearance was as crystal, and the wheels thereof as the shining sun, and there was the vision of cherubim.

17 And from underneath the throne came streams of flaming fire so that I could not look thereon.

18 And the Great Glory sat thereon, and His raiment shone more brightly than the sun and was whiter than any snow.

19 None of the angels could enter and could behold His face by reason of the magnificence and glory and no flesh could behold Him.

20 The flaming fire was round about Him, and a great fire stood before Him, and none around could draw nigh Him; ten thousand times ten thousand were before Him, yet He needed no counselor.

21 And the most holy ones who were nigh to Him did not leave by night nor depart from Him. And until then I had been prostrate on my face, trembling and the Lord called me with His own mouth, and said to me: "Come hither, Enoch, and hear my word."

22 And one of the holy ones came to me and waked me, and He made me rise up and approach the door, and I bowed my face downwards.

23 And He answered and said to me, and I heard His voice: "Fear not, Enoch, thou righteous man and scribe of righteousness. Approach hither and hear my voice.

24 And go, say to the Watchers of heaven, who have sent thee to intercede for them: 'You should intercede for men, and not men for you. Wherefore have ye left the high, holy, and eternal heaven, and lain with women, and defiled yourselves with the daughters of men and taken to yourselves wives, and done like the children of earth, and begotten giants as your sons.

25 And though ye were holy, spiritual, living the eternal life, you have defiled yourselves with the blood of women, and have begotten with the blood of flesh, and, as the children of men, have lusted after flesh and blood as those also do who die and perish.

26 Therefore have I given them wives also that they might impregnate them, and beget children by them, that thus nothing might be wanting to them on earth.

27 But you were formerly spiritual, living the eternal life, and immortal for all generations of the world. And therefore I have not appointed wives for you; for as for the spiritual ones of the heaven, in heaven is their dwelling.

28 And now, the giants, who are produced from the spirits and flesh, shall be called evil spirits upon the earth, and on the earth shall be their dwelling.

29 Evil spirits have proceeded from their bodies; because they are born from men and from the Watchers is their beginning and primal origin; they shall be evil spirits on earth, and evil spirits shall they be called.

30 And the spirits of the giants afflict, oppress, destroy, attack, do battle, and work destruction on the earth, and cause trouble. They take no food, but nevertheless hunger and thirst, and cause offences.

31 And these spirits shall rise up against the children of men and against the women, because they have proceeded from them.

32 From the days of the slaughter and destruction and death of the giants, from the souls of whose flesh the spirits, having gone forth, shall destroy without incurring judgement, thus shall they destroy until the day of the consummation, the great judgement in which the age shall be consummated, over the Watchers and the godless, yea, shall be wholly consummated.

33 And now as to the Watchers who have sent thee to intercede for them, who had been aforetime in heaven, say to them: "You have been in heaven, but all the mysteries had not yet been revealed to you, and you knew worthless ones, and these in the hardness of your hearts you have made known to the women, and through these mysteries women and men work much evil on earth."

34 Say to them therefore: "You have no peace."

Chapter 6

Taken by Angels

1 Angels took and brought me to a place in which those who were there were like flaming fire, and when they wished, they appeared as men.

2 And they brought me to the place of darkness, and to a mountain the point of whose summit reached to heaven.

3 And I saw the places of the luminaries and the treasures of the stars and of the thunder and in the uttermost depths, where were a fiery bow and arrows and their quiver, and a fiery sword and all the lightnings.

4 And they took me to the living waters, and to the fire of the west, which receives every setting of the sun.

5 And I came to a river of fire in which the fire flows like water and discharges itself into the great sea towards the west.

6 I saw the great rivers and came to the great river and to the great darkness, and went to the place where no flesh walks. I saw the mountains of the darkness of winter and the place whence all the waters of the deep flow.

7 I saw the mouths of all the rivers of the earth and the mouth of the deep.

8 I saw the treasures of all the winds, I saw how He had furnished with them the whole creation and the firm foundations of the earth.

9 And I saw the corner-stone of the earth, I saw the four winds which bear the firmament of the heaven.

10 And I saw how the winds stretch out the vaults of heaven, and have their station between heaven and earth: these are the pillars of the heaven.

11 I saw the winds of heaven which turn and bring the circumference of the sun and all the stars to their setting.

12 I saw the winds on the earth carrying the clouds: I saw the paths of the angels.

13 I saw at the end of the earth the firmament of the heaven above and I proceeded and saw a place which burns day and night, where there are seven mountains of magnificent stones.

14 Three towards the east, and three towards the south. And as for those towards the east, was of coloured stone, and one of pearl, and one of jacinth, and those towards the south of red stone.

15 But the middle one reached to heaven like the throne of God, of alabaster, and the summit of the throne was of sapphire.

16 And I saw a flaming fire. And beyond these mountains is a region the end of the great earth: there the heavens were completed.

17 And I saw a deep abyss, with columns of heavenly fire, and among them I saw columns of fire fall, which were beyond measure alike towards the height and towards the depth.

18 And beyond that abyss I saw a place which had no firmament of the heaven above, and no firmly founded earth beneath it: there was no water upon it, and no birds, but it was a waste and horrible place.

19 I saw there seven stars like great burning mountains, and to me, when I inquired regarding them. The angel said: "This place is the end of heaven and earth. This has become a prison for the stars and the host of heaven.

20 And the stars which roll over the fire are they which have transgressed the commandment of the Lord in the beginning of their rising, because they did not come forth at their appointed times.

21 And He was wroth with them, and bound them till the time when their guilt should be consummated for ten thousand years."

22 And Uriel said to me: "Here shall stand the angels who have connected themselves with women, and their spirits assuming many different forms are defiling mankind and shall lead them astray into sacrificing to demons as gods.

23 Here shall they stand, till the day of the great judgement in which they shall be judged till they are made an end of. And the women also of the angels who went astray shall become sirens."

24 And I, Enoch, alone saw the vision, the ends of all things: and no man shall see as I have seen.

Chapter 7

The Holy Angels

1 And these are the names of the holy angels who watch mankind.

2 Uriel, one of the holy angels, who is over the world and over Tartarus.

3 Raphael, one of the holy angels, who is over the spirits of men.

4 Raguel, one of the holy angels who takes vengeance on the world of the luminaries.

5 Michael, one of the holy angels, to wit, he that is set over the best part of mankind and over chaos.

6 Saraqael, one of the holy angels, who is set over the spirits, who sin in the spirit.

7 Gabriel, one of the holy angels, who is over Paradise and the serpents and the Cherubim.

8 Remiel, one of the holy angels, whom God set over those who rise.

9 And I proceeded to where things were chaotic. And I saw there something horrible: I saw neither a heaven above nor a firmly founded earth, but a place chaotic and horrible.

10 And there I saw seven stars of the heaven bound together in it, like great mountains and burning with fire.

11 Then I said: "For what sin are they bound, and on what account have they been cast in hither?"

12 Then said Uriel, one of the holy angels, who was with me, and was chief over them, and said: "Enoch, why dost thou ask, and why art thou eager for the truth? These are of the number of the stars of heaven, which have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and are bound here till ten thousand years, the time entailed by their sins, are consummated."

13 And from thence I went to another place, which was still more horrible than the former, and I saw a horrible thing. A great fire there which burnt and blazed, and the place was cleft as far as the abyss, being full of great descending columns of fire. Neither its extent or magnitude could I see, nor could I conjecture.

14 Then I said: "How fearful is the place and how terrible to look upon!"

15 Then Uriel answered me, one of the holy angels who was with me, and said unto me: "Enoch, why hast thou such fear and affright?"

16 And I answered: "Because of this fearful place, and because of the spectacle of the pain."

17 And he said unto me: "This place is the prison of the angels, and here they will be imprisoned for ever."

18 And thence I went to another place, the mountain of hard rock.

19 And there was in it four hollow places, deep and wide and very smooth. How smooth are the hollow places and deep and dark to look at.

20 Then Raphael answered, one of the holy angels who was with me, and said unto me: "These hollow places have been created for this very purpose, that the spirits of the souls of the dead should assemble therein, yea that all the souls of the children of men should assemble here. And these places have been made to receive them till the day of their judgement and till their appointed period, till the great judgement upon them."

21 I saw a dead man making suit, and his voice went forth to heaven and made suit. And I asked Raphael the angel who was with me, and I said unto him: "This spirit which maketh suit, whose is it, whose voice goeth forth and maketh suit to heaven?"

22 And he answered me saying: "This is the spirit which went forth from Abel, whom his brother Cain slew, and he makes his suit against him till his seed is destroyed from the face of the earth, and his seed is annihilated from amongst the seed of men."

23 The I asked regarding it, and regarding all the hollow places: "Why is one separated from the other?"

24 And he answered me and said unto me: "These three have been made that the spirits of the dead might be separated. And such a division has been made for the spirits of the righteous, in which there is the bright spring of water. And such has been made for sinners when they die and are buried in the earth and judgement has not been executed on them in their lifetime.

25 Here their spirits shall be set apart in this great pain till the great day of judgement and punishment and torment of those who curse for ever and retribution for their spirits. There He shall bind them for ever. And such a division has been made for the spirits of those who make their suit, who make disclosures concerning their destruction, when they were slain in the days of the sinners.

26 Such has been made for the spirits of men who were not righteous but sinners, who were complete in transgression, and of the transgressors they shall be companions but their spirits shall not be slain in the day of judgement nor shall they be raised from thence."

27 The I blessed the Lord of glory and said: "Blessed be my Lord, the Lord of righteousness, who ruleth for ever."

28 From thence I went to another place to the west of the ends of the earth. And I saw a burning fire which ran without resting, and paused not from its course day or night but regularly.

29 And I asked saying: "What is this which rests not?"

30 Then Raguel, one of the holy angels who was with me, answered me and said unto me: "This course of fire which thou hast seen is the fire in the west which persecutes all the luminaries of heaven."

31 And from thence I went to another place of the earth, and he showed me a mountain range of fire which burnt day and night.

32 And I went beyond it and saw seven magnificent mountains all differing each from the other, and the stones were magnificent and beautiful, magnificent as a whole, of glorious appearance and fair exterior: three towards the east, one founded on the other, and three towards the south, one upon the other, and deep rough ravines, no one of which joined with any other.

33 And the seventh mountain was in the midst of these, and it excelled them in height, resembling the seat of a throne: and fragrant trees encircled the throne.

34 And amongst them was a tree such as I had never yet smelt, neither was any amongst them nor were others like it: it had a fragrance beyond all fragrance, and its leaves and blooms and wood wither not for ever: and its fruit is beautiful, and its fruit resembles the dates of a palm.

35 Then I said: "How beautiful is this tree, and fragrant, and its leaves are fair, and its blooms very delightful in appearance."

36 Then answered Michael, one of the holy and honored angels who was with me, and was their leader.

37 And he said unto me: "Enoch, why dost thou ask me regarding the fragrance of the tree, and why dost thou wish to learn the truth?"

38 Then I answered him saying: "I wish to know about everything, but especially about this tree."

39 And he answered saying: "This high mountain which thou hast seen, whose summit is like the throne of God, is His throne, where the Holy Great One, the Lord of Glory, the Eternal King, will sit, when He shall come down to visit the earth with goodness. And as for this fragrant tree no mortal is permitted to touch it till the great judgement, when He shall take vengeance on all and bring to its consummation for ever. It shall then be given to the righteous and holy. Its fruit shall be for food to the elect: it shall be transplanted to the holy place, to the temple of the Lord, the Eternal King.

40 Then shall they rejoice with joy and be glad, and into the holy place shall they enter; and its fragrance shall be in their bones, and they shall live a long life on earth. Such as thy fathers lived; and in their days shall no sorrow or plague or torment or calamity touch them."

41 Then blessed I the God of Glory, the Eternal King, who hath prepared such things for the righteous, and hath created them and promised to give to them.

42 And I went from thence to the middle of the earth, and I saw a blessed place in which there were trees with branches abiding and blooming.

43 And there I saw a holy mountain, and underneath the mountain to the east there was a stream and it flowed towards the south. And I saw towards the east another mountain higher than this, and between them a deep and narrow ravine: in it also ran a stream underneath the mountain.

44 And to the west thereof there was another mountain, lower than the former and of small elevation, and a ravine deep and dry between them: and another deep and dry ravine was at the extremities of the three mountains.

45 And all the ravines were deep and narrow, of hard rock, and trees were not planted upon them. And I marveled at the rocks, and I marveled at the ravine, yea, I marveled very much.

46 Then said I: "For what object is this blessed land, which is entirely filled with trees, and this accursed valley between?"

47 Then Uriel, one of the holy angels who was with me, answered and said: "This accursed valley is for those who are accursed for ever. Here shall all the accursed be gathered together who utter with their lips against the Lord unseemly words and of His glory speak hard things. Here shall they be gathered together, and here shall be their place of judgement.

48 In the last days there shall be upon them the spectacle of righteous judgement in the presence of the righteous for ever: here shall the merciful bless the Lord of glory, the Eternal King. In the days of judgement over the former, they shall bless Him for the mercy in accordance with which He has assigned them."

49 Then I blessed the Lord of Glory and set forth His glory and lauded Him gloriously.

50 And thence I went towards the east, into the midst of the mountain range of the desert, and I saw a wilderness and it was solitary, full of trees and plants. And water gushed forth from above. Rushing like a copious watercourse towards the north-west it caused clouds and dew to ascend on every side.

51 And thence I went to another place in the desert, and approached to the east of this mountain range. And there I saw aromatic trees exhaling the fragrance of frankincense and myrrh, and the trees also were similar to the almond tree.

52 And beyond these, I went afar to the east, and I saw another place, a valley of water. And therein there was a tree, the color of fragrant trees such as the mastic. And on the sides of those valleys I saw fragrant cinnamon. And beyond these I proceeded to the east.

53 And I saw other mountains, and amongst them were groves of trees, and there flowed forth from them nectar, which is named sarara and galbanum. And beyond these mountains I saw another mountain to the east of the ends of the earth, whereon were aloe-trees, and all the trees were full of stacte, being like almond-trees. And when one burnt it, it smelt sweeter than any fragrant odour.

54 And after these fragrant odours, as I looked towards the north over the mountains I saw seven mountains full of choice nard and fragrant trees and cinnamon and pepper.

55 And thence I went over the summits of all these mountains, far towards the east of the earth, and passed above the Erythraean sea and went far from it, and passed over the angel Zotiel.

56 And I came to the Garden of Righteousness, and from afar off I saw numerous trees, and these great-two trees there, very great, beautiful, and glorious, and magnificent, and the Tree of Knowledge, whose holy fruit they eat and know great wisdom.

57 That tree is in height like the strangler fig, and its leaves are like the Carob tree, and its fruit is like the clusters of the vine, very beautiful: and the fragrance of the tree penetrates afar.

58 Then I said: "How beautiful is the tree, and how attractive is its look!"

59 Then Raphael the holy angel, who was with me, answered me and said: "This is the tree of wisdom, of which thy father old and thy aged mother, who were before thee, have eaten, and they learnt wisdom and their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked and they were driven out of the garden."

60 And from thence I went to the ends of the earth and saw there great beasts, and each differed from the other; and birds also differing in appearance and beauty and voice, the one differing from the other.

61 And to the east of those beasts I saw the ends of the earth whereon the heaven rests, and the portals of the heaven open. And I saw how the stars of heaven come forth, and I counted the portals out of which they proceed, and wrote down all their outlets, of each individual star by itself, according to their number and their names, their courses and their positions, and their times and their months, as Uriel the holy angel who was with me showed me.

62 He showed all things to me and wrote them down for me; also their names he wrote for me, and their laws and their companies.

63 And from thence I went towards the north to the ends of the earth, and there I saw a great and glorious device at the ends of the whole earth.

64 And here I saw three portals of heaven open in the heaven: through each of them proceed north winds: when they blow there is cold, hail, frost, snow, dew, and rain. And out of one portal they blow for good: but when they blow through the other two portals, it is with violence and affliction on the earth, and they blow with violence.

65 And from thence I went towards the west to the ends of the earth, and saw there three portals of the heaven open such as I had seen in the east, the same number of portals, and the same number of outlets.

66 And from thence I went to the south to the ends of the earth, and saw there three open portals of the heaven: and thence there come dew, rain, and wind. And from thence I went to the east to the ends of the heaven, and saw here the three eastern portals of heaven open and small portals above them.

67 Through each of these small portals pass the stars of heaven and run their course to the west on the path which is shown to them.

68 And as often as I saw I blessed always the Lord of Glory, and I continued to bless the Lord of Glory who has wrought great and glorious wonders, to show the greatness of His work to the angels and to spirits and to men, that they might praise His work and all His creation: that they might see the work of His might and praise the great work of His hands and bless Him for ever.

Book 2: The Parables

Chapter 1

The First Parable

1 The second vision which he saw, the vision of wisdom, which Enoch the son of Jared, the son of Mahalaleel, the son of Cainan, the son of Enos, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, saw.

2 And this is the beginning of the words of wisdom which I lifted up my voice to speak and say to those which dwell on earth: "Hear, ye men of old time, and see, ye that come after, the words of the Holy One which I will speak before the Lord of Spirits. It were better to declare to the men of old times, but even from those that come after we will not withhold the beginning of wisdom."

3 Till the present day such wisdom has never been given by the Lord of Spirits as I have received according to my insight, according to the good pleasure of the Lord of Spirits by whom the lot of eternal life has been given to me. Now three Parables were imparted to me, and I lifted up my voice and recounted them to those that dwell on the earth.

4 The first Parable.

When the congregation of the righteous shall appear, and sinners shall be judged for their sins, and shall be driven from the face of the earth:

5 And when the Righteous One shall appear before the eyes of the righteous, whose elect works hang upon the Lord of Spirits, and light shall appear to the righteous and the elect who dwell on the earth, where then will be the dwelling of the sinners, and where the resting-place of those who have denied the Lord of Spirits? It had been good for them if they had not been born.

6 When the secrets of the righteous shall be revealed and the sinners judged, and the godless driven from the presence of the righteous and elect.

7 From that time those that possess the earth shall no longer be powerful and exalted: And they shall not be able to behold the face of the holy, for the Lord of Spirits has caused His light to appear on the face of the holy, righteous, and elect.

8 Then shall the kings and the mighty perish and be given into the hands of the righteous and holy.

9 And thenceforward none shall seek for themselves mercy from the Lord of Spirits for their life is at an end.

10 And it shall come to pass in those days that elect and holy children will descend from the high heaven, and their seed will become one with the children of men.

11 And in those days Enoch received books of zeal and wrath, and books of disquiet and expulsion.

12 And mercy shall not be accorded to them, saith the Lord of Spirits.

13 And in those days a whirlwind carried me off from the earth, and set me down at the end of the heavens.

14 And there I saw another vision, the dwelling-places of the holy, and the resting-places of the righteous.

15 Here mine eyes saw their dwellings with His righteous angels and their resting places with the holy.

16 And they petitioned and interceded and prayed for the children of men, and righteousness flowed before them as water, and mercy like dew upon the earth: Thus it is amongst them for ever and ever.

17 And in that place mine eyes saw the Elect One of righteousness and of faith, and I saw his dwelling-place under the wings of the Lord of Spirits.

18 And righteousness shall prevail in his days, and the righteous and elect shall be without number before Him for ever and ever.

19 And all the righteous and elect before Him shall be strong as fiery lights, and their mouth shall be full of blessing, and their lips extol the name of the Lord of Spirits, and righteousness before Him shall never fail.

20 There I wished to dwell, and my spirit longed for that dwelling place, and there heretofore hath been my portion. For so has it been established concerning me before the Lord of Spirits.

21 In those days I praised and extolled the name of the Lord of Spirits with blessings and praises, because He hath destined me for blessing and glory according to the good pleasure of the Lord of Spirits.

22 For a long time my eyes regarded that place, and I blessed Him and praised Him, saying: "Blessed is He, and may He be blessed from the beginning and for evermore. And before Him there is no ceasing. He knows before the world was created what is for ever and what will be from generation unto generation."

23 Those who sleep not bless Thee: they stand before Thy glory and bless, praise, and extol, saying: "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Spirits: He filleth the earth with spirits."

24 And here my eyes saw all those who sleep not: they stand before Him and bless and say: "Blessed be Thou, and blessed be the name of the Lord for ever and ever." And my face was changed; for I could no longer behold.

25 And after that I saw thousands of thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand, I saw a multitude beyond number and reckoning, who stood before the Lord of Spirits.

26 And on the four sides of the Lord of Spirits I saw four presences, different from those that sleep not, and I learnt their names: for the angel that went with me made known to me their names, and showed me all the hidden things.

27 And I heard the voices of those four presences as they uttered praises before the Lord of glory.

28 The first voice blesses the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever.

29 And the second voice I heard blessing the Elect One and the elect ones who hang upon the Lord of Spirits.

30 And the third voice I heard pray and intercede for those who dwell on the earth and supplicate in the name of the Lord of Spirits.

31 And I heard the fourth voice fending off the Satans and forbidding them to come before the Lord of Spirits to accuse them who dwell on the earth.

32 After that I asked the angel of peace who went with me, who showed me everything that is hidden: "Who are these four presences which I have seen and whose words I have heard and written down?"

33 And he said to me: "This first is Michael, the merciful and long-suffering: and the second, who is set over all the diseases and all the wounds of the children of men, is Raphael: and the third, who is set over all the powers, is Gabriel: and the fourth, who is set over the repentance unto hope of those who inherit eternal life, is named Phanuel."

34 And these are the four angels of the Lord of Spirits and the four voices I heard in those days.

35 And after that I saw all the secrets of the heavens, and how the kingdom is divided, and how the actions of men are weighed in the balance.

36 And there I saw the mansions of the elect and the mansions of the holy, and mine eyes saw there all the sinners being driven from thence which deny the name of the Lord of Spirits, and being dragged off: and they could not abide because of the punishment which proceeds from the Lord of Spirits.

37 And there mine eyes saw the secrets of the lightning and of the thunder, and the secrets of the winds, how they are divided to blow over the earth, and the secrets of the clouds and dew, and these I saw from whence they proceed in that place and from whence they saturate the dusty earth.

38 And there I saw closed chambers out of which the winds are divided, the chamber of the hail and winds, the chamber of the mist, and of the clouds, and the cloud thereof hovers over the earth from the beginning of the world.

39 And I saw the chambers of the sun and moon, whence they proceed and whither they come again, and their glorious return, and how one is superior to the other, and their stately orbit, and how they do not leave their orbit, and they add nothing to their orbit and they take nothing from it, and they keep faith with each other, in accordance with the oath by which they are bound together.

40 And first the sun goes forth and traverses his path according to the commandment of the Lord of Spirits, and mighty is His name for ever and ever.

41 And after that I saw the hidden and the visible path of the moon, and she accomplishes the course of her path in that place by day and by night—the one holding a position opposite to the other before the Lord of Spirits.

42 And they give thanks and praise and rest not. For unto them is their thanksgiving rest.

43 For the sun changes oft for a blessing or a curse, and the course of the path of the moon is light to the righteous and darkness to the sinners in the name of the Lord. Who made a separation between the light and the darkness, and divided the spirits of men, and strengthened the spirits of the righteous in the name of His righteousness.

44 For no angel hinders and no power is able to hinder; for He appoints a judge for them all and He judges them all before Him.

45 Wisdom found no place where she might dwell, then a dwelling-place was assigned her in the heavens.

46 Wisdom went forth to make her dwelling among the children of men and found no dwelling-place.

47 Wisdom returned to her place and took her seat among the angels.

48 And unrighteousness went forth from her chambers: Whom she sought not she found and dwelt with them, as rain in a desert and dew on a thirsty land.

49 And I saw other lightnings and the stars of heaven, and I saw how He called them all by their names and they hearkened unto Him.

50 And I saw how they are weighed in a righteous balance according to their proportions of light: the width of their spaces and the day of their appearing, and how their revolution produces lightning: and their revolution according to the number of the angels, and they keep faith with each other.

51 And I asked the angel who went with me who showed me what was hidden:
"What are these?"

52 And he said to me: "The Lord of Spirits hath showed thee their parabolic meaning: these are the names of the holy who dwell on the earth and believe in the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever."

53 Also another phenomenon I saw in regard to the lightnings: how some of the stars arise and become lightnings and cannot part with their new form.

Chapter 2

The Second Parable

1 And this is the second Parable concerning those who deny the name of the dwelling of the holy ones and the Lord of Spirits.

2 And into the heaven they shall not ascend, and on the earth they shall not come. Such shall be the lot of the sinners who have denied the name of the Lord of Spirits. Who are thus preserved for the day of suffering and tribulation.

3 On that day Mine Elect One shall sit on the throne of glory and shall try their works, and their places of rest shall be innumerable. And their souls shall grow strong within them when they see Mine Elect Ones.

4 And those who have called upon My glorious name: Then will I cause Mine Elect One to dwell among them.

5 And I will transform the heaven and make it an eternal blessing and light and I will transform the earth and make it a blessing; and I will cause Mine Elect Ones to dwell upon it: But the sinners and evil-doers shall not set foot thereon.

6 For I have provided and satisfied with peace My righteous ones and have caused them to dwell before Me: But for the sinners there is judgement impending with Me, so that I shall destroy them from the face of the earth.

7 And there I saw One who had a head of days, and His head was white like wool, and with Him was another being whose countenance had the appearance of a man, and his face was full of graciousness, like one of the holy angels.

8 And I asked the angel who went with me and showed me all the hidden things, concerning that Son of Man, who he was, and whence he was, and why he went with the Head of Days.

9 And he answered and said unto me: "This is the Son of Man who hath righteousness. With whom dwelleth righteousness, and who reveals all the treasures of that which is hidden. Because the Lord of Spirits hath chosen him, and whose lot hath preeminence before the Lord of Spirits in uprightness for ever.

10 And this Son of Man whom thou hast seen shall raise up the kings and the mighty from their seats and shall loosen the reins of the strong, and break the teeth of the sinners. Because they do not extol and praise Him, Nor humbly acknowledge whence the kingdom was bestowed upon them.

11 And he shall put down the countenance of the strong, and shall fill them with shame. Darkness shall be their dwelling and worms shall be their bed. They shall have no hope of rising from their beds because they do not extol the name of the Lord of Spirits.

12 These are they who judge the stars of heaven, tread upon the earth, and dwell upon it.

13 All their deeds manifest unrighteousness and their power rests upon their riches.

14 Their faith is in the gods which they have made with their hands and they deny the name of the Lord of Spirits.

15 They persecute the houses of His congregations and the faithful who hang upon the name of the Lord of Spirits.

16 And in those days shall have ascended the prayer of the righteous and the blood of the righteous from the earth before the Lord of Spirits.

17 In those days the holy ones who dwell above in the heavens shall unite with one voice and supplicate and pray and praise, give thanks and bless the name of the Lord of Spirits on behalf of the blood of the righteous which has been shed.

18 And that the prayer of the righteous may not be in vain before the Lord of Spirits, that judgement may be done unto them and that they may not have to suffer for ever."

19 In those days I saw the Head of Days when He seated himself upon the throne of His glory, and the books of the living were opened before Him, and all His host which is in heaven above and His counselors stood before Him.

20 And the hearts of the holy were filled with joy because the number of the righteous had been offered, and the prayer of the righteous had been heard, and the blood of the righteous been required before the Lord of Spirits.

21 And in that place I saw the fountain of righteousness, which was inexhaustible; and around it were many fountains of wisdom. All the thirsty drank of them and were filled with wisdom and their dwellings were with the righteous and holy and elect.

22 And at that hour that Son of Man was named in the presence of the Lord of Spirits, and His name before the Head of Days.

23 Yea, before the sun and the signs were created, before the stars of the heaven were made, His name was named before the Lord of Spirits.

24 "He shall be a staff to the righteous whereon to stay themselves and not fall and he shall be the light of the Gentiles, and the hope of those who are troubled of heart.

25 All who dwell on earth shall fall down and worship before Him, and will praise and bless and celebrate with song the Lord of Spirits.

26 And for this reason hath He been chosen and hidden before Him, before the creation of the world and for evermore.

27 And the wisdom of the Lord of Spirits hath revealed Him to the holy and righteous for He hath preserved the lot of the righteous because they have hated and despised this world of unrighteousness and have hated all its works and ways in the name of the Lord of Spirits: For in his name they are saved and according to His good pleasure hath it been in regard to their life.

28 In these days downcast in countenance shall the kings of the earth have become and the strong who possess the land because of the works of their hands. For on the day of their anguish and affliction they shall not save themselves and I will give them over into the hands of Mine Elect.

29 As straw in the fire so shall they burn before the face of the holy: As lead in the water shall they sink before the face of the righteous and no trace of them shall any more be found.

30 And on the day of their affliction there shall be rest on the earth, and before them they shall fall and not rise again. There shall be no one to take them with his hands and raise them for they have denied the Lord of Spirits and His Anointed One. The name of the Lord of Spirits be blessed.

31 For wisdom is poured out like water, and glory faileth not before Him for evermore.

32 For He is mighty in all the secrets of righteousness and unrighteousness shall disappear as a shadow and have no continuance. Because the Elect One standeth before the Lord of Spirits and His glory is for ever and ever and His might unto all generations.

33 And in Him dwells the spirit of wisdom, and the spirit which gives insight, and the spirit of understanding and of might, and the spirit of those who have fallen asleep in righteousness.

34 And He shall judge the secret things and none shall be able to utter a lying word before Him for He is the Elect One before the Lord of Spirits according to His good pleasure.

35 In those days a change shall take place for the Holy and Elect, and the Light of Days shall abide upon them and glory and honor shall turn to the holy.

36 On the day of affliction on which evil shall have been treasured up against the sinners. And the righteous shall be victorious in the name of the Lord of Spirits and He will cause the others to witness that they may repent and forgo the works of their hands.

37 They shall have no honor through the name of the Lord of Spirits yet through His name shall they be saved, and the Lord of Spirits will have compassion on them for His compassion is great.

38 And He is righteous also in His judgement and in the presence of His glory unrighteousness also shall not maintain itself: At His judgement the unrepentant shall perish before Him.

39 And from henceforth, I will have no mercy on them." saith the Lord of Spirits.

40 In those days shall the earth also give back that which has been entrusted to it. Sheol also shall give back that which it has received, and hell shall give back that which it owes.

41 For in those days the Elect One shall arise and He shall choose the righteous and holy from among them.

42 For the day has drawn nigh that they should be saved.

43 And the Elect One shall in those days sit on My throne and His mouth shall pour forth all the secrets of wisdom and counsel for the Lord of Spirits hath given to Him and hath glorified Him.

44 In those days shall the mountains leap like rams and the hills also shall skip like lambs satisfied with milk, and the faces of the angels in heaven shall be lighted up with joy.

45 And the earth shall rejoice and the righteous shall dwell upon it and the Elect shall walk thereon.

46 And after those days in that place where I had seen all the visions of that which is hidden, for I had been carried off in a whirlwind and they had borne me towards the west.

47 There mine eyes saw all the secret things of heaven that shall be, a mountain of iron, and a mountain of copper, and a mountain of silver, and a mountain of gold, and a mountain of soft metal, and a mountain of lead.

48 And I asked the angel who went with me, saying, "What things are these which I have seen in secret?"

49 And he said unto me: "All these things which thou hast seen shall serve the dominion of His Anointed that He may be potent and mighty on the earth."

50 And that angel of peace answered, saying unto me: "Wait a little, and there shall be revealed unto thee all the secret things which surround the Lord of Spirits.

51 And these mountains which thine eyes have seen, the mountain of iron, and the mountain of copper, and the mountain of silver, and the mountain of gold, and the mountain of soft metal, and the mountain of lead.

52 All these shall be in the presence of the Elect One as wax before the fire, and like the water which streams down from above and they shall become powerless before his feet.

53 And it shall come to pass in those days that none shall be saved either by gold or by silver and none be able to escape.

54 And there shall be no iron for war. Nor shall one clothe oneself with a breastplate. Bronze shall be of no service, and tin shall not be esteemed, and lead shall not be desired.

55 And all these things shall be destroyed from the surface of the earth."

56 And I looked and turned to another part of the earth, and saw there a deep valley with burning fire. And they brought the kings and the mighty, and began to cast them into this deep valley.

57 And there mine eyes saw how they made these their instruments, iron chains of immeasurable weight.

58 And I asked the angel of peace who went with me, saying: "For whom are these chains being prepared?"

59 And he said unto me: "These are being prepared for the hosts of Azazel, so that they may take them and cast them into the abyss of complete condemnation, and they shall cover their jaws with rough stones as the Lord of Spirits commanded."

60 And Michael, and Gabriel, and Raphael, and Phanuel shall take hold of them on that great day, and cast them on that day into the burning furnace, that the Lord of Spirits may take vengeance on them for their unrighteousness in becoming subject to Satan and leading astray those who dwell on the earth.

61 And in those days shall punishment come from the Lord of Spirits, and He will open all the chambers of waters which are above the heavens, and of the fountains which are beneath the earth.

62 And all the waters shall be joined with the waters: that which is above the heavens is the masculine, and the water which is beneath the earth is the feminine.

63 And they shall destroy all who dwell on the earth and those who dwell under the ends of the heaven. And when they have recognized their unrighteousness which they have wrought on the earth, then by these shall they perish.

64 And after that, the Head of Days repented and said: "In vain have I destroyed all who dwell on the earth."

65 And He swore by His great name: "Henceforth I will not do so to all who dwell on the earth and I will set a sign in the heaven and this shall be a pledge of good faith between Me and them for ever. So long as heaven is above the earth and this is in accordance with My command.

66 When I have desired to take hold of them by the hand of the angels on the day of tribulation and pain because of this, I will cause My chastisement and My wrath to abide upon them." saith God, the Lord of Spirits.

67 Ye mighty kings who dwell on the earth, ye shall have to behold Mine Elect One. How He sits on the throne of glory and judges Azazel and all his associates, and all his hosts in the name of the Lord of Spirits.

68 And I saw there the hosts of the angels of punishment going and they held scourges and chains of iron and bronze.

69 And I asked the angel of peace who went with me, saying: "To whom are these who hold the scourges going?"

70 And he said unto me: "To their elect and beloved ones, that they may be cast into the chasm of the abyss of the valley."

71 And then that valley shall be filled with their elect and beloved, and the days of their lives shall be at an end, and the days of their leading astray shall not thenceforward be reckoned.

72 And in those days the angels shall return and hurl themselves to the east upon the Parthians and Medes.

73 They shall stir up the kings, so that a spirit of unrest shall come upon them and they shall rouse them from their thrones that they may break forth as lions from their lairs and as hungry wolves among their flocks.

74 And they shall go up and tread under foot the land of His elect ones but the city of the righteous shall be a hindrance to their horses.

75 And they shall begin to fight among themselves and their right hand shall be strong against themselves.

76 And a man shall not know his brother nor a son his father or his mother till there be no number of the corpses through their slaughter and their punishment be not in vain.

77 In those days Sheol shall open its jaws and they shall be swallowed up therein. Their destruction shall be at an end. Sheol shall devour the sinners in the presence of the elect."

78 And it came to pass after this that I saw another host of wagons, and men riding thereon, and coming on the winds from the east, and from the west to the south.

79 And the noise of their wagons was heard, and when this turmoil took place the holy ones from heaven remarked it, and the pillars of the earth were moved from their place, and the sound thereof was heard from the one end of heaven to the other, in one day.

80 And they shall all fall down and worship the Lord of Spirits. And this is the end of the second Parable.

Chapter 3

The Third Parable

1 And I began to speak the third Parable concerning the righteous and elect.

2 Blessed are ye, ye righteous and Elect for glorious shall be your lot.

3 And the righteous shall be in the light of the sun and the elect in the light of eternal life.

4 The days of their life shall be unending and the days of the holy without number.

5 And they shall seek the light and find righteousness with the Lord of Spirits.

6 There shall be peace to the righteous in the name of the Eternal Lord.

7 And after this it shall be said to the holy in heaven that they should seek out the secrets of righteousness, the heritage of faith.

8 For it has become bright as the sun upon earth and the darkness is past.

9 And there shall be a light that never ends and to a limit of days they shall not come.

10 For the darkness shall first have been destroyed and the light of uprightness established for ever before the Lord of Spirits.

11 In those days mine eyes saw the secrets of the lightnings, and of the lights, and the judgements they execute, and they lighten for a blessing or a curse as the Lord of Spirits willeth.

12 And there I saw the secrets of the thunder, and how when it resounds above in the heaven, the sound thereof is heard.

13 And He caused me to see the judgements executed on the earth, whether they be for well-being and blessing, or for a curse according to the word of the Lord of Spirits.

14 And after that, all the secrets of the lights and lightnings were shown to me, and they lighten for blessing and for satisfying.

15 In the year 500, in the seventh month, on the fourteenth day of the month in the life of Enoch.

16 In that parable I saw how a mighty quaking made the heaven of heavens to quake, and the host of the Most High, and the angels, a thousand thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand were disquieted with a great disquiet.

17 And the Head of Days sat on the throne of His glory, and the angels and the righteous stood around Him.

18 And a great trembling seized me, and fear took hold of me, and my loins gave way, and dissolved were my reins, and I fell upon my face.

19 And Michael sent another angel from among the holy ones and he raised me up, and when he had raised me up my spirit returned; for I had not been able to endure the look of this host, and the commotion and the quaking of the heaven.

20 And Michael said unto me: Why art thou disquieted with such a vision? Until this day lasted the day of His mercy; and He hath been merciful and long-suffering towards those who dwell on the earth.

21 And when the day, and the power, and the punishment, and the judgement come, which the Lord of Spirits hath prepared for those who worship not the righteous law, and for those who deny the righteous judgement, and for those who take His name in vain, that day is prepared, for the elect a covenant, but for sinners an inquisition.

22 When the punishment of the Lord of Spirits shall rest upon them, it shall rest in order that the punishment of the Lord of Spirits may not come in vain, and it shall slay the children with their mothers and the children with their fathers.

23 Afterwards the judgement shall take place according to His mercy and His patience."

24 And on that day were two monsters parted, a female monster named Leviathan, to dwell in the abysses of the ocean over the fountains of the waters.

25 But the male is named Behemoth, who occupied with his breast a waste wilderness named Duidain, on the east of the garden where the elect and righteous dwell, where my grandfather was taken up, the seventh from Adam, the first man whom the Lord of Spirits created.

26 And I besought the other angel that he should show me the might of those monsters, how they were parted on one day and cast, the one into the abysses of the sea and the other unto the dry land of the wilderness.

27 And he said to me: "Thou son of man, herein thou dost seek to know what is hidden."

28 And the other angel who went with me and showed me what was hidden told me what is first and last in the heaven in the height, and beneath the earth in the depth, and at the ends of the heaven, and on the foundation of the heaven.

29 And the chambers of the winds, and how the winds are divided, and how they are weighed, and how the portals of the winds are reckoned, each according to the power of the wind, and the power of the lights of the moon, and according to the power that is fitting: and the divisions of the stars according to their names and how all the divisions are divided.

30 And the thunders according to the places where they fall, and all the divisions that are made among the lightnings that it may lighten, and their host that they may at once obey.

31 For the thunder has places of rest assigned to it while it is waiting for its peal; and the thunder and lightning are inseparable, and although not one and undivided, they both go together through the spirit and separate not.

32 For when the lightning lightens, the thunder utters its voice, and the spirit enforces a pause during the peal, and divides equally between them; for the treasury of their peals is like the sand, and each one of them as it peals is held in with a bridle, and turned back by the power of the spirit, and pushed forward according to the many quarters of the earth.

33 And the spirit of the sea is masculine and strong, and according to the might of his strength he draws it back with a rein, and in like manner it is driven forward and disperses amid all the mountains of the earth.

34 And the spirit of the hoarfrost is his own angel, and the spirit of the hail is a good angel.

35 And the spirit of the snow has forsaken his chambers on account of his strength; there is a special spirit therein, and that which ascends from it is like smoke, and its name is Frost.

36 And the spirit of the mist is not united with them in their chambers, but it has a special chamber; for its course is glorious both in light and in darkness, and in winter and in summer, and in its chamber is an angel.

37 And the spirit of the dew has its dwelling at the ends of the heaven, and is connected with the chambers of the rain, and its course is in winter and summer: and its clouds and the clouds of the mist are connected, and the one gives to the other.

38 And when the spirit of the rain goes forth from its chamber, the angels come and open the chamber and lead it out, and when it is diffused over the whole earth it unites with the water on the earth. And whensoever it unites with the water on the earth.

39 For the waters are for those who dwell on the earth; for they are nourishment for the earth from the Most High who is in heaven: therefore there is a measure for the rain, and the angels take it in charge.

40 And these things I saw towards the Garden of the Righteous.

41 And the angel of peace who was with me said to me: "These two monsters, prepared conformably to the greatness of God, shall feed."

42 And I saw in those days how long cords were given to those angels, and they took to themselves wings and flew, and they went towards the north.

43 And I asked the angel, saying unto him: "Why have those angels taken these cords and gone off?"

44 And he said unto me: "They have gone to measure."

45 And the angel who went with me said unto me: "These shall bring the measures of the righteous and the ropes of the righteous to the righteous. That they may stay themselves on the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever.

46 The elect shall begin to dwell with the elect, and those are the measures which shall be given to faith and which shall strengthen righteousness.

47 And these measures shall reveal all the secrets of the depths of the earth. And those who have been destroyed by the desert, and those who have been devoured by the beasts, and those who have been devoured by the fish of the sea. That they may return and stay themselves on the day of the Elect One; for none shall be destroyed before the Lord of Spirits, and none can be destroyed."

48 And all who dwell above in the heaven received a command and power and one voice and one light like unto fire.

49 And that One with their first words they blessed and extolled and lauded with wisdom.

50 And they were wise in utterance and in the spirit of life.

51 And the Lord of Spirits placed the Elect one on the throne of glory. And he shall judge all the works of the holy above in the heaven, and in the balance shall their deeds be weighed.

52 And thus the Lord commanded the kings and the mighty and the exalted, and those who dwell on the earth, and said: "Open your eyes and lift up your horns if ye are able to recognize the Elect One."

53 And the Lord of Spirits seated him on the throne of His glory and the spirit of righteousness was poured out upon Him.

54 And the word of his mouth slays all the sinners, and all the unrighteous are destroyed from before his face.

55 And there shall stand up in that day all the kings and the mighty, and the exalted and those who hold the earth, and they shall see and recognize how He sits on the throne of His glory.

56 And righteousness is judged before him and no lying word is spoken before him.

57 Then shall pain come upon them as on a woman in travail when her child enters the mouth of the womb and she has pain in bringing forth.

58 And one portion of them shall look on the other and they shall be terrified, and they shall be downcast of countenance, and pain shall seize them when they see that Son of Man sitting on the throne of his glory.

59 And the kings and the mighty and all who possess the earth shall bless and glorify and extol him who rules over all, who was hidden.

60 For from the beginning the Son of Man was hidden and the Most High preserved Him in the presence of His might, and revealed Him to the elect.

61 And the congregation of the elect and holy shall be sown and all the elect shall stand before him on that day.

62 And all the kings and the mighty and the exalted and those who rule the earth shall fall down before Him on their faces and worship and set their hope upon that Son of Man, and petition him and supplicate for mercy at his hands.

63 Nevertheless that Lord of Spirits will so press them that they shall hastily go forth from His presence, and their faces shall be filled with shame, and the darkness grow deeper on their faces.

64 And He will deliver them to the angels for punishment to execute vengeance on them because they have oppressed His children and His elect.

65 And they shall be a spectacle for the righteous and for His elect: They shall rejoice over them because the wrath of the Lord of Spirits resteth upon them and His sword is drunk with their blood.

66 And the righteous and elect shall be saved on that day, and they shall never thenceforward see the face of the sinners and unrighteous.

67 And the Lord of Spirits will abide over them, and with that Son of Man shall they eat and lie down and rise up for ever and ever.

68 And the righteous and elect shall have risen from the earth and ceased to be of downcast countenance.

69 And they shall have been clothed with garments of glory and these shall be the garments of life from the Lord of Spirits: And your garments shall not grow old. Nor your glory pass away before the Lord of Spirits.

70 In those days shall the mighty and the kings who possess the earth implore to grant them a little respite from His angels of punishment to whom they were delivered, that they might fall down and worship before the Lord of Spirits and confess their sins before Him.

71 And they shall bless and glorify the Lord of Spirits, and say: "Blessed is the Lord of Spirits and the Lord of kings, and the Lord of the mighty and the Lord of the rich, and the Lord of glory and the Lord of wisdom, and splendid in every secret thing is Thy power from generation to generation, and Thy glory for ever and ever.

72 Deep are all Thy secrets and innumerable, and Thy righteousness is beyond reckoning. We have now learnt that we should glorify and bless the Lord of kings and Him who is king over all kings."

73 And they shall say: "Would that we had rest to glorify and give thanks and confess our faith before His glory! And now we long for a little rest but find it not. We follow hard upon and obtain not, and light has vanished from before us, and darkness is our dwelling—place for ever and ever.

74 For we have not believed before Him nor glorified the name of the Lord of Spirits but our hope was in the sceptre of our kingdom, and in our own glory.

75 And in the day of our suffering and tribulation He saves us not and we find no respite for confession that our Lord is true in all His works, and in His judgements and His justice, and His judgements have no respect of persons.

76 And we pass away from before His face on account of our works and all our sins are reckoned up in righteousness."

77 Now they shall say unto themselves: "Our souls are full of unrighteous gain, but it does not prevent us from descending from the midst thereof into the burden of Sheol."

78 And after that their faces shall be filled with darkness and shame before that Son of Man, and they shall be driven from his presence, and the sword shall abide before his face in their midst.

79 Thus spake the Lord of Spirits: "This is the ordinance and judgement with respect to the mighty and the kings and the exalted and those who possess the earth before the Lord of Spirits."

80 And other forms I saw hidden in that place. I heard the voice of the angel saying: "These are the angels who descended to the earth, and revealed what was hidden to the children of men and seduced the children of men into committing sin."

Book 3: The Book of Noah

Chapter 1

Birth of Noah

1 And after some days my son Methuselah took a wife for his son Lamech, and she became pregnant by him and bore a son.

2 And his body was white as snow and red as the blooming of a rose, and the hair of his head and his long locks were white as wool, and his eyes beautiful. And when he opened his eyes, he lighted up the whole house like the sun, and the whole house was very bright.

3 And thereupon he arose in the hands of the midwife, opened his mouth, and conversed with the Lord of righteousness.

4 And his father Lamech was afraid of him and fled, and came to his father Methuselah.

5 And he said unto him: "I have begotten a strange son, diverse from and unlike man, and resembling the sons of the God of heaven; and his nature is different and he is not like us, and his eyes are as the rays of the sun, and his countenance is glorious.

6 And it seems to me that he is not sprung from me but from the angels, and I fear that in his days a wonder may be wrought on the earth. And now, my father, I am here to petition thee and implore thee that thou mayest go to Enoch, our father, and learn from him the truth, for his dwelling-place is amongst the angels."

7 And when Methuselah heard the words of his son, he came to me to the ends of the earth; for he had heard that I was there, and he cried aloud, and I heard his voice and I came to him.

8 And I said unto him: "Behold, here am I, my son, wherefore hast thou come to me?"

9 And he answered and said: "Because of a great cause of anxiety have I come to thee, and because of a disturbing vision have I approached.

10 And now, my father, hear me: unto Lamech my son there hath been born a son, the like of whom there is none, and his nature is not like mans nature, and the color of his body is whiter than snow and redder than the bloom of a rose, and the hair of his head is whiter than white wool, and his eyes are like the rays of the sun, and he opened his eyes and thereupon lighted up the whole house.

11 And he arose in the hands of the midwife, and opened his mouth and blessed the Lord of heaven.

12 And his father Lamech became afraid and fled to me, and did not believe that he was sprung from him, but that he was in the likeness of the angels of heaven; and behold I have come to thee that thou mayest make known to me the truth."

13 And I, Enoch, answered and said unto him: "The Lord will do a new thing on the earth, and this I have already seen in a vision, and make known to thee that in the generation of my father Jared some of the angels of heaven transgressed the word of the Lord.

14 And behold they commit sin and transgress the law, and have united themselves with women and commit sin with them, and have married some of them, and have begot children by them.

15 And they shall produce on the earth giants not according to the spirit, but according to the flesh, and there shall be a great punishment on the earth, and the earth shall be cleansed from all impurity.

16 Yea, there shall come a great destruction over the whole earth, and there shall be a deluge and a great destruction for one year.

17 And this son who has been born unto you shall be left on the earth, and his three children shall be saved with him: when all mankind that are on the earth shall die he and his sons shall be saved.

18 And now make known to thy son Lamech that he who has been born is in truth his son, and call his name Noah; for he shall be left to you, and he and his sons shall be saved from the destruction which shall come upon the earth on account of all the sin and all the unrighteousness, which shall be consummated on the earth in his days.

19 And after that there shall be still more unrighteousness than that which was first consummated on the earth; for I know the mysteries of the holy ones; for He, the Lord, has showed me and informed me, and I have read in the heavenly tablets.

20 And I saw written on them that generation upon generation shall transgress, till a generation of righteousness arises, and transgression is destroyed and sin passes away from the earth, and all manner of good comes upon it.

21 And now, my son, go and make known to thy son Lamech that this son, which has been born, is in truth his son, and that is no lie."

22 And when Methuselah had heard the words of his father Enoch—for he had shown to him everything in secret—he returned and showed to him and called the name of that son Noah; for he will comfort the earth after all the destruction.

Chapter 2

Calling Enoch

1 And in those days Noah saw the earth that it had sunk down and its destruction was nigh.

2 And he arose from thence and went to the ends of the earth, and cried aloud to his grandfather Enoch.

3 Noah said three times with an embittered voice: "Hear me, hear me, hear me."

4 And I said unto him: "Tell me what it is that is falling out on the earth that the earth is in such evil plight and shaken, lest perchance I shall perish with it?"

5 And thereupon there was a great commotion, on the earth, and a voice was heard from heaven, and I fell on my face.

6 And Enoch my grandfather came and stood by me, and said unto me: "Why hast thou cried unto me with a bitter cry and weeping?"

7 A command has gone forth from the presence of the Lord concerning those who dwell on the earth that their ruin is accomplished because they have learnt all the secrets of the angels, and all the violence of the Satans, and all their powers, the most secret ones.

8 And all the power of those who practice sorcery, and the power of witchcraft, and the power of those who make molten images. For the whole earth: And how silver is produced from the dust of the earth, and how soft metal originates in the earth. For lead and tin are not produced from the earth like the first: it is a fountain that produces them, and an angel stands therein, and that angel is preeminent."

9 And after that my grandfather Enoch took hold of me by my hand and raised me up, and said unto me: "Go, for I have asked the Lord of Spirits as touching this commotion on the earth.

10 And He said unto me: "Because of their unrighteousness their judgement has been determined upon and shall not be withheld by Me for ever. Because of the sorceries which they have searched out and learnt, the earth and those who dwell upon it shall be destroyed."

11 And these, they have no place of repentance for ever, because they have shown them what was hidden, and they are the damned: but as for thee, my son, the Lord of Spirits knows that thou art pure, and guiltless of this reproach concerning the secrets.

12 And He has destined thy name to be among the holy and will preserve thee amongst those who dwell on the earth. And has destined thy righteous seed both for kingship and for great honors, and from thy seed shall proceed a fountain of the righteous and holy without number for ever."

13 And after that he showed me the angels of punishment who are prepared to come and let loose all the powers of the waters which are beneath in the earth in order to bring judgement and destruction on all who dwell on the earth.

14 And the Lord of Spirits gave commandment to the angels who were going forth that they should not cause the waters to rise but should hold them in check; for those angels were over the powers of the waters.

15 And I went away from the presence of Enoch.

Chapter 3

Judgement of Angels

1 And in those days the word of God came unto me, and He said unto me:
"Noah, thy lot has come up before Me, a lot without blame, a lot of love and uprightness.

2 And now the angels are working, and when they have completed their task I will place My hand upon it and preserve it, and there shall come forth from it the seed of life, and a change shall set in so that the earth will not remain without inhabitant.

3 And I will make fast thy seed before me for ever and ever, and I will spread abroad those who dwell with thee: it shall not be unfruitful on the face of the earth, but it shall be blessed and multiply on the earth in the name of the Lord."

4 And He will imprison those angels, who have shown unrighteousness in that burning valley which my grandfather Enoch had formerly shown to me in the west among the mountains of gold and silver and iron and soft metal and tin.

5 And I saw that valley in which there was a great convulsion and a convulsion of the waters.

6 And when all this took place, from that fiery molten metal and from the convulsion thereof in that place, there was produced a smell of sulphur, and it was connected with those waters, and that valley of the angels who had led astray burned beneath that land.

7 And through its valleys proceed streams of fire where these angels are punished who had led astray those who dwell upon the earth.

8 But those waters shall in those days serve for the kings and the mighty and the exalted, and those who dwell on the earth, for the healing of the body, but for the punishment of the spirit; now their spirit is full of lust, that they may be punished in their body.

9 For they have denied the Lord of Spirits and see their punishment daily, and yet believe not in His name.

10 And in proportion as the burning of their bodies becomes severe a corresponding change shall take place in their spirit for ever and ever; for before the Lord of Spirits none shall utter an idle word.

11 For the judgement shall come upon them because they believe in the lust of their body and deny the Spirit of the Lord.

12 And those same waters will undergo a change in those days; for when those angels are punished in these waters, these water-springs shall change their temperature, and when the angels ascend, this water of the springs shall change and become cold.

13 And I heard Michael answering and saying: "This judgement wherewith the angels are judged is a testimony for the kings and the mighty who possess the earth.

14 Because these waters of judgement minister to the healing of the body of the kings and the lust of their body; therefore they will not see and will not believe that those waters will change and become a fire which burns for ever."

Chapter 4

Secrets of the Parables

1 And after that my grandfather Enoch gave me the teaching of all the secrets in the book in the Parables which had been given to him, and he put them together for me in the words of the book of the Parables.

2 And on that day Michael answered Raphael and said: "The power of the spirit transports and makes me to tremble because of the severity of the judgement of the secrets, the judgement of the angels: who can endure the severe judgement which has been executed, and before which they melt away?"

3 And Michael answered again, and said to Raphael: "Who is he whose heart is not softened concerning it, and whose reins are not troubled by this word of judgement that has gone forth upon them because of those who have thus led them out?"

4 And it came to pass when he stood before the Lord of Spirits, Michael said thus to Raphael: "I will not take their part under the eye of the Lord; for the Lord of Spirits has been angry with them because they do as if they were the Lord. Therefore all that is hidden shall come upon them for ever and ever; for neither angel nor man shall have his portion, but alone they have received their judgement for ever and ever."

5 And after this judgement they shall terrify and make them to tremble because they have shown this to those who dwell on the earth.

6 And behold the names of those angels: the first of them is Samjaza, the second Artaqifa, and the third Armen, the fourth Kokabel, the fifth Turael, the sixth Rumjal, the seventh Danjal, the eighth Neqaël, the ninth Baraqel, the tenth Azazel, the eleventh Armaros, the twelfth Batarjal, the thirteenth Busasejal, the fourteenth Hananel, the fifteenth Turel, and the sixteenth Simapesiel, the seventeenth Jetrel, the eighteenth Tumaël, the nineteenth Turel, the twentieth Rumaël, the twenty-first Azazel.

7 And these are the chiefs of their angels and their names, and their chief ones over hundreds and over fifties and over tens.

8 The name of the first Jecon: that is, the one who led astray the sons of God, and brought them down to the earth, and led them astray through the daughters of men.

9 And the second was named Asbeel: he imparted to the holy sons of God evil counsel, and led them astray so that they defiled their bodies with the daughters of men.

10 And the third was named Gadreel: he it is who showed the children of men all the blows of death, and he led astray Eve, and showed the shield and the coat of mail, and the sword for battle, and all the weapons of death to the children of men. And from his hand they have proceeded against those who dwell on the earth from that day and for evermore.

11 And the fourth was named Penemue: he taught the children of men the bitter and the sweet, and he taught them all the secrets of their wisdom. And he instructed mankind in writing with ink and paper, and thereby many sinned from eternity to eternity and until this day. For men were not created for such a purpose, to give confirmation to their good faith with pen and ink. For men were created exactly like the angels, to the intent that they should continue pure and righteous, and death, which destroys everything, could not have taken hold of them but through this their knowledge they are perishing, and through this power it is consuming men.

12 And the fifth was named Kasdeja: this is he who showed the children of men all the wicked smithings of spirits and demons, and the smitings of the embryo in the womb, that it may pass away, and the bites of the serpent, and the smitings which befall through the noontide heat the son of the serpent named Tabaet.

13 And this is the task of Kasbeel, the chief of the oath which he showed to the holy ones when he dwelt high above in glory, and its name is Biqa.

14 This angel requested Michael to show him the hidden name, that he might enunciate it in the oath, so that those might quake before that name and oath who revealed all that was in secret to the children of men.

15 And this is the power of this oath, for it is powerful and strong, and he placed this oath Akae in the hand of Michael.

16 These are the secrets of this oath and they are strong through his oath: The heaven was suspended before the world was created, and for ever.

17 And through it the earth was founded upon the water and from the secret recesses of the mountains come beautiful waters from the creation of the world and unto eternity.

18 And through that oath the sea was created and as its foundation He set for it the sand against the time of anger, and it dare not pass beyond it from the creation of the world unto eternity.

19 And through that oath are the depths made fast and abide and stir not from their place from eternity to eternity.

20 And through that oath the sun and moon complete their course and deviate not from their ordinance from eternity to eternity.

21 And through that oath the stars complete their course and He calls them by their names, and they answer Him from eternity to eternity.

22 And this oath is mighty over them and through it their paths are preserved and their course is not destroyed.

23 And there was great joy amongst them, and they blessed and glorified and extolled because the name of that Son of Man had been revealed unto them.

24 And he sat on the throne of His glory and the sum of judgement was given unto the Son of Man, and He caused the sinners to pass away and be destroyed from off the face of the earth, and those who have led the world astray.

25 With chains shall they be bound and in their assemblage place of destruction shall they be imprisoned, and all their works vanish from the face of the earth.

26 And from henceforth there shall be nothing corruptible; For that Son of Man has appeared and has seated himself on the throne of His glory.

27 All evil shall pass away before His face and the word of that Son of Man shall go forth and be strong before the Lord of Spirits.

Book 4: The Kingdom of Heaven

Chapter 1

Enoch is Taken

1 And it came to pass after this that his name during his lifetime was raised aloft to that Son of Man and to the Lord of Spirits from amongst those who dwell on the earth.

2 And he was raised aloft on the chariots of the spirit and his name vanished among them.

3 And from that day I was no longer numbered amongst them and He set me between the two winds, between the North and the West, where the angels took the cords to measure for me the place for the elect and righteous.

4 And there I saw the first fathers and the righteous who from the beginning dwell in that place.

5 And it came to pass after this that my spirit was translated and it ascended into the heavens I saw the holy sons of God.

6 They were stepping on flames of fire: Their garments were white and their faces shone like snow.

7 And I saw two streams of fire and the light of that fire shone like hyacinth, and I fell on my face before the Lord of Spirits.

8 And the angel Michael seized me by my right hand and lifted me up and led me forth into all the secrets, and he showed me all the secrets of righteousness.

9 And he showed me all the secrets of the ends of the heaven, and all the chambers of all the stars, and all the luminaries, Whence they proceed before the face of the holy ones.

10 And he translated my spirit into the heaven of heavens and I saw there as it were a structure built of crystals and between those crystals tongues of living fire.

11 And my spirit saw the girdle which girt that house of fire and on its four sides were streams full of living fire, and they girt that house.

12 And round about were Seraphin, Cherubic, and Ophannin: And these are they who sleep not and guard the throne of His glory.

13 And I saw angels who could not be counted. A thousand thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand encircling that house.

14 And Michael, and Raphael, and Gabriel, and Phanuel, and the holy angels who are above the heavens go in and out of that house.

15 And they came forth from that house, and Michael and Gabriel, Raphael, and Phanuel, and many holy angels without number.

16 And with them the Head of Days, His head white and pure as wool, and His raiment indescribable.

17 And I fell on my face and my whole body became relaxed, and my spirit was transfigured; and I cried with a loud voice with the spirit of power and blessed and glorified and extolled.

18 And these blessings which went forth out of my mouth were well pleasing before that Head of Days.

19 And that Head of Days came with Michael and Gabriel, Raphael, and Phanuel, thousands and ten thousands of angels without number.

20 And He came to me and greeted me with His voice, and said unto me: "This is the Son of Man who is born unto righteousness, and righteousness abides over Him, and the righteousness of the Head of Days forsakes Him not."

21 And he said unto me: "He proclaims unto thee peace in the name of the world to come; for from hence has proceeded peace since the creation of the world, and so shall it be unto thee for ever and for ever and ever.

22 And all shall walk in his ways since righteousness never forsaketh Him.

23 With Him will be their dwelling places, and with Him their heritage, and they shall not be separated from Him for ever and ever and ever.

24 And so there shall be length of days with that Son of Man and the righteous shall have peace and an upright way in the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever.

Chapter 2

The Luminaries

1 The book of the courses of the luminaries of the heaven, the relations of each, according to their classes, their dominion and their seasons, according to their names and places of origin, and according to their months, which Uriel, the holy angel, who was with me, who is their guide showed me.

2 And he showed me all their laws exactly as they are, and how it is with regard to all the years of the world and unto eternity, till the new creation is accomplished which dureth till eternity.

3 And this is the first law of the luminaries: the luminary the sun has its rising in the eastern portals of the heaven, and its setting in the western portals of the heaven.

4 And I saw six portals in which the sun rises, and six portals in which the sun sets and the moon rises and sets in these portals, and the leaders of the stars and those whom they lead: six in the east and six in the west, and all following each other in accurately corresponding order: also many windows to the right and left of these portals.

5 And first there goes forth the great luminary, named the sun, and his circumference is like the circumference of the heaven, and he is quite filled with illuminating and heating fire.

6 The chariot on which he ascends, the wind drives, and the sun goes down from the heaven and returns through the north in order to reach the east, and is so guided that he comes to the appropriate portal and shines in the face of the heaven.

7 In this way he rises in the first month in the great portal, which is the fourth. And in that fourth portal from which the sun rises in the first month are twelve window-openings, from which proceed a flame when they are opened in their season.

8 When the sun rises in the heaven, he comes forth through that fourth portal thirty mornings in succession, and sets accurately in the fourth portal in the west of the heaven.

9 And during this period the day becomes daily longer and the night nightly shorter to the thirtieth morning.

10 On that day the day is longer than the night by a ninth part, and the day amounts exactly to ten parts and the night to eight parts.

11 And the sun rises from that fourth portal, and sets in the fourth and returns to the fifth portal of the east thirty mornings and rises from it and sets in the fifth portal.

12 And then the day becomes longer by two parts and amounts to eleven parts, and the night becomes shorter and amounts to seven parts.

13 And it returns to the east and enters into the sixth portal, and rises and sets in the sixth portal one-and-thirty mornings on account of its sign.

14 On that day the day becomes longer than the night, and the day becomes double the night, and the day becomes twelve parts, and the night is shortened and becomes six parts.

15 And the sun mounts up to make the day shorter and the night longer, and the sun returns to the east and enters into the sixth portal and rises from it and sets thirty mornings.

16 And when thirty mornings are accomplished, the day decreases by exactly one part, and becomes eleven parts, and the night seven.

17 And the sun goes forth from that sixth portal in the west, and goes to the east and rises in the fifth portal for thirty mornings, and sets in the west again in the fifth western portal.

18 On that day the day decreases by two parts, and amounts to ten parts and the night to eight parts.

19 And the sun goes forth from that fifth portal and sets in the fifth portal of the west, and rises in the fourth portal for one-and-thirty mornings on account of its sign, and sets in the west.

20 On that day the day is equalized with the night, and the night amounts to nine parts and the day to nine parts.

21 And the sun rises from that portal and sets in the west, and returns to the east and rises thirty mornings in the third portal and sets in the west in the third portal.

22 And on that day the night becomes longer than the day, and night becomes longer than night, and day shorter than day till the thirtieth morning, and the night amounts exactly to ten parts and the day to eight parts.

23 And the sun rises from that third portal and sets in the third portal in the west and returns to the east and for thirty mornings rises in the second portal in the east, and in like manner sets in the second portal in the west of the heaven.

24 And on that day the night amounts to eleven parts and the day to seven parts.

25 And the sun rises on that day from that second portal and sets in the west in the second portal, and returns to the east into the first portal for one-and-thirty mornings, and sets in the first portal in the west of the heaven.

26 And on that day the night becomes longer and amounts to the double of the day: and the night amounts exactly to twelve parts and the day to six.

27 And the sun has traversed the divisions of his orbit and turns again on those divisions of his orbit, and enters that portal thirty mornings and sets also in the west opposite to it.

28 And on that night has the night decreased in length by a ninth part, and the night has become eleven parts and the day seven parts.

29 And the sun has returned and entered into the second portal in the east, and returns on those his divisions of his orbit for thirty mornings, rising and setting.

30 And on that day the night decreases in length, and the night amounts to ten parts and the day to eight.

31 And on that day the sun rises from that portal, and sets in the west, and returns to the east, and rises in the third portal for one-and-thirty mornings, and sets in the west of the heaven.

32 On that day the night decreases and amounts to nine parts, and the day to nine parts, and the night is equal to the day and the year is exactly as to its days three hundred and sixty-four.

33 And the length of the day and of the night, and the shortness of the day and of the night arise—through the course of the sun these distinctions are made.

34 So it comes that its course becomes daily longer, and its course nightly shorter.

35 And this is the law and the course of the sun, and his return as often as he returns sixty times and rises for ever and ever.

36 And that which rises is the great luminary, and is so named according to its appearance, according as the Lord commanded.

37 As he rises, so he sets and decreases not, and rests not, but runs day and night, and his light is sevenfold brighter than that of the moon; but as regards size they are both equal.

38 And after this law I saw another law dealing with the smaller luminary, which is named the Moon.

39 And her circumference is like the circumference of the heaven, and her chariot in which she rides is driven by the wind, and light is given to her in measure.

40 And her rising and setting change every month and her days are like the days of the sun, and when her light is uniform it amounts to the seventh part of the light of the sun.

41 And thus she rises. And her first phase in the east comes forth on the thirtieth morning: and on that day she becomes visible and constitutes for you the first phase of the moon on the thirtieth day together with the sun in the portal where the sun rises.

42 And the one half of her goes forth by a seventh part, and her whole circumference is empty, without light, with the exception of one-seventh part of it, the fourteenth part of her light.

43 And when she receives one-seventh part of the half of her light, her light amounts to one-seventh part and the half thereof.

44 And she sets with the sun, and when the sun rises the moon rises with him and receives the half of one part of light, and in that night in the beginning of her morning in the commencement of the lunar day the moon sets with the sun, and is invisible that night with the fourteen parts and the half of one of them.

45 And she rises on that day with exactly a seventh part, and comes forth and recedes from the rising of the sun, and in her remaining days she becomes bright in the thirteen parts.

46 And I saw another course, a law for her, how according to that law she performs her monthly revolution.

47 And all these Uriel, the holy angel who is the leader of them all showed to me, and their positions, and I wrote down their positions as he showed them to me, and I wrote down their months as they were, and the appearance of their lights till fifteen days were accomplished.

48 In single seventh parts she accomplishes all her light in the east, and in single seventh parts accomplishes all her darkness in the west.

49 And in certain months she alters her settings, and in certain months she pursues her own peculiar course.

50 In two months the moon sets with the sun: in those two middle portals the third and the fourth. She goes forth for seven days, and turns about and returns again through the portal where the sun rises, and accomplishes all her light and she recedes from the sun, and in eight days enters the sixth portal from which the sun goes forth.

51 And when the sun goes forth from the fourth portal she goes forth seven days, until she goes forth from the fifth and turns back again in seven days into the fourth portal and accomplishes all her light: and she recedes and enters into the first portal in eight days.

52 And she returns again in seven days into the fourth portal from which the sun goes forth.

53 Thus I saw their position, how the moons rose and the sun set in those days.

54 And if five years are added together the sun has an overplus of thirty days, and all the days which accrue to it for one of those five years, when they are full, amount to 364 days.

55 And the overplus of the sun and of the stars amounts to six days: in 5 years 6 days every year come to 30 days: and the moon falls behind the sun and stars to the number of 30 days.

56 And the sun and the stars bring in all the years exactly, so that they do not advance or delay their position by a single day unto eternity; but complete the years with perfect justice in 364 days.

57 In 3 years there are 1,092 days, and in 5 years 1,820 days, so that in 8 years there are 2,912 days.

58 For the moon alone the days amount in 3 years to 1,062 days, and in 5 years she falls 50 days behind to the sun there is 5 to be added 62 days.

59 And in 5 years there are 1,770 days, so that for the moon the days 6 in 8 years amount to 21,832 days.

60 For in 8 years she falls behind to the amount of 80 days, all the 17 days she falls behind in 8 years are 80.

61 And the year is accurately completed in conformity with their world-stations and the stations of the sun, which rise from the portals through which it rises and sets 30 days.

62 And the leaders of the heads of the thousands, who are placed over the whole creation and over all the stars, have also to do with the four intercalary days, being inseparable from their office, according to the reckoning of the year, and these render service on the four days which are not reckoned in the reckoning of the year.

63 And owing to them men go wrong therein, for those luminaries truly render service on the world—stations, one in the first portal, one in the third portal of the heaven, one in the fourth portal, and one in the sixth portal, and the exactness of the year is accomplished through its separate three hundred and sixty-four stations.

64 For the signs and the times and the years and the days the angel Uriel showed to me, whom the Lord of glory hath set for ever over all the luminaries of the heaven, in the heaven and in the world that they should rule on the face of the heaven and be seen on the earth and be leaders for the day and the night and all the ministering creatures which make their revolution in all the chariots of the heaven.

65 In like manner twelve doors Uriel showed me open in the circumference of the suns chariot in the heaven, through which the rays of the sun break forth: and from them is warmth diffused over the earth, when they are opened at their appointed seasons.

66 And for the winds and the spirit of the dew when they are opened, standing open in the heavens at the ends.

67 As for the twelve portals in the heaven at the ends of the earth, out of which go forth the sun, moon, and stars, and all the works of heaven in the east and in the west.

68 There are many windows open to the left and right of them, and one window at its season produces warmth, corresponding to those doors from which the stars come forth according as He has commanded them and wherein they set corresponding to their number.

69 And I saw chariots in the heaven, running in the world, above those portals in which revolve the stars that never set.

70 And one is larger than all the rest and it is that that makes its course through the entire world.

71 And at the ends of the earth I saw twelve portals open to all the quarters from which the winds go forth and blow over the earth.

72 Three of them are open on the face of the heavens, and three in the west, and three on the right of the heaven, and three on the left.

73 And the three first are those of the east, and three are of the north, and three after those on the left of the south, and three of the west.

74 Through four of these come winds of blessing and prosperity and from those eight come hurtful winds: when they are sent, they bring destruction on all the earth and on the water upon it, and on all who dwell thereon, and on everything which is in the water and on the land.

75 And the first wind from those portals, called the east wind, comes forth through the first portal which is in the east, inclining towards the south: from it come forth desolation, drought, heat, and destruction.

76 And through the second portal in the middle comes what is fitting, and from it there come rain and fruitfulness and prosperity and dew; and through the third portal which lies toward the north come cold and drought.

77 And after these come forth the south winds through three portals: through the first portal of them inclining to the east comes forth a hot wind.

78 And through the middle portal next to it there come forth fragrant smells, and dew and rain, and prosperity and health.

79 And through the third portal lying to the west come forth dew and rain, locusts and desolation.

80 And after these the north winds: from the seventh portal in the east come dew and rain, locusts and desolation.

81 And from the middle portal come in a direct direction health and rain and dew and prosperity; and through the third portal in the west come cloud and hoarfrost, and snow and rain, and dew and locusts.

82 And after these four are the west winds: through the first portal adjoining the north come forth dew and hoarfrost, and cold and snow and frost.

83 And from the middle portal come forth dew and rain, and prosperity and blessing; and through the last portal which adjoins the south come forth drought and desolation, and burning and destruction.

84 And the twelve portals of the four quarters of the heaven are therewith completed and all their laws and all their plagues and all their benefactions have I shown to thee, my son Methuselah.

85 And the first quarter is called the east because it is the first. And the second, the south, because the Most High will descend there, yea, there in quite a special sense will He who is blessed for ever descend.

86 And the west quarter is named the diminished because there all the luminaries of the heaven wane and go down.

87 And the fourth quarter named the north, is divided into three parts: the first of them is for the dwelling of men: and the second contains seas of water, and the abysses and forests and rivers, and darkness and clouds; and the third part contains the garden of righteousness.

88 I saw seven high mountains, higher than all the mountains which are on the earth and thence comes forth hoarfrost, and days, seasons, and years pass away.

89 I saw seven rivers on the earth larger than all the rivers: one of them coming from the west pours its waters into the Great Sea.

90 And these two come from the north to the sea and pour their waters into the Erythraean Sea in the east.

91 And the remaining, four come forth on the side of the north to their own sea, two of them to the Erythraean Sea, and two into the Great Sea and discharge themselves there and some say, into the desert.

92 Seven great islands I saw in the sea and in the mainland: two in the mainland and five in the Great Sea.

93 And the names of the sun are the following: the first Orjares, and the second Tomas.

94 And the moon has four names: the first name is Asonja, the second Ebla, the third Benase, and the fourth Erae.

95 These are the two great luminaries: their circumference is like the circumference of the heaven, and the size of the circumference of both is alike.

96 In the circumference of the sun there are seven portions of light which are added to it more than to the moon, and in definite measures it is transferred till the seventh portion of the sun is exhausted.

97 And they set and enter the portals of the west, and make their revolution by the north, and come forth through the eastern portals on the face of the heaven.

98 And when the moon rises one-fourteenth part appears in the heaven: the light becomes full in her : on the fourteenth day she accomplishes her light.

99 And fifteen parts of light are transferred to her till the fifteenth day her light is accomplished, according to the sign of the year, and she becomes fifteen parts, and the moon grows by fourteenth parts.

100 And in her waning decreases on the first day to fourteen parts of her light, on the second to thirteen parts of light, on the third to twelve, on the fourth to eleven, on the fifth to ten, on the sixth to nine, on the seventh to eight, on the eighth to seven, on the ninth to six, on the tenth to five, on the eleventh to four, on the twelfth to three, on the thirteenth to two, on the fourteenth to the half of a seventh, and all her remaining light disappears wholly on the fifteenth.

101 And in certain months the month has twenty-nine days and once twenty-eight.

102 And Uriel showed me another law: when light is transferred to the moon, and on which side it is transferred to her by the sun.

103 During all the period during which the moon is growing in her light, she is transferring it to herself when opposite to the sun during fourteen days her light is accomplished in the heaven, and when she is illumined throughout, her light is accomplished full in the heaven.

104 And on the first day she is called the new moon, for on that day the light rises upon her. She becomes full moon exactly on the day when the sun sets in the west, and from the east she rises at night, and the moon shines the whole night through till the sun rises over against her and the moon is seen over against the sun.

105 On the side whence the light of the moon comes forth, there again she wanes till all the light vanishes and all the days of the month are at an end and her circumference is empty, void of light.

106 And three months she makes of thirty days, and at her time she makes three months of twenty–nine days each, in which she accomplishes her waning in the first period of time, and in the first portal for one hundred and seventy–seven days.

107 And in the time of her going out she appears for three months thirty days each, and for three months she appears twenty–nine each.

108 At night she appears like a man for twenty days each time, and by day she appears like the heaven, and there is nothing else in her save her light.

109 And now, my son, I have shown thee everything, and the law of all the stars of the heaven is completed.

110 And he showed me all the laws of these for every day, and for every season of bearing rule, and for every year, and for its going forth, and for the order prescribed to it every month and every week: And the waning of the moon which takes place in the sixth portal: for in this 4 sixth portal her light is accomplished.

111 And after that there is the beginning of the waning which takes place in the first portal in its season, till one hundred and seventy–seven days are accomplished: reckoned according to weeks, twenty–five and two days.

112 She falls behind the sun and the order of the stars exactly five days in the course of one period, and when this place which thou seest has been traversed.

113 Such is the picture and sketch of every luminary which Uriel the archangel, who is their leader, showed unto me.

Chapter 3

Heavenly Tablets

1 And in those days the angel Uriel answered and said to me: "Behold, I have shown thee everything Enoch and I have revealed everything to thee that thou shouldst see this sun and this moon, and the leaders of the stars of the heaven and all those who turn them, their tasks and times and departures.

2 And in the days of the sinners the years shall be shortened and their seed shall be tardy on their lands and fields.

3 And all things on the earth shall alter and shall not appear in their time: The rain shall be kept back and the heaven shall withhold it.

4 And in those times the fruits of the earth shall be backward and shall not grow in their time, and the fruits of the trees shall be withheld in their time.

5 And the moon shall alter her order and not appear at her time.

6 And in those days the sun shall be seen and he shall journey in the evening on the extremity of the great chariot in the west and shall shine more brightly than accords with the order of light.

7 And many chiefs of the stars shall transgress the order and these shall alter their orbits and tasks and not appear at the seasons prescribed to them.

8 And the whole order of the stars shall be concealed from the sinners and the thoughts of those on the earth shall err concerning them. And they shall be altered from all their ways. Yea, they shall err and take them to be gods.

9 And evil shall be multiplied upon them, and punishment shall come upon them so as to destroy all."

10 And He said unto me: "Observe, Enoch, these heavenly tablets and read what is written thereon, and mark every individual fact."

11 And I observed the heavenly tablets, and read everything which was written and understood everything, and read the book of all the deeds of mankind, and of all the children of flesh that shall be upon the earth to the remotest generations.

12 And forthwith I blessed the great Lord the King of glory for ever, in that He has made all the works of the world.

13 And I extolled the Lord because of His patience and blessed Him because of the children of men.

14 And after that I said: "Blessed is the man who dies in righteousness and goodness concerning whom there is no book of unrighteousness written, and against whom no day of judgement shall be found."

15 And those seven holy ones brought me and placed me on the earth before the door of my house, and said to me: "Declare everything to thy son Methuselah, and show to all thy children that no flesh is righteous in the sight of the Lord, for He is their Creator.

16 One year we will leave thee with thy son, till thou givest thy commands, that thou mayest teach thy children and record for them, and testify to all thy children; and in the second year they shall take thee from their midst.

17 Let thy heart be strong, for the good shall announce righteousness to the good; The righteous with the righteous shall rejoice and shall offer congratulation to one another.

18 But the sinners shall die with the sinners and the apostate go down with the apostate.

19 And those who practice righteousness shall die on account of the deeds of men and be taken away on account of the doings of the godless.

20 And in those days they ceased to speak to me, and I came to my people, blessing the Lord of the world.

Chapter 4

One Year to Record

1 And now, my son Methuselah, all these things I am recounting to thee and writing down for thee! and I have revealed to thee everything, and given thee books concerning all these: so preserve, my son Methuselah, the books from thy fathers hand, and see that thou deliver them to the generations of the world.

2 I have given wisdom to thee and to thy children and thy children that shall be to thee, that they may give it to their children for generations, this wisdom that passeth their thought.

3 And those who understand it shall not sleep but shall listen with the ear that they may learn this wisdom and it shall please those that eat thereof better than good food.

4 Blessed are all the righteous, blessed are all those who walk in the way of righteousness and sin not as the sinners.

5 In the reckoning of all their days in which the sun traverses the heaven, entering into and departing from the portals for thirty days with the heads of thousands of the order of the stars, together with the four which are intercalated which divide the four portions of the year, which lead them and enter with them four days.

6 Owing to them men shall be at fault and not reckon them in the whole reckoning of the year: yea, men shall be at fault, and not recognize them accurately.

7 For they belong to the reckoning of the year and are truly recorded for ever, one in the first portal and one in the third, and one in the fourth and one in the sixth, and the year is completed in three hundred and sixty-four days.

8 And the account thereof is accurate and the recorded reckoning thereof exact; for the luminaries, and months and festivals, and years and days, has Uriel shown and revealed to me, to whom the Lord of the whole creation of the world hath subjected the host of heaven.

9 And he has power over night and day in the heaven to cause the light to give light to men, sun, moon, and stars, and all the powers of the heaven which revolve in their circular chariots.

10 And these are the orders of the stars, which set in their places, and in their seasons and festivals and months.

11 And these are the names of those who lead them, who watch that they enter at their times, in their orders, in their seasons, in their months, in their periods of dominion, and in their positions.

12 Their four leaders who divide the four parts of the year enter first; and after them the twelve leaders of the orders who divide the months; and for the three hundred and sixty there are heads over thousands who divide the days; and for the four intercalary days there are the leaders which sunder the four parts of the year.

13 And these heads over thousands are intercalated between leader and leader, each behind a station, but their leaders make the division.

14 And these are the names of the leaders who divide the four parts of the year which are ordained: Milkiel, Helemmelek, and Melejal, and Narel.

15 And the names of those who lead them: Adnarel, and Ijasusael, and Elomeel - these three follow the leaders of the orders, and there is one that follows the three leaders of the orders which follow those leaders of stations that divide the four parts of the year.

16 In the beginning of the year Melkejal rises first and rules, who is named Tamaini and sun, and all the days of his dominion whilst he bears rule are ninety-one days.

17 And these are the signs of the days which are to be seen on earth in the days of his dominion: sweat, and heat, and calms; and all the trees bear fruit, and leaves are produced on all the trees, and the harvest of wheat, and the rose-flowers, and all the flowers which come forth in the field, but the trees of the winter season become withered.

18 And these are the names of the leaders which are under them: Berkael, Zelebsel, and another who is added a head of a thousand, called Hilujaseph: and the days of the dominion of this are at an end.

19 The next leader after him is Helemmelek, whom one names the shining sun, and all the days of his light are ninety-one days. And these are the signs of days on the earth: glowing heat and dryness, and the trees ripen their fruits and produce all their fruits ripe and ready, and the sheep pair and become pregnant, and all the fruits of the earth are gathered in, and everything that is in the fields, and the winepress: these things take place in the days of his dominion.

20 These are the names, and the orders, and the leaders of those heads of thousands: Gidaljal, Keel, and Heel, and the name of the head of a thousand which is added to them, Asfael: and the days of his dominion are at an end.

Chapter 5

Visions

1 And now, my son Methuselah, I will show thee all my visions which I have seen, recounting them before thee.

2 Two visions I saw before I took a wife, and the one was quite unlike the other. The first when I was learning to write: the second before I took thy mother I saw a terrible vision.

3 And regarding them I prayed to the Lord. I had laid me down in the house of my grandfather Mahalaleel I saw in a vision how the heaven collapsed and was borne off and fell to the earth.

4 And when it fell to the earth I saw how the earth was swallowed up in a great abyss, and mountains were suspended on mountains, and hills sank down on hills, and high trees were rent from their stems and hurled down and sunk in the abyss.

5 And thereupon a word fell into my mouth and I lifted up to cry aloud, and said: "The earth is destroyed!"

6 And my grandfather Mahalaleel waked me as I lay near him, and said unto me: "Why dost thou cry so my son, and why dost thou make such lamentation?"

7 And I recounted to him the whole vision which I had seen, and he said unto me: "A terrible thing hast thou seen, my son, and of grave moment is thy dream vision as to the secrets if all the sin of the earth: it must sink into the abyss and be destroyed with a great destruction.

8 And now, my son, arise and make petition to the Lord of glory, since thou art a believer that a remnant may remain on the earth, and that He may not destroy the whole earth. My son, from heaven all this will come upon the earth, and upon the earth there will be great destruction."

9 After that I arose and prayed and implored and besought, and wrote down my prayer for the generations of the world, and I will show everything to thee, my son Methuselah.

10 And when I had gone forth below and seen the heaven and the sun rising in the east, and the moon setting in the west, and a few stars, and the whole earth, and everything as He had known it in the beginning then I blessed the Lord of judgement and extolled Him because He had made the sun to go forth from the windows of the east, and He ascended and rose on the face of the heaven, and set out and kept traversing the path shown unto Him.

11 And I lifted up my hands in righteousness and blessed the Holy and Great One and spake with the breath of my mouth, and with the tongue of flesh which God has made for the children of the flesh of men that they should speak therewith, and He gave them breath and a tongue and a mouth that they should speak therewith:

12 "Blessed be Thou, O Lord, King, Great and mighty in Thy greatness, Lord of the whole creation of the heaven, King of kings and God of the whole world.

13 And Thy power and kingship and greatness abide for ever and ever, and throughout all generations Thy dominion; and all the heavens are Thy throne for ever, and the whole earth Thy footstool for ever and ever.

14 For Thou hast made and Thou rulest all things and nothing is too hard for Thee.

15 Wisdom departs not from the place of Thy throne nor turns away from Thy presence.

16 And Thou knowest and seest and hearest everything and there is nothing hidden from Thee for Thou seest everything.

17 And now the angels of Thy heavens are guilty of trespass and upon the flesh of men abideth Thy wrath until the great day of judgement.

18 And now, O God and Lord and Great King, I implore and beseech Thee to fulfil my prayer to leave me a posterity on earth and not destroy all the flesh of man and make the earth without inhabitant so that there should be an eternal destruction.

19 And now, my Lord, destroy from the earth the flesh which has aroused Thy wrath but the flesh of righteousness and uprightness establish as a plant of the eternal seed and hide not Thy face from the prayer of Thy servant, O Lord."

20 And after this I saw another dream, and I will show the whole dream to thee, my son.

21 And Enoch lifted up and spake to his son Methuselah: "To thee, my son, will I speak: hear my words—incline thine ear to the dream—vision of thy father.

22 Before I took thy mother Edna, I saw in a vision on my bed, and behold a bull came forth from the earth, and that bull was white; and after it came forth a heifer, and along with this came forth two bulls, one of them black and the other red.

23 And that black bull gored the red one and pursued him over the earth, and thereupon I could no longer see that red bull.

24 But that black bull grew and that heifer went with him, and I saw that many oxen proceeded from him which resembled and followed him.

25 And that cow, that first one, went from the presence of that first bull in order to seek that red one, but found him not, and lamented with a great lamentation over him and sought him.

26 And I looked till that first bull came to her and quieted her, and from that time onward she cried no more.

27 And after that she bore another white bull, and after him she bore many bulls and black cows.

28 And I saw in my sleep that white bull likewise grow and become a great white bull, and from him proceeded many white bulls, and they resembled him. And they began to beget many white bulls, which resembled them, one following the other, many.

29 And again I saw with mine eyes as I slept, and I saw the heaven above, and behold a star fell from heaven, and it arose and eat and pastured amongst those oxen.

30 And after that I saw the large and the black oxen, and behold they all changed their stalls and pastures and their cattle, and began to live with each other.

31 And again I saw in the vision, and looked towards the heaven, and behold I saw many stars descend and cast themselves down from heaven to that first star, and they became bulls amongst those cattle and pastured with them amongst them.

32 And I looked at them and saw, and behold they all let out their privy members, like horses, and began to cover the cows of the oxen, and they all became pregnant and bare elephants, camels, and asses.

33 And all the oxen feared them and were affrighted at them, and began to bite with their teeth and to devour, and to gore with their horns.

34 And they began, moreover, to devour those oxen; and behold all the children of the earth began to tremble and quake before them and to flee from them.

35 And again I saw how they began to gore each other and to devour each other, and the earth began to cry aloud.

36 And I raised mine eyes again to heaven, and I saw in the vision, and behold there came forth from heaven beings who were like white men: and four went forth from that place and three with them.

37 And those three that had last come forth grasped me by my hand and took me up away from the generations of the earth, and raised me up to a lofty place, and showed me a tower raised high above the earth and all the hills were lower.

38 And one said unto me: "Remain here till thou seest everything that befalls those elephants, camels, and asses, and the stars and the oxen, and all of them."

39 And I saw one of those four who had come forth first, and he seized that first star which had fallen from the heaven, and bound it hand and foot and cast it into an abyss.

40 Now that abyss was narrow and deep, and horrible and dark.

41 And one of them drew a sword, and gave it to those elephants and camels and asses: then they began to smite each other, and the whole earth quaked because of them.

42 And as I was beholding in the vision, lo, one of those four who had come forth stoned them from heaven, and gathered and took all the great stars whose privy members were like those of horses and bound them all hand and foot, and cast them in an abyss of the earth.

43 And one of those four went to that white bull and instructed him in a secret without his being terrified: he was born a bull and became a man, and built for himself a great vessel and dwelt thereon; and three bulls dwelt with him in that vessel and they were covered in.

44 And again I raised mine eyes towards heaven and saw a lofty roof, with seven water torrents thereon and those torrents flowed with much water into an enclosure.

45 And I saw again, and behold fountains were opened on the surface of that great enclosure, and that water began to swell and rise upon the surface and I saw that enclosure till all its surface was covered with water.

46 And the water, the darkness, and mist increased upon it; and as I looked at the height of that water, that water had risen above the height of that enclosure, and was streaming over that enclosure, and it stood upon the earth.

47 And all the cattle of that enclosure were gathered together until I saw how they sank and were swallowed up and perished in that water.

48 But that vessel floated on the water, while all the oxen and elephants and camels and asses sank to the bottom with all the animals, so that I could no longer see them, and they were not able to escape, perished and sank into the depths.

49 And again I saw in the vision till those water torrents were removed from that high roof, and the chasms of the earth were leveled up and other abysses were opened.

50 Then the water began to run down into these, till the earth became visible; but that vessel settled on the earth, and the darkness retired and light appeared.

51 But that white bull which had become a man came out of that vessel, and the three bulls with him, and one of those three was white like that bull, and one of them was red as blood, and one black: and that white bull departed from them.

52 And they began to bring forth beasts of the field and birds, so that there arose different genera: lions, tigers, wolves, dogs, hyenas, wild boars, foxes, squirrels, swine, falcons, vultures, kites, eagles, and ravens; and among them was born a white bull.

53 And they began to bite one another; but that white bull which was born amongst them begat a wild ass and a white bull with it, and the wild asses multiplied. But that bull which was born from him begat a black wild boar and a white sheep; and the former begat many boars, but that sheep begat twelve sheep.

54 And when those twelve sheep had grown, they gave up one of them to the asses, and those asses again gave up that sheep to the wolves, and that sheep grew up among the wolves.

55 And the Lord brought the eleven sheep to live with it and to pasture with it among the wolves: and they multiplied and became many flocks of sheep.

56 And the wolves began to fear them, and they oppressed them until they destroyed - cry aloud on account of their little ones, and to complain unto their Lord.

57 And a sheep which had been saved from the wolves fled and escaped to the wild asses; and I saw the sheep how they lamented and cried, and besought their Lord with all their might, till that Lord of the sheep descended at the voice of the sheep from a lofty abode, and came to them and pastured them.

58 And He called that sheep which had escaped the wolves, and spake with it concerning the wolves that it should admonish them not to touch the sheep.

59 And the sheep went to the wolves according to the word of the Lord, and another sheep met it and went with it, and the two went and entered together into the assembly of those wolves, and spake with them and admonished them not to touch the sheep from henceforth.

60 And thereupon I saw the wolves, and how they oppressed the sheep exceedingly with all their power; and the sheep cried aloud.

61 And the Lord came to the sheep and they began to smite those wolves and the wolves began to make lamentation; but the sheep became quiet and forthwith ceased to cry out.

62 And I saw the sheep till they departed from amongst the wolves; but the eyes of the wolves were blinded, and those wolves departed in pursuit of the sheep with all their power.

63 And the Lord of the sheep went with them, as their leader, and all His sheep followed Him: and his face was dazzling and glorious and terrible to behold.

64 But the wolves began to pursue those sheep till they reached a sea of water. And that sea was divided, and the water stood on this side and on that before their face, and their Lord led them and placed Himself between them and the wolves.

65 And as those wolves did not yet see the sheep, they proceeded into the midst of that sea, and the wolves followed the sheep, and those wolves ran after them into that sea.

66 And when they saw the Lord of the sheep, they turned to flee before His face, but that sea gathered itself together, and became as it had been created, and the water swelled and rose till it covered those wolves.

67 And I saw till all the wolves who pursued those sheep perished and were drowned.

68 But the sheep escaped from that water and went forth into a wilderness, where there was no water and no grass; and they began to open their eyes and to see; and I saw the Lord of the sheep pasturing them and giving them water and grass, and that sheep going and leading them.

69 And that sheep ascended to the summit of that lofty rock, and the Lord of the sheep sent it to them.

70 And after that I saw the Lord of the sheep who stood before them, and His appearance was great and terrible and majestic, and all those sheep saw Him and were afraid before His face.

71 And they all feared and trembled because of Him, and they cried to that sheep with them which was amongst them: "We are not able to stand before our Lord or to behold Him."

72 And that sheep which led them again ascended to the summit of that rock, but the sheep began to be blinded and to wander from the way which he had showed them, but that sheep wot not thereof.

73 And the Lord of the sheep was wrathful exceedingly against them, and that sheep discovered it, and went down from the summit of the rock, and came to the sheep, and found the greatest part of them blinded and fallen away.

74 And when they saw it they feared and trembled at its presence, and desired to return to their folds.

75 And that sheep took other sheep with it, and came to those sheep which had fallen away, and began to slay them; and the sheep feared its presence, and thus that sheep brought back those sheep that had fallen away, and they returned to their folds.

76 And I saw in this vision till that sheep became a man and built a house for the Lord of the sheep, and placed all the sheep in that house.

77 And I saw till this sheep which had met that sheep which led them fell asleep: and I saw till all the great sheep perished and little ones arose in their place, and they came to a pasture, and approached a stream of water.

78 Then that sheep, their leader which had become a man, withdrew from them and fell asleep, and all the sheep sought it and cried over it with a great crying.

79 And I saw till they left off crying for that sheep and crossed that stream of water, and there arose the two sheep as leaders in the place of those which had led them and fallen asleep.

80 And I saw till the sheep came to a goodly place, and a pleasant and glorious land, and I saw till those sheep were satisfied; and that house stood amongst them in the pleasant land.

81 And sometimes their eyes were opened, and sometimes blinded, till another sheep arose and led them and brought them all back, and their eyes were opened.

82 And the dogs and the foxes and the wild boars began to devour those sheep till the Lord of the sheep raised up another sheep a ram from their midst, which led them. And that ram began to butt on either side those dogs, foxes, and wild boars till he had destroyed them all.

83 And that sheep whose eyes were opened saw that ram, which was amongst the sheep, till it forsook its glory and began to butt those sheep and trampled upon them, and behaved itself unseemly.

84 And the Lord of the sheep sent the lamb to another lamb and raised it to being a ram and leader of the sheep instead of that ram which had forsaken its glory.

85 And it went to it and spake to it alone, and raised it to being a ram, and made it the prince and leader of the sheep; but during all these things those dogs oppressed the sheep.

86 And the first ram pursued that second ram, and that second ram arose and fled before it; and I saw till those dogs pulled down the first ram.

87 And that second ram arose and led the little sheep. And those sheep grew and multiplied; but all the dogs, and foxes, and wild boars feared and fled before it, and that ram butted and killed the wild beasts, and those wild beasts had no longer any power among the 49sheep and robbed them no more of ought.

88 And that ram begat many sheep and fell asleep; and a little sheep became ram in its stead, and became prince and leader of those sheep and that house became great and broad, and it was built for those sheep.

89 A tower lofty and great was built on the house for the Lord of the sheep, and that house was low, but the tower was elevated and lofty, and the Lord of the sheep stood on that tower and they offered a full table before Him.

90 And again I saw those sheep that they again erred and went many ways, and forsook that their house, and the Lord of the sheep called some from amongst the sheep and sent them to the sheep, but the sheep began to slay them.

91 And one of them was saved and was not slain, and it sped away and cried aloud over the sheep; and they sought to slay it, but the Lord of the sheep saved it from the sheep, and brought it up to me, and caused it to dwell there.

92 And many other sheep He sent to those sheep to testify unto them and lament over them.

93 And after that I saw that when they forsook the house of the Lord and His tower they fell away entirely, and their eyes were blinded; and I saw the Lord of the sheep how He wrought much slaughter amongst them in their herds until those sheep invited that slaughter and betrayed His place.

94 And He gave them over into the hands of the lions and tigers, and wolves and hyenas, and into the hand of the foxes, and to all the wild beasts, and those wild beasts began to tear in pieces those sheep.

95 And I saw that He forsook that their house and their tower and gave them all into the hand of the lions, to tear and devour them, into the hand of all the wild beasts.

96 And I began to cry aloud with all my power, and to appeal to the Lord of the sheep, and to represent to Him in regard to the sheep that they were devoured by all the wild beasts.

97 But He remained unmoved, though He saw it, and rejoiced that they were devoured and swallowed and robbed, and left them to be devoured in the hand of all the beasts.

98 And He called seventy shepherds, and cast those sheep to them that they might pasture them, and He spake to the shepherds and their companions: "Let each individual of you pasture the sheep henceforward, and everything that I shall command you that do ye. And I will deliver them over unto you duly numbered, and tell you which of them are to be destroyed and them destroy ye."

99 And He gave over unto them those sheep.

100 And He called another and spake unto him: "Observe and mark everything that the shepherds will do to those sheep; for they will destroy more of them than I have commanded them. And every excess and the destruction which will be wrought through the shepherds, record how many they destroy according to my command, and how many according to their own caprice: record against every individual shepherd all the destruction he effects. And read out before me by number how many they destroy, and how many they deliver over for destruction, that I may have this as a testimony against them, and know every deed of the shepherds, that I may comprehend and see what they do, whether or not they abide by my command which I have commanded them. But they shall not know it, and thou shalt not declare it to them, nor admonish them, but only record against each individual all the destruction which the shepherds effect each in his time and lay it all before me."

101 And I saw till those shepherds pastured in their season, and they began to slay and to destroy more than they were bidden, and they delivered those sheep into the hand of the lions.

102 And the lions and tigers eat and devoured the greater part of those sheep, and the wild boars eat along with them; and they burnt that tower and demolished that house.

103 And I became exceedingly sorrowful over that tower because that house of the sheep was demolished, and afterwards I was unable to see if those sheep entered that house.

104 And the shepherds and their associates delivered over those sheep to all the wild beasts, to devour them, and each one of them received in his time a definite number: it was written by the other in a book how many each one of them destroyed of them.

105 And each one slew and destroyed many more than was prescribed; and I began to weep and lament on account of those sheep.

106 And thus in the vision I saw that one who wrote, how he wrote down every one that was destroyed by those shepherds, day by day, and carried up and laid down and showed actually the whole book to the Lord of the sheep – everything that they had done, and all that each one of them had made away with, and all that they had given over to destruction.

107 And the book was read before the Lord of the sheep, and He took the book from his hand and read it and sealed it and laid it down.

108 And forthwith I saw how the shepherds pastured for twelve hours, and behold three of those sheep turned back and came and entered and began to build up all that had fallen down of that house; but the wild boars tried to hinder them, but they were not able.

109 And they began again to build as before, and they reared up that tower, and it was named the high tower; and they began again to place a table before the tower, but all the bread on it was polluted and not pure.

110 And as touching all this the eyes of those sheep were blinded so that they saw not, and their shepherds likewise; and they delivered them in large numbers to their shepherds for destruction, and they trampled the sheep with their feet and devoured them.

111 And the Lord of the sheep remained unmoved till all the sheep were dispersed over the field and mingled with them and they did not save them out of the hand of the beasts.

112 And this one who wrote the book carried it up, and showed it and read it before the Lord of the sheep, and implored Him on their account, and besought Him on their account as he showed Him all the doings of the shepherds, and gave testimony before Him against all the shepherds.

113 And he took the actual book and laid it down beside Him and departed.

114 And I saw till that in this manner thirty-five shepherds undertook the pasturing, and they severally completed their periods as did the first; and others receive them into their hands, to pasture them for their period, each shepherd in his own period.

115 And after that I saw in my vision all the birds of heaven coming, the eagles, the vultures, the kites, the ravens; but the eagles led all the birds; and they began to devour those sheep, and to pick out their eyes and to devour their flesh.

116 And the sheep cried out because their flesh was being devoured by the birds and as for me I looked and lamented in my sleep over that shepherd who pastured the sheep.

117 And I saw until those sheep were devoured by the dogs and eagles and kites, and they left neither flesh nor skin nor sinew remaining on them till only their bones stood there: and their bones too fell to the earth and the sheep became few.

118 And I saw until that twenty-three had undertaken the pasturing and completed in their several periods fifty-eight times.

119 But behold lambs were borne by those white sheep, and they began to open their eyes and to see, and to cry to the sheep.

120 Yea, they cried to them, but they did not hearken to what they said to them, but were exceedingly deaf, and their eyes were very exceedingly blinded.

121 And I saw in the vision how the ravens flew upon those lambs and took one of those lambs, and dashed the sheep in pieces and devoured them.

122 And I saw till horns grew upon those lambs, and the ravens cast down their horns; and I saw till there sprouted a great horn of one of those sheep, and their eyes were opened.

123 And it looked at them and their eyes opened, and it cried to the sheep, and the rams saw it and all ran to it.

124 And notwithstanding all this those eagles and vultures and ravens and kites still kept tearing the sheep and swooping down upon them and devouring them: still the sheep remained silent, but the rams lamented and cried out.

125 And those ravens fought and battled with it and sought to lay low its horn, but they had no power over it.

126 All the eagles and vultures and ravens and kites were gathered together and there came with them all the sheep of the field, yea, they all came together, and helped each other to break that horn of the ram.

127 And I saw till a great sword was given to the sheep, and the sheep proceeded against all the beasts of the field to slay them, and all the beasts and the birds of the heaven fled before their face.

128 And I saw that man, who wrote the book according to the command of the Lord, till he opened that book concerning the destruction which those twelve last shepherds had wrought, and showed that they had destroyed much more than their predecessors, before the Lord of the sheep.

129 And I saw till the Lord of the sheep came unto them and took in His hand the staff of His wrath, and smote the earth, and the earth clave asunder, and all the beasts and all the birds of the heaven fell from among those sheep, and were swallowed up in the earth and it covered them.

130 And I saw till a throne was erected in the pleasant land, and the Lord of the sheep sat Himself thereon, and the other took the sealed books and opened those books before the Lord of the sheep.

131 And the Lord called those men the seven first white ones, and commanded that they should bring before Him, beginning with the first star which led the way, all the stars whose privy members were like those of horses, and they brought them all before Him.

132 And He said to that man who wrote before Him, being one of those seven white ones, and said unto him: "Take those seventy shepherds to whom I delivered the sheep, and who taking them on their own authority slew more than I commanded them."

133 And behold they were all bound, I saw, and they all stood before Him.

134 And the judgement was held first over the stars, and they were judged and found guilty, and went to the place of condemnation, and they were cast into an abyss, full of fire and flaming, and full of pillars of fire.

135 And those seventy shepherds were judged and found guilty, and they were cast into that fiery abyss.

136 And I saw at that time how a like abyss was opened in the midst of the earth, full of fire, and they brought those blinded sheep, and they were all judged and found guilty and cast into this fiery abyss, and they burned; now this abyss was to the right of that house.

137 And I saw those sheep burning and their bones burning.

138 And I stood up to see till they folded up that old house; and carried off all the pillars, and all the beams and ornaments of the house were at the same time folded up with it, and they carried it off and laid it in a place in the south of the land.

139 And I saw till the Lord of the sheep brought a new house greater and loftier than that first, and set it up in the place of the first which had been folded up: all its pillars were new, and its ornaments were new and larger than those of the first, the old one which He had taken away, and all the sheep were within it.

140 And I saw all the sheep which had been left, and all the beasts on the earth, and all the birds of the heaven, falling down and doing homage to those sheep and making petition to and obeying them in every thing.

141 And thereafter those three who were clothed in white and had seized me by my hand who had taken me up before, and the hand of that ram also seizing hold of me, they took me up and set me down in the midst of those sheep before the judgement took place.

142 And those sheep were all white, and their wool was abundant and clean.

143 And all that had been destroyed and dispersed, and all the beasts of the field, and all the birds of the heaven, assembled in that house, and the Lord of the sheep rejoiced with great joy because they were all good and had returned to His house.

144 And I saw till they laid down that sword, which had been given to the sheep, and they brought it back into the house, and it was sealed before the presence of the Lord, and all the sheep were invited into that house, but it held them not.

145 And the eyes of them all were opened, and they saw the good, and there was not one among them that did not see.

146 And I saw that that house was large and broad and very full.

147 And I saw that a white bull was born, with large horns and all the beasts of the field and all the birds of the air feared him and made petition to him all the time.

148 And I saw till all their generations were transformed, and they all became white bulls; and the first among them became a lamb, and that lamb became a great animal and had great black horns on its head; and the Lord of the sheep rejoiced over it and over all the oxen.

149 And I slept in their midst: and I awoke and saw everything.

150 This is the vision which I saw while I slept, and I awoke and blessed the Lord of righteousness and gave Him glory.

151 Then I wept with a great weeping and my tears stayed not till I could no longer endure it: when I saw, they flowed on account of what I had seen; for everything shall come and be fulfilled, and all the deeds of men in their order were shown to me.

152 On that night I remembered the first dream, and because of it I wept and was troubled—because I had seen that vision.

Book 5: Epistle of Enoch

Chapter 1

The Guidance of Enoch

1 And now, my son Methuselah, call to me all thy brothers and gather together to me all the sons of thy mother; For the word calls me, and the spirit is poured out upon me that I may show you everything that shall befall you for ever.

2 And there upon Methuselah went and summoned to him all his brothers and assembled his relatives.

3 And he spake unto all the children of righteousness and said: "Hear, ye sons of Enoch, all the words of your father, and hearken aright to the voice of my mouth for I exhort you and say unto you, beloved:

4 Love uprightness and walk therein.
And draw not nigh to uprightness with a double heart,
And associate not with those of a double heart,
But walk in righteousness, my sons.

5 And it shall guide you on good paths, and righteousness shall be your companion.

6 For I know that violence must increase on the earth,
And a great chastisement be executed on the earth,
And all unrighteousness come to an end:
Yea, it shall be cut off from its roots,
And its whole structure be destroyed.

7 And unrighteousness shall again be consummated on the earth,
And all the deeds of unrighteousness and of violence,
And transgression shall prevail in a twofold degree.

8 And when sin and unrighteousness and blasphemy,
And violence in all kinds of deeds increase,
And apostasy and transgression and uncleanness increase,
A great chastisement shall come from heaven upon all these,
And the holy Lord will come forth with wrath and chastisement,

To execute judgement on earth.

9 In those days violence shall be cut off from its roots,
And the roots of unrighteousness together with deceit,
And they shall be destroyed from under heaven.

10 And all the idols of the heathen shall be abandoned,
And the temples burned with fire,
And they shall remove them from the whole earth,
And they shall be cast into the judgement of fire,
And shall perish in wrath and in grievous judgement for ever.

11 And the righteous shall arise from their sleep,
And wisdom shall arise and be given unto them.

12 And after that the roots of unrighteousness shall be cut off, and the sinners shall be destroyed by the sword and the blasphemers destroyed in every place, and those who plan violence and those who commit blasphemy shall perish by the sword.

13 And now I tell you, my sons, and show you the paths of righteousness and the paths of violence.

14 Yea, I will show them to you again that ye may know what will come to pass.

15 And now, listen to me, my sons,
And walk in the paths of righteousness,
And walk not in the paths of violence;
For all who walk in the paths of unrighteousness shall perish for ever."

Chapter 2

Wisdom of Enoch

1 The book written by Enoch – Enoch indeed wrote this complete doctrine of wisdom, praised of all men and a judge of all the earth for all my children who shall dwell on the earth. And for the future generations who shall observe uprightness and peace.

2 "Let not your spirit be troubled on account of the times; For the Holy and Great One has appointed days for all things.

3 And the righteous one shall arise from sleep, shall arise and walk in the paths of righteousness and all his path and conversation shall be in eternal goodness and grace.

4 He will be gracious to the righteous and give him eternal uprightness, and He will give him power so that he shall be with goodness and righteousness.

5 And he shall walk in eternal light.

6 And sin shall perish in darkness for ever and shall no more be seen from that day for evermore."

7 And after that Enoch both gave and began to recount from the books.

8 And Enoch said: "Concerning the children of righteousness and concerning the elect of the world, and concerning the plant of uprightness, I will speak these things.

9 Yea, I Enoch will declare unto you, my sons: According to that which appeared to me in the heavenly vision, and which I have known through the word of the holy angels, and have learnt from the heavenly tablets."

10 And Enoch began to recount from the books and said:

11 "I was born the seventh in the first week, while judgement and righteousness still endured.

12 And after me there shall arise in the second week great wickedness, and deceit shall have sprung up; and in it there shall be the first end.

13 And in it a man shall be saved; and after it is ended unrighteousness shall grow up, and a law shall be made for the sinners.

14 And after that in the third week at its close a man shall be elected as the plant of righteous judgement and his posterity shall become the plant of righteousness for evermore.

15 And after that in the fourth week, at its close, Visions of the holy and righteous shall be seen, and a law for all generations and an enclosure shall be made for them.

16 And after that in the fifth week, at its close, the house of glory and dominion shall be built for ever.

17 And after that in the sixth week all who live in it shall be blinded, and the hearts of all of them shall godlessly forsake wisdom.

18 And in it a man shall ascend; and at its close the house of dominion shall be burnt with fire, and the whole race of the chosen root shall be dispersed.

19 And after that in the seventh week shall an apostate generation arise, and many shall be its deeds, and all its deeds shall be apostate.

20 And at its close shall be elected, the elect righteous of the eternal plant of righteousness to receive sevenfold instruction concerning all His creation.

21 For who is there of all the children of men that is able to hear the voice of the Holy One without being troubled?

22 And who can think His thoughts?

23 And who is there that can behold all the works of heaven?

24 And how should there be one who could behold the heaven, and who is there that could understand the things of heaven and see a soul or a spirit and could tell thereof, or ascend and see all their ends and think them or do like them?

25 And who is there of all men that could know what is the breadth and the length of the earth, and to whom has been shown the measure of all of them?

26 Or is there any one who could discern the length of the heaven and how great is its height, and upon what it is founded, and how great is the number of the stars, and where all the luminaries rest?

27 And now I say unto you, my sons, love righteousness and walk therein; for the paths of righteousness are worthy of acceptation but the paths of unrighteousness shall suddenly be destroyed and vanish.

28 And to certain men of a generation shall the paths of violence and of death be revealed and they shall hold themselves afar from them, and shall not follow them.

29 And now I say unto you the righteous: Walk not in the paths of wickedness, nor in the paths of death, and draw not nigh to them, lest ye be destroyed.

30 But seek and choose for yourselves righteousness and an elect life, and walk in the paths of peace, and ye shall live and prosper.

31 And hold fast my words in the thoughts of your hearts and suffer them not to be effaced from your hearts; For I know that sinners will tempt men to evilly –entreat wisdom so that no place may be found for her, and no manner of temptation may minish.

32 Woe to those who build unrighteousness and oppression and lay deceit as a foundation; For they shall be suddenly overthrown, and they shall have no peace.

33 Woe to those who build their houses with sin; For from all their foundations shall they be overthrown and by the sword shall they fall.

34 And those who acquire gold and silver in judgement suddenly shall perish.

35 Woe to you, ye rich, for ye have trusted in your riches and from your riches shall ye depart because ye have not remembered the Most High in the days of your riches.

36 Ye have committed blasphemy and unrighteousness, and have become ready for the day of slaughter, and the day of darkness and the day of the great judgement.

37 Thus I speak and declare unto you: He who hath created you will overthrow you and for your fall there shall be no compassion, and your Creator will rejoice at your destruction.

38 And your righteous ones in those days shall be a reproach to the sinners and the godless.

39 Oh that mine eyes were a cloud of waters that I might weep over you, and pour down my tears as a cloud of waters: That so I might rest from my trouble of heart!

40 Who has permitted you to practice reproaches and wickedness?

41 And so judgement shall overtake you, sinners.

42 Fear not the sinners, ye righteous; For again will the Lord deliver them into your hands, that ye may execute judgement upon them according to your desires.

43 Woe to you who fulminate anathemas which cannot be reversed: Healing shall therefore be far from you because of your sins.

44 Woe to you who requite your neighbor with evil; For ye shall be requited according to your works.

45 Woe to you, lying witnesses, and to those who weigh out injustice, for suddenly shall ye perish.

46 Woe to you, sinners, for ye persecute the righteous; for ye shall be delivered up and persecuted because of injustice, and heavy shall its yoke be upon you.

47 Be hopeful, ye righteous; for suddenly shall the sinners perish before you, and ye shall have lordship over them according to your desires.

48 And in the day of the tribulation of the sinners your children shall mount and rise as eagles, and higher than the vultures will be your nest, and ye shall ascend and enter the crevices of the earth, and the clefts of the rock for ever as coneys before the unrighteous, and the sirens shall sigh because of you and weep.

49 Wherefore fear not, ye that have suffered; For healing shall be your portion, and a bright light shall enlighten you, and the voice of rest ye shall hear from heaven.

50 Woe unto you, ye sinners, for your riches make you appear like the righteous but your hearts convict you of being sinners, and this fact shall be a testimony against you for a memorial of evil deeds.

51 Woe to you who devour the finest of the wheat and drink wine in large bowls, and tread under foot the lowly with your might.

52 Woe to you who drink water from every fountain; For suddenly shall ye be consumed and wither away because ye have forsaken the fountain of life.

53 Woe to you who work unrighteousness and deceit and blasphemy: It shall be a memorial against you for evil.

54 Woe to you, ye mighty, who with might oppress the righteous; For the day of your destruction is coming.

55 In those days many and good days shall come to the righteous—in the day of your judgement."

Chapter 3

Wisdom of Enoch

1 Believe, ye righteous, that the sinners will become a shame and perish in the day of unrighteousness.

2 Be it known unto you that the Most High is mindful of your destruction and the angels of heaven rejoice over your destruction.

3 What will ye do, ye sinners, and whither will ye flee on that day of judgement when ye hear the voice of the prayer of the righteous?

4 Yea, ye shall fare like unto them against whom this word shall be a testimony: "Ye have been companions of sinners."

5 And in those days the prayer of the righteous shall reach unto the Lord and for you the days of your judgement shall come.

6 And all the words of your unrighteousness shall be read out before the Great Holy One and your faces shall be covered with shame, and He will reject every work which is grounded on unrighteousness.

7 Woe to you, ye sinners, who live on the mid ocean and on the dry land whose remembrance is evil against you.

8 Woe to you who acquire silver and gold in unrighteousness and say: "We have become rich with riches and have possessions and have acquired everything we have desired. And now let us do what we purposed: For we have gathered silver and many are the husbandmen in our houses. And our granaries are full as with water."

9 Yea and like water your lies shall flow away for your riches shall not abide but speedily ascend from you; For ye have acquired it all in unrighteousness and ye shall be given over to a great curse.

10 And now I swear unto you, to the wise and to the foolish for ye shall have manifold experiences on the earth.

11 For ye men shall put on more adornments than a woman and colored garments more than a virgin; In royalty and in grandeur and in power, and in silver and in gold and in purple, and in splendor and in food they shall be poured out as water.

12 Therefore they shall be wanting in doctrine and wisdom and they shall perish thereby together with their possessions.

13 And with all their glory and their splendour, and in shame and in slaughter and in great destitution their spirits shall be cast into the furnace of fire.

14 I have sworn unto you, ye sinners, as a mountain has not become a slave and a hill does not become the handmaid of a woman.

15 Even so, sin has not been sent upon the earth but man of himself has created it, and under a great curse shall they fall who commit it.

16 And barrenness has not been given to the woman but on account of the deeds of her own hands she dies without children.

17 I have sworn unto you, ye sinners, by the Holy Great One; That all your evil deeds are revealed in the heavens and that none of your deeds of oppression are covered and hidden.

18 And do not think in your spirit nor say in your heart that ye do not know and that ye do not see that every sin is every day recorded in heaven in the presence of the Most High.

19 From henceforth ye know that all your oppression wherewith ye oppress is written down every day till the day of your judgement.

20 Woe to you, ye fools, for through your folly shall ye perish: And ye transgress against the wise, and so good hap shall not be your portion.

21 And now, know ye that ye are prepared for the day of destruction: Wherefore do not hope to live, ye sinners, but ye shall depart and die; for ye know no ransom; for ye are prepared for the day of the great judgement, for the day of tribulation and great shame for your spirits.

22 Woe to you, ye obstinate of heart, who work wickedness and eat blood: Whence have ye good things to eat and to drink and to be filled? From all the good things which the Lord the Most High has placed in abundance on the earth; therefore ye shall have no peace.

23 Woe to you who love the deeds of unrighteousness: Wherefore do ye hope for good hap unto yourselves? Know that ye shall be delivered into the hands of the righteous, and they shall cut off your necks and slay you, and have no mercy upon you.

24 Woe to you who rejoice in the tribulation of the righteous; For no grave shall be dug for you.

25 Woe to you who set at nought the words of the righteous; For ye shall have no hope of life.

26 Woe to you who write down lying and godless words; For they write down their lies that men may hear them and act godlessly towards neighbors.

27 Therefore they shall have no peace but die a sudden death.

28 Woe to you who work godlessness and glory in lying and extol them: Ye shall perish, and no happy life shall be yours.

29 Woe to them who pervert the words of uprightness and transgress the eternal law, and transform themselves into what they were not into sinners: They shall be trodden under foot upon the earth.

30 In those days make ready, ye righteous, to raise your prayers as a memorial, and place them as a testimony before the angels that they may place the sin of the sinners for a memorial before the Most High.

31 In those days the nations shall be stirred up and the families of the nations shall arise on the day of destruction.

32 And in those days the destitute shall go forth and carry off their children and they shall abandon them, so that their children shall perish through them: Yea, they shall abandon their children sucklings, and not return to them and shall have no pity on their beloved ones.

33 And again I swear to you, ye sinners, that sin is prepared for a day of unceasing bloodshed.

34 And they who worship stones, and grave images of gold and silver and wood and clay, and those who worship impure spirits and demons, and all kinds of idols not according to knowledge, shall get no manner of help from them.

35 And they shall become godless by reason of the folly of their hearts and their eyes shall be blinded through the fear of their hearts and through visions in their dreams.

36 Through these they shall become godless and fearful; For they shall have wrought all their work in a lie and shall have worshiped a stone: Therefore in an instant shall they perish.

37 But in those days blessed are all they who accept the words of wisdom, and understand them, and observe the paths of the Most High, and walk in the path of His righteousness, and become not godless with the godless; For they shall be saved.

38 Woe to you who spread evil to your neighbors; For you shall be slain in Sheol.

39 Woe to you who make deceitful and false measures, and who cause bitterness on the earth; For they shall thereby be utterly consumed.

40 Woe to you who build your houses through the grievous toil of others, and all their building materials are the bricks and stones of sin; I tell you ye shall have no peace.

41 Woe to them who reject the measure and eternal heritage of their fathers and whose souls follow after idols; For they shall have no rest.

42 Woe to them who work unrighteousness and help oppression, and slay their neighbours until the day of the great judgement.

43 For He shall cast down your glory and bring affliction on your hearts, and shall arouse His fierce indignation and destroy you all with the sword; And all the holy and righteous shall remember your sins.

44 And in those days in one place the fathers together with their sons shall be smitten and brothers one with another shall fall in death till the streams flow with their blood.

45 For a man shall not withhold his hand from slaying his sons and his sons sons, and the sinner shall not withhold his hand from his honored brother: From dawn till sunset they shall slay one another.

46 And the horse shall walk up to the breast in the blood of sinners and the chariot shall be submerged to its height.

47 In those days the angels shall descend into the secret places and gather together into one place all those who brought down sin and the Most High will arise on that day of judgement to execute great judgement amongst sinners.

48 And over all the righteous and holy He will appoint guardians from amongst the holy angels to guard them as the apple of an eye until He makes an end of all wickedness and all sin, and though the righteous sleep a long sleep, they have nought to fear.

49 And the children of the earth shall see the wise in security, and shall understand all the words of this book, and recognize that their riches shall not be able to save them in the overthrow of their sins.

50 Woe to you, Sinners, on the day of strong anguish, Ye who afflict the righteous and burn them with fire: Ye shall be requited according to your works.

51 Woe to you, ye obstinate of heart, who watch in order to devise wickedness: Therefore shall fear come upon you and there shall be none to help you.

52 Woe to you, ye sinners, on account of the words of your mouth, and on account of the deeds of your hands which your godlessness as wrought; In blazing flames burning worse than fire shall ye burn.

53 And now, know ye that from the angels He will inquire as to your deeds in heaven, from the sun and from the moon and from the stars in reference to your sins because upon the earth ye execute judgement on the righteous.

54 And He will summon to testify against you every cloud and mist and dew and rain; for they shall all be withheld because of you from descending upon you, and they shall be mindful of your sins.

55 And now give presents to the rain that it be not withheld from descending upon you, nor yet the dew, when it has received gold and silver from you that it may descend.

56 When the hoarfrost and snow with their chilliness, and all the snow storms with all their plagues fall upon you, in those days ye shall not be able to stand before them.

Chapter 4

Wisdom of Enoch

1 Observe the heaven, ye children of heaven, and every work of the Most High, and fear ye Him and work no evil in His presence.

2 If He closes the windows of heaven, and withholds the rain and the dew from descending on the earth on your account, what will ye do then?

3 And if He sends His anger upon you because of your deeds, ye cannot petition Him; for ye spake proud and insolent words against His righteousness: therefore ye shall have no peace.

4 And see ye not the sailors of the ships, how their ships are tossed to and fro by the waves, and are shaken by the winds, and are in sore trouble?

5 And therefore do they fear because all their goodly possessions go into the sea with them, and they have evil forebodings of heart that the sea will swallow them and they will perish therein.

6 Are not the entire sea and all its waters, and all its movements, the work of the Most High, and has He not set limits to its doings, and confined it throughout by the sand?

7 And at His reproof it is afraid and dries up, and all its fish die and all that is in it; But ye sinners that are on the earth fear Him not.

8 Has He not made the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein?

9 Who has given understanding and wisdom to everything that moves on the earth and in the sea?

10 Do not the sailors of the ships fear the sea? Yet sinners fear not the Most High.

11 In those days when He hath brought a grievous fire upon you, whither will ye flee, and where will ye find deliverance?

12 And when He launches forth His Word against you will you not be affrighted and fear? And all the luminaries shall be affrighted with great fear and all the earth shall be affrighted and tremble and be alarmed.

13 And all the angels shall execute their commandst and shall seek to hide themselves from the presence of the Great Glory, and the children of earth shall tremble and quake; and ye sinners shall be cursed for ever, and ye shall have no peace.

14 Fear ye not, ye souls of the righteous and be hopeful ye that have died in righteousness.

15 And grieve not if your soul into Sheol has descended in grief, and that in your life your body fared not according to your goodness but wait for the day of the judgement of sinners and for the day of cursing and chastisement.

16 And yet when ye die the sinners speak over you: "As we die, so die the righteous, and what benefit do they reap for their deeds? Behold, even as we, so do they die in grief and darkness and what have they more than we? From henceforth we are equal. And what will they receive and what will they see for ever? Behold, they too have died, And henceforth for ever shall they see no light."

17 I tell you, "Ye sinners, ye are content to eat and drink, and rob and sin, and strip men naked, and acquire wealth and see good days. Have ye seen the righteous how their end falls out, that no manner of violence is found in them till their death?

18 Nevertheless they perished and became as though they had not been, and their spirits descended into Sheol in tribulation."

Chapter 5

Wisdom of Enoch

1 Another book which Enoch wrote for his son Methuselah and for those who will come after him, and keep the law in the last days.

2 Ye who have done good shall wait for those days till an end is made of those who work evil; and an end of the might of the transgressors.

3 And wait ye indeed till sin has passed away, for their names shall be blotted out of the book of life and out of the holy books, and their seed shall be destroyed for ever, and their spirits shall be slain, and they shall cry and make lamentation in a place that is a chaotic wilderness, and in the fire shall they burn; for there is no earth there.

4 And I saw there something like an invisible cloud; for by reason of its depth I could not look over, and I saw a flame of fire blazing brightly, and things like shining mountains circling and sweeping to and fro.

5 And I asked one of the holy angels who was with me and said unto him: "What is this shining thing? For it is not a heaven but only the flame of a blazing fire, and the voice of weeping and crying and lamentation and strong pain."

6 And he said unto me: "This place which thou seest—here are cast the spirits of sinners and blasphemers, and of those who work wickedness, and of those who pervert everything that the Lord hath spoken through the mouth of the prophets – the things that shall be.

7 For some of them are written and inscribed above in the heaven, in order that the angels may read them and know that which shall befall the sinners, and the spirits of the humble, and of those who have afflicted their bodies, and been recompensed by God.

8 And of those who have been put to shame by wicked men: Who love God and loved neither gold nor silver nor any of the good things which are in the world, but gave over their bodies to torture.

9 Who, since they came into being, longed not after earthly food, but regarded everything as a passing breath, and lived accordingly, and the Lord tried them much, and their spirits were found pure so that they should bless His name.

10 And all the blessings destined for them I have recounted in the books.

11 And he hath assigned them their recompense, because they have been found to be such as loved heaven more than their life in the world, and though they were trodden under foot of wicked men and experienced abuse and reviling from them and were put to shame, yet they blessed Me.

12 And now I will summon the spirits of the good who belong to the generation of light, and I will transform those who were born in darkness, who in the flesh were not recompensed with such honor as their faithfulness deserved.

13 And I will bring forth in shining light those who have loved My holy name, and I will seat each on the throne of his honor.

14 And they shall be resplendent for times without number; for righteousness is the judgement of God; for to the faithful He will give faithfulness in the habitation of upright paths.

15 And they shall see those who were, born in darkness led into darkness, while the righteous shall be resplendent.

16 And the sinners shall cry aloud and see them resplendent, and they indeed will go where days and seasons are prescribed for them."

Chapter 6

Revelation of Enoch

1 I swear unto you that in heaven the angels remember you for good before the glory of the Great One: and your names are written before the glory of the Great One.

2 Be hopeful; for aforetime ye were put to shame through ill and affliction; but now ye shall shine as the lights of heaven, ye shall shine and ye shall be seen, and the portals of heaven shall be opened to you.

3 And in your cry, cry for judgement, and it shall appear to you; for all your tribulation shall be visited on the rulers, and on all who helped those who plundered you.

4 Be hopeful, and cast not away your hopes for ye shall have great joy as the angels of heaven.

5 What shall ye be obliged to do?

6 Ye shall not have to hide on the day of the great judgement and ye shall not be found as sinners, and the eternal judgement shall be far from you for all the generations of the world.

7 And now fear not, ye righteous, when ye see the sinners growing strong and prospering in their ways, be not companions with them, but keep afar from their violence; For ye shall become companions of the hosts of heaven.

8 And, although the sinners say: "All our sins shall not be searched out and be written down," nevertheless they shall write down all your sins every day.

9 And now I show unto you that light and darkness, day and night, see all your sins.

10 Be not godless in your hearts, and lie not and alter not the words of uprightness, nor charge with lying the words of the Holy Great One, nor take account of your idols; for all your lying and all your godlessness issue not in righteousness but in great sin.

11 And now I know this mystery, that sinners will alter and pervert the words of righteousness in many ways, and will speak wicked words, and lie, and practice great deceits, and write books concerning their words.

12 But when they write down truthfully all my words in their languages, and do not change or minish ought from my words but write them all down truthfully – all that I first testified concerning them.

13 Then, I know another mystery, that books will be given to the righteous and the wise to become a cause of joy and uprightness and much wisdom.

14 And to them shall the books be given, and they shall believe in them and rejoice over them and then shall all the righteous who have learnt therefrom all the paths of uprightness be recompensed.

15 In those days the Lord bade to summon and testify to the children of earth concerning their wisdom: "Show unto them; for ye are their guides and a recompense over the whole earth.

16 For I and My son will be united with them for ever in the paths of uprightness in their lives; and ye shall have peace: rejoice, ye children of uprightness. Amen."

The Dead Sea Scrolls

This chart showing a listing of what scrolls were found in the Qumran caves is important to note in regards to the texts found therein as they include an associated body of work that is one in the same. Parts of the Book of Giants were found regarding Enoch in the caves as well. It would appear that whoever the scribe or group of people who stored away these scrolls, intended them for safe keeping as they represent a body of knowledge that has, curiously enough, been largely fought since their inception. When a researcher gets to a certain point they tend to realize that some information and studies surpass the understanding of the intellect alone but rather sequesters the heart to comprehend such mysteries of which the mind is unwilling.

The Book of the Giants

The Book of the Giants was published in not less than six or seven languages. From the original Syriac the Greek and Middle Persian versions were made. The Sogdian edition was probably derived from the Middle Persian, the Uygur from the Sogdian. There is no trace of a Parthian text. The book may have existed in Coptic. The presence of names such as Sām and Narīmān in the Arabic version proves that it had been translated from the Middle Persian. To the few surviving fragments (texts A-G) I have added two excerpts, the more important of which (H) probably derives from a Syriac epitome of the book. Naturally, Manichæan authors quoted the book frequently, but there is only one direct citation by a non-Manichæan writer (text O). With the exception of text O, all the passages referring to the Book of the Giants (texts J-T) go back to Syriac writings (apparently). They are, therefore, to be treated as quotations from the Syriac edition. E.g. the Parthian text N is not the product of a Parthian writer who might have employed a Parthian version of the book, but was translated from a Syriac treatise whose author cited the Syriac text.

In their journey across Central Asia the stories of the Book of the Giants were influenced by local traditions. Thus, the translation of Ohya as Sām had in its train the introduction of myths appertaining to that Iranian hero; this explains the "immortality" of Sā(h)m according to text I. The country of Aryān-Vēžan = Airyana Vaējah, in text G (26), is a similar innovation. The "Kögmän mountains" in text B may reflect the "Mount Hermon". The progeny of the fallen angels was confined in thirty-six towns (text S). Owing to the introduction of the Mount Sumeru, this number was changed (in Sogdiana) to thirty-two (text G, 22): "the heaven of Indra . . . is situated between the four peaks (cf. G 21) of the Meru, and consists of thirty-two cities of devas" (Eitel, Handb. Chinese Buddhism, 148, on Trayastrimśat).

In the translation parentheses are employed for explanatory remarks.

Bolded text of the translation fragments are of great importance and correlation with the books of Enoch.

NOTE: The text from multiple of these manuscripts is badly damaged but between the various versions of the book in different languages we have a general picture of what the Book of Giants is discussing if the book's very title isn't enough for the reader alone. Logical estimates according to the historical texts which tell of these giants living, seem to be around 3500BC and the manuscripts (presumably) being copied several times throughout the ages (considering any scribe would find copying an epic like this more than just a "great job," they probably did it for free; which explains why so many manuscripts exist of the book) are more than likely around 3000+ years old.

[INTRODUCTION]

(Frg. c) . . . hard . . . arrow . . . bow, he that . . . Sām said: "Blessed be . . . had [he ?] seen this, he would not have died." Then Shahmīzād said to Sām, his [son]: "All that Māhawai . . ., is spoilt (?)." Thereupon he said to . . . "We are . . . until (10) . . . and . . . (13) . . . that are in (?) the fiery hell (?) . . . As my father, Virōgdād, was . . ." Shahmīzād said: "It is true what he says. He says one of thousands of giants. For one of thousands . . .". Sām thereupon began . . . Māhawai, too, in many places . . . (20) until to that place he might escape (1) and . . .

(Frg. j) . . . Virōgdād . . . Hōbābīš (a giant) robbed Ahr (a mortal man) of Naxtag, his wife. Thereupon the giants began to kill each other and [to abduct their wives]. The creatures, too, began to kill each other. Sām . . . before the sun, one hand in the air, the other (30) . . . whatever he obtained, to his brother . . . imprisoned . . . (34) . . . over Taxtag. To the angels . . . from heaven. Taxtag to . . . Taxtag threw (or: was thrown) into the water. Finally (?) . . . in his sleep Taxtag saw three signs, [one portending . . .], one woe and flight, and one . . . annihilation. Narīmān saw a gar[den full of] (40) trees in rows. Two hundred . . . came out, the trees. . . .

(Frg. l) Enoch, the apostle, . . . [gave] a message to [the demons and their] children: To you . . . not peace. [The judgment on you is] that you shall be bound for the sins you have committed. You shall see the destruction of your children. ruling for a hundred and twenty [years] . . . Thereupon Narīmān . . . said . . . (86) . . . And (in) another place I saw those that were weeping for the ruin that had befallen them, and whose cries and laments rose up to heaven. (90) And also I saw another place [where there were] tyrants and rulers . . . in great number, who had lived in sin and evil deeds, when . . . (Note here that this passage is in the style of Enoch and is likely one of the many books Enoch gave to Methuselah to "preserve even unto future generations.")

RECONSTRUCTED SUMMARY OF THE

BOOK OF GIANTS

CHAPTER ONE: The Watchers are grieved over the sins of mankind, and petition God to let them descend to the earth to teach the sons of men righteousness and to rebuke them. God grants their petition. Azazel is sent to prepare the way for the Watchers. Azazel prepares the way, and the Watchers descend and they begin to teach them righteousness and justice. Enoch is chosen by the Watchers to serve as a mediator between men and the Watchers.

CHAPTER TWO: The daughters of men lust after the attractive Watchers, and seduce them; Azazel, with Shemhazah's help, instigates the fall of the 200 Watchers and their followers. The Watchers fall from their glorious nature, and become bound to fleshly bodies as a consequence of their joining sexually to flesh. They begin to reveal to their wives heavenly and earthly secrets.

CHAPTER THREE: The Watchers have their own families with humans and also with animals, and those that were defiled by them give birth to Giants. These Giants begin to grow to massive sizes, and become full of greed and corruption. They kill many dragons and the sons of Cain worship them for protecting them. The children of Cain are no longer able to sustain the Giants with their offerings of vegetables and grain so the Giants turn on them and kill them and begin to eat them. The Giants develop a taste for blood and begin eating any moving thing including each other. The Watchers teach some of the secrets they were appointed over to keep from the sons of men. The Giants imitate the sins of their fathers, and take for themselves wives and animal mates, and they beget Naphil and Eliyo. God seeing all this wickedness, sends Enoch to declare to Shemhazah and the fallen Watchers that they will be soon punished for causing the earth to be corrupted.

CHAPTER FOUR: Enoch is sent by the righteous Watchers to rebuke the fallen Watchers and to declare to them their doom. He comes to Azazel first and condemns him as the principal sinner amongst the fallen Watchers. He then summons Mahaway to him and has him gather all the Watchers for his message. Enoch enters the assembly of the fallen Watchers, and gives them the message of doom. They weep and lament and beg Enoch to present to God their petition for mercy and a second chance - to restore them to their former glory and that their sons might have eternal life. They required a messenger to talk to God because God had since stopped talking to them after their transgression. Enoch hears their case and tells them he will talk to God on their behalf.

CHAPTER FIVE: Enoch, having written the petition of the fallen Watchers and discussing it with God, receives a vision from God as a response, and Enoch writes the vision for the fallen Watchers in a book and gives the book to them. Enoch declares to them they will not be forgiven, and describes for them his ascent into the presence of God, where he was given a message for them.

CHAPTER SIX: Enoch received from God an answer for the fallen Watchers: he is told to tell them why they were not given permission to have sex, and what their punishment is because of it, and he foretells unto them the miserable doom and fate of the offspring of the fallen Watchers, and foretells to them that they will become evil spirits and will not have eternal life but that their years will be no more than 500. After hearing this the fallen Watchers and their Giant sons take up stones to throw at Enoch but the holy Watchers shield Enoch from their deadly blows and lift Enoch up into the heavens to escape their earthly wrath against Enoch the messenger. (This is perhaps the first time that anyone ever attempted to "kill the messenger.")

CHAPTER SEVEN: Hobabesh kidnaps another Giant's wife, and starts a war amongst the Giants. When the war was ending, one of Ohyah's companions was killed by Mahaway. Ohyah mourns with his father Shemhazah about his friend, and they curse Mahaway. Mahaway defends himself, appealing to the words of his father Baraqel as justification. Ohyah gets angry and attempts to kill Mahaway, but Gilgamesh and the other Giants prevent Ohyah from doing so, and they ward off Ohyah's murderous intentions. (This is where we learn about Gilgamesh slaying dragons, or dinosaurs and being a hero for the normal sized men of that time.)

CHAPTER EIGHT: Gilgamesh has a dream, but interprets it as indicating the Giants will not be punished. The Giants celebrate but aren't entirely convinced, and subsequent to this, Ohyah and Hahyah have dreams of their own. They seek the interpretation of the dreams, but none of the Giants can declare to them what the meaning of their dreams are, so the Giants have Mahaway go to Enoch in order to learn from him the meaning of the dreams and to learn what the fate of the Giants will be. Mahaway flies to Enoch, and Enoch greets Mahaway, and Mahaway explains why he came, and Enoch proceeds to give Mahaway the answer, and he writes it down in a tablet, and gives a second tablet as well to Mahaway intended for Shemhazah and the Watchers, and he sends Mahaway back to the Giants with the two tablets.

CHAPTER NINE: Mahaway flies back to the Giants with the two tablets. And Mahaway tells them of his journey to Enoch and of Enoch saving his life, and tells them that Enoch had given him two tablets and revealed everything they had wanted to know from him. The first tablet is read. The Giants discuss the contents of the first tablet after it is finished being read, and realize they are doomed, and they lament over their miserable fate. They then have the second tablet read. Enoch tells Shemhazah that he and the other fallen Watchers will soon be bound, but that the Giants should repent and pray, for they still have a chance to benefit from reformation of their lives.

CHAPTER TEN: Shemhazah urges his two sons Ohyah and Hahyah to reform their lives in the hopes that they will be yet given mercy. Ohyah and Hahyah listen to the advice of Shemhazah and attempt to convince the Giants to reform themselves, teaching them through proverbs where true success is found. The Giants seek to reform their lives. Enoch is sent to declare to the Watchers that within 120 years, they would all be bound in a dark prison of punishment for their sins, and that their sons would all be destroyed from off the face of the earth. Noah begins to build the Ark. Around this time, only Azazel is bound.

CHAPTER ELEVEN: The Giants lament over Azazel being bound, and then they and the Watchers, seeing that they were not bound or destroyed vaunted themselves. When this happened, Gabriel the archangel was sent to incite the Giants to commit civil war against themselves and their offspring, and they all began to kill each other, and the Watchers beheld the destruction of their families. When the war of the Giants ends with few survivors, all of the fallen Watchers are subsequently bound by the angels into the dark prison of punishment.

CHAPTER TWELVE: Noah goes into the Ark, and the flood comes, and begins to kill all life, but not all the Giants are killed by the flood. In order to fix this, Yehuwah sends the Leviathan, and the Leviathan begins to kill all the Giants and their sons who survived. Ohyah alone survives the attacks of the Leviathan, and kills the Leviathan. The archangel Raphael is sent by Yehuwah in order to punish Ohyah for killing the Leviathan, and to finally restore the earth to purity. Ohyah is killed and bound in the dark prison of punishment with the fallen Watchers.

The flood being over, and the Giants and their sons still remaining on the earth without bodies, become evil spirits, and are given a law by an angel of Yehuwah how they are to live if they want to avoid being sent to the dark prison of punishment that the Watchers were sent to. And this explains how the Nephilim came to be on the earth after the flood.

Evidence of Giants

Fossilized remains of giant human skeletons have been found all around the world. Ranging in size, many of them have been recovered with giant weapons, armor, and strange artifacts dubbed OOPARTS (Out of Place Artifacts). The current worldview model for humanity doesn't support the existence of a giant human race (according to evolution). These enormous ancient human beings were worshipped throughout various world religions of which tell of many of them slaying dragons. It is important to note that the term "dragon" was replaced by the word "dinosaur" in 1871 by Sir. Edward Owen. Hence, any reference in ancient literature to dragons, is a reference to dinosaurs according to the ontology of the word change associations involved. The following is a brief report of recovered giant fossilized human remains of which most end up in private collections of the elite of society save a few who have found their way to museums around the world. Although in recent years many of these museums have been selling these remains to private collectors for large sums of money their discoveries remain documented and undisputed by reasonable scholars without hidden agendas. Take a look at the evidence and decide for yourself if there were "Giants on the earth in those days." - Genesis 6:4

Perhaps the best place to start off with providing evidence of the existence of giant human beings is Crete. Crete was once known in old times as Arcadia. The Greek historian Herodotus had written about another historian, Eustathius who had said that Arcadia was once called Gigantis, or "The Land of Giants," because of the giants who had formerly lived there. It was also known as the Greek Garden of Eden. This connection between Arcadia, giants, and to the Garden of Eden makes sense, because the 4th century Roman author Servius in his Commentary on the Eneid says, that the Arcadians often reached the age of 300 years.—Grotius.

Several of the world's most influential authors all throughout history verify these accounts of giants, gods, and the island of Crete. People such as Diodorus Siculus, Pliny, Strabo, Plutarch, and Plato, just to name a few. In addition to these historical accounts by some of the world's most trusted authorities, there is also the science with real life giant bones that have been found on Crete. In fact, the largest bones that have ever been found were discovered on this very same island, which may prove this was truly the home or the Land of Giants.

During the Cretan war from 205–200 BC a massive giant skeleton was discovered on the island. This giant was measured at the length of thirty-three cubits, which equates to nearly 42 feet. The Roman Lucius Flaccus was a notable eye witness to the gigantic bones, and the Greek writer under Roman Emperor Hadrian, Phlegon of Tralles also mentions the discovery of several giant skeletons. In the included chart of giant fossilized remains findings around the world features the 36 foot skeleton found by the Carthaginians.

In the The Geography of Strabo, Volume 1 By Strabo, he writes about these giants that were discovered in city founded by the biblical Corinthians who used to reside in the modern day island of Crete;

"Somewhere in this neighbourhood is the mountain Bermius,² which was formerly in the possession of the Briges, a Thracian nation, some of whom passed over to Asia and were called by another name, Phrygians (Phryges). After Thessalonica follows the remaining part of the Therman Gulf, extending to Canastneum. This is a promontory of a peninsula form, and is opposite to Magnesia. Pallene is the name of the peninsula. It has an isthmus 5 stadia in width, with a ditch cut across it. There is a city on the peninsula, formerly called Potidsna, founded by the Corinthians, but afterwards it was called Cassandria, from king Cassander, who restored it after it was demolished. It is a circuit of 570 stadia round the peninsula by sea. Here giants were said to have lived, and the region to have been called Phlegra. Some consider this to be a mere fable, but others, with greater probability on their side, see implied in it the existence of a barbarous and lawless race of people who once occupied the country, but who were destroyed by Hercules on his return home, after the capture of Troy. Here also the Trojan women are said to have committed the destructive act of burning the ships, to avoid becoming the slaves of their captors' wives."

There are more stories and eyewitness accounts of giant people and bones being found on the island of Crete, than anywhere in the world as this information is current. In addition to the eyewitness accounts and bones that have been found here that help verify this history with some science, there is more scientific evidence in the form of the tools that these giant people had used. Tools such as the massive double headed axes that have been found in Crete. These axes are said to be from up to 1700 years before Christ and were also the main religious symbol of the ancient Cretans. They date to the Second Palace and Post-Palace periods (1700 - 1300 BC)". The Minoan name for the double axe is "labrys", thus the word labyrinth may originally have meant the "House of the Double Axe," an ancient reference to the invention of the double axe which is attributed to giants.

This biblical story may give us a clue as to what eventually had happened to these giants from Crete:

The sons of Joseph were authorized to invade the "Land of the Giants" and Og, the king of Bashan, and the last sovereign of the Ashtoreth dynasty, encountered Moses at Edrei, where he fell "with his sons, and all his people, until there was none left alive, and they (the Israelites) possessed the land," Numbers. xxi. 33, 34, 35.

Deuteronomy 2:11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.

Deuteronomy 3:13 And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

Joshua 12:4 And the coast of Og king of Bashan, which was of the remnant of the giants, that dwelt at Ashtaroth and at Edrei, Joshua 13:12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant of the giants: for these did Moses smite, and cast them out.

Fossilized human footprints have also been discovered in Sweden, and in Mexico. Giant skeletons have been discovered throughout the United States and giant fossilized remains are not solely exclusive to the lands of Crete but rather world-wide. Photos of giants from recent times are all a part of important natural history. An article from Strand magazine (December, 1895) reprinted in "Traces of the Elder Faiths" of Ireland by W.G. Wood-Martin mentions this fossilized giant discovered during mining operations in County Antrim, Ireland:

"Pre-eminent among the most extraordinary articles ever held by a railway company is the fossilized Irish giant, which is at this moment lying at the London and North-Western Railway Company's Broad street goods depot, and a photograph of which is reproduced here. . . This monstrous figure is reputed to have been dug up by a Mr. Dyer whilst prospecting for iron ore in County Antrim. The principal measurements are: entire length, 12ft. 2in.; girth of chest, 6ft. 6in.; and length of arms, 4ft. 6in. There are six toes on the right foot. The gross weight is 2 tons; 15cwt.; so that it took half a dozen men and a powerful crane to place this article of lost property in position for the Strand magazine photographer to do her work."

Near Crittenden, Arizona, in 1891, workmen excavating for a commercial building came upon a huge stone sarcophagus eight feet below the surface. The contractor called in expert help, and the sarcophagus was opened to reveal a granite mummy case which had once held the body of a human being more than twelve feet tall - a human with six toes, according to the carving of the case. But the body had been buried so many thousands of years that it had long since turned to dust. Just another silent witness to the truth of Genesis, which tells us that there were giants on the earth in those days, the excavation of over a dozen skeletons 8 to 12 feet tall, around the world shocked archaeologists.

If you have already read through the Book of Giants then you may understand why on so many Sumerian artifacts that we find depictions of giant humans being served by lesser humans in stature. As the Book of Enoch testifies, and as other texts of the same body of knowledge tell us, some men worshipped these giants only to have them eventually turn on them.

The associated text in the Book of Giants that pertains to this particular Sumerian tablet is the following:

". . . they took and imprisoned all the helpers that were in the heavens. And the angels themselves descended from the heaven to the earth. And (when) the two hundred demons saw those angels, they were much afraid and worried. They assumed the shape of men and hid themselves. Thereupon the angels forcibly removed the men from the demons, (10) laid them aside, and put watchers over them. . . . the giants were sons . . . with each other in bodily union with each other self- and the that had been born to them, they forcibly removed them from the demons. And they led one half of them (20) eastwards, and the other half westwards, on the skirts of four huge mountains, towards the foot of the Sumeru mountain, into thirty-two towns which the Living Spirit had prepared for them in the beginning. And one calls (that place) Aryān-waižan. And those men are (>or: were) in the first arts and crafts. (30) they made . . . the angels . . . and to the demons . . they went to fight. And those two hundred demons fought a hard battle with the four angels, until the angels used fire, naphtha, and brimstone. . ." - Book of Giants - Sogdian Manuscript

Of such cities mentioned in the Book of Giants other authorities on the antiquities of history make note:

Cristoforo Buondelmonti (1386-1430) was an Italian monk, traveler, and a pioneer in promoting first-hand knowledge of Greece and its antiquities, who had written about a Cretan city named Sarandopolis that was formerly inhabited by giants, and where modern eparkhia of Setia derived its name.

The San Diego Giant

The mummy remains of a giant were unearthed in a cave near San Diego, California. It was discovered by a party of prospectors, and was displayed at the Atlantic exposition while, a number of Smithsonian scientists were there. They asked permission to examine it and when consent was given applied their tapes and found that it measured eight feet four inches from crown to heel. The body lied rest in a ten foot coffin. The exhibitor agreed to sell it for $500 to the Smithsonian of which sold it in more recent days to an "unknown private collector." The following photo is the San Diego Giant:

In terms of the life spans of the giants we find that it was appointed to them 500 years to live:

Enoch 4:12 And to Gabriel said the Lord, "Proceed against the bastards and the reprobates, and against the children of fornication and destroy the children of the Watchers from amongst men. Send them one against the other that they may destroy each other in battle, for length of days shall they not have. And no request that they make of thee shall be granted unto their fathers on their behalf; for they hope to live an eternal life, and that each one of them will live five hundred years." - Enoch Book 1: Watchers Ch.4:12

Notice how that is specific to a definite degree? Well it would seem that their days were numbered as a curse and that perhaps they couldn't die until 500 years had been allotted to them. Keep in mind that God was not pleased at all with that the fallen angels had done and was using this as a testament against them for breaking His laws. They wanted their giant sons to have the eternal life like they had but God denied their plea for this. Although the exact contents of the petition the fallen angels had Enoch deliver to God is not known this verse appears to be a logical response to one of the things the fallen must have included in it regarding their sons length of life.

Furthermore, in regards to their hybrid status (half man, half angel) of existence we are encountered with the terms and conditions of their afterlife as the Book of the Words of Righteousness tells us:

Enoch 5:28 And now, the giants, who are produced from the spirits and flesh, shall be called evil spirits upon the earth, and on the earth shall be their dwelling.

Enoch 5:29 Evil spirits have proceeded from their bodies; because they are born from men and from the Watchers is their beginning and primal origin; they shall be evil spirits on earth, and evil spirits shall they be called.

Enoch 5:30 And the spirits of the giants afflict, oppress, destroy, attack, do battle, and work destruction on the earth, and cause trouble. They take no food, but nevertheless hunger and thirst, and cause offences.

Not having souls, once the giants had died they became roaming spirits of the earth. Being able to inhabit the bodies of men and women, animals, and other "forms." Only when reading through the Testament of Solomon do we find evidence of these evil spirits residing on earth until the final judgement.

Solomon 1:70. And there came before my face another enslaved spirit, having obscurely the form of a man, with gleaming eyes, and bearing in his hand a blade. And I asked: "Who art thou?" But he answered: "I am a lascivious spirit, engendered of a giant man who died in the massacre in the time of the giants." I said to him: "Tell me what thou art employed upon earth, and where thou hast thy dwelling."

Closing notes and my own personal observations:

Being a former evolutionist (macro), finding about OOPARTS and fossilized giant human beings around the world compelled me to look for answers outside the modern scientific religion and into the accounts of historians, scribes, and the body of knowledge of the divine. The earth and its artifacts seem to testify to its own past so long as we pay attention to the ancient reporters who so diligently made the happenings of ancient times known to us through the preservation of their observations. The more one goes looking for evidence pertaining to giants, the more one finds. The bulk of information pertaining to these giants seems to be clustered on the body of biblical knowledge of which no other codex contains more references or information about. This mystery itself seems best solved by pouring over the evidence with diligent study performed by reading with not the eyes but rather the heart.

TESTAMENT OF SOLOMON

1. Testament of Solomon, son of David, who was king in Jerusalem, and mastered and controlled all spirits of the air, on the earth, and under the earth. By means of them also he wrought all the transcendent works of the Temple. Telling also of the authorities they wield against men, and by what angels these demons are brought to naught.

Of the sage Solomon.

Blessed art thou, O Lord God, who didst give Solomon such authority. Glory to thee and might unto the ages. Amen.

2. And behold, when the Temple of the city of Jerusalem was being built, and the artificers were working thereat, Ornias the demon came among them toward sunset; and he took away half of the pay of the master workman's little boy, as well as half his food. He also continued to suck the thumb of his right hand every day. And the child grew thin, although he was very much loved by the king.

3. So King Solomon called the boy one day, and questioned him, saying: "Do I not love thee more than all the artisans who are working in the Temple of God? Do I not give thee double wages and a double supply of food? How is it that day by day and hour by hour thou growest thinner?"

4. But the child said to the king: "I pray thee, O king. Listen to what has befallen all that thy child hath. After we are all released from our work on the Temple of God, after sunset, when I lie down to rest, one of the evil demons comes and takes away from me one half of my pay and one half of my food. Then he also takes hold of my right hand and sucks my thumb. And lo, my soul is oppressed, and so my body waxes thinner every day."

5. Now when I Solomon heard this, I entered the Temple of God, and prayed with all my soul, night and day, that the demon might be delivered into my hands, and that I might gain authority over him. And it came about through my prayer that grace was given to me from the Lord Sabaoth by Michael his archangel. He brought me a little ring, having a seal consisting of an engraved stone, and said to me: "Take, O Solomon, king, son of David, the gift which the Lord God has sent thee, the highest Sabaoth. With it thou shalt lock up all demons of the earth, male and female; and with their help thou shalt build up Jerusalem. But thou must wear this seal of God. And this engraving of the seal of the ring sent thee is a Pentalpha."

(A Pentalpha otherwise known as the seal of Solomon.)

6. And I Solomon was overjoyed, and praised and glorified the God of heaven and earth. And on the morrow I called the boy, and gave him the ring, and said to him: "take this, and at the hour in which the demon shall come unto thee, throw this ring at the chest of the demon, and say to him: 'In the name of God, King Solomon calls thee hither. And then do thou come running to me, without having any misgivings or fear in respect of aught thou mayest hear on the part of the demon.'"

7. So the child took the ring, and went off; and behold, at the customary hour Ornias, the fierce demon, came like a burning fire to take the pay from the child. But the child according to the instructions received from the king, threw the ring at the chest of the demon, and said: "King Solomon calls thee hither." And then he went off at a run to the king. But the demon cried out aloud, saying: "Child, why hast thou done this to me? Take the ring off me, and I will render to thee the gold of the earth. Only take this off me, and forbear to lead me away to Solomon."

8. But the child said to the demon: "As the Lord God of Israel liveth, I will not brook thee. So come hither." And the child came at a run, rejoicing, to the king, and said: "I have brought the demon, O king, as thou didst command me, O my master. And behold, he stands before the gates of the court of thy palace, crying out, and supplicating with a loud voice; offering me the silver and gold of the earth if I will only bring him unto thee."

9. And when Solomon heard this, he rose up from his throne, and went outside into the vestibule of the court of his palace; and there he saw the demon, shuddering and trembling. And he said to him: "Who art thou?" And the demon answered: "I am called Ornias."

10. And Solomon said to him: "Tell me, O demon, to what zodiacal sign thou art subject." And he answered: "To the Water-pourer. And those who are consumed with desire for the noble virgins upon earth, these I strangle. But in case there is no disposition to sleep, I am changed into three forms. Whenever men come to be enamoured of women, I metamorphose myself into a comely female; and I take hold of the men in their sleep, and play with them. And after a while I again take to my wings, and hie me to the heavenly regions. I also appear as a lion, and I am commanded by all the demons. I am frustrated by the archangel Uriel, the power of God."

11. I Solomon, having heard the name of the archangel, prayed and glorified God, the Lord of heaven and earth. And I sealed the demon and set him to work at stone-cutting, so that he might cut the stones in the Temple, which, lying along the shore, had been brought by the Sea of Arabia. But he, fearful of the iron, continued and said to me: "I pray thee, King Solomon, let me go free; and I will bring you all the demons." And as he was not willing to be subject to me, I prayed the archangel Uriel to come and succour me; and I forthwith beheld the archangel Uriel coming down to me from the heavens.

12. And the angel bade the whales of the sea come out of the abyss. And he cast his destiny upon the ground, and that destiny made subject to him the great demon. And he commanded the great demon and bold Ornias, to cut stones at the Temple. And accordingly I Solomon glorified the God of heaven and Maker of the earth. And he bade Ornias come with his destiny, and gave him the seal, saying: "Away with thee, and bring me hither the prince of all the demons."

13. So Ornias took the finger-ring, and went off to Beelzeboul, who has kingship over the demons. He said to him: "Hither! Solomon calls thee." But Beelzeboul, having heard, said to him: "Tell me, who is this Solomon of whom thou speakest to me?" Then Ornias threw the ring at the chest of Beelzeboul, saying: "Solomon the king calls thee." But Beelzeboul cried aloud with a mighty voice, and shot out a great burning flame of fire; and he arose, and followed Ornias, and came to Solomon.

14. And when I saw the prince of demons, I glorified the Lord God, Maker of heaven and earth, and I said: "Blessed art thou, Lord God Almighty, who hast given to Solomon thy servant wisdom, the assessor of the wise, and hast subjected unto me all the power of the devils."

15. And I questioned him, and said: "Who art thou?" The demon replied: "I am Beelzebub, the exarch of the demons. And all the demons have their chief seats close to me. And I it is who make manifest the apparition of each demon." And he promised to bring to me in bonds all the unclean spirits. And I again glorified the God of heaven and earth, as I do always give thanks to him.

16. I then asked of the demon if there were females among them. And when he told me that there were, I said that I desired to see them. So Beelzeboul went off at high speed, and brought unto me Onoskelis, that had a very pretty shape, and the skin of a fairhued woman; and she tossed her head.

17. And when she was come, I said to her: "Tell me who art thou?" But she said to me: "I am called Onoskelis, a spirit which has been made into a body, lurking upon the earth. There is a golden cave where I lie. But I have a place that ever shifts. At one time I strangle men with a noose; at another, I creep up and prevent them from their true natures. But my most frequent dwelling-places are the precipices, caves, and ravines. Oftentimes, however, do I consort with men in the semblance of a woman, and above all with those of a dark skin. For they share my star with me; since they it is who privily or openly worship my star, without knowing that they harm themselves, and but whet my appetite for further mischief. For they wish to provide money by means of remembering me, but I supply a little to those who worship me fairly."

18. And I Solomon questioned her about her birth, and she replied: "I was born of a voice untimely, the so-called echo of a man's ordure dropped in a wood."

19. And I said to her: "Under what star dost thou pass?" And she answered me: "Under the star of the full moon, for the reason that the moon travels over most things." Then I said to her: "And what angel is it that frustrates thee?" And she said to me: "He that in thee is reigning." And I thought that she mocked me, and bade a soldier strike her. But she cried aloud, and said: "I am subjected to thee, O king, by the wisdom of God given to thee, and by the angel Joel."

20. So I commanded her to spin the hemp for the ropes used in the building of the house of God; and accordingly, when I had sealed and bound her, she was so overcome and brought to naught as to stand night and day spinning the hemp.

21. And I at once bade another demon to be led unto me; and instantly there approached me the demon Asmodeus, bound, and I asked him: "Who art thou?" But he shot on me a glance of anger and rage, and said: "And who art thou?" And I said to him: "Thus punished as thou art, answerest thou me not?" But he, with rage, said to me: "But how shall I answer thee, for thou art a son of man; whereas I was born of an angel's seed by a daughter of man, so that no word of our heavenly kind addressed to the earth-born can be overweening. Wherefore also my star is bright in heaven, and men call it, some the Wain, and some the dragon's child. I keep near unto this star. So ask me not many things; for thy kingdom also after a little time is to be disrupted, and thy glory is but for a season. And short will be thy tyranny over us; and then we shall again have free range over mankind, so as that they shall revere us as if we were gods, not knowing, men that they are, the names of the angels set over us."

22. And I Solomon, on hearing this, bound him more carefully, and ordered him to be flogged with thongs of ox-hide, and to tell me humbly what was his name and of his business. And he answered me thus: "I am called Asmodeus among mortals, and my business is to plot against the newly wedded, so that they may not know one another. And I sever them utterly by many calamities, and I waste away the beauty of virgin women, and estrange their hearts."

23. And I said to him: "Is this thy only business?" And he answered me: "I transport men into fits of madness and desire, when they have wives of their own, so that they leave them, and go off by night and day to others that belong to other men; with the result that they commit sin, and fall into murderous deeds."

24. And I adjured him by the name of the Lord Sabaôth, saying: "Fear God, Asmodeus, and tell me by what angel thou art frustrated." But he said: "By Raphael, the archangel that stands before the throne of God. But the liver and gall of a fish put me to flight, when smoked over ashes of the tamarisk." I again asked him, and said: "Hide not aught from me. For I am Solomon, son of David,

King of Israel. Tell me the name of the fish which thou reverest." And he answered: "It is the glanos by name, and is found in the rivers of Assyria; wherefore it is that I roam about in those parts."

25. And I said to him: "Hast thou nothing else about thee, Asmodeus?" And he answered: "The power of God knoweth, which hath bound me with the indissoluble bonds of yonder one's seal, that whatever I have told thee is true. I pray thee, King Solomon, condemn me not to go into water." But I smiled, and said to him: "As the Lord God of my fathers liveth, I will lay iron on thee to wear. But thou shalt also make the clay for the entire construction of the Temple, treading it down with thy feet." And I ordered them to give him ten water jars to carry water in. And the demon groaned terribly, and did the work I ordered him to do. And this I did, because that fierce demon Asmodeus knew even the future. And I Solomon glorified God, who gave wisdom to me Solomon his servant. And the liver of the fish and its gall I hung on the spike of a reed, and burned it over Asmodeus because of his being so strong, and his unbearable malice was thus frustrated.

26. And I summoned again to stand before me Beelzeboul, the prince of demons, and I sat him down on a raised seat of honour, and said to him: "Why art thou alone, prince of the demons?" And he said to me: "Because I alone am left of the angels of heaven that came down. For I was first angel in the first heaven being entitled Beelzeboul. And now I control all those who are bound in Tartarus. But I too have a child, and he haunts the Red Sea. And on any suitable occasion he comes up to me again, being subject to me; and reveals to me what he has done, and when he is ready, he will come in triumph.

27. I Solomon said unto him: "Beelzeboul, what is thy employment?" And he answered me: "I destroy kings. I bring destruction by means of tyrants. And my own demons I send on to men to be worshipped, in order that the latter may believe in them and be lost. And the chosen servants of God, priests and faithful men, I excite unto desires for wicked sins, and evil heresies, and lawless deeds; and they obey me, and I bear them on to destruction. And I inspire men with envy, and desire for murder, and for wars and sodomy, and other evil things. I bring about jealousies and murders in a country, and I instigate wars. I will destroy the world."

28. So I said to him: "Bring to me thy child, who is, as thou sayest, in the Red Sea." But he said to me: "I will not bring him to thee. But there shall come to me another demon called Ephippas. Him will I bind, and he will bring him up from the deep unto me." And I said to him: "How comes thy son to be in the depth of the sea, and what is his name?" And he answered me: "Ask me not, for thou canst not learn from me. However, he will come to thee by any command, and will tell thee openly." So I said to him: "Tell me in which star you reside." To which he answered, "The one called by men the Evening Star."

29. I said to him: "Tell me by what angel thou art frustrated." And he answered: "By the holy and precious name of the Almighty God, called by the Hebrews by a row of numbers, of which the sum is 644, and among the Greeks it is Emmanuel. And if one of the Romans adjure me by the great name of the power Eleéth, I disappear at once."

30. I Solomon was astounded when I heard this; and I ordered him to saw up Theban marbles. And when he began to saw the marbles, the other demons cried out with a loud voice, howling because of their king Beelzeboul was also subject to the power the Most High had given me over him.

31. But I Solomon questioned him, saying: "If thou wouldst gain a respite, discourse to me about the things in heaven." And Beelzeboul said: "Hear, O king, if thou burn gum, and incense, and bulb of the sea¹, with nard and saffron, and light seven lamps in an earthquake, thou wilt firmly fix thy house. And if, being pure, thou light them at dawn in the sun alight, then wilt thou see the heavenly dragons, how they wind themselves along and drag the chariot of the sun."

32. And I Solomon, having heard this, rebuked him, and said: "Silence for this present time, and continue to saw the marbles as I commanded thee." And I Solomon praised God, and commanded another demon to present himself to me. And one came before me who carried his face high up in the air, but the rest of the spirit curled away like a snail. And it broke through the few soldiers, and raised also a terrible dust on the ground, and carried it upwards; and then again hurled it back to frighten us, and asked what questions I could ask as a rule. And I stood up, and spat on the ground in that spot, and sealed the demon with the ring of God. And forthwith the dustwind stopped. Then I asked him, saying: "Who art thou, O wind?" Then he once more shook up a dust, and answered me: "What wouldst thou have, King Solomon?" I answered him: "Tell me what thou art called, and I would fain ask thee a question. But so far I give thanks to God who has made me wise to answer your evil plots."

33. But [the demon] answered me: "I am the spirit of the ashes (Tephra)." And I said to him: "What is thy pursuit?" And he said: "I bring darkness on men, and set fire to fields; and I bring homesteads to naught. But most busy am I in summer. However, when I get an opportunity, I creep into corners of the wall, by night and day. For I am offspring of the great one, and nothing less." Accordingly I said to him: "Under what star dost thou lie?" And he answered: "In the very tip of the moon's horn, when it is found in the south. There is my star. For I have been bidden to restrain the convulsions of the hemitertian fever; and this is why many men pray to the hemitertian fever, using these three names: Bultala, Thallal, Melchal. And I heal them." And I said to him: "I am Solomon; when therefore thou wouldst do harm, by whose aid dost thou do it?" But he said to me: "By the angel's, by whom also the third day's fever is lulled to rest." So I questioned him, and said: "And by what name?" And he answered: "That of the archangel Azael." And I summoned the archangel Azael, and set a seal on the demon, and commanded him to seize great stones, and toss them up to the workmen on the higher parts of the Temple. And, being compelled, the demon began to do what he was bidden to do.

34. And I glorified God afresh who gave me this authority, and ordered another demon to come before me. And there came seven spirits, females, bound and woven together, fair in appearance and comely. And I Solomon, seeing them, questioned them and said: "Who are ye?" But they, with one accord, said with one voice: "We are of the thirty-three elements of the cosmic ruler of the darkness." And the first said: "I am Deception." The second said: "I am Strife." The third: "I am Klothod, which is battle." The fourth: "I am Jealousy." The fifth: "I am Power." The sixth: "I am Error." The seventh: "I am the worst of all, and our stars are in heaven. Seven stars humble in sheen, and all together. And we are called as it were Goddesses. We change our place all and together, and together we live, sometimes in Lydia, sometimes in Olympus, sometimes in a great mountain."

35. So I Solomon questioned them one by one, beginning with the first, and going down to the seventh. The first said: "I am Deception, I deceive and weave snares here and there. I whet and excite heresies. But I have an angel who frustrates me, Lamechalal."

36. Likewise also the second said: "I am Strife, strife of strifes. I bring timbers, stones, hangers, my weapons on the spot. But I have an angel who frustrates me, Baruchiachel."

37. Likewise also the third said: "I am called Klothod, which is Battle, and I cause the well behaved to scatter and fall foul one of the other. And why do I say so much? I have an angel that frustrates me: "Marmarath."

38. Likewise also the fourth said: "I cause men to forget their sobriety and moderation. I part them and split them into parties; for Strife follows me hand in hand. I rend the husband from the sharer of his bed, and children from parents, and brothers from sisters. But why tell so much to my despite? I have an angel that frustrates me, the great Balthial."

39. Likewise also the fifth said: "I am Power. By power I raise up tyrants and tear down kings. To all rebels I furnish power. I have an angel that frustrates me, Asteraôth."

40. Likewise also the sixth said: "I am Error, O King Solomon. And I will make thee to err, as I have before made thee to err, when I caused thee to slay thy own brother. I will lead you into error, so as to pry into graves; and I teach them that dig, and I lead errant souls away from all piety, and many other evil traits are mine. But I have an angel that frustrates me, Uriel."

41. Likewise also the seventh said: "I am the worst, and I make thee worse off than thou wast; because I will impose the bonds of Artemis. But the locust will set me free, for by means thereof is it fated that thou shalt achieve my desire. For if one were wise, he would not turn his steps toward me."

42. So I Solomon, having heard and wondered, sealed them with my ring; and since they were so considerable, I bade them dig the foundations of the Temple of God. For the length of it was 250 cubits. And I bade them be industrious, and with one murmur of joint protest they began to perform the tasks enjoined.

43. But I Solomon glorified the Lord, and bade another demon come before me. And there was brought to me a demon having all the limbs of a man, but without a head. And I, seeing him, said to him: "Tell me, who art thou?" And he answered: "I am a demon." So I said to him: "Which?" And he answered me: "I am called Envy. For I delight to devour heads, being desirous to secure for myself a head; but I do not eat enough, but am anxious to have such a head as thou hast."

44. I Solomon, on hearing this, sealed him, stretching out my hand against his chest. Whereon the demon leapt up, and threw himself down, and gave a groan, saying: "Woe is me! Where am I come to? O traitor Ornias, I cannot see!" So I said to him: "I am Solomon. Tell me then how thou dost manage to see!" And he answered me: "By means of my feelings." I then, Solomon, having heard his voice come up to me, asked him how he managed to speak. And he answered me: "I, O King Solomon, am wholly voice, for I have inherited the voices of many men. For in the case of all men who are called dumb, I it is who smashed their heads, when they were children and had reached their eighth day. Then when a child is crying in the night, I become a spirit, and glide by means of his voice. In the crossways also I have many services to render, and my encounter is fraught with harm. For I grasp in all instants a man's head, and with my hands, as with a sword, I cut it off, and put it on to myself. And in this way, by means of the fire which is in me, through my neck it is swallowed up. I it is that sends grave mutilations and incurables on men's feet, and inflict sores."

45. And I Solomon, on hearing this, said to him: "Tell me how thou dost discharge forth the fire? Out of what sources dost thou emit it?" And the spirit said to me: "From the Day-star. For here hath not yet been found that Elburion, to whom men offer prayers and kindle lights. And his name is invoked by the seven demons before me. And he cherishes them."

46. But I said to him: "Tell me his name." But he answered: "I cannot tell thee. For if I tell his name, I render myself incurable. But he will come in response to his name." And on hearing this, I Solomon said to him: "Tell me then, by what angel thou art frustrated?" And he answered: "By the fiery flash of lightning." And I bowed myself before the Lord God of Israel, and bade him remain in the keeping of Beelzeboul until the angel Iax should come.

47. Then I ordered another demon to come before me, and there came into my presence a hound, having a very large shape, and it spoke with a loud voice, and said, "Hail, Lord, King Solomon!" And I Solomon was astounded. I said to it: "Who art thou, O hound?" And it answered: "I do indeed seem to thee to be a hound, but before thou wast, O King Solomon, I was a man that wrought many unholy deeds on earth. I was surpassingly learned in letters, and was so mighty that I could hold the stars of heaven back. And many divine works did I prepare. For I do harm to men who follow after our star, and change them to. And I seize the frenzied men by the larynx, and so destroy them."

48. And I Solomon said to him: "What is thy name?" And he answered: "Staff" (Rabdos). And I said to him: "What is thine employment? And what results canst thou achieve?" And he replied: "Give me thy servant, and I will lead him away into a mountainous spot, and will show him a green stone tossed to and fro, with which thou mayest adorn the temple of the Lord God."

49. And I Solomon, on hearing this, ordered my servant to set off with him, and to take the finger-ring bearing the seal of God with him. And I said to him: "Whoever shall show thee the green stone, seal him with this finger-ring. And mark the spot with care, and bring me the demon hither." And the demon showed him the green stone, and he sealed it, and brought the demon to me. And I Solomon decided to confine with my seal on my right hand the two, the headless demon, likewise the hound, that was so huge; he should be bound as well. And I bade the hound keep safe the fiery spirit so that lamps as it were might by day and night cast their light through its maw on the artisans at work.

50. And I Solomon took from the mine of that stone 200 shekels for the supports of the table of incense, which was similar in appearance. And I Solomon glorified the Lord God, and then closed round the treasure of that stone. And I ordered afresh the demons to cut marble for the construction of the house of God. And I Solomon prayed to the Lord, and asked the hound, saying: "By what angel art thou frustrated?" And the demon replied: "By the great Brieus."

51. And I praised the Lord God of heaven and earth, and bade another demon come forward to me; and there came before me one in the form of a roaring lion. And he stood and answered me saying: "O king, in the form which I have, I am a spirit quite incapable of being perceived. Upon all men who lie prostrate with sickness I leap, coming stealthily along; and I render the man weak, so that his habit of body is enfeebled. But I have also another glory, O king. I cast out demons, and I have legions under my control. And I am capable of being received in my dwelling-places, along with all the demons belonging to the legions under me." But I Solomon, on hearing this, asked him: "What is thy name?" But he answered: "Lion-bearer, Rath in kind." And I said to him: "How art thou to be frustrated along with thy legions? What angel is it that frustrates thee?" And he answered: "If I tell thee the name, I bind not myself alone, but also the legions of demons under me."

52. So I said to him: "I adjure thee in the name of the God Sabaoth, to tell me by what name thou art frustrated along with thy host." And the spirit answered me:

"The 'Son of Man,' who is to suffer many things at the hands of men, whose name is the figure 644, which is Emmanuel; he it is who has bound us, and who will then come and plunge us from the steep, under water. He is noised abroad in the three letters which bring him down."

53. And I Solomon, on hearing this, glorified God, and condemned his legion to carry wood from the thicket. And I condemned the lion-shaped one himself to saw up the wood small with his teeth, for burning in the unquenchable furnace for the Temple of God.

54. And I worshipped the Lord God of Israel, and bade another demon come forward. And there came before me a dragon, three-headed, of fearful hue. And I questioned him: "Who art thou?" And he answered me: "I am a caltrop-like spirit, whose activity in three lies. But I blind children in women's wombs, and twirl their ears round. And I make them deaf and mute. And I have again in my third head means of slipping into the body. And I smite men in the limbless part of the body, and cause them to fall down, and foam, and grind their teeth. But I have my own way of being frustrated. Jerusalem being signified in writing, unto the place called 'of the head.'" For there is fore-appointed the angel of the great counsel, and now he will openly dwell on the cross. He doth frustrate me, and to him am I subject."

55. "But in the place where thou sittest, O King Solomon, standeth a column in the air, of purple...¹ The demon called Ephippas hath brought it up from the Red Sea, from inner Arabia. He it is that shall be shut up in a skin-bottle and brought before thee. But at the entrance of the Temple, which thou hast begun to build, O King Solomon, lies stored much gold, which dig thou up and carry off." And I Solomon sent my servant, and found it to be as the demon told me. And I sealed him with my ring, and praised the Lord God."

56. So I said to him: "What art thou called?" And the demon said: "I am the crest of dragons." And I bade him make bricks in the Temple. He had human hands.

57. And I adored the Lord God of Israel, and bade another demon present himself. And there came before me a spirit in woman's form, that had a head without any limbs, and her hair was dishevelled. And I said to her: "Who art thou?" But she answered: "Nay, who art thou? And why dost thou want to hear concerning me? But, as thou wouldst learn, here I stand bound before thy face. Go then into thy royal storehouses and wash thy hands. Then sit down afresh before thy tribunal, and ask me questions; and thou shalt learn, O king, who I am."

58. And I Solomon did as she enjoined me, and restrained myself because of the wisdom dwelling in me; in order that I might hear of her deeds, and reprehend them, and manifest them to men. And I sat down, and said to the demon: "What art thou?" And she said: "I am called among men Obizuth (This is Lilith self-identifying by one of her many names.); and by night I sleep not, but go my rounds over all the world, and visit women in childbirth. And divining the hour I take my stand; and if I am lucky, I strangle the child. But if not, I retire to another place. For I cannot for a single night retire unsuccessful. For I am a fierce spirit, of myriad names and many shapes. And now hither, now thither I roam. And to westering parts I go my rounds. But as it now is, though thou hast sealed me round with the ring of God, thou hast done nothing. I am not standing before thee, and thou wilt not be able to command me. For I have no work other than the destruction of children, and the making their ears to be deaf, and the working of evil to their eyes, and the binding their mouths with a bond, and the ruin of their minds, and paining of their bodies."

59. When I Solomon heard this, I marvelled at her appearance, for I beheld all her body to be in darkness. But her glance was altogether bright and greeny, and her hair was tossed wildly like a dragon's; and the whole of her limbs were invisible. And her voice was very clear as it came to me. And I cunningly said: "Tell me by what angel thou art frustrated, O evil spirit?" By she answered me: "By the angel of God called Afarôt, which is interpreted Raphael, by whom I am frustrated now and for all time. His name, if any man know it, and write the same on a woman in childbirth, then I shall not be able to enter her. Of this name the number is 640." And I Solomon having heard this, and having glorified the Lord, ordered her hair to be bound, and that she should be hung up in front of the Temple of God; that all the children of Israel, as they passed, might see it, and glorify the Lord God of Israel, who had given me this authority, with wisdom and power from God, by means of this signet.

60. And I again ordered another demon to come before me. And it came, rolling itself along, one in appearance like to a dragon, but having the face and hands of a man. And all its limbs, except the feet, were those of a dragon; and it had wings on its back. And when I beheld it, I was astonished, and said: "Who art thou, demon, and what art thou called? And whence hast thou come? Tell me."

61. And the spirit answered and said: "This is the first time I have stood before thee, O King Solomon. I am a spirit made into a god among men, but now brought to naught by the ring and wisdom given to thee by God. Now I am the so-called winged dragon, and I chamber not with many women, but only with a few that are of fair shape, which possess the name of Touxylou, of this star. And I pair with them in the guise of a spirit winged in form, copulating with them. And she on whom I have leapt goes heavy with child, and that which is born of her becomes filled with lust. But since such offspring cannot be carried by men, the woman in question breaks wind. Such is my role. Supposed then only that I am satisfied, and all the other demons molested and disturbed by thee will speak the whole truth. But those composed of fire will cause to be burned up by fire the material of the logs which is to be collected by them for the building in the Temple."

62. And as the demon said this, I saw the spirit going forth from his mouth, and it consumed the wood of the frankincense-tree, and burned up all the logs which we had placed in the Temple of God. And I Solomon saw what the spirit had done, and I marvelled.

63. And, having glorified God, I asked the dragon-shaped demon, and said: "Tell me, by what angel art thou frustrated?" And he answered: "By the great angel which has its seat in the second heaven, which is called in Hebrew, Bazazeth. And I Solomon, having heard this, and having invoked his angel, condemned him to saw up marbles for the building of the Temple of God; and I praised God, and commanded another demon to come before me.

64. And there came before my face another spirit, as it were a woman in the form she had. But on her shoulders she had two other heads with hands. And I asked her, and said: "Tell me, who art thou?" And she said to me: "I am Enêpsigos, who also have a myriad names." And I said her: "By what angel art thou frustrated?" But she said to me: "What seekest, what askest thou? I undergo changes, like the goddess I am called. And I change again, and pass into possession of another shape. And be not desirous therefore to know all that concerns me. But since thou art before me for this much, hearken. I have my abode in the moon, and for that reason I possess three forms. At times I am magically invoked by the wise as Kronos. At other times, in connexion with those who bring me down, I come down and appear in another shape. The measure of the element is inexplicable and indefinable, and not to be frustrated. I then, changing into these three forms, come down and become such as thou seest me; but I am frustrated by the angel Rathanael, who sits in the third heaven. This then is why I speak to thee. Yonder temple cannot contain me."

65. I therefore Solomon prayed to my God, and I invoked the angel of whom Enépsigos spoke to me, and used my seal. And I sealed her with a triple chain, and (placed) beneath her the fastening of the chain. I used the seal of God, and the spirit prophesied to me, saying: "This is what thou, King Solomon, doest to us. But after a time thy kingdom shall be broken, and again in season this Temple shall be driven asunder; and all Jerusalem shall be undone by the King of the Persians and Medes and Chaldaeans. And the vessels of this Temple, which thou makest, shall be put to servile uses of the gods; and along with them all the jars, in which thou dost shut us up, shall be broken by the hands of men. And then we shall go forth in great power hither and thither, and be disseminated all over the world. And we shall lead astray the inhabited world for a long season, until the Son of God is stretched upon the cross. For never before doth arise a king like unto him, one frustrating us all, whose mother shall not have contact with man. Who else can receive such authority over spirits, except he, whom the first devil will seek to tempt, but will not prevail over? The number of his name is 644, which is Emmanuel. Wherefore, O King Solomon, thy time is evil, and thy years short and evil, and to thy servant shall thy kingdom be given."

66. And I Solomon, having heard this, glorified God. And though I marvelled at the prophecy of the demon, I did not credit it until it came true. And I did not believe their words; but when they were realized, then I understood, and at my death I wrote this Testament to the children of Israel, and gave it to them, so that they might know the powers of the demons and their shapes, and the names of their angels, by which these angels are frustrated. And I glorified the Lord God of Israel, and commanded the spirits to be bound with bonds indissoluble.

67. And having praised God, I commanded another spirit to come before me; and there came before my face another demon, having in front the shape of a horse, but the behind of a fish. And he had a mighty voice, and said to me: "O King Solomon, I am a fierce spirit of the sea, and I am greedy of gold and silver. I am such a spirit as rounds itself and comes over the expanses of the water of the sea, and I trip up the men who sail thereon. For I round myself into a wave, and transform myself, and then throw myself on ships and come right in on them. And that is my business, and my way of getting hold of money and men. For I take the men, and whirl them round with myself, and hurl the men out of the sea. For I am not covetous of men's bodies, but cast them up out of the sea so far. But since Beelzeboul, ruler of the spirits of air and of those under the earth, and lord of earthly ones, hath a joint kingship with us in respect of the deeds of each one of us, therefore I went up from the sea, to get a certain outlook in his company.

68. "But I also have another character and role. I metamorphose myself into waves, and come up from the sea. And I show myself to men, so that those on earth call me Cynospaston, because I assume the human form. And my name is a true one. For by my passage up into men, I send forth a certain nausea. I came then to take counsel with the prince Beelzeboul; and he bound me and delivered me into thy hands. And I am here before thee because of this seal, and thou dost now torment me. Behold now, in two or three days the spirit that converseth with thee will fail, because I shall have no water."

69. And I said to him: "Tell me by what angel thou art frustrated." And he answered: "By Iameth." And I glorified God. I commanded the spirit to be thrown into a phial along with ten jugs of sea-water of two measures each. And I sealed them round above the marbles and asphalt and pitch in the mouth of the vessel. And having sealed it with my ring, I ordered it to be deposited in the Temple of God. And I ordered another spirit to come before me.

70. And there came before my face another enslaved spirit, having obscurely the form of a man, with gleaming eyes, and bearing in his hand a blade. And I asked: "Who art thou?" But he answered: "I am a lascivious spirit, engendered of a giant man who died in the massacre in the time of the giants." I said to him: "Tell me what thou art employed upon earth, and where thou hast thy dwelling."

71. And he said: "My dwelling is in fruitful places, but my procedure is this. I seat myself beside the men who pass along among the tombs, and in untimely season I assume the form of the dead; and if I catch any one, I at once destroy him with my sword. But if I cannot destroy him, I cause him to be possessed with a demon, and to devour his own flesh, and the hair to fall off his chin." But I said to him: "Do thou then be in fear of the God of heaven and of earth, and tell me by what angel thou art frustrated." And he answered: "He destroys me who is to become Saviour, a man whose number, if any one shall write it on his forehead, he will defeat me, and in fear I shall quickly retreat. And, indeed, if any one write this sign on him, I shall be in fear." And I Solomon, on hearing this, and having glorified the Lord God, shut up this demon like the rest.

72. And I commanded another demon to come before me. And there came before my face thirty-six spirits, their heads shapeless like dogs, but in themselves they were human in form; with faces of asses, faces of oxen, and faces of birds. And I Solomon, on hearing and seeing them, wondered, and I asked them and said: "Who are you?" But they, of one accord with one voice, said: "We are the thirty-six elements, the world-rulers of this darkness. (Eph. 6:12) But, O King Solomon, thou wilt not wrong us nor imprison us, nor lay command on us; but since the Lord God has given thee authority over every spirit, in the air, and on the earth, and under the earth, therefore do we also present ourselves before thee like the other spirits, from ram and bull, from both twin and crab, lion and virgin, scales and scorpion, archer, goat-horned, water-pourer, and fish."

73. Then I Solomon invoked the name of the Lord Sabaoth, and questioned each in turn as to what was its character. And I bade each one come forward and tell of its actions. Then the first one came forward, and said: "I am the first decan of the zodiacal circle, and I am called the Ram, and with me are these two." So I put to them the question: "Who are ye called?" The first said: "I, O Lord, am called Ruax, and I cause the heads of men to be idle, and I pillage their brows. But let me only hear the words, 'Michael, imprison Ruax,' and at once I retreat."

74. And the second said: "I am called Barsafael, and I cause those who are subject to my hour to feel the pain of migraine. If only I hear the words, 'Gabriel, imprison Barsafael,' at once I retreat."

75. The third said: "I am called Arôtosael. I do harm to eyes, and grievously injure them. Only let me hear the words, 'Uriel, imprison Aratosael,' and at once I retreat."

76. The fifth said: "I am called Iudal, and I bring about a block in the ears and deafness of hearing. If I hear, 'Uruel Iudal,' I at once retreat."

77. The sixth said: "I am called Sphendonaêl. I cause tumors of the parotid gland, and inflammations of the tonsils, and tetanic recurvation. If I hear, 'Sabrael, imprison Sphendonaêl,' at once I retreat."

78. And the seventh said: "I am called Sphandôr, and I weaken the strength of the shoulders, and cause them to tremble; and I paralyze the nerves of the hands, and I break and bruise the bones of the neck. And I, I suck out the marrow. But if I hear the words, 'Araêl, imprison Sphandôr,' I at once retreat."

79. And the eighth said: "I am called Belbel. I distort the hearts and minds of men. If I hear the words, 'Araêl, imprison Belbel,' I at once retreat."

80. And the ninth said: "I am called Kurtaêl. I send colics in the bowels. I induce pains. If I hear the words, 'Iaôth, imprison Kurtaêl,' I at once retreat."

81. The tenth said: "I am called Metathiax. I cause the reins to ache. If I hear the words, 'Adônaêl, imprison Metathiax,' I at once retreat."

82. The eleventh said: "I am called Katanikotaêl. I create strife and wrongs in men's homes, and send on them hard tempers. If any one would be at peace in his home, let him write on seven leaves of laurel the name of the angel that frustrates me, along with these names: Iae, Ieô, sons of Sabaôth, in the name of the great God let him shut up Katanikotaêl. Then let him wash the laurel-leaves in water, and sprinkle his house with the water, from within to the outside. And at once I retreat."

83. The twelfth said: "I am called Saphathoraél, and I inspire partisanship in men, and delight in causing them to stumble. If any one will write on paper these names of angels, Iacô, Iealô, Iôelet, Sabaôth, Ithoth, Bae, and having folded it up; wear it round his neck or against his ear, I at once retreat and dissipate the drunken fit."

84. The thirteenth said: "I am called Bobêl, and I cause nervous illness by my assaults. If I hear the name of the great 'Adonaêl, imprison Bothothêl,' I at once retreat."

85. The fourteenth said: "I am called Kumeatêl, and I inflict shivering fits and torpor. If only I hear the words: 'Zôrôel, imprison Kumentaêl,' I at once retreat."

86. The fifteenth said: "I am called Roêlêd. I cause cold and frost and pain in the stomach. Let me only hear the words: 'Iax, bide not, be not warmed, for Solomon is fairer than eleven fathers,' I at once retreat."

87. The sixteenth said: "I am called Atrax. I inflict upon men fevers, irremediable and harmful. If you would imprison me, chop up coriander and smear it on the lips, reciting the following charm: 'The fever which is from dirt. I exorcise thee by the throne of the most high God, retreat from dirt and retreat from the creature fashioned by God.' And at once I retreat."

88. The seventeenth said: "I am called Ieropaêl. On the stomach of men I sit, and cause convulsions in the bath and in the road; and wherever I be found, or find a man, I throw him down. But if any one will say to the afflicted into their ear these names, three times over, into the right ear: 'Iudarizê, Sabunê, Denôê,' I at once retreat."

89. The eighteenth said: "I am called Buldumêch. I separate wife from husband and bring about a grudge between them. If any one write down the names of thy sires, Solomon, on paper and place it in the ante-chamber of his house, I retreat thence. And the legend written shall be as follows: 'The God of Abram, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob commands thee -- retire from this house in peace.' And I at once retire."

90. The nineteenth said: "I am called Naôth, and I take my seat on the knees of men. If any one write on paper: 'Phnunoboêol, depart Nathath, and touch thou not the neck,' I at once retreat."

91. The twentieth said: "I am called Marderô. I send on men incurable fever. If any one write on the leaf of a book: 'Sphênêr, Rafael, retire, drag me not about, flay me not,' and tie it round his neck, I at once retreat."

92. The twenty-first said: "I am called Alath, and I cause coughing and hard-breathing in children. If any one write on paper: 'Rorêx, do thou pursue Alath,' and fasten it round his neck, I at once retire."

93. The twenty-third said: "I am called Nefthada. I cause the reins to ache, and I bring about dysury. If any one write on a plate of tin the words: 'Iathôth, Uruêl, Nephthada,' and fasten it round the loins, I at once retreat."

94. The twenty-fourth said: "I am called Akton. I cause ribs and lumbar muscles to ache. If one engrave on copper material, taken from a ship which has missed its anchorage, this: 'Marmaraôth, Sabaôth, pursue Akton,' and fasten it round the loin, I at once retreat."

95. The twenty-fifth said: "I am called Anatreth, and I rend burnings and fevers into the entrails. But if I hear: 'Arara, Charara,' instantly do I retreat."

96. The twenty-sixth said: "I am called Enenuth. I steal away men's minds, and change their hearts, and make a man toothless. If one write: 'Allazoôl, pursue Enenuth,' and tie the paper round him, I at once retreat."

97. The twenty-seventh said: "I am called Phêth. I make men consumptive and cause hemorrhagia. If one exorcise me in wine, sweet-smelling and unmixed by the eleventh aeon, and say: 'I exorcise thee by the eleventh aeon to stop, I demand, Phêth (Axiôphêth),' then give it to the patient to drink I at once retreat."

98. The twenty-eighth said: "I am called Harpax, and I send sleeplessness on men. If one write 'Kokphnêdismos,' and bind it round the temples, I at once retire."

99. The twenty-ninth said: "I am called Anostêr. I engender uterine mania and pains in the bladder. If one powder into pure oil three seeds of laurel and smear it on, saying: 'I exorcise thee, Anostêr. Stop by Marmaraô,' at once I retreat."

100. The thirtieth said: "I am called Alleborith. If in eating fish one has swallowed a bone, then he must take a bone from the fish and cough, and at once I retreat."

101. The thirty-first said: "I am called Hephesimireth, and cause lingering disease. If you throw salt, rubbed in the hand, into oil and smear it on the patient, saying: 'Seraphim, Cherubim, help me!' I at once retire."

102. The thirty-second said: "I am called Ichthion. I paralyze muscles and contuse them. If I hear 'Adonaêth, help!' I at once retire."

103. The thirty-third said: "I am called Agchoniôn. I lie among swaddling-clothes and in the precipice. And if any one write on fig-leaves 'Lycurgos,' taking away one letter at a time, and write it, reversing the letters, I retire at once. 'Lycurgos, Ycurgos, Kurgos, Yrgos, Gos, Os.'"

104. The thirty-fourth said: "I am called Autothith. I cause grudges and fighting. Therefore I am frustrated by Alpha and Omega, if written down."

105. The thirty-fifth said: "I am called Phthenoth. I cast evil eyes on every man. Therefore, the drawing of the eye causes me much suffering, it frustrates me."

106. The thirty-sixth said: "I am called Bianakith. I have a grudge against the body. I lay waste to houses, I cause flesh to decay and all else that is similar. If a man write on the front-door of his house: 'Mêltô, Ardu, Anaath,' I flee from that place."

107. And I Solomon, when I heard this, glorified the God of heaven and earth. And I commanded them to fetch water in the Temple of God. And I furthermore prayed to the Lord God to cause the demons without, that hamper humanity, to be bound and made to approach the Temple of God. Some of these demons I condemned to do the heavy work of the construction of the Temple of God. Others I shut up in prisons. Others I ordered to wrestle with fire in the making of gold and silver, sitting down by lead and spoon. And to make ready places for the other demons in which they should be confined.

108. And I Solomon had much quiet in all the earth, and spent my life in profound peace, honored by all men and by all under heaven. And I built the entire Temple of the Lord God. And my kingdom was prosperous, and my army was with me. And for the rest, the city of Jerusalem had repose, rejoicing and delighted. And all the kings of the earth came to me from the ends of the earth to behold the Temple which I built unto the Lord God. And having heard of the wisdom given to me, they paid homage to me in the Temple, bringing gold and silver and precious stones, many and divers, and bronze, and iron, and lead, and cedar logs. And woods that decay not they brought me, for the equipment of the Temple of God.

109. And among them also the queen of the South, being a witch, came in great concern and bowed low before me to the earth. And having heard my wisdom, she glorified the God of Israel, and she made formal trial of all my wisdom, of all disciplines in which I instructed her, according to the wisdom imparted to me. And all the sons of Israel glorified God.

110. And behold, in those days one of the workmen, of ripe old age, threw himself down before me, and said: "King Solomon, pity me, because I am old." So I bade him stand up, and said: "Tell me, old man, all you will." And he answered: "I beseech you king, I have an only-born son, and he insults and beats me openly, and plucks out the hair of my head, and threatens me with a painful death. Therefore I beseech you avenge me."

111. And I Solomon, on hearing this, felt compunction as I looked at his old age; and I bade the child be brought to me. And when he was brought I questioned him whether it were true. And the youth said: "I was not so filled with madness as to strike my father with my hand. Be kind to me, O king. For I have not dared to commit such impiety, poor wretch that I am." But I Solomon on hearing this from the youth, exhorted the old man to reflect on the matter, and accept his son's apology. However, he would not, but said he would rather let him die. And as the old man would not yield, I was about to pronounce sentence on the youth, when I saw Ornias the demon laughing. I was very angry at the demon's laughing in my presence; and I ordered my men to remove the other parties, and bring forward Ornias before my tribunal. And when he was brought before me, I said to him: "Accursed one, why didst thou look at me and laugh?" And the demon answered: "Prithee, king, it was not because of thee I laughed, but because of this ill-starred old man and the wretched youth, his son. For after three days his son will die untimely; and lo, the old man desires to foully make away with him."

112. But I Solomon, having heard this, said to the demon: "Is that true that thou speakest?" And he answered: "It is true; O king." And I, on hearing that, bade them remove the demon, and that they should again bring before me the old man with his son. I bade them make friends with one another again, and I supplied them with food. And then I told the old man after three days to bring his son again to me here; "and," said I, "I will attend to him." And they saluted me, and went their way.

113. And when they were gone I ordered Ornias to be brought forward, and said to him: "Tell me how you know this!" and he answered: "We demons ascend into the firmament of heaven, and fly about among the stars. And we hear the sentences which go forth upon the souls of men, and forthwith we come, and whether by force of influence, or by fire, or by sword, or by some accident, we veil our act of destruction; and if a man does not die by some untimely disaster or by violence, then we demons transform ourselves in such a way as to appear to men and be worshipped in our human nature."

114. I therefore, having heard this, glorified the Lord God, and again I questioned the demon, saying: "Tell me how ye can ascend into heaven, being demons, and amidst the stars and holy angels intermingle." And he answered: "Just as things are fulfilled in heaven, so also on earth they are fulfilled the types of all of them. For there are principalities, authorities, world-rulers, and we demons fly about in the air; and we hear the voices of the heavenly beings, and survey all the powers. And as having no ground (basis) on which to alight and rest, we lose strength and fall off like leaves from trees. And men seeing us imagine that the stars are falling from heaven. But it is not really so, O king; but we fall because of our weakness, and because we have nowhere anything to lay hold of; and so we fall down like lightnings in the depth of night and suddenly. And we set cities in flames and fire the fields. For the stars have firm foundations in the heavens like the sun and the moon."

115. And I Solomon, having heard this, ordered the demon to be guarded for five days. And after the five days I recalled the old man, and was about to question him. But he came to me in grief and with black face. And I said to him: "Tell me, old man, where is thy son? And what means this garb?" And he answered: "Lo, I am become childless and sit by my son's grave in despair. For it is already two days that he is dead." But I Solomon, on hearing that, and knowing that the demon Ornias had told me the truth, glorified the God of Israel.

116. And the queen of the South saw all this, and marvelled by glorifying the God of Israel; and she beheld the Temple of the Lord being built. And she gave a shekel of gold and one hundred myriads of silver and choice bronze, and she went into the Temple. And she beheld the altar of incense and the brazen supports of this altar, and the gems of the lamps flashing forth of different colors, and of the lamp-stand of stone, and of emerald, and hyacinth, and sapphire; and she beheld the vessels of gold, and silver, and bronze, and wood, and the folds of skins dyed red with madder. And she saw the bases of the pillars of the Temple of the Lord. All were of one gold (Manuscript too badly damaged to read) apart from the demons whom I condemned to labor thereon. And there was peace in the circle of my kingdom and over all the earth.

117. And it came to pass, which I was in my kingdom, the King of the Arabians, Adares, sent me a letter, and the writing of the letter was written as follows:

"To King Solomon, all hail! Lo, we have heard, and it hath been heard unto all the ends of the earth, concerning the wisdom entrusted in thee, and that thou art a man merciful from the Lord. And understanding hath been granted thee over all the spirits of the air, and on earth, and under the earth. Now, forasmuch as there is present in the land of Arabia a spirit of the following kind: at early dawn there begins to blow a certain wind until the third hour. And its blast is harsh and terrible, and it slays man and beast. And no spirit can live upon earth against this demon. I pray thee then, forasmuch as the spirit is a wind, contrive something according to the wisdom given in thee by the Lord thy God, and deign to send a man able to capture it. And behold, King Solomon, I and my people and all my land will serve thee unto death. And all Arabia shall be at peace with thee, if thou wilt perform this act of righteousness for us. Wherefore we pray thee, condemn not our humble prayer, and suffer not to be utterly brought to naught the eparchy subordinated to thy authority. Because we are suppliants, both I and my people and all my land. Farewell to my Lord. All health!"

118. And I Solomon read this epistle; and I folded it up and gave it to my people, and said to them: "After seven days shalt thou remind me of this epistle. And Jerusalem was built, and the Temple was being completed. And there was a stone, the end stone of the corner lying there, great, chosen out, one which I desired lay in the head of the corner of the completion of the Temple. And all the workmen, and all the demons helping them came to the same place to bring up the stone and lay it on the pinnacle of the holy Temple, and were not strong enough to stir it, and lay it upon the corner allotted to it. For that stone was exceedingly great and useful for the corner of the Temple."

119. And after seven days, being reminded of the epistle of Adares, King of Arabia, I called my servant and said to him: "Order thy camel and take for thyself a leather flask, and take also this seal. And go away into Arabia to the place in which the evil spirit blows; and there take the flask, and the signet-ring in front of the mouth of the flask, and hold them together towards the blast of the spirit. And when the flask is blown out, thou wilt understand that the demon is in it. Then hastily tie up the mouth of the flask, and seal it securely with the seal-ring, and lay it carefully on the camel and bring it me hither. And if on the way it offer thee gold or silver or treasure in return for letting it go, see that thou be not persuaded. But arrange without using oath to release it. And then if it point out to the places where are gold or silver, mark the places and seal them with this seal. And bring the demon to me. And now depart, and fare thee well."

120. Then the youth did as was bidden him. And he ordered his camel, and laid on it a flask, and set off into Arabia. And the men of that region would not believe that he would be able to catch the evil spirit. And when it was dawn, the servant stood before the spirit's blast, and laid the flask on the ground, and the finger-ring on the mouth of the flask. And the demon blew through the middle of the finger-ring into the mouth of the flask, and going in blew out the flask. But the man promptly stood up to it and drew tight with his hand the mouth of the flask, in the name of the Lord God of Sabaôth. And the demon remained within the flask. And after that the youth remained in that land three days to make trial. And the spirit no longer blew against that city. And all the Arabs knew that he had safely shut in the spirit.

121. Then the youth fastened the flask on the camel, and the Arabs sent him forth on his way with much honor and precious gifts, praising and magnifying the God of Israel. But the youth brought in the bag and laid it in the middle of the Temple. And on the next day, I King Solomon, went into the Temple of God and sat in deep distress about the stone of the end of the corner. And when I entered the Temple, the flask stood up and walked around some seven steps and then fell on its mouth and paid homage to me. And I marvelled that even along with the bottle the demon still had power and could walk about; and I commanded it to stand up. And the flask stood up, and stood on its feet all blown out. And I questioned him, saying: "Tell me, who art thou?" And the spirit within said: "I am the demon called Ephippas, that is in Arabia." And I said to him: "Is this thy name?" And he answered: "Yes; wheresoever I will, I alight and set fire and do to death."

122. And I said to him: "By what angel art thou frustrated?" And he answered: "By the only-ruling God, that hath authority over me even to be heard. He that is to be born of a virgin and crucified by the Jews on a cross. Whom the angels and archangels worship. He doth frustrate me, and enfeeble me of my great strength, which has been given me by my father Satan." And I said to him: "What canst thou do?" And he answered: "I am able to remove mountains, to overthrow the oaths of kings. I wither trees and make their leaves fall off." And I said to him: "Canst thou raise this stone, and lay it for the beginning of this corner which exists in the fair plan of the Temple?" And he said: "Not only raise this, O king; but also, with the help of the demon who presides over the Red Sea, I will bring up the pillar of air, and will stand it where thou wilt in Jerusalem."

123. Saying this, I laid stress on him, and the flask became as if depleted of air.

And I placed it under the stone, and the spirit girded himself up, and lifted it up top of the flask. And the flask went up the steps, carrying the stone, and laid it down at the end of the entrance of the Temple. And I Solomon, beholding the stone raised aloft and placed on a foundation, said: "Truly the Scripture is fulfilled, which says: 'The stone which the builders rejected on trial, that same is become the head of the corner.' For this it is not mine to grant, but God's, that the demon should be strong enough to lift up so great a stone and deposit it in the place I wished."

124. And Ephippas led the demon of the Red Sea with the column. And they both took the column and raised it aloft from the earth. And I outwitted these two spirits, so that they could not shake the entire earth in a moment of time. And then I sealed round with my signet ring on this side and that, and said: "Watch!" And the spirits have remained upholding it until this day, for proof of the wisdom entrusted unto me. And there the pillar was hanging of enormous size, in mid air, supported by the winds. And thus the spirits appeared underneath, like air, supporting it. And if one looks fixedly, the pillar is a little oblique, being supported by the spirits; and it is so to day.

125. And I Solomon questioned the other spirit which came up with the pillar from the depth of the Red Sea. And I said to him: "Who art thou, and what calls thee? And what is thy business? For I hear many things about thee." And the demon answered: "I, O King Solomon, am called Abezithibod. I am a descendant of the archangel. Once as I sat in the first heaven, of which the name is Ameleouth -- I then am a fierce spirit and winged, and with a single wing, plotting against every spirit under heaven. I was present when Moses went in before Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and I hardened his heart. I am he whom Iannes and Iambres invoked homing with Moses in Egypt. I am he who fought against Moses with wonders with signs."

126. I said therefore to him: "How wast thou found in the Red Sea?" And he answered: "In the exodus of the sons of Israel I hardened the heart of Pharaoh. And I excited his heart and that of his ministers. And I caused them to pursue after the children of Israel. And Pharaoh followed with me and all the Egyptians. Then I was present there, and we followed together. And we all came up upon the Red Sea. And it came to pass when the children of Israel had crossed over, the water returned and crushed all the host of the Egyptians and all their might. And I remained in the sea, being kept under this pillar. But when Ephippas came, being sent by thee, shut up in the vessel of a flask, he fetched me up to thee."

127. I, therefore, Solomon, having heard this, glorified God and adjured the demons not to disobey me, but to remain supporting the pillar. And they both swore an oath, saying: "As the Lord thy God liveth, we will not let go this pillar until the world's end. But on whatever day this stone fall, then shall be the beginning of the end of the world."

128. And I Solomon glorified God, and adorned the Temple of the Lord with all fair-seeming. And I was glad in spirit in my kingdom, and there was peace in my days. And I took wives of my own from every land, who were numberless. And I marched against the Jebusaeans, and there I saw a Jebusaeen, daughter of a man: and fell violently in love with her, and desired to take her to wife along with my other wives. And I said to their priests: "Give me the Sonmanites (i.e. Shunammite) to wife." (Song of Solomon 6:13) But the priests of Moloch said to me: "If thou lovest this maiden, go in and worship our gods, the great god Raphan and the god called Moloch." I therefore was in fear of the glory of God, and did not follow to worship. And I said to them: "I will not worship a demon. What is this proposal, that ye compel me to do so much?" But they said: "It is to be done according to our fathers."

129. And when I answered that I would on no account worship demons, they told the maiden not to sleep with me until I complied and sacrificed to their gods. I then was moved, but crafty Eros brought and laid by her for me five grasshoppers, saying: "Take these grasshoppers, and crush them together in the name of the god Moloch; and then will I sleep with you." And this I did. And at once the Spirit of God departed from me, and I became weak as well as foolish in my words. And after that I was obliged by her to build a temple of idols to Baal, and to Rapha, and to Moloch, and to the other demons.

130. I then, wretch that I am, followed her advice, and the glory of God departed from me; and my spirit was darkened, and I became the sport of idols and demons. Wherefore I wrote out this Testament, that ye who get possession of it may pity, and attend to the last things, and not to the first. So that ye may find grace for ever and ever. Amen.

CLOSING STATEMENTS / ANALYSIS

The Testament of Solomon is important for several reasons. Primarily because it deals with the spirits of the fallen giants. You see, since the giants were born of the fallen angels through women, their spirits were different to that of men. They, unlike mankind, doesn't go to the grave in rest awaiting a resurrection and judgment. They can roam the earth as they wish or until they are imprisoned by God. In this testament did Solomon encounter the spirits of the giants which further amplifies the existence of their fallen nature. That, even after the death of the giants, they still lived through other bodies and forms.

With a clear hatred of mankind, as was demonstrated during their fleshly lives, so too do they continue carrying out their vengeance upon mankind after their fleshly bodies expired. Not being confined to flesh, but able to inhabit flesh, and any form of matter - became their existence after their deaths. Disembodied spirits they would become. As you've read, Solomon summoned them to come before him. After Solomon's death, despite his very noble attempt to seal up the vessels containing the demons (spirits of the giants), did a group of nine knights find them. The Knights of the Templar, or Knights of the Temple Mount. They named themselves this because they excavated Solomon's temple for nearly a decade before they finally found what they were looking for: Solomon's ring, and the vessels he had sealed up the demons in.

After the knights had returned to Europe with their finds did the Catholic church honor them and give them riches beyond belief. They invented the modern day checking system and began bank rolling anyone they could. They black mailed several lords with threats of demonic activity, and even sometimes delivered on their promises. This of course didn't go unnoticed and eventually the Catholic church had them burned at the stake for consorting with the devil. Many of them died on Friday the 13th but not all of them were slaughtered. The ones who escaped would later form Freemasonry and the Illuminati. And so the book goes, you may be through with the past but the past isn't through with you.

BOOK OF JUBILEES

Jubilees 1:15 And in the second week of the tenth jubilee of Maleleel took unto him a wife Dinah, the daughter of Barakel, the daughter of his brother's brother and she bore him a son in the sixth year and he called his name Jared for in his days the angels of the Lord descended on the earth, those so named the Watchers. - (This verse seems to foreshadow the life and times of Enoch considering Jared was his earthly father.)

Jubilees 38:8 And Simeon and Benjamin and Enoch, Reuben's son, went forth on the west side of the tower, and fifty men with them, and they slew of Edom and of the Horites four hundred men, stout warriors; and six hundred fled, and four of the sons of Esau fled with them, and left their father lying slain, as he had fallen on the hill which is in 'Aduram. (This Scripture is a spiritual symbolism of Elijah another righteous man whom God took up who will be witnesses to the whole world Revelations 11. Adding to this and what makes one draw this spiritual insight is that this verse is not talking about the same Enoch who wrote the Book of Enoch but rather Ruben's son. If you make note of the same name use you may find that important when considering the Elijah and Elisha paradox...)

ENOCK & ELIJAH IN REVELATIONS

Although Enoch is not mentioned directly by name, nor is Elijah, these are the only two biblical characters who never died. The Bible is very specific in regarding its records of people dying. It makes mention of when these biblical patriarchs die over and over again. Going out of its way to record them and yet there is no record of Enoch or Elijah dying anywhere in the whole of the body of biblical knowledge. So, then we have in the last book of the Bible, Revelation at chapter 11 the appearance of two prophets wearing sack cloth. Biblical scholars and myself included believe these two men to be none other than Enoch and Elijah. What they do in Revelations fits with the lives they lived completely. See for yourself and test the Scriptures to find out if it's Enoch and Elijah... The following is the chapter in question. Keep in mind, this happens in the future.

Revelation 11 - King James Version (KJV)

1 And there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and an half the spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly.

15 And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God, 17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.
